Because the defendant argued that the accusation charging the defendant with two traffic violations failed to charge any offense, the trial court did not err in considering the defendant's demurrer on the merits even though the defendant's motion was filed more than ten days after the defendant waived arraignment. State v. Shabazz, 291 Ga. App. 751, 662 S.E.2d 828 (2008).

Defendants' contention that a felony murder indictment was deficient because the indictment did not contain all the essential elements of the underlying crime of aggravated assault was, in essence, a special demurrer seeking greater specificity with regard to the predicate felony. Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110, the defendant's failure to file a timely special demurrer seeking additional information constituted a waiver of the right to be tried on a perfect indictment. Dasher v. State, 285 Ga. 308, 676 S.E.2d 181 (2009).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for rape of a minor relative, the trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that the indictments were fatally flawed because the indictments did not specifically allege the required element of force in charging rape because by alleging "unlawful" carnal knowledge during 1992 to 1995, the indictment asserted a charge of forcible rape under the law in effect prior to the 1996 amendment, therefore, the indictment did establish cognizable charges. Additionally, the defendant filed no special demurrers as to the form of the indictment and, thus, waived any argument in that regard. Flournoy v. State, 299 Ga. App. 377, 682 S.E.2d 632 (2009).

Because the defendant did not file a timely special demurrer to the indictment or a timely motion in arrest of judgment, the defendant waived any claim that could have been raised via special or general demurrer. Kirt v. State, 309 Ga. App. 227, 709 S.E.2d 840 (2011).

Because the defendant did not file a special demurrer, the defendant waived the right to a special indictment. Bryant v. State, 320 Ga. App. 838, 740 S.E.2d 772 (2013).

No ground exists for dismissing an appeal based on a special demurrer, or for that matter any motion, if the motion was not timely filed in the trial court. Kimbrough v. State, 336 Ga. App. 381, 785 S.E.2d 54 (2016).

Indictment sufficiently alleged possession of a weapon during the commission of certain crimes, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106, by alleging that the defendant had a handgun during the commission of the crime of aggravated assault; if the defendant sought to know to which of the two aggravated assault counts was referred to, the defendant's motion was a special demurrer and was untimely under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110. Allen v. State, 300 Ga. 500, 796 S.E.2d 708 (2017).

To the extent that the defendant argued that an indictment should have been more specific as to the timing in which the offenses were committed, such argument amounted to a special demurrer and because the defendant failed to file a special demurrer, the defendant waived the right to perfect the indictment. Miller v. State, 305 Ga. 276, 824 S.E.2d 342 (2019).

Failure to file timely special demurrer. — Defendant's motions for a new trial and in arrest of judgment challenging the wording of the indictment charging the defendant with aggravated assault, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(a)(2), (3), were properly denied because the defendant could not have admitted the allegations of the indictment without admitting that the defendant was guilty of a crime and, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110, having failed to file a timely special demurrer, the defendant waived the right to a perfect indictment. McDaniel v. State, 298 Ga. App. 558, 680 S.E.2d 593 (2009).

Failure to file special demurrer to indictment waived later challenge. — In a prosecution for felony murder and multiple armed robberies, as the defendant did not file a special demurrer seeking greater specificity with regard to the predicate felony, i.e., the name of the armed robbery victim, to the extent the defendant's merger argument alleged insufficiency of the indictment due to the state's failure to specify which armed robbery count was the underlying offense for the felony murder charge, it was waived. Henderson v. State, 285 Ga. 240, 675 S.E.2d 28 (2009).

Defendant waived the defendant's right to be tried under a perfect indictment because the defendant did not file a special demurrer within ten days after the arraignment as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110. Additionally, to the extent the defendant's motion was one in arrest of judgment, the motion was untimely because the motion was not filed in the same term of court as the judgment as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61. Thompson v. State, 286 Ga. 889, 692 S.E.2d 379 (2010), overruled on other grounds, State v. Kelly, 290 Ga. 29, 718 S.E.2d 232 (2011).

Because the defendant failed to raise a challenge to the indictment in a timely written special demurrer, the challenge was waived. State v. Wilson, 318 Ga. App. 88, 732 S.E.2d 330 (2012).

Trial court did not err by finding that the defendant waived the defendant's right to challenge the indictment charging the defendant with reckless driving because the defendant failed to timely file a written special demurrer. Lauderback v. State, 320 Ga. App. 649, 740 S.E.2d 377 (2013).

Seven year delay in challenging indictment based on grand jury composition. — Appellants waived the appellants' challenge to the indictment based on the composition of the grand jury because an elected official served on the grand jury that returned the indictment since the appellants failed to challenge the indictment on the ground that the grand jury was illegally constituted until the appellants filed amended motions for new trial more than seven years after the statutory deadline for such a claim. Bighams v. State, 296 Ga. 267, 765 S.E.2d 917 (2014).

Demand remained effective when matter transferred to another court. — Statutory demand for a speedy trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 was effective when the demand was first filed in a court that was later abolished as that court was a constitutional court with jury jurisdiction and two terms of court; the defendant's demand remained effective following the transfer of the criminal matter to another court. State v. Reid, 298 Ga. App. 235, 679 S.E.2d 802 (2009).

Counsel's failure to file timely demurrer not ineffective assistance because demurrer was meritless. — Criminal attempt to possess cocaine was properly used as the underlying felony for a felony murder conviction because the defendant's plan to rob a cocaine dealer was the proximate cause of the victim's death, and the plan to rob an individual dealing in illegal drugs carried with it a foreseeable risk of danger and death; therefore, counsel was not ineffective in failing to file a demurrer to the indictment within the time provided in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110. Funck v. State, 296 Ga. 371, 768 S.E.2d 468 (2015).

Section did not apply. — Motion for discharge and acquittal based on the constitutional speedy trial right, and a renewal of that motion, were timely filed by the defendant when both motions were filed prior to the time of trial; the time limitations under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110 were not applicable. State v. Reid, 298 Ga. App. 235, 679 S.E.2d 802 (2009).

Cited in Dingler v. State, 281 Ga. App. 721, 637 S.E.2d 120 (2006); Langlands v. State, 282 Ga. 103, 646 S.E.2d 253 (2007); Roberts v. State, 282 Ga. 548, 651 S.E.2d 689 (2007); Boatright v. State, 308 Ga. App. 266, 707 S.E.2d 158 (2011); State v. Mojica, 316 Ga. App. 619, 730 S.E.2d 94 (2012); Brown v. State, 322 Ga. App. 446, 745 S.E.2d 699 (2013); Smith v. State, 338 Ga. App. 635, 791 S.E.2d 418 (2016); Bullard v. State, 307 Ga. 482, 837 S.E.2d 348 (2019).

17-7-111. Demurrers and special pleas to be in writing; right to plead "not guilty" if demurrer or plea denied.

If the defendant, upon being arraigned, demurs to the indictment, pleads to the jurisdiction of the court, pleads in abatement, or enters any other special plea in bar, the demurrer or plea shall be made in writing. If the demurrer or plea is decided against the defendant, he may nevertheless plead and rely on the general issue of "not guilty."

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 834; Code 1863, § 4526; Code 1868, § 4545; Code 1873, § 4639; Code 1882, § 4639; Penal Code 1895, § 950; Penal Code 1910, § 975; Code 1933, § 27-1501.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Special Pleas in Bar
Challenge to Indictment

General Consideration

When pleas available generally. — Prisoner, upon being arraigned, may demur to the indictment, plead to the jurisdiction of the court, or file a plea in abatement or in bar, but if such pleas are not made preliminary to the trial, the pleas are held to be waived in contemplation of law. Jones v. Mills, 216 Ga. 616, 118

General Consideration (Cont'd)

S.E.2d 484 (1961).

Oral renewed motion for discharge and acquittal proper. — Motion for discharge and acquittal based on the constitutional speedy trial right, which was orally renewed by the defendant at the time of trial, was proper as such a motion did not have to be in writing pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-111. State v. Reid, 298 Ga. App. 235, 679 S.E.2d 802 (2009).

Motions must be timely and in writing. — If a demurrer or plea in abatement or bar is not made in writing previous to the trial, the making thereof will be held to have been waived. Hill v. State, 41 Ga. 484 (1871); Hall v. State, 103 Ga. 403, 29 S.E. 915 (1898); Gilmore v. State, 118 Ga. 299, 45 S.E. 226 (1903); Wilkerson v. State, 14 Ga. App. 475, 81 S.E. 395 (1914); Reddick v. State, 24 Ga. App. 776, 102 S.E. 132 (1920).

Requirements of this section were imperative, and a demurrer not shown to have been in writing will be overruled. Wimbish v. State, 70 Ga. 718 (1883); McGarr v. State, 75 Ga. 155 (1885); Lampkin v. State, 87 Ga. 516, 13 S.E. 523 (1891); Sims v. State, 110 Ga. 290, 34 S.E. 1020 (1900).

Regardless of how the motions are designated, such motions must be made in writing upon the defendant's being arraigned and when such motions are not made at the proper time, the motions are deemed to have been waived. Bryant v. State, 224 Ga. 235, 161 S.E.2d 312 (1968).

When the defendant's motions to quash the indictment because of prejudicial delay were not made in writing upon the defendant's being arraigned, the motions were deemed to have been waived. Hardwick v. State, 158 Ga. App. 154, 279 S.E.2d 253 (1981).

As must all exceptions to form and procedural matters. — All exceptions to form or matters relating to procedure in returning an indictment under the provisions of this section that may arise by special demurrer or by plea in abatement or plea in bar must be made in writing preliminary to trial and if not made at the proper time are considered waived. Peppers v. Balkcom, 218 Ga. 749, 130 S.E.2d 709 (1963).

Special demurrers not made at or before arraignment are waived. Carter v. State, 155 Ga. App. 49, 270 S.E.2d 233 (1980).

Demurrer must not only be filed but brought to court's attention. — Though a demurrer is properly filed before arraignment, yet if the demurrant proceeds to trial without having brought it to the attention of the court it is too late to do so after a juror has been sworn. Gilmore v. State, 118 Ga. 299, 45 S.E. 226 (1903); Chambers v. State, 22 Ga. App. 748, 97 S.E. 256 (1918).

Demurrers, pleas, and answers must be disposed of in that order; it is error to proceed with the trial when demurrers or pleas remain for consideration. Birt v. State, 127 Ga. App. 532, 194 S.E.2d 335 (1972).

Effect of sustaining special demurrer. — Sustaining of a special demurrer, the result of which is either to strike from or add to the material allegations of an indictment, is equivalent to sustaining a general demurrer and quashing the indictment. Gentry v. State, 63 Ga. App. 275, 11 S.E.2d 39 (1940).

Validity of arraignment held before pleas ruled on. — When the arraignment takes place, subject to hearing any pleas that may be filed prior to the trial of the case, the failure to hear such pleas prior to the entering of a not guilty plea does not vitiate such arraignment, since such a procedure does not cause a defendant to be tried without arraignment nor does it preclude the defendant from filing any defensive pleading and obtaining a ruling thereon prior to trial. Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 353, 219 S.E.2d 419 (1975).

Cited in Higgins v. State, 92 Ga. App. 739, 90 S.E.2d 40 (1955); Lyons v. State, 94 Ga. App. 570, 95 S.E.2d 478 (1956); Brown v. State, 223 Ga. 76, 153 S.E.2d 709 (1967); Smith v. State, 224 Ga. 750, 164 S.E.2d 784 (1968); McBride v. State, 119 Ga. App. 418, 167 S.E.2d 374 (1969); Spell v. State, 120 Ga. App. 398, 170 S.E.2d 701 (1969); Jones v. State, 226 Ga. 747, 177 S.E.2d 231 (1970); United States ex rel. Huguley v. Martin, 325 F. Supp. 489 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Robertson v. State, 127 Ga. App. 6, 192 S.E.2d 502 (1972); Chenault v. State, 234 Ga. 216, 215 S.E.2d 223 (1975);

Bramblett v. State, 139 Ga. App. 745, 229 S.E.2d 484 (1976); Hampton v. State, 141 Ga. App. 866, 234 S.E.2d 698 (1977); Cronch v. State, 141 Ga. App. 851, 235 S.E.2d 40 (1977); State v. Eubanks, 239 Ga. 483, 238 S.E.2d 38 (1977); Parrish v. State, 160 Ga. App. 601, 287 S.E.2d 603 (1981); Miller v. State, 182 Ga. App. 700, 356 S.E.2d 900 (1987); Hope v. State, 193 Ga. App. 202, 387 S.E.2d 414 (1989); Dunbar v. State, 209 Ga. App. 97, 432 S.E.2d 829 (1993); Hall v. State, 213 Ga. App. 242, 445 S.E.2d 578 (1994); Thompson v. State, 234 Ga. App. 74, 506 S.E.2d 201 (1998); Pearson v. State, 258 Ga. App. 651, 574 S.E.2d 820 (2002).

Special Pleas in Bar

Plea in bar of trial for former jeopardy must be made in writing upon arraignment, and before pleading to the merits. Holmes v. State, 120 Ga. App. 281, 170 S.E.2d 312 (1969).

Special pleas in bar must be filed on arraignment before pleading to the merits. Barlow v. State, 13 Ga. App. 306, 79 S.E. 93 (1913).

Waiver of plea of former plea jeopardy — If not made in writing at the proper time, a plea of former jeopardy is waived. Holmes v. State, 120 Ga. App. 281, 170 S.E.2d 312 (1969).

Plea in abatement not allowed after entrance of the general issue plea of not guilty. Wilkerson v. State, 14 Ga. App. 475, 81 S.E. 395 (1914).

Special demurrers not made at or before arraignment are waived. Carter v. State, 155 Ga. App. 49, 270 S.E.2d 233 (1980).

Pleas in abatement must be certain in intent and leave nothing to be supplied by intendment. Meriwether v. State, 63 Ga. App. 667, 11 S.E.2d 816 (1940).

Pleas in abatement are dilatory pleas and are not favored. Meriwether v. State, 63 Ga. App. 667, 11 S.E.2d 816 (1940).

Pleas in abatement must be strictly construed. — In considering such pleas, every inference must be against the pleader. Meriwether v. State, 63 Ga. App. 667, 11 S.E.2d 816 (1940).

Objection to selection of grand jurors through plea in abatement. — Plea in abatement based on alleged irregularity in drawing names of grand jurors who returned the indictment should be filed before pleading to the merits, and not being so filed is too late. When the defendant is arrested and gives bond before the indictment is returned, the defendant should object to the grand jurors before return of the indictment, and, failing to do so, cannot afterwards object by plea in abatement. Burns v. State, 191 Ga. 60, 11 S.E.2d 350 (1940).

Alleged disqualification of a grand juror propter affectum is not a valid ground for plea in abatement to an indictment, nor is it a good ground for a motion for a new trial after verdict, even though the parties were ignorant of such defect until after the verdict. Mitchell v. State, 69 Ga. App. 771, 26 S.E.2d 663 (1943).

Sufficiency of grand jury evidence may not be challenged by plea in abatement. — When a competent witness or witnesses were sworn and examined before the grand jury before whom the indictment was preferred, a plea in abatement on the ground that the indictment was found on insufficient or illegal evidence or no evidence, will not be sustained, because it comes under the rule that no inquiry into the sufficiency or legality of the evidence is indulged. The sufficiency of the evidence introduced before the grand jury is a question for determination by the grand jury and not by the court. Summers v. State, 63 Ga. App. 445, 11 S.E.2d 409 (1940).

Motion for new trial on double jeopardy grounds. — When the special ground of a motion for new trial is that the appellant has been subject to double jeopardy, it is a matter for special plea, to be interposed at arraignment and ruled on at that time. Reid v. State, 119 Ga. App. 368, 166 S.E.2d 900 (1969).

Raising issue of defendant's insanity. — If the insanity of the defendant is known to defendant's counsel, then counsel has a professional, moral, and legal duty to file a plea of insanity, as provided by law. If unknown, then it can be raised by a ground of a motion for a new trial by a proper showing. Huguley v. State, 120

Special Pleas in Bar (Cont'd)

Ga. App. 332, 170 S.E.2d 450 (1969), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 834, 91 S. Ct. 68, 27 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1970).

Denial of second plea in bar alleging same claim as first upheld. — Because the court of appeals previously upheld the denial of the defendant's first plea in bar regarding the alleged denial of a speedy trial right, the trial court's order denying the defendant's second plea in bar on the same grounds was also upheld, despite the fact that the law of the case rule had been statutorily abolished. Bass v. State, 287 Ga. App. 600, 653 S.E.2d 749 (2007).

Denial of defendant's motion requesting that defendant be examined by psychiatrist. — It is not error for a trial court to deny the defendant's motion requesting that the defendant be examined by a psychiatrist at county expense when the defendant had not entered a special plea of insanity at the time of trial. Huguley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 332, 170 S.E.2d 450 (1969), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 834, 91 S. Ct. 68, 27 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1970).

Challenge to Indictment

General and special demurrers distinguished. — General demurrer challenges the sufficiency of the substance of the indictment, whereas a special demurrer challenges the sufficiency of the form of the indictment. Bramblett v. State, 239 Ga. 336, 236 S.E.2d 580 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1013, 98 S. Ct. 728, 54 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1978); Carter v. State, 155 Ga. App. 49, 270 S.E.2d 233 (1980).

Motion to quash indictment is general demurrer. — Motion to quash is classified as a general rather than a special demurrer to an indictment. Traylor v. State, 165 Ga. App. 226, 299 S.E.2d 911 (1983).

Motions to quash an indictment must be filed prior to pleading to the merits. Sadler v. State, 124 Ga. App. 266, 183 S.E.2d 501 (1971).

Ineffective assistance of counsel. — Because trial counsel failed to generally demur to the aggravated assault indictment which was so fundamentally flawed that the indictment charged no crime at all, and failed to file a motion in arrest of judgment after trial, counsel rendered ineffective assistance. Youngblood v. State, 253 Ga. App. 327, 558 S.E.2d 854 (2002).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-111 does not preclude an oral objection to the sufficiency of an indictment or accusation at any time during trial if the indictment or accusation is so defective that judgment upon the indictment or accusation would be arrested. Pullen v. State, 199 Ga. App. 881, 406 S.E.2d 283 (1991).

Requirement that all motions and demurrers be made and filed at or before the time of arraignment, and the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-111 that such motions be in writing do not preclude an oral objection to the sufficiency of an indictment or accusation at any time during trial if the indictment or accusation is so defective that judgment upon the indictment or accusation would be arrested. Ross v. State, 235 Ga. App. 7, 508 S.E.2d 424 (1998).

Defendant's oral motion to quash indictment was ineffective. — When the transcript revealed that the defendant, during a pre-trial hearing, made an oral motion to quash the indictment and when there was a question of a law enforcement officer's authority to make the initial stop in this case, the defendant's oral motion to quash the indictment against the defendant was ineffective for the purpose offered since the indictment was in the record and was in proper form and substance and since an objection to it must be in writing when an indictment is not on the indictment's face so defective that a motion in arrest of judgment would lie. State v. O'Quinn, 192 Ga. App. 359, 384 S.E.2d 888 (1989).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's oral motion in arrest of judgment or motion to dismiss or general demurrer, made after the jury was sworn but before the trial began, as while the nolle pros of the coindictee could have been drawn more explicitly, considering it in context and in light of a subsequent indictment, which only contained one count against the coindictee, there was no intent shown that the charges against the defendant required reindictment. Atkins v. State, 291 Ga. App. 863, 663 S.E.2d 286 (2008).

Necessity of writing. — Defendant's motion to quash an accusation charging reckless driving was properly denied since the motion was not made in writing and was not raised at arraignment. Freeman v. State, 234 Ga. App. 110, 505 S.E.2d 836 (1998).

Exception to an indictment for formal defects must be taken by demurrer before trial. Foss v. State, 15 Ga. App. 478, 83 S.E. 880 (1914).

Effect of sustaining special demurrer. — Sustaining of a special demurrer, the result of which is either to strike from or add to the material allegations of an indictment, is equivalent to sustaining a general demurrer and quashing the indictment. Gentry v. State, 63 Ga. App. 275, 11 S.E.2d 39 (1940).

How form of indictment excepted to. — When the accused desires to take exception to the form of an indictment, it is necessary that the defendant do so by demurrer or motion to quash, made in writing and before pleading to the merits. Gower v. State, 71 Ga. App. 127, 30 S.E.2d 298 (1944); Frady v. State, 212 Ga. 84, 90 S.E.2d 664 (1955); Lankford v. State, 204 Ga. App. 405, 419 S.E.2d 498 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1051, 113 S. Ct. 972, 122 L. Ed. 2d 127 (1993).

Failure to plead venue. — While the phrase "as prosecuting attorney for the county and state aforesaid" sufficiently established venue to support a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(A)(1), the state's failure to sufficiently allege venue in order to sustain a second count, charging a violation of § 40-6-391(A)(5), supported the defendant's motion to quash the count and reversal of the conviction on the count. Werner v. State, 280 Ga. App. 853, 635 S.E.2d 234 (2006).

If the indictment or accusation is so defective that judgment upon the indictment or accusation would be arrested, attention may be called to this defect at any time during the trial, and the indictment or accusation may be quashed on oral motion. Gower v. State, 71 Ga. App. 127, 30 S.E.2d 298 (1944).

Procedure for complaining of defects and irregularities in indictment. — Defects and irregularities in an indictment cannot be complained of in a ground for a motion for a new trial. Such must be taken advantage of by demurrer, plea in abatement, or plea in bar. Loomis v. Edwards, 80 Ga. App. 396, 56 S.E.2d 183 (1949), cert. denied, 339 U.S. 969, 70 S. Ct. 987, 94 L. Ed. 1377 (1950).

Attack on indictment for defects not apparent on face. — Motion to quash, being merely a demurrer, is not a proper method of attacking an indictment for a defect not appearing upon its face, and position can properly be raised only by a plea in abatement. Lastinger v. State, 84 Ga. App. 760, 67 S.E.2d 411 (1951).

Burden is upon defendant to show that indictment was returned wholly upon illegal evidence. A failure to show that only incompetent evidence was presented to the grand jury will subject plea in abatement to dismissal. Meriwether v. State, 63 Ga. App. 667, 11 S.E.2d 816 (1940).

Material amendment of an indictment. — Indictment cannot be materially amended by striking from or adding to the indictment's allegations, except by the grand jury, and only by the grand jury before the indictment is returned into court. It is bad practice for the court to do either, and if such additions or subtractions materially affect the indictment, it becomes void and cannot be the basis of a conviction. Gentry v. State, 63 Ga. App. 275, 11 S.E.2d 39 (1940).

Post-conviction challenge to indictment. — One who waives one's right to be tried upon an indictment perfect in form as well as substance, and takes one's chances of acquittal, will not be heard, after conviction, to urge defects in the indictment, unless such defects are so great that the indictment is absolutely void. Tanner v. State, 90 Ga. App. 789, 84 S.E.2d 600 (1954).

When no demurrer to the indictment has been filed, the defendant will not be heard after conviction to urge defects in the indictment unless the defects are so great that the indictment is absolutely void. Ivie v. State, 151 Ga. App. 496, 260 S.E.2d 543 (1979).

Waiver of challenge to indictment. — Defendant has a right to be tried upon an indictment that is perfect in form and substance, but this right can be waived under certain circumstances if a defendant fails to timely challenge the indictment. McKay v. State, 234 Ga. App. 556, 507 S.E.2d 484 (1998).

Challenge to Indictment (Cont'd)

Exception to the denial of a motion to quash the indictment cannot be properly made a ground of a motion for new trial. Frady v. State, 212 Ga. 84, 90 S.E.2d 664 (1955).

Indictment which charges an offense defined by a legislative act, in the language of the act, when the description of the acts alleged as constituting the offense is full enough to put the defendant on notice of the offense with which the defendant is charged, is sufficiently specific. Gaines v. State, 80 Ga. App. 512, 56 S.E.2d 772 (1949).

Accusation which alleges the violation of a statute in the language of the statute together with the other necessary allegations is sufficient to put the defendant on notice as against what facts and charges the defendant must contend as every essential ingredient of the offense charged is set forth in the accusation with sufficient clearness to enable the defendant to clearly understand the nature of the offense, and the accusation is exact enough to protect the defendant from a second jeopardy. Gaines v. State, 80 Ga. App. 512, 56 S.E.2d 772 (1949).

Attack on indictment on grounds that defendant's spouse testified before grand jury. — If the defendant pleads guilty to a defective indictment in which the defendant has incriminated oneself, and the defendant's spouse has testified, it is too late afterwards, in proceedings instituted to secure the release of the defendant by writ of habeas corpus, to attack the indictment upon that ground. Bradford v. Mills, 208 Ga. 198, 66 S.E.2d 58 (1951).

Special demurrer. — When a crime may be committed in more than one way, the failure to charge the manner in which the crime was committed subjects the indictment or accusation to special demurrer. Haska v. State, 240 Ga. App. 527, 523 S.E.2d 589 (1999); State v. Jones, 251 Ga. App. 192, 553 S.E.2d 631 (2001).

Indictment which fails to allege a specific date on which the offense occurred is not perfect in form and is subject to a timely special demurrer except when the evidence does not permit the state to identify a single date on which the offense occurred. State v. Gamblin, 251 Ga. App. 283, 553 S.E.2d 866 (2001).

For special demurrer to indictment charging robbery by force, see Burns v. State, 191 Ga. 60, 11 S.E.2d 350 (1940).

For demurrer to indictment for automobile theft on grounds of vagueness, see Callahan v. State, 148 Ga. App. 555, 251 S.E.2d 790 (1978).

For special demurrer to indictment for liquor on which taxes not paid, eliminating surplusage, see Gentry v. State, 63 Ga. App. 275, 11 S.E.2d 39 (1940).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 132 et seq., 467 et seq., 585 et seq. 41 Am. Jur. 2d, Indictments and Informations, § 270 et seq.

C.J.S. — 24 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 2542 et seq. 42 C.J.S., Indictments and Information, § 258 et seq. 71 C.J.S., Pleading, § 230 et seq.

ALR. — Guilty plea safeguards as applicable to stipulation allegedly amounting to guilty plea in state criminal trial, 17 A.L.R.4th 61.

When is dismissal of indictment appropriate remedy for misconduct of government official, 10 A.L.R. Fed. 3d 3.

Construction and Application of Supreme Court's Holding in Bank of Nova Scotia v. U.S., 487 U.S. 250 (1988), that Harmless Error Standard Under Fed. R. Crim. P. 52(a) Applies to Dismissal of Indictment, 20 A.L.R. Fed. 3d 1.

17-7-112. Plea of misnomer.

A plea of misnomer should state the true name of the accused person, that he had never been known by any other name than that, and that he was not known and called by the name which was contained in the indictment or accusation.

History. — Penal Code 1895, § 954; Penal Code 1910, § 979; Code 1933, § 27-1505.

History of Code section. — This Code section is derived from the decisions in Wilson v. State, 69 Ga. 224 (1882) and Wiggins v. State, 80 Ga. 468, 5 S.E. 503 (1888).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Time for filing plea of misnomer is before arraignment. After plea of guilty or conviction is too late. Dutton v. State, 92 Ga. 14, 18 S.E. 545 (1893); Pulliam v. Donaldson, 140 Ga. 864, 80 S.E. 315 (1913).

If accused is known by different names it is lawful for indictment to identify accused by such names as aliases. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982).

If the accused is indicted, with an alias, under more than one name, a special plea of misnomer, to be good, must aver unequivocally that the accused has never been known by either of the names set out in the indictment, and that neither is the accused's true name. Andrews v. State, 196 Ga. 84, 26 S.E.2d 263, cert. denied, 320 U.S. 780, 64 S. Ct. 87, 88 L. Ed. 468 (1943), overruled on other grounds, Frady v. State, 212 Ga. 84, 90 S.E.2d 664 (1955).

If the accused is indicted under an alleged true name and an alias, a special plea of misnomer to be good must aver unequivocally that the accused has never been known by either of the names set out in the indictment, and that neither were the accused's true name. Wilson v. State, 69 Ga. 224 (1882); Henderson v. State, 95 Ga. 326, 22 S.E. 537 (1895); Stinchcomb v. State, 119 Ga. 442, 46 S.E. 639 (1904).

Trial counsel was not ineffective because the defendant failed to show either a deficiency or that the outcome of the trial would have been different had counsel investigated or attempted to remedy the purported name discrepancy between the defendant's birth certificate and the name on the indictment; the defendant was positively identified at trial by various witnesses as the perpetrator of the charged crimes; the names on the birth certificate and the indictment consisted of the same four names, though listed in different order; and the defendant did not show that the defendant was never known by the names under which the defendant was indicted, including the alias. Adams v. State, 350 Ga. App. 340, 829 S.E.2d 412 (2019).

Motion to quash is not proper remedy for striking alias from indictment, instead, the defendant should file a special plea of misnomer averring that the defendant has never been known by any of the names set out in the indictment. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982).

Indictment citing a name by which one is generally called is sufficient to withstand a plea of misnomer. Roland v. State, 127 Ga. 401, 56 S.E. 412 (1907).

Indictment which describes the accused by Christian and surnames is sufficient even if the indictment fails to designate the accused by the initial of the accused's middle name. Veal v. State, 116 Ga. 589, 42 S.E. 705 (1902).

Doctrine of idem sonans. — Under the doctrine of idem sonans, if two names though spelled differently sound alike, the names are to be regarded as the same and are sufficient to withstand a plea of misnomer. Webb v. State, 149 Ga. 211, 99 S.E. 630 (1919).

Names with similar sound or spelling not subject to misnomer. — Question of idem sonans may be determined either by pronunciation or by spelling, or by both. Lovett v. State, 9 Ga. App. 232, 70 S.E. 989 (1911).

For illustrative cases, see Biggers v. State, 109 Ga. 105, 34 S.E. 210 (1899) ("Biggers" and "Bickers"); Washington v. State, 113 Ga. 698, 39 S.E. 294 (1901) ("Serena" and "Surrena"); Woody v. State, 113 Ga. 927, 39 S.E. 297 (1901) ("Gittings" and "Giddans"); Roland v. State, 127 Ga. 401, 56 S.E. 412 (1907) ("Roland" and "Rowlin"); Lovett v. State, 9 Ga. App. 232, 70 S.E. 989 (1911) ("Jerry Lovett" and "Jerry Levatte"); Watkins v. State, 18 Ga. App. 500, 89 S.E. 624 (1916) ("Maria" and "Marie").

Misnomer not sufficiently shown. — Defendant's argument that a trial court erred by rejecting the defendant's "Special Plea of Misnomer" filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-112 was without merit because the case was proceeding according to the accusation filed by the solicitor (now district attorney) pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-71(b)(1), which contained the defendant's correct name. Switlick v. State, 295 Ga. App. 849, 673 S.E.2d 323 (2009).

Defendant Latoya Thornton's claim of misnomer and motion to quash were rejected because, contrary to the defendant's claims, the defendant had previously been arrested and booked into jail under the name Latoia Jordan. The accusation naming the defendant as Latoia Jordan therefore was sufficient because Jordan was another name by which the defendant was known. Thornton v. State, 325 Ga. App. 475, 753 S.E.2d 139 (2013).

Question of what a name spells is for the jury. Washington v. State, 113 Ga. 698, 39 S.E. 294 (1901).

Judge may find indictment name to equal defendant's. — When a judge finds the name in the indictment, though somewhat illegible, is really the same as that admitted to be the true name of the accused in the plea, the judge's decision is controlling. Gunn v. State, 10 Ga. App. 819, 74 S.E. 312 (1912).

No new trial when plea stricken. — No new trial can be had on motion from a ruling of the court in striking a plea of misnomer. McDow v. State, 113 Ga. 699, 39 S.E. 295 (1901); Wilkinson v. State, 18 Ga. App. 330, 89 S.E. 460 (1916).

For example of charge of this rule to jury, see Jackson v. State, 134 Ga. 473, 68 S.E. 71 (1910).

Cited in Rountree v. State, 34 Ga. App. 668, 130 S.E. 919 (1925); Jackson v. State, 153 Ga. App. 462, 265 S.E.2d 368 (1980); Cook v. State, 162 Ga. App. 778, 293 S.E.2d 46 (1982).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 589, 595 et seq.

ALR. — Necessity in indictment charging violation of statute regarding wages, or hours, of naming particular employees, 81 A.L.R. 76.

Time and manner of raising objection of misnomer of defendant in indictment or information, 132 A.L.R. 410.

17-7-113. Time for making exception to form of indictment or accusation.

All exceptions which go merely to the form of an indictment or accusation shall be made before trial.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 833; Code 1863, § 4517; Code 1868, § 4536; Code 1873, § 4629; Code 1882, § 4629; Penal Code 1895, § 955; Penal Code 1910, § 980; Code 1933, § 27-1601.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Motion in Arrest of Judgment
New Trial

General Consideration

Indictment defects handled by pre-trial demurrer or post-conviction motion to arrest judgment. — Defects in an indictment or accusation must be taken advantage of either by demurrer before trial or by motion in arrest of judgment after conviction. Rucker v. State, 114 Ga. 13, 39 S.E. 902 (1901).

How form of indictment excepted to. — When the accused desires to take exception to the form of an indictment, it is necessary that the accused do so by demurrer or motion to quash, made in writing and before pleading to the merits. Frady v. State, 212 Ga. 84, 90 S.E.2d 664 (1955).

Exception to the denial of a motion to quash the indictment cannot be properly made a ground of a motion for new trial. Frady v. State, 212 Ga. 84, 90 S.E.2d 664 (1955).

Exceptions to form must be taken before joinder of issue. — Exceptions which go merely to the form of the indictment, if not taken before joinder of issue, are considered to be waived. Driver v. State, 60 Ga. App. 719, 4 S.E.2d 922 (1939).

When demurrers, motions, and pleas to be made. — Motions to quash an indictment must be filed prior to pleading to the merits. Sadler v. State, 124 Ga. App. 266, 183 S.E.2d 501 (1971).

Demurrer to the indictment, motion to quash, or plea in abatement must be entered before trial. Sheffield v. State, 235 Ga. 507, 220 S.E.2d 265 (1975).

Defendant waives any alleged defects by going to trial under the indictment without complaint. Sheffield v. State, 235 Ga. 507, 220 S.E.2d 265 (1975).

All demurrers to the form of the indictment, i.e., special demurrers, must be made at or before arraignment. Bramblett v. State, 239 Ga. 336, 236 S.E.2d 580 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1013, 98 S. Ct. 728, 54 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1978).

Special demurrers not made at or before arraignment are waived. Bramblett v. State, 239 Ga. 336, 236 S.E.2d 580 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1013, 98 S. Ct. 728, 54 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1978); Carter v. State, 155 Ga. App. 49, 270 S.E.2d 233 (1980).

There was no merit to the defendant's contention that the defendant's indictment improperly charged defendant with two counts, one of murder and one of voluntary manslaughter, and that the defendant was therefore unable to determine the offense with which the defendant would be charged. The defendant made no objection to the indictment at or prior to trial and consequently waived any right to make any objection on appeal. O'Toole v. State, 258 Ga. 614, 373 S.E.2d 12 (1988).

Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion to quash when the indictment quoted the language of O.C.G.A. § 16-9-1 and identified the offense as forgery in the first degree, and further identified the date and place of the offense as well as the bank on which the purported check was drawn and the check number. The defendant could not reasonably claim that the defendant was surprised by evidence at trial or was unable to prepare a defense, or that the defendant risked future prosecution for the same offense; the challenge at best went to the form of the accusation and should have been raised via special demurrer prior to trial. Wilkes v. State, 293 Ga. App. 724, 667 S.E.2d 705 (2008), overruled on other grounds, Clay v. State, 290 Ga. 822, 725 S.E.2d 260 (2012).

Contention that an accusation improperly identifies the victim is a challenge to the form of the accusation, and such challenges must be made before trial. Mooney v. State, 250 Ga. App. 13, 550 S.E.2d 421 (2001).

Waiver of right to perfect accusation or indictment. — One may waive defects in the accusation or indictment, and after waiver may not question the indictment unless absolutely void. Lanier v. State, 5 Ga. App. 472, 63 S.E. 536 (1909); Isaacs v. State, 7 Ga. App. 799, 68 S.E. 338 (1910).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

One who waives the right to be tried upon an indictment perfect in form as well as substance, and takes one's chances of acquittal, will not be heard, after conviction, to urge defects in the indictment, unless those defects are so great that the accusation is absolutely void. Driver v. State, 60 Ga. App. 719, 4 S.E.2d 922 (1939); Tanner v. State, 90 Ga. App. 789, 84 S.E.2d 600 (1954).

Unless the defects appearing in an indictment or accusation are so great that the indictment or accusation is absolutely void, the right to a perfect indictment or accusation may be waived, and is waived by going to trial under a defective indictment or accusation without complaint. Moore v. State, 94 Ga. App. 210, 94 S.E.2d 80 (1956).

Defendant has a right to be tried upon an indictment that is perfect in form and substance, but this right can be waived under certain circumstances if a defendant fails to timely challenge the indictment. McKay v. State, 234 Ga. App. 556, 507 S.E.2d 484 (1998).

When defects waived. — If exceptions to form are not taken by special demurrer or plea before joinder of issue the exceptions are considered as waived. The exceptions cannot be reached by a motion in arrest of judgment. Newsome v. State, 2 Ga. App. 392, 58 S.E. 672 (1907).

When an indictment incorrectly charged the defendant with possession of a substance composed of a purity of one-tenth of a percent of cocaine, and the defendant moved, at trial, to dismiss the indictment, the trial court properly refused and constructively amended the indictment before the jury to read "ten percent." By waiting until trial to complain of the form of the indictment, the defendant was too late; motions to quash must be entered before trial, or are waived. Arena v. State, 194 Ga. App. 883, 392 S.E.2d 264 (1990).

Demurrer to indictment is too late when filed after pleading to the merits. — Demurrer to indictment charging the defendant with robbery by force, on grounds of lack of particularity in description of stolen property and collective valuation of the articles taken, being special in nature and not having been filed until after the defendant pled to the merits, was too late; nor did the court err in refusing to allow the defendant to withdraw such plea. Burns v. State, 191 Ga. 60, 11 S.E.2d 350 (1940).

Cited in McCoy v. State, 15 Ga. 205 (1854); Long v. State, 38 Ga. 491 (1868); Bell v. State, 41 Ga. 589 (1871); Bostock v. State, 61 Ga. 635 (1878); Lampkin v. State, 87 Ga. 516, 13 S.E. 523 (1891); Martin v. State, 115 Ga. 255, 41 S.E. 576 (1902); Wells v. State, 116 Ga. 87, 42 S.E. 390 (1902); Tate v. State, 142 Ga. App. 487, 236 S.E.2d 173 (1977); State v. Eubanks, 239 Ga. 483, 238 S.E.2d 38 (1977); Joiner v. State, 163 Ga. App. 521, 295 S.E.2d 219 (1982); State v. Tollison, 176 Ga. App. 35, 335 S.E.2d 153 (1985); Dunbar v. State, 209 Ga. App. 97, 432 S.E.2d 829 (1993); Foster v. State, 218 Ga. App. 569, 462 S.E.2d 455 (1995); Smith v. State, 239 Ga. App. 515, 521 S.E.2d 450 (1999); Yates v. State, 248 Ga. App. 35, 545 S.E.2d 169 (2001).

Motion in Arrest of Judgment

When motion in arrest of judgment must be made. — Motion in arrest of judgment must be made during the term at which the trial was held and the sentence imposed. Spence v. State, 7 Ga. App. 825, 68 S.E. 443 (1910); Beall v. State, 21 Ga. App. 73, 94 S.E. 74 (1917); Rambo v. State, 25 Ga. App. 390, 103 S.E. 494 (1920).

Motion in arrest of judgment only for errors on merits. — Motion in arrest of judgment after verdict may take advantage of such defects as might be taken advantage of by demurrer before pleading to the merits. It lies only for matters affecting the merits, not for matters of form. Wood v. State, 46 Ga. 322 (1872); White v. State, 93 Ga. 47, 19 S.E. 49 (1894); Boswell v. State, 114 Ga. 40, 39 S.E. 897 (1901); Scandrett v. State, 124 Ga. 141, 52 S.E. 160 (1905); Foss v. State, 15 Ga. App. 478, 83 S.E. 880 (1914).

Without consideration of trial evidence. — Evidence in the trial may not be considered on a motion in arrest of judgment because the motion may be based only upon those defects in the indictment which are apparent on the face of the record and not cured by the verdict. Sessions v. State, 3 Ga. App. 13, 59 S.E. 196 (1907).

Defects must be obvious. — Motion in arrest of judgment is to be based upon only those defects apparent on the face of the record which are not cured by the verdict. Spence v. State, 7 Ga. App. 825, 68 S.E. 443 (1910); Darsey v. State, 17 Ga. App. 280, 86 S.E. 781 (1915); Beall v. State, 21 Ga. App. 73, 94 S.E. 74 (1917).

Defect must be incurable. — Motion in arrest of judgment must be predicated upon a defect in the indictment which is not amendable. Smith v. State, 17 Ga. App. 612, 87 S.E. 846 (1916).

Motion in arrest of judgment must specify the defects which render the indictment fatally defective. Rolin v. State, 70 Ga. 719 (1883).

Unconstitutional statute as basis for indictment. — Motion in arrest of judgment may be used in order to show that the indictment is based upon an unconstitutional statute because such a defect is not amendable. Boswell v. State, 114 Ga. 40, 39 S.E. 897 (1901).

Verdict too vague. — Motion in arrest of judgment is a proper remedy when the verdict is so vague and uncertain that no legal judgment could be rendered thereon. O'Connell v. State, 55 Ga. 191 (1875); Smith v. State, 117 Ga. 16, 43 S.E. 440 (1903).

Verdict and indictment show no guilt. — Motion in arrest of judgment is the proper remedy when the verdict construed with the indictment fails to find the defendant guilty of any offense. Lanier v. State, 5 Ga. App. 472, 63 S.E. 536 (1909).

Felony verdict given for misdemeanor indictment. — Motion in arrest of judgment is the proper remedy where a verdict for a felony is rendered under an indictment for a misdemeanor. Allen v. State, 86 Ga. 399, 12 S.E. 651 (1890); Wells v. State, 116 Ga. 87, 42 S.E. 390 (1902).

Conviction void on face. — Motion in arrest of judgment is the proper remedy when judgment of conviction is void on the judgment's face. Ezzard v. State, 11 Ga. App. 30, 74 S.E. 551 (1912).

Indictment void. — Motion in arrest of judgment is the proper remedy when the indictment is void. Lanier v. State, 5 Ga. App. 472, 63 S.E. 536 (1909); Isaacs v. State, 7 Ga. App. 799, 68 S.E. 338 (1910).

Georgia no longer strictly applies the fatal variance rule. Tyson v. State, 145 Ga. App. 21, 243 S.E.2d 314 (1978).

Clerical error in otherwise good indictment. — When the indictment in a case is otherwise good, the clerical error of writing inadvertently the word "accused" for the word "prosecutor" does not vitiate the indictment. Since the word which is changed does not so obscure the sense that a juror or person of ordinary intelligence cannot with certainty ascertain the meaning, the defendant will not be permitted after the verdict to take advantage of this mere clerical error which is corrected by the necessary intendment of the indictment. Lewis v. State, 55 Ga. App. 743, 191 S.E. 278 (1937).

Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied when the indictment is demurrable but not void. Gazaway v. State, 9 Ga. App. 194, 70 S.E. 978 (1911).

Motion not appropriate although guilty plea withdrawal not shown on record. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied when withdrawal of plea of guilty is not shown on the record. Garner v. State, 42 Ga. 203 (1871).

Motion not appropriate when copy bill not fully endorsed. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied when a copy bill of an indictment which has been established does not have upon it any endorsement of "true bill" or other finding by the grand jury. Hughes v. State, 76 Ga. 39 (1885).

Misjoinder of offenses in same count. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied although misjoinder of offenses occurs in the same count of the indictment. Lampkin v. State, 87 Ga. 516, 13 S.E. 523 (1891).

County name stated only in caption. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied even when a blank is left in indictment for name of county, the county being stated in the caption. Lambert v. State, 11 Ga. App. 149, 74 S.E. 858 (1912).

Motion in Arrest of Judgment (Cont'd)

Body of bill and verdict show different offenses. — When a return of "true bill for voluntary manslaughter" was endorsed by the grand jury and the accused was found guilty of this offense, the judgment of conviction will not be arrested because the offense of murder was charged in the body of the bill. Williams v. State, 13 Ga. App. 83, 78 S.E. 854 (1913).

Verdict finds defendants and prior convicts guilty. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied when the defendants are jointly indicted with others, whose cases have been disposed of either by pleas of guilty or by verdict of guilty, and the verdict returned finds all of the defendants guilty. This is a good verdict. Bird v. State, 9 Ga. App. 218, 70 S.E. 966 (1911).

Indictment omits ownership in burglary case. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied when after verdict of guilty of burglary the motion is made because the indictment failed to allege ownership. Berry v. State, 92 Ga. 47, 17 S.E. 1006 (1893).

Larceny (now theft) indictment omits status of company. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied in a trial of larceny although the indictment does not state whether the company is an artificial or natural person or firm. Hatfield v. State, 76 Ga. 499 (1886).

Record omits stating if defendant present at judgment. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied although the record is silent as to whether the prisoner and the prisoner's counsel were present when the verdict was rendered and when sentence pronounced. Smith v. State, 60 Ga. 430 (1878); Franks v. State, 120 Ga. 495, 48 S.E. 148 (1904).

Juror serving twice. — Motion in arrest of judgment is properly denied when juror after serving first week voluntarily serves again and the defendant does not challenge the array. McAfee v. State, 31 Ga. 411 (1860).

Effect of sustaining a motion in arrest of judgment is to declare the indictment void. Hill v. Nelms, 122 Ga. 572, 50 S.E. 344 (1905).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment, which the defendant filed to attack the validity of the indictment filed against the defendant, as O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391 could properly serve as a predicate offense under the vehicular homicide statute; a presumption that the defendant was not under the influence at the time of the accident did not apply. The legislature intended § 40-6-391 to serve as a statutory predicate for the vehicular homicide statute, and the defendant's conviction under the vehicular homicide statute after application of the predicate offense, § 40-6-391, did not violate the defendant's equal protection rights under either the state or federal constitutions. David v. State, 261 Ga. App. 468, 583 S.E.2d 135 (2003).

New Trial

Refusal to sustain a motion in arrest of judgment gives no ground for a new trial. Stokes v. State, 84 Ga. 258, 10 S.E. 740 (1890); Gaines v. State, 108 Ga. 772, 33 S.E. 632 (1899).

Defects in indictment. — Defects in an indictment or accusation furnish no ground for a new trial. Scandrett v. State, 124 Ga. 141, 52 S.E. 160 (1905); Stubbs v. State, 1 Ga. App. 504, 58 S.E. 236 (1907); Rogers v. State, 1 Ga. App. 527, 58 S.E. 236 (1907); Foss v. State, 15 Ga. App. 478, 83 S.E. 880 (1914).

Motion for new trial sets aside judgment and is heard first. — When a motion for a new trial and a motion in arrest of judgment are both made, though the latter be made first, the former will be heard first and if sustained dispense with a hearing on the latter, for it in effect sets aside the judgment. Williams v. State, 121 Ga. 579, 49 S.E. 689 (1905).

For example of the effect of making motion for new trial on ground which will support motion in arrest of judgment, see Tate v. Cowart, 48 Ga. 540 (1873); Boswell v. State, 114 Ga. 40, 39 S.E. 897 (1901).

For example of the effect of making motion in arrest of judgment in a proper case for a motion for a new trial, see Lowther v. State, 18 Ga. App. 461, 89 S.E. 536 (1916).

New trial should be granted based on Ineffective assistance of counsel. — Trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a new trial as to the vehicular homicide and serious-injury-by-vehicle convictions was properly reversed because the defendant demonstrated prejudice under Strickland as absent trial counsel's failure to raise a general demurrer after jeopardy attached, the result of the trial would have been more favorable to the defendant as the defendant would not have been convicted under the indictment of any of the seven felonies. State v. Heath, 843 S.E.2d 801, No. S19G0967, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 362 (2020).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Sufficiency of indictment as affected by bill of particulars, 10 A.L.R. 982.

Description in indictment for perjury of proceeding in which perjury was committed, 24 A.L.R. 1137.

Power of court to pass on competency, legality, or sufficiency of evidence on which indictment is based, 31 A.L.R. 1479.

Sufficiency of description of automobile, or automobile equipment or accessories, in indictment, information, or complaint in criminal proceedings, 100 A.L.R. 791.

Necessity of alleging in information or indictment that act was "unlawful," 169 A.L.R. 166.

Necessity of naming owner of building in indictment or information for burglary, 169 A.L.R. 887.

Necessity of alleging in indictment or information limitation-tolling facts, 52 A.L.R.3d 922.

Use of abbreviation in indictment or information, 92 A.L.R.3d 494.

Failure to swear or irregularity in swearing witnesses appearing before grand jury as ground for dismissal of indictment, 23 A.L.R.4th 154.

Part 2

Insanity and Mental Incompetency

Administrative rules and regulations. — Mental Health Services, Official Compilation of the Rules and Regulations of the State of Georgia, Institutional, Center, and Program Services, Subject 125-4-5.

Pretrial Examination and for Commitment Because of Incompetency to Stand Trial, Official Compilation of the Rules and Regulations of the State of Georgia, Department of Human Services, Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities and Addictive Diseases, Subject 290-4-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Insanity Defense, 41 POF2d 615.

C.J.S. — 22 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 257. 39 C.J.S., Habeas Corpus, § 272 et seq. 57 C.J.S., Mental Health, § 118 et seq.

17-7-129. Mental capacity to stand trial; release of competency evaluation to prosecuting attorney.

(a) When information becomes known to the court sufficient to raise a bona fide doubt regarding the accused's mental competency to stand trial, the court has a duty, sua sponte, to inquire into the accused's mental competency to stand trial. The court may order the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities to conduct an evaluation of the accused's competency. If the court determines that it is necessary to have a trial on the issue of competency, the court shall follow the procedures set forth in Code Section 17-7-130. The court's order shall set forth those facts which give rise to its bona fide doubt as to the accused's mental competency to stand trial. The evaluation of the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities shall be submitted to the court, and the court shall submit such evaluation to the attorney for the accused or, if pro se, to the accused, but otherwise, the report shall remain under seal.

(b) If the court orders a competency evaluation and the accused serves notice of a special plea of mental incompetency to stand trial or raises the issue of insanity, the court shall release the competency evaluation to the prosecuting attorney. Such evaluation shall not be released to any other person absent a court order.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-7-129, enacted by Ga. L. 2011, p. 372, § 1/HB 421.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 35 et seq., 798.
31A Am. Jur. 2d, Expert and Opinion Evidence, §§ 117, 136.

C.J.S. — 31A C.J.S., Evidence, § 225.
32 C.J.S., Evidence, §§ 763 et seq., 885 et seq.

17-7-130. Proceedings upon plea of mental incompetency to stand trial.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Child" means an accused person under the jurisdiction of the superior court pursuant to Code Section 15-11-560.

(2) "Civil commitment" means the accused's involuntary inpatient or outpatient commitment pursuant to Chapter 3 or 4 of Title 37, as appropriate.

(3) "Court" means the court which has jurisdiction over the criminal charges against the accused.

(4) "Department" means the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities.

(5) "Developmental disability" shall have the same meaning as set forth in paragraph (8) of Code Section 37-1-1.

(6) "Inpatient" shall have the same meaning as in paragraph (9.1) of Code Section 37-3-1; provided, however, that as applied to a child for purposes of this Code section, the term shall mean a child who is mentally ill or has a developmental disability and is in need of involuntary placement.

(7) "Nonviolent offense" means any offense other than a violent offense.

(8) "Outpatient" shall have the same meaning as in paragraph (12.1) of Code Section 37-3-1, provided that:

(A) As applied to a child for purposes of this Code section, the term shall mean a child who is mentally ill or has a developmental disability and is in need of involuntary placement; and

(B) The court determines that the accused meets the criteria for release on bail or other pre-trial release pursuant to Code Section 17-6-1.

(9) "Serious violent felony" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 17-10-6.1.

(10) "Sexual offense" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 17-10-6.2.

(11) "Violent offense" means:

(A)(i) A serious violent felony;

(ii) A sexual offense;

(iii) Criminal attempt to commit a serious violent felony;

(iv) Criminal attempt to commit a sexual offense;

(v) Aggravated assault;

(vi) Hijacking a motor vehicle in the first degree or hijacking an aircraft;

(vii) Aggravated battery;

(viii) Aggravated stalking;

(ix) Arson in the first degree or in the second degree;

(x) Stalking;

(xi) Fleeing and attempting to elude a police officer;

(xii) Any offense which involves the use of a deadly weapon or destructive device; and

(B) Those felony offenses deemed by the court to involve an allegation of actual or potential physical harm to another person.

(b)(1) If an accused files a motion requesting a competency evaluation, the court may order the department to conduct an evaluation by a physician or licensed psychologist to determine the accused's mental competency to stand trial and, if such physician or licensed psychologist determines the accused to be mentally incompetent to stand trial, to make recommendations as to restoring the accused to competency. If the accused is a child, the department shall be authorized to place such child in a secure facility designated by the department. The department's evaluation shall be submitted to the court, and the court shall submit such evaluation to the attorney for the accused or if pro se, to the accused, but otherwise, the evaluation shall be under seal and shall not be released to any other person absent a court order.

(2) If the accused files a special plea alleging that the accused is mentally incompetent to stand trial, it shall be the duty of the court to have a bench trial, unless the state or the accused demands a special jury trial, to determine the accused's competency to stand trial. Once a special plea has been filed, the court shall submit the department's evaluation to the prosecuting attorney.

(c) If the court finds the accused is mentally incompetent to stand trial, the court may order a department physician or licensed psychologist to evaluate and diagnose the accused as to whether there is a substantial probability that the accused will attain mental competency to stand trial in the foreseeable future. The court shall retain jurisdiction over the accused and shall transfer the accused to the physical custody of the department. At its discretion, the court may allow the evaluation to be performed on the accused as an outpatient if the accused is charged with a nonviolent offense. Such evaluation shall be performed within 90 days after the department has received actual custody of an accused or, in the case of an outpatient, a court order requiring evaluation of an accused. If the accused is a child, the department shall be authorized to place such child in a secure facility designated by the department. If the evaluation shows:

(1) That the accused is mentally competent to stand trial, the department shall immediately report that determination and the reasons therefor to the court, and the court shall submit such determination to the attorney for the accused or, if pro se, to the accused and to the prosecuting attorney. The accused shall be returned to the court as provided for in subsection (d) of this Code section;

(2) That the accused is mentally incompetent to stand trial and that there is not a substantial probability that the accused will attain competency in the foreseeable future, the court shall follow the procedures set forth in subsection (e) of this Code section for civil commitment or release; or

(3) That the accused is mentally incompetent to stand trial but there is a substantial probability that the accused will attain competency in the foreseeable future, by the end of the 90 day period, or at any prior time, the department shall report that finding and the reasons therefor to the court and shall retain custody over the accused for the purpose of continued treatment for an additional period not to exceed nine months; provided, however, that if the accused is charged with a misdemeanor offense or a nonviolent offense, the court shall retain jurisdiction over the accused but may, in its discretion, allow continued treatment to be done on an outpatient basis by the department. The department shall monitor the accused's outpatient treatment for the additional period not to exceed nine months. If, by the end of the nine-month period or at any prior time the accused's condition warrants, the accused is still determined by the department physician or licensed psychologist to be mentally incompetent to stand trial, irrespective of the probability of recovery in the foreseeable future, the department shall report that finding and the reasons therefor to the court. The court shall then follow the procedures in subsection (e) of this Code section for civil commitment or release.

(d)(1) If the department's physician or licensed psychologist determines at any time that the accused is mentally competent to stand trial, the department shall notify the court, and the accused shall be discharged into the custody of a sheriff of the jurisdiction of the court unless the charges which led to the evaluation or civil commitment have been dismissed, in which case, the accused shall be discharged from the department. In the event a sheriff does not appear and take custody of the accused within 20 days after notice to the appropriate sheriff of the jurisdiction of the court, the presiding judge of the court, and the prosecuting attorney for the court, the department shall itself return the accused to one of the court's detention facilities, and the cost of returning the accused shall be paid by the county in which the court is located. All notifications under this paragraph shall be sent by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested. As an alternative to returning the accused to the sheriff of the jurisdiction of the court, the department may hold the accused at the department's secure facility instead of at the court's detention facilities whenever a department physician or licensed psychologist provides written notice to the court that such detention in the court's facilities would be detrimental to the well-being of the accused. Such alternative detention shall continue only until the date of the accused's trial. Regardless of where the accused is held, the court shall hold a bench trial to determine the accused's mental competency to stand trial within 45 days of receiving the department's evaluation or, if demanded, shall conduct a special jury trial within six months of receiving the department's evaluation.

(2) If the accused is an outpatient and the department's physician or licensed psychologist determines at any time that the accused is mentally competent to stand trial, the accused may remain in the community under conditions of bond or other conditions ordered by the court, if any, until the date of the accused's trial, which shall be within 45 days of the court receiving the department's evaluation if tried by the court or within six months of receiving the department's evaluation if a special jury trial is demanded.

(e) If the evaluation performed pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section shows that the accused is mentally incompetent to stand trial and that there is not a substantial probability that the accused will attain competency in the foreseeable future:

(1) If the accused is charged with a misdemeanor, the department shall return the physical custody of the accused to a sheriff of the jurisdiction of the court; provided, however, that as an alternative to returning the accused to the sheriff of the jurisdiction of the court, the department may hold the accused at the department's secure facility instead of at the court's detention facilities whenever a department physician or licensed psychologist provides written notice to the court that such detention in the court's facilities would be detrimental to the well-being of the accused. Such alternative detention shall continue only until the date of the accused's trial. Regardless of where the accused is held, the court shall, within 45 days of receiving the department's evaluation:

(A) Consider entry of a nolle prosequi of the charges pursuant to Code Section 17-8-3 and, if the accused is not a child, request that the department petition the probate court of the jurisdiction of the accused's residence for civil commitment of the accused; or

(B) If the court finds that the accused does not meet the criteria for civil commitment, the accused shall be released in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 6 of this title; or by a court appointed licensed clinical psychologist or psychiatrist, who shall report to the court in writing as to the current mental and emotional condition of the accused. Regardless of where the accused is held, the court shall, within 45 days of receiving the department's evaluation:

(2) If the accused is charged with a felony, the department shall return the physical custody of the accused to a sheriff of the jurisdiction of the court; provided, however, that as an alternative to returning the accused to the sheriff of the jurisdiction of the court, the department may hold the accused at the department's secure facility instead of at the court's detention facilities whenever a department physician or licensed psychologist provides written notice to the court that such detention in the court's facilities would be detrimental to the well-being of the accused. Such alternative detention shall continue only until the date of the accused's trial. The department shall report to the court its finding regarding the accused's mental competency to stand trial, the reasons therefor, and its opinion as to whether the accused currently meets the criteria for civil commitment. The court may order an independent evaluation of the accused

(A) Consider entry of a nolle prosequi of the charges pursuant to Code Section 17-8-3 and, if the accused is not a child, request that the department petition the probate court of the jurisdiction of the accused's residence for civil commitment of the accused; or

(B) Retain jurisdiction of the accused and conduct a trial at which the court shall hear evidence and consider all psychiatric and psychological evaluations submitted to the court and determine whether the state has proved by clear and convincing evidence that the accused meets the criteria for civil commitment. The burden of proof in such trials shall be upon the state. Following the trial:

(i) If the court finds that the accused does not meet the criteria for civil commitment, the accused shall be released in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 6 of this title;

(ii) If the court finds that the accused meets the criteria for civil commitment, the judge may issue an order civilly committing the accused, and the court shall order the civil commitment to be on an inpatient or outpatient placement; provided, however, that if the accused is a child, the department shall be authorized to place such child in a secure facility designated by the department;

(iii) If the accused is civilly committed pursuant to division (ii) of this subparagraph and was charged with a nonviolent offense, the court may order civil commitment on an annual basis, but in no case for a period to exceed the maximum period for which the accused could have been sentenced on the most serious nonviolent offense charged or a period to exceed five years, whichever is less, provided that civil commitment shall be reevaluated by a department physician or licensed psychologist on an annual basis;

(iv) If the accused is civilly committed pursuant to division (ii) of this subparagraph and was charged with a violent offense, the court may order civil commitment on an annual basis, but in no case for a period to exceed the maximum period for which the accused could have been sentenced on the most serious violent offense charged, provided that civil commitment shall be reevaluated by a department physician or licensed psychologist on an annual basis;

(v) Following the civil commitment pursuant to division (ii) of this subparagraph, a department physician or licensed psychologist shall submit to the court his or her annual evaluation as to whether the civilly committed accused continues to meet the criteria for civil commitment. The court shall mail the annual evaluation to the attorney for the accused or, if pro se, to the accused and to the prosecuting attorney. The court shall review the case annually and enter the appropriate order to renew the civil commitment, to change the civil commitment status, or, in the event the charges are dismissed, to transfer the jurisdiction of the case to the probate court of the jurisdiction of the accused's residence for further civil commitment; provided, however, that after the department submits its annual evaluation, if the state or the accused requests a hearing regarding civil commitment, the court shall hold a hearing on such issue; and

(vi) An accused who is civilly committed pursuant to division (ii) of this subparagraph may make an application for release from civil commitment but shall only be released from that civil commitment by order of the court in accordance with the procedures specified in paragraphs (1) through (3) of subsection (f) of Code Section 17-7-131, except that the burden of proof in such release hearing shall be on the state, and if the civilly committed accused is indigent, the accused may petition the court to have an evaluation performed by a physician or licensed psychologist of the accused's choice, and the court may order the cost of such evaluation be paid for by the county.

(f) If, at any time, the department's physician or licensed psychologist determines that the accused is mentally incompetent to stand trial but later determines that the accused is mentally competent to stand trial, the court shall be so notified and shall order the accused detained or discharged in accordance with paragraph (1) of subsection (d) of this Code section. Any accused determined by a department physician or licensed psychologist to be mentally competent to stand trial and returned to the court as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section shall again be entitled to file a special plea as provided for in this Code section.

(g) If an accused is determined by a department physician or licensed psychologist to be mentally incompetent to stand trial, whether or not civilly committed pursuant to this Code section, the state may file at any time a motion for rehearing on the issue of the accused's mental competency to stand trial. If the state's motion is granted, the case shall proceed as provided in this Code section.

(h) Nothing in this Code section shall prevent the accused or the state from seeking a court order for a nondepartment mental competency evaluation of the accused at the cost of the movant. If a nondepartment mental competency evaluation is ordered, the court shall abide by the time frames for trial as set forth in this Code section unless the court determines, for good cause shown, that such time frames require adjustment for a nondepartment evaluation.

(i) The "Crime Victims' Bill of Rights," as set forth in Chapter 17 of this title, shall be applicable to any judicial proceeding held pursuant to this Code section, and notice shall be provided to any victim as set forth in such chapter.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 4195; Code 1868, § 4234; Code 1873, § 4299; Code 1882, § 4299; Penal Code 1895, § 951; Penal Code 1910, § 976; Code 1933, § 27-1502; Ga. L. 1977, p. 1293, § 3; Ga. L. 1982, p. 3, § 17; Ga. L. 1995, p. 1250, §§ 1.1, 1.2; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1589, § 3; Ga. L. 2007, p. 663, § 1/SB 190; Ga. L. 2009, p. 453, § 3-2/HB 228; Ga. L. 2010, p. 286, § 12/SB 244; Ga. L. 2011, p. 372, § 2/HB 421; Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 4-16/HB 242; Ga. L. 2017, p. 417, § 3-2/SB 104.

Cross references. — Mental capacity as it relates to culpability for criminal acts, § 16-3-2 et seq. Manner of service of petition for release of person detained in facility pursuant to court order, §§ 37-3-148, 37-4-108, 37-7-148.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2007 and 2008, "or" was deleted at the end of division (a)(3)(A)(ix); "et.seq" was changed to "et seq." in subsection (b) and subparagraph (d)(2)(A); "subparagraph (a)(3)(A)" was substituted for "subparagraph (A) of paragraph (3) of subsection (a)" in the second sentence of subsection (b); and "Chapter 3 or 4 of Title 37" was substituted for "Chapters 3 or 4 of Title 37" near the middle of the introductory language of subsection (d).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 5-1/HB 242, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall become effective on January 1, 2014, and shall apply to all offenses which occur and juvenile proceedings commenced on and after such date. Any offense occurring before January 1, 2014, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense and shall be considered a prior adjudication for the purpose of imposing a disposition that provides for a different penalty for subsequent adjudications, of whatever class, pursuant to this Act. The enactment of this Act shall not affect any prosecutions for acts occurring before January 1, 2014, and shall not act as an abatement of any such prosecutions."

U.S. Code. — Defense of insanity, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 12.2.

Law reviews. — For article, "The Georgia Law of Insanity," see 3 Ga. B.J. 28 (1941). For annual survey of death penalty law, see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 197 (2004); 58 Mercer L. Rev. 111 (2006). For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 139 (2005); 58 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2006). For article on the 2017 amendment of this Code section, see 34 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 61 (2017). For annual survey on criminal law, see 69 Mercer L. Rev. 73 (2017).

For note discussing criminal responsibility and mental illness as a defense in Georgia, see 23 Ga. B.J. 538 (1961). For note, "Commitment and Release of Persons Found Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity: A Georgia Perspective," see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 1065 (1981). For note on the 1995 amendment of this Code section, see 12 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 144 (1995). For note and comment, "Hope for the Best and Prepare for the Worst: The Capital Defender's Guide to Reciprocal Discovery in the Sentencing Phase of Georgia Death Penalty Trials," see 23 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 995 (2007).

For comment on Bacon v. State, 222 Ga. 151, 149 S.E.2d 111 (1966), see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 506 (1967).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Procedure
Application
Burden of Proof
Obligations of Counsel
Jury Instructions and Responsibilities
Appeals

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Placement of the burden of proof on the defendant to prove incompetence by a preponderance of the evidence does not violate due process. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695 (11th Cir. 1990).

Because the nature of automatic commitment does not bear a reasonable relation to the state's purpose of accurately determining the restorability of individual defendants' competency to stand trial, that aspect of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130(c) violated due process when applied to the defendants who have been deprived of their liberty based solely on that statutory provision. O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130(c) should be construed as limiting the detention authorized to the reasonable time needed to fulfill the statute's purpose of determining a defendant's competency to stand trial. Carr v. State, 303 Ga. 853, 815 S.E.2d 903 (2018).

Nature of automatic commitment under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130(c) applicable to all those defendants who had been accused of violent crimes and found to be mentally incompetent to stand trial was held to not bear a reasonable relationship to the state's purpose of accurately determining the restorability of the individual defendants' competency to stand trial; thus, that aspect of § 17-7-130(c) violated due process. McGouirk v. State, 303 Ga. 881, 815 S.E.2d 825 (2018).

Limitation on detention to ensure constitutionality. — Georgia Supreme Court agreed that indefinite or even unreasonably extended detention under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130(c) for incompetency to stand trial would be unconstitutional, but the Court does not agree that the statute permits such extended detention. Instead, to avoid that constitutional concern, the Court construes § 17-7-130(c) as limiting the detention the statute authorizes to the reasonable time needed to fulfill the statute's purpose. Carr v. State, 303 Ga. 853, 815 S.E.2d 903 (2018).

Automatic detention without an individualized determination of whether the confinement reasonably advances the government's purpose violated a defendant's right to due process, and the Georgia Supreme Court therefore held that O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130(c) could not be applied constitutionally to defendants who are not already being detained on another, lawful ground. Carr v. State, 303 Ga. 853, 815 S.E.2d 903 (2018).

Trial of person in state of insanity forbidden. — Former Code 1933, § 27-1504, which guaranteed that one charged with crime would not be tried while in a condition of insanity, and former Code 1933, § 27-1502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130), which secured to such individual the right to have the question of the individual's mental condition at the time of the trial inquired into before being required to plead to the indictment, are declaratory of the common-law rule which forbids the trial of any person while the person is in a state of insanity. The reason upon which such rule rested at common law, that is, the incapacity of one who is insane to make a rational defense, furnished the guiding principle for their proper application. Brown v. State, 215 Ga. 784, 113 S.E.2d 618 (1960).

Section was declaratory of the common law which forbid the trial of persons while in the state of insanity, that is, incapable of making a rational defense. Cronch v. State, 141 Ga. App. 851, 235 S.E.2d 40 (1977).

For history of former Code 1933, §§ 27- 1502 and 27-1504 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130), see Echols v. State, 149 Ga. App. 620, 255 S.E.2d 92 (1979).

Section impliedly repeals Code 1933, § 27-1504. — "Mental incompetency" as used in former Code 1933, § 27-1502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130) included those mental states embraced in the terms "lunatic" and "insane person" in former Code 1933, § 27-1504, as those terms all relate solely to the mental ability or capacity of a defendant to intelligently participate in the defendant's trial. Thus, the amendment by Ga. L. 1977, p. 1293, by implication repealed former Code 1933, § 27-1504. If this were not true, a defendant could enter a special plea of mental incompetency under former Code 1933, § 27-1502, another plea of "lunacy" under former Code 1933, § 27-1504, and a third plea of "insanity at the time of trial" under former Code 1933, § 27-1504, and demand a special jury trial on all three issues even though all three relate to the same mental state. No such result was envisioned by the General Assembly. Echols v. State, 149 Ga. App. 620, 255 S.E.2d 92 (1979).

Choice between proceeding under § 16-3-2 or § 17-7-130. — Special plea of insanity under former Code 1933, § 26-702 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-3-2) was proper if the defendant became insane since the crime was committed or was insane at the time of the trial. A plea of insanity may be taken advantage of under the general issue under former Code 1933, § 27-1502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130) if the defendant was insane prior to the time the alleged crime was committed or was insane at the time the crime was alleged to have been committed. Orange v. State, 77 Ga. App. 36, 47 S.E.2d 756 (1948).

"Mental competence" relates only to the ability of the defendant, at the time of the trial, to intelligently participate in the defendant's trial. Echols v. State, 149 Ga. App. 620, 255 S.E.2d 92 (1979).

Cause of incompetency irrelevant. — Provision of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 authorizing transfer of defendant to the Department of Human Resources applied to the defendant whose incompetency was the result of traumatic brain injury; such transfers are not limited only to cases when incompetency is the result of mental illness or retardation. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Drust, 264 Ga. 514, 448 S.E.2d 364 (1994).

One mentally competent at time crime committed is culpable. — Even if a habeas corpus petitioner was incompetent at the time of trial and is incompetent today, if the petitioner could be rendered competent in the future (even by forcing the petitioner to take medication), the petitioner could be lawfully tried, convicted, and sentenced to death once again because someone who is mentally competent (sane) when he or she commits a crime is culpable for that offense, even if his or her later incompetency prevents him or her (perhaps only temporarily) from being tried for the offense. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335 (2011), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Insanity and competence to stand trial are separate issues. — Trial court erred in overruling the defendant's objection to the state's asking an expert witness whether the defendant was competent to stand trial because the defense of insanity and defendant's competence to stand trial are separate issues and the state made no showing that the expert's opinion as to defendant's competency to stand trial was relevant to the jury's decision on defendant's plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. Hudson v. State, 273 Ga. 124, 538 S.E.2d 751 (2000).

Duty of court to inquire into competency. — Constitutional guarantees require that a trial court inquire into competency, even when state procedures for raising competency are not followed, if evidence of incompetence comes to the court's attention. Baker v. State, 250 Ga. 187, 297 S.E.2d 9 (1982).

While the statutory right to a special jury under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 can be waived, the actual issue of present incompetence must be addressed if there is evidence of incompetence which manifests itself during the proceedings. Baker v. State, 250 Ga. 187, 297 S.E.2d 9 (1982).

Trial court must conduct, sua sponte, a competency hearing when the information known to the trial court at the time of the trial or plea bargain is sufficient to raise a bona fide doubt regarding the defendant's competence. White v. State, 202 Ga. App. 424, 414 S.E.2d 328 (1992).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Requirement of a competency hearing is applicable even when the doubt regarding a defendant's competency arises during the course of a trial. White v. State, 202 Ga. App. 424, 414 S.E.2d 328 (1992).

When the defendant was convicted of various crimes but the trial court committed harmful error by failing to conduct an adequate inquiry into the defendant's competency, upon remand, if the court decides that a meaningful competency determination is not possible, the defendant is entitled to a new trial on the offenses charged and the defendant may again raise the issue of incompetence by special plea pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130. Brogdon v. State, 220 Ga. App. 31, 467 S.E.2d 598 (1996).

Trial court did not err by failing to sua sponte rule on the defendant's competency as the defendant exhibited no unusual behavior during the proceedings, understood the nature and object of the proceedings, participated in the proceedings, and assisted counsel with the defense; the defendant failed to show that being a 14-year-old, standing alone, rendered the defendant incapable of understanding and participating in the proceedings. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 69, 608 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 987, 126 S. Ct. 571, 163 L. Ed. 2d 478 (2005).

Part of judgment ordering the defendant's automatic detention for evaluation as to competency to stand trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130(c) was vacated because it was necessary for the trial court to exercise the court's discretion in deciding whether the defendant should be committed into custody for evaluation or should be evaluated on an outpatient basis. McGouirk v. State, 303 Ga. 881, 815 S.E.2d 825 (2018).

Nature of relief afforded by plea. — Relief afforded by a plea of insanity, if sustained, is of the nature of the relief afforded by a plea in abatement, which can only operate to suspend or put off further proceedings, as distinguished from an absolute and final bar to further prosecution. Spell v. State, 120 Ga. App. 398, 170 S.E.2d 701 (1969).

Defense of not guilty by reason of insanity differs from capacity to make a rational defense in that it is a part of the general issue as made by the defendant in the defendant's plea of not guilty. Cronch v. State, 141 Ga. App. 851, 235 S.E.2d 40 (1977).

Retroactive determination of competency. — Superior court did not err by finding that the defendant's competency could be determined retroactively to the time of trial because the defendant expressly conceded, and indeed urged, that the defendant's competency at the time of trial could be retroactively determined and that there would be sufficient evidence for the superior court to make such determination; the defendant presented evidence at the competency hearing, and on which the defendant relied upon in the defendant's appeal, that the defendant was in fact incompetent at the time of the defendant's criminal trial; and the defendant waived the right to complain on appeal about hearing the issue of the defendant's competency. Tye v. State, 298 Ga. 474, 782 S.E.2d 10 (2016).

Directed verdict in competency trial. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 in the defendant's competency trial because the evidence on competency was in conflict; even though the defendant's expert witness opined that the defendant was not competent to stand trial, the state's expert testified that the defendant was competent to do so. Smith v. State, 312 Ga. App. 174, 718 S.E.2d 43 (2011).

Cited in Scoggins v. State, 150 Ga. 72, 102 S.E. 520 (1920); Griffin v. State, 195 Ga. 368, 24 S.E.2d 399 (1943); Cardin v. Harmon, 217 Ga. 737, 124 S.E.2d 638 (1962); Roach v. Mauldin, 277 F. Supp. 54 (N.D. Ga. 1967); Lingo v. State, 224 Ga. 333, 162 S.E.2d 1 (1968); Taylor v. State, 229 Ga. 536, 192 S.E.2d 249 (1972); Chenault v. State, 234 Ga. 216, 215 S.E.2d 223 (1975); Myers v. State, 143 Ga. App. 195, 237 S.E.2d 662 (1977); Bowers v. State, 153 Ga. App. 894, 267 S.E.2d 309 (1980); Standridge v. State, 158 Ga. App.

482, 280 S.E.2d 850 (1981); Morrow v. State, 162 Ga. App. 183, 290 S.E.2d 137 (1982); Norris v. State, 250 Ga. 38, 295 S.E.2d 321 (1982); Brown v. State, 250 Ga. 66, 295 S.E.2d 727 (1982); Lindsey v. State, 252 Ga. 493, 314 S.E.2d 881 (1984); Davenport v. State, 170 Ga. App. 667, 317 S.E.2d 895 (1984); Edison v. State, 256 Ga. 67, 344 S.E.2d 231 (1986); Partridge v. State, 256 Ga. 602, 351 S.E.2d 635 (1987); Carter v. State, 257 Ga. 510, 361 S.E.2d 175 (1987); Brown v. State, 261 Ga. 66, 401 S.E.2d 492 (1991); Callaway v. State, 208 Ga. App. 508, 431 S.E.2d 143 (1993); Colwell v. State, 273 Ga. 634, 544 S.E.2d 120 (2001); Trammel v. Bradberry, 256 Ga. App. 412, 568 S.E.2d 715 (2002); Wafford v. State, 283 Ga. App. 154, 640 S.E.2d 727 (2007); Brower v. State, 334 Ga. App. 262, 779 S.E.2d 32 (2015).

Procedure

Section provides right of inquiry into mental condition before pleading. — This section secured to a person charged with a crime the right to have the question of the person's mental condition at the time of the trial inquired into before being required to plead to the indictment. Baughn v. State, 100 Ga. 554, 28 S.E. 68, aff'd sub nom. Nobles v. Georgia, 168 U.S. 398, 18 S. Ct. 87, 42 L. Ed. 515 (1897); Martin v. State, 147 Ga. App. 173, 248 S.E.2d 235 (1978).

If it be contended that the defendant is insane at the time of the defendant's trial, defendant has the right to have the question of defendant's mental condition at that time inquired into before being required to plead to the indictment. Humphrey v. State, 46 Ga. App. 720, 169 S.E. 53 (1933).

Test as to whether due process violated by failure to hold hearing. — Courts focus on three factors in determining whether the trial court violated the defendant's procedural due process rights by failing to hold sua sponte a competency hearing: (1) evidence of the defendant's irrational behavior; (2) the defendant's demeanor at trial; and (3) prior medical opinion regarding the defendant's competence to stand trial. White v. State, 202 Ga. App. 424, 414 S.E.2d 328 (1992).

Trial court was not required to conduct a hearing to determine the defendant's competence to stand trial after the defendant withdrew the defendant's plea of mental incompetence, and nothing before the trial court raised any question about the defendant's competence to stand trial. Christenson v. State, 261 Ga. 80, 402 S.E.2d 41, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 855, 112 S. Ct. 166, 116 L. Ed. 2d 130 (1991).

Since the accused made no special plea pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 raising the issue of the accused's competency at the time of trial, and there was no evidence in the record raising sufficient doubt before or during the trial as to the accused competency, the due process requirement that the trial court conduct a competency hearing was not triggered. Huzzie v. State, 236 Ga. App. 192, 512 S.E.2d 5 (1999).

Trial court did not err in denying counsel's pretrial request for a competency evaluation of the defendant as the defendant did not engage in any irrational behavior prior to the start of the trial; the defendant's demeanor did not exhibit incompetency and the defendant responded appropriately to questions. Stodghill v. State, 351 Ga. App. 744, 832 S.E.2d 891 (2019).

Bench trial on competency required. — Based on the finding of incompetency, the trial court failed to follow the requisite procedure set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 to later find the defendant competent because, after the court received the evaluation stating the defendant's competency was restored, the trial court briefly touched on the defendant's competency at the second Faretta hearing, but failed to hold a bench trial on competency as required by the statute. Beach v. State, 351 Ga. App. 237, 830 S.E.2d 565 (2019).

Competency hearing not mandated for juveniles tried as adults. — Defendant's request that a competency hearing be mandated for all children under 17 who faced trial in the Georgia Superior Court under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(B) was rejected as any changes to Georgia's statutory provisions for trying certain juvenile offenders as adults had to come from the Georgia legislature. Lewis v. State,

Procedure (Cont'd)

279 Ga. 69, 608 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 987, 126 S. Ct. 571, 163 L. Ed. 2d 478 (2005).

Trial court erred by failing to follow the procedure set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130(d) by not holding a hearing on the defendant's competency because once defense counsel informed the trial court that the defendant, who had a long history of psychotic episodes, could not communicate with counsel in complete sentences or otherwise, it was obligated to hold a hearing on the defendant's competency to stand trial. Crawford v. State, 844 S.E.2d 294, No. A20A0187, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 321 (2020).

Trial court did not err by failing to conduct a hearing sua sponte to determine the defendant's competence to stand trial since the defendant did not file a plea of incompetence to stand trial and the defendant's testimony and the court-ordered evaluation showed that the defendant understood the nature and object of the proceedings against the defendant and was capable of assisting the defendant's attorney with a defense. Meders v. State, 260 Ga. 49, 389 S.E.2d 320 (1990), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 837, 113 S. Ct. 114, 121 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1992).

In a prosecution for felony murder and aggravated assault, neither the defendant's conduct at trial or before trial, nor any medical evidence, required the trial court, sua sponte, to conduct a hearing on the defendant's competency because there was no evidence of irrational behavior or unusual demeanor, nor was there any medical opinion about competence which would have caused the trial court to make further inquiry about competency. Traylor v. State, 280 Ga. 400, 627 S.E.2d 594 (2006).

After having considered a competency evaluation of the defendant, the trial court concluded, without further inquiry, that the defendant was competent, and absent evidence that counsel never filed a special plea of not guilty by reason of insanity or incompetence to stand trial, the appeals court found no additional inquiry was necessary; thus, given that the record did not demonstrate that the defendant's behavior at trial or medical history should have caused the trial court to, sua sponte, conduct a competency hearing, no error resulted from failing to hold a competency hearing. Freeman v. State, 282 Ga. App. 185, 638 S.E.2d 358 (2006).

Failure to order hearing held error. — When the defendant, who had an IQ of 49, was determined by the court to be mentally incompetent to waive a plea of not guilty, the trial court erred in not ordering a hearing on defendant's competence to stand trial. Holloway v. State, 257 Ga. 620, 361 S.E.2d 794 (1987).

In a motion for a new trial motion, which raised a substantive claim of incompetency and presented expert evidence, it was error for the trial court to require the defendant to prove incompetency by clear and convincing evidence before further hearing on the issue and a decision on the substantive claim was warranted as this claim could be raised in a new trial motion and the defendant's burden of proof was by a preponderance of the evidence. Traylor v. State, 280 Ga. 400, 627 S.E.2d 594 (2006).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for aggravated assault, terroristic threats, and burglary, the judgment of conviction was reversed and the case was remanded to the trial court since the trial court erred by failing to conduct a competency hearing. Although defense counsel never filed a written plea that the defendant was mentally incompetent to stand trial, based on defense counsel's detailed concerns regarding the defendant's competency and the defendant's absolute refusal to be evaluated, the trial court should have continued the matter and conducted a competency hearing. Phelps v. State, 296 Ga. App. 362, 674 S.E.2d 620 (2009).

Special trial on issue of sanity is in nature of a civil proceeding with the burden resting upon the defendant to show insanity. Henderson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 621, 278 S.E.2d 164 (1981).

Sub silentio determination of competency. — If the trial court made a sub silentio determination that the defendant was competent to stand trial, the court was authorized to accept the defendant's plea of guilty but mentally ill, although the better course of action would have been for the trial court to make an explicit finding of competency to stand trial or for the defendant to have withdrawn the defendant's plea of mental incompetency, such specific findings were not legally required as long as some determination was made on the issue of competence. Hughes v. Hall, 276 Ga. 382, 578 S.E.2d 888 (2003).

Nature of issue raised by plea. — Issue raised by a special plea of insanity is whether the defendant is capable at the time of the trial of understanding the nature and object of the proceedings going on against the defendant and rightly comprehends the defendant's own condition in reference to such proceedings, and is capable of rendering the defendant's attorney such assistance as a proper defense to the indictment returned against the defendant demands. Brown v. State, 215 Ga. 784, 113 S.E.2d 618 (1960); Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977); Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980); Banks v. State, 246 Ga. 178, 269 S.E.2d 450 (1980).

Issue is not whether defendant can distinguish right and wrong. — Issue raised by a special plea of insanity at the time of trial is not whether the defendant can distinguish between right and wrong. Brown v. State, 215 Ga. 784, 113 S.E.2d 618 (1960); Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977).

Standard by which defendant evaluated. — Special plea of insanity at the time of trial raises the question of whether the defendant is mentally competent at that time to understand the nature and object of the proceedings against the defendant, whether the defendant comprehends the defendant's own condition in reference to the proceedings, and whether the defendant is capable of rendering the defendant's attorney proper assistance; the defendant must, in other words, be aware of the charge, aware of the charge's consequences, and able to communicate with the defendant's lawyer. Allanson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 77, 279 S.E.2d 316 (1981).

It is error for trial judge to submit in charge to the jury the "right and wrong" test as the proper basis for determining the competency of the defendant to stand trial on the indictment for murder on the issue made by the special plea of insanity. Brown v. State, 215 Ga. 784, 113 S.E.2d 618 (1960).

Only one pretrial issue relates to the ability or capacity of a defendant to participate in the defendant's trial; that issue was defendant's mental competence. Echols v. State, 149 Ga. App. 620, 255 S.E.2d 92 (1979).

Whether the defendant is guilty or not guilty of the crime charged is not relevant at the trial of a special plea of insanity. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977).

Test on a special plea of insanity is whether or not the movant is incompetent to stand trial at the particular time of the trial of the special plea and not whether or not the defendant has a lack of memory relating to some prior specific event. Banks v. State, 246 Ga. 178, 269 S.E.2d 450 (1980).

Test for delusional compulsion. — One is not criminally responsible when, though one has reason sufficient to distinguish between right and wrong as to a particular act about to be committed, yet, in consequence of some delusion, the will is overmastered and there is no criminal intent, provided that the act itself is connected with the peculiar delusion under which one is laboring. Hargroves v. State, 179 Ga. 722, 177 S.E. 561 (1934).

Essential allegations of plea and procedure. — Special plea of insanity provided by this section must allege that the accused was insane at the time of trial and the issue thus made must be tried by a special jury. If found to be true, the court would order the defendant to be delivered to the superintendent of the Milledgeville State Hospital (now Department of Human Resources). Bailey v. State, 210 Ga. 52, 77 S.E.2d 511 (1953).

Object of the plea of insanity (now mental incompetency) is to prevent a trial on the merits, and though it may cover insanity (now mental incompetency) at the time of the act, the plea's essence is that the prisoner is insane (now mentally incompetent) at the trial, and the plea must contain that allegation. Long v. State, 38 Ga. 491 (1868).

Procedure (Cont'd)

Mental incompetency at time offense committed is provable under the general issue. Danforth v. State, 75 Ga. 614 (1885); Carr v. State, 96 Ga. 284, 22 S.E. 570 (1895).

Cross-examination of defendant by the state. — Since this section was not a criminal sanction, and the proceeding was civil in nature, the state may call the defendant for purpose of cross-examination on the trial of the special plea of insanity. However, no question may be propounded to the accused or inquiry be made upon the hearing touching the matter of the defendant's guilt or innocence. Bacon v. State, 222 Ga. 151, 149 S.E.2d 111 (1966), commented on in 18 Mercer L. Rev. 506.

No duty to impanel special jury absent plea. — Absent a special plea of insanity, there is no mandatory duty on the trial judge to impanel a special jury to determine the issue of mental incompetency or insanity. Ricks v. State, 240 Ga. 853, 242 S.E.2d 604 (1978).

If a special plea is not filed, then the court is not bound by the procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130. Baker v. State, 250 Ga. 187, 297 S.E.2d 9 (1982).

Excusing jurors from competency hearing. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by excusing a potential juror during jury selection for a competency hearing and by failing to excuse a second juror because the first juror expressed an inability to judge the defendant's competency on the merits, and after the second juror expressed a willingness to be fair, the trial court found that the juror had no fixed opinion about the defendant's guilt. Smith v. State, 312 Ga. App. 174, 718 S.E.2d 43 (2011).

Due process requires procedures adequate to protect incompetent from standing trial. — Failure to observe procedures adequate to protect an accused's right not to be tried or convicted while incompetent to stand trial deprives the accused of the accused's due process right to a fair trial. Ricks v. State, 240 Ga. 853, 242 S.E.2d 604 (1978).

In addition to the common law and statutory rights of a defendant not to be tried while incompetent, the accused also has a constitutional right to not be put on trial while incompetent, and procedural due process requires the trial court to afford the accused an adequate hearing on the issue of competency. Baker v. State, 250 Ga. 187, 297 S.E.2d 9 (1982).

Raising issue of insanity if plea not filed. — If there is no special plea of insanity, this section, requiring a special trial of that issue when a special plea is filed, is not applicable and the issue of insanity can be raised and tried under the plea of general issue of not guilty. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443 (1967).

Entering plea of not guilty by reason of insanity if plea of incompetency not entered. — If a defendant fails to enter a special plea of incompetency to stand trial, instead entering only a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity, the defendant puts in issue the defendant's sanity at the time of commission of the offense, not the defendant's competency to stand trial. Chenault v. Stynchcombe, 546 F.2d 1191 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 878, 98 S. Ct. 231, 54 L. Ed. 2d 158 (1977).

Motion for psychiatric examination if special plea not filed. — If a motion is made to have the defendant's mental competency examined by a psychiatrist, but no special plea of insanity is filed, the trial court under such circumstance does not err in failing to have a judicial determination made of the defendant's sanity prior to the trial on the indictment. Coffee v. State, 230 Ga. 123, 195 S.E.2d 897 (1973).

If no special plea of insanity is filed, the granting of the motion for a psychiatric examination is within the sound discretion of the trial court. This rule attaches in probation revocation hearings as well as in criminal proceedings. Mann v. State, 154 Ga. App. 677, 269 S.E.2d 863 (1980).

Since no special plea was brought before the court, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in failing, sua sponte, to order a special hearing on mental competency on the basis of the testimony presented at trial. Dowdy v. State, 169 Ga. App. 14, 311 S.E.2d 184 (1983).

Motion for continuance to procure further psychiatric examination. — When a motion for a continuance to procure further psychiatric examination is based on evidence that reasonably indicates mental instability on the part of the defendant at the time of the offense or at the time of trial and when the motion is not made for the mere purpose of delay and avoidance of prosecution, the interests of justice might be better served if the trial court's discretion were exercised in favor of the defendant, even when no special plea of insanity has been filed by counsel. Morgan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 139, 217 S.E.2d 175, rev'd on other grounds, 235 Ga. 632, 221 S.E.2d 47, overruled on other grounds, Dent v. State, 136 Ga. App. 366, 221 S.E.2d 228, overruled on other grounds, Davis v. State, 136 Ga. App. 749, 222 S.E.2d 188 (1975).

State free to proceed with trial if plea not sustained. — If a plea of insanity is not sustained the law is silent as to further action, clearly implying that the state is free to proceed with the trial. Spell v. State, 120 Ga. App. 398, 170 S.E.2d 701 (1969).

Proceeding to trial upon decision on plea adverse to defendant. — After a special plea of insanity has been decided by a jury adversely to the party indicted, it is not error for the trial judge to proceed with the trial of the main case. Watson v. State, 229 Ga. 787, 194 S.E.2d 407 (1972).

Waiver of right to present expert testimony on insanity. — Defendant may invoke the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, refuse to submit to an examination by an independent expert, and thereby forego the right to present expert testimony on the issue of insanity. Strickland v. State, 257 Ga. 230, 357 S.E.2d 85 (1987).

Questions going to guilt or innocence may be objectionable in a special proceeding to determine the sanity or insanity of a criminal defendant. Henderson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 621, 278 S.E.2d 164 (1981).

Motion for psychiatric examination if special plea not filed. — Since defense counsel did not file a special pretrial plea of insanity or mental incompetency to be tried pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130, the trial court had no mandatory duty to impanel a special jury to determine that issue pursuant to defense counsel's midtrial motion for a psychiatric evaluation. Lightsey v. State, 188 Ga. App. 801, 374 S.E.2d 335 (1988).

Trial court need not have held a separate hearing on competency in the absence of a special plea of incompetency by a defendant when the trial court had been concerned enough about the issue of competency to independently order an evaluation of the defendant and when there had been testimony by two experts as to a defendant's competency. The fact that the court allowed the trial to go forward after testimony concerning defendant's competency was in effect a sub silentio finding that defendant was competent. Harris v. State, 256 Ga. 350, 349 S.E.2d 374 (1986).

Superior court has authority to civilly commit a pretrial detainee who is incompetent to stand trial as long as the court utilizes the criteria and procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. Ch. 3, T. 37 in making the court's decision. Department of Human Resources v. Long, 217 Ga. App. 763, 458 S.E.2d 914 (1995).

Procedural default when a failure to pursue competency. — Habeas court correctly concluded that the petitioner's claim that the petitioner was tried while incompetent was barred by procedural default under O.C.G.A. § 9-14-48(d) because the claim was not pursued to a conclusion at trial and was not raised on direct appeal; for purposes of determining whether the procedural default doctrine will apply, there is no meaningful distinction between the failure to exercise a defendant's right to have his or her competence determined in the trial court and the failure to exercise a defendant's additional right to have a competency determination evaluated on appeal, and substantive claims of incompetence to stand trial will continue to be subject to procedural default in Georgia. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335 (2011), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Application

Refusal to provide defendant with psychiatrist for hearing on plea. — Hearing upon a special plea of insanity is a proceeding of a civil nature in which the burden rests on the defendant to produce evidence of the defendant's insanity. Thus, the refusal of a trial court to provide for examination by and assistance to the accused by a competent psychiatrist selected by the accused, discloses no violation of due process or error for any other reason. May v. State, 146 Ga. App. 416, 246 S.E.2d 432 (1978).

Application (Cont'd)

When a defendant's "rap sheet" failed to disclose an earlier conviction and court order finding the defendant incompetent to stand trial, and the defendant did not inform the defendant's attorney of the fact, the trial court in this action had no reason to conduct an investigation of the defendant's competence sua sponte, and the court's denial of funds for an independent psychiatrist was not error. Baxter v. Kemp, 260 Ga. 184, 391 S.E.2d 754 (1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1041, 111 S. Ct. 714, 112 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1991).

Denial of psychiatric examination at county expense when plea not entered at time of trial. — It is not error for a trial court to deny the defendant's motion requesting that the defendant be examined by a psychiatrist at county expense when the defendant has not entered a special plea of insanity at the time of trial. Huguley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 332, 170 S.E.2d 450 (1969), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 834, 91 S. Ct. 68, 27 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1970).

Psychiatric evaluation not required. — Trial court was not compelled to direct a psychiatric examination when there was no showing that the defendant would not be able to intelligently participate at trial or that the defendant's sanity would be a significant issue at trial. Johnson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 514, 433 S.E.2d 717 (1993).

Escapee from state institution seeking habeas corpus. — When a person charged with a criminal offense files a special plea of insanity under this section, and on such plea was found insane and committed to the Milledgeville State Hospital (now Department of Human Resources), and when after such commitment the person left the hospital without permission, and was later taken into custody by a sheriff for the purpose of being returned to such institution, the person cannot maintain a petition for the writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the person had regained sanity, without showing that the person pursued or attempted to pursue the statutory method of obtaining a release from the institution, or without alleging and proving some valid reason for the person's failure to invoke such remedy. Richardson v. Hall, 199 Ga. 602, 34 S.E.2d 888 (1945).

Evaluation by doctor not certified as psychiatrist. — Requirement that the defendant be given a psychiatric evaluation may be satisfied by evaluation by a doctor qualified to give such opinion who may not be a board certified psychiatrist; thus, under these circumstances there is no violation of due process in the refusal of the trial judge to appoint a psychiatrist to make a pretrial examination or otherwise assist an indigent accused even when there has been a special plea of insanity. Henderson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 621, 278 S.E.2d 164 (1981).

Presumption of competency raised by release. — Although prior adjudications by the probate court and the superior court raised a presumption of the defendant's mental incompetency, the defendant's administrative release by the Department of Human Resources under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 cancelled that presumption of incompetency and raised a presumption of competency. Newman v. State, 258 Ga. 428, 369 S.E.2d 902 (1988).

Verdict of guilty unauthorized if presumption overcome and no evidence of sanity introduced. — If the defendant pleads insanity at the time of the crime and as a defense introduces evidence sufficient to overcome the presumption of sanity, and there is no evidence that the defendant was sane at the time of the commission of the offense, a verdict of guilty is unauthorized. Brooks v. State, 157 Ga. App. 650, 278 S.E.2d 463, aff'd, 247 Ga. 744, 279 S.E.2d 649 (1981).

Admissibility of testimony on sanity by agent of Georgia Bureau of Investigation. — In special proceeding to determine sanity, it is not error for the trial court to allow an agent of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation to state underlying reasons for the agent's opinion that the criminal defendant is sane, when the evidence is not offered for the purpose of showing criminal misconduct or to prove the truth of the defendant's admissions but, instead, is offered to indicate the defendant's degree of understanding and mental condition. Henderson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 621, 278 S.E.2d 164 (1981).

Remedying error in determination that defendant competent to stand trial. — When there was no meritorious claim of error in the trial itself, error in failure to provide a hearing on the issue of the defendant's competence to stand trial was not such an error as required a new trial on the question of guilt or innocence, but rather only required that the case be remanded for a determination of defendant's competence at the time of defendant's trial by holding a post-conviction hearing. Baker v. State, 250 Ga. 187, 297 S.E.2d 9 (1982).

Fact that the defendant gives way to emotional outbursts, is suicidal, or considers oneself insane is insufficient to demand reversal of the decision when the judgment against plea of insanity is being reviewed. Allanson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 77, 279 S.E.2d 316 (1981).

Finding of competence to stand trial affirmed. — It was apparent that the testimony of the state's expert witness, finding the defendant competent to stand trial, supported the special jury's verdict of competency. Because there was some evidence in support of that verdict of competent to stand trial, the verdict had to be affirmed. Sims v. State, 267 Ga. App. 572, 600 S.E.2d 613 (2004).

Evidence was sufficient to support a special jury's finding that a defendant was competent to stand trial. Extensive testimony of doctors and hospital staff showed that the defendant was a longtime alcoholic, did not have a major mental illness, understood the legal proceedings, and could assist counsel at trial. Hester v. State, 283 Ga. 367, 659 S.E.2d 600 (2008).

Defendant did not file a special plea of incompetence to stand trial. As the defendant's colloquy with the trial judge indicated that the defendant understood the charges, the possible punishment, and the trial process, and that the defendant was helping counsel to prepare the defense; and as the psychologist who conducted the first competency evaluation opined that the defendant was probably exaggerating symptoms of incompetency, the defendant was properly found competent to stand trial and was not entitled to a second competency evaluation. Wadley v. State, 295 Ga. App. 556, 672 S.E.2d 504 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C0811, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 255 (Ga. 2009).

Testimony from the state's forensic psychology expert that the defendant understood in detail the nature and object of the proceedings and the defendant's role in the proceedings and that the defendant was able, if not always inclined, to assist counsel supported a finding that the defendant was competent to stand trial. Slaughter v. State, 292 Ga. 573, 740 S.E.2d 119 (2013).

Defendant's competency no basis to conduct hearing or issue ruling on new trial motion. — Trial court erred by refusing to conduct a hearing or to rule on the defendant's motion for a new trial based upon the court's finding that the defendant was, at that time, mentally incompetent and unable to assist counsel in challenging the conviction, as the defendant's current mental incompetence provided no logical basis to delay a post-conviction proceeding to address whether the defendant was incompetent at trial, whether the trial court should have been on notice of the incompetency and conducted a hearing during trial, or whether the trial counsel was ineffective for failing to timely raise the competency issue. Florescu v. State, 276 Ga. App. 264, 623 S.E.2d 147 (2005).

Burden of Proof

Relevance and proof of mental condition at time of offense. — To show the insanity of the accused at the time of the commission of the offense it is relevant to introduce testimony showing the mental condition of the accused at the time of the offense, and the accused's mental condition before and after the offense may be proved as tending to show the accused's condition at the time of the offense. Handspike v. State, 203 Ga. 115, 45 S.E.2d 662 (1947), overruled on other grounds,

Burden of Proof (Cont'd)

Brooks v. State, 247 Ga. 744, 279 S.E.2d 649 (1981).

Burden of proof generally. — On the issue of insanity (now mental incompetency), the burden of proof rests upon the defendant who alleges the insanity. Carter v. State, 56 Ga. 463 (1876); Keener v. State, 97 Ga. 388, 24 S.E. 28 (1895).

Trial of a special plea of insanity is in the nature of a civil proceeding and the burden of producing evidence is on the defendant. Banks v. State, 246 Ga. 178, 269 S.E.2d 450 (1980).

In every case there is a presumption that the accused is sane. Handspike v. State, 203 Ga. 115, 45 S.E.2d 662 (1947), overruled on other grounds, Brooks v. State, 247 Ga. 744, 279 S.E.2d 649 (1981).

Presumption of sanity may be overcome by a preponderance of the evidence. Handspike v. State, 203 Ga. 115, 45 S.E.2d 662 (1947), overruled on other grounds, Brooks v. State, 247 Ga. 744, 279 S.E.2d 649 (1981).

Failure to prove incompetency. — Evidence was sufficient to conclude that the defendant failed to prove that the defendant was incompetent to stand trial because the state's expert witness found that, based on the defendant's exchanges during a police interview, the felony murder concept was explained to the defendant numerous times and the defendant's responses indicated that the defendant understood; the fact that the defendant did not think that the defendant should be held responsible for the victim's death did not mean that the defendant should not be held responsible or that it rendered the defendant incapable of understanding the situation; and there was no medical support for the conclusion that the defendant was not competent to stand trial in 2008. Tye v. State, 298 Ga. 474, 782 S.E.2d 10 (2016).

Obligations of Counsel

Counsel not ineffective for not raising issue. — Defendant failed to show that the defendant's counsel was ineffective in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to pursue a request for a psychological examination, an insanity defense under O.C.G.A. § 16-3-2, and asserting that the defendant was not competent to stand trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 in a criminal trial arising from multiple offenses, including murder, as there was nothing in the defendant's psychological history or in counsels' interactions with the defendant which suggested that there was a problem with the defendant's sanity or competency. Redwine v. State, 280 Ga. 58, 623 S.E.2d 485 (2005).

Counsel's failure to raise issue deficient but not prejudicial. — Defendant's trial counsel performed deficiently in not seeking expert assistance in evaluating the defendant's mental condition at the time of the shooting and at the time of trial because the defendant was hospitalized in 1996 after stabbing the same man that the defendant murdered; and, in 1996, the defendant reported hearing a voice telling the defendant to kill for which the defendant received antipsychotic medication; however, counsel's deficient performance was not prejudicial as the defendant did not show that the jury would have returned a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity because the defendant did not receive any diagnosis of or treatment for mental illness for more than a decade before the current crimes. Scott v. State, 301 Ga. 573, 802 S.E.2d 211 (2017).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to seek continuance for competency evaluation. — Because the defendant did not demonstrate that the defendant was prejudiced by counsel's failure to reiterate a request for a competency evaluation, the defendant did not demonstrate that counsel was ineffective for failing to seek a continuance to pursue such a request. Stodghill v. State, 351 Ga. App. 744, 832 S.E.2d 891 (2019).

If insanity of the defendant is known to defendant's counsel, then counsel has a professional, moral, and legal duty to file a plea of insanity as provided by law. If unknown, then it can be raised by a ground of a motion for a new trial by a proper showing. Huguley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 332, 170 S.E.2d 450 (1969), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 834, 91 S. Ct. 68, 27 L. Ed. 2d 66 (1970).

Counsel may not be called to testify as to client's competency. — It is not legally permissible for the state to call the defendant's counsel as a witness for the purpose of extracting facts and counsel's opinion as to the client's competency which is gained from the counsel's participation in the attorney-client relationship with the defendant. Almond v. State, 180 Ga. App. 475, 349 S.E.2d 482 (1986).

Jury Instructions and Responsibilities

Better practice is not to charge the jury on the provisions of this section. Coker v. State, 234 Ga. 555, 216 S.E.2d 782 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S. Ct. 2861, 53 L. Ed. 2d 982 (1977).

Question of insanity is in province of jury. — Insanity is a question of fact, and not of law, and it is the exclusive province of the jury to determine all questions of fact. Handspike v. State, 203 Ga. 115, 45 S.E.2d 662 (1947), overruled on other grounds, Brooks v. State, 247 Ga. 744, 279 S.E.2d 649 (1981).

Jurors are not bound by opinions of either lay witnesses or expert witnesses as to question of sanity and jurors may rely on the basic presumption existing under Georgia law. Brooks v. State, 157 Ga. App. 650, 278 S.E.2d 463, aff'd, 247 Ga. 744, 279 S.E.2d 649 (1981).

There was insufficient reason for jury to disregard the unanimous opinions of psychiatric experts that the defendant, who suffered from schizophrenia, was incompetent to stand trial. Defendant was therefore denied due process of law when the defendant was tried. Wallace v. Kemp, 757 F.2d 1102 (11th Cir. 1985).

If no question of competency to stand trial is ever raised, the failure to charge the jury on O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 is not error. Kirk v. State, 168 Ga. App. 226, 308 S.E.2d 592 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 133, 311 S.E.2d 821 (1984).

No error in declining to charge jury on insanity. — Because the defendant failed to present any evidence from which a jury could conclude that the defendant did not know right from wrong when the defendant committed the criminal acts, the trial court did not err in declining to charge the jury pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(b)(1)(C) that the defendant could be found not guilty by reason of insanity under O.C.G.A. § 16-3-2; the defendant introduced no evidence of insanity, only lay witness testimony about generalized problems. McBride v. State, 314 Ga. App. 725, 725 S.E.2d 844 (2012).

Appeals

Appeal from judgment. — Plea of insanity at the time of trial is an interlocutory judgment and not subject to direct appeal without a timely certificate from the trial court. Spell v. State, 120 Ga. App. 398, 170 S.E.2d 701 (1969).

When a plea of insanity was granted and the defendant was transferred to the Department of Human Resources (DHR), the DHR could appeal directly without following the interlocutory appeal procedure. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Drust, 264 Ga. 514, 448 S.E.2d 364 (1994).

Review of finding against special plea. — Indicted party has no right to direct review from a finding against the party's special plea of insanity without a certificate of the trial judge. Watson v. State, 229 Ga. 787, 194 S.E.2d 407 (1972).

When denial of plea set aside on appeal. — Court of Appeals will not set aside a verdict finding against such a plea unless the evidence demands a finding in its favor. Polk v. State, 19 Ga. App. 332, 91 S.E. 439 (1917).

Upon remand in a criminal case, on the issue of the defendant's competency, the burden first fell upon the state to show there was sufficient evidence to make a meaningful determination of competency at the time of trial, and if the court ruled that a determination of the defendant's competency at the time of trial was not presently possible, then a new trial had to be granted, but if the court decided such a determination was possible, the issue of competency to stand trial had to be tried and the defendant had the burden to show incompetency by a preponderance of the evidence; the sole issue to be presented to the fact-finder was that of mental competency; evidence as to guilt was irrelevant, and if the fact-finder found that the defendant was not mentally competent at the time of trial, the verdict in the main case had to be set aside, but if the defendant failed by a preponderance of the evidence to prove incompetence at the time of trial, the verdict of guilty would stand. Traylor v. State, 280 Ga. 400, 627 S.E.2d 594 (2006).

Appeals (Cont'd)

Standard for review of a finding of competency to stand trial. — "Any evidence" standard of appellate review employed by the court of appeals was improper. The appropriate standard of appellate review is whether after reviewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the state, a rational trier of fact could have found that the defendant failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant was incompetent to stand trial, overruling Stowe v. State, 272 Ga. 866, 536 S.E.2d 506 (2000), Pope v. State, 185 Ga. App. 547, 362 S.E.2d 123 (1987), and any other cases in conflict; therefore, the defendant's conviction was reversed. Sims v. State, 279 Ga. 389, 614 S.E.2d 73 (2005).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Instructions to physician regarding insanity of one convicted of a capital felony. — In view of the fact that the inquiry under former Code 1933, § 27-2602 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-61) was directed to the alleged insanity occurring subsequent to the conviction, the definitions of insanity in former Code 1933, §§ 79A-9917 and 79A-9918 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 16-3-2 and 16-3-3) were inapplicable and should not be given in written instructions to physicians appointed pursuant to former Code 1933, § 27-2602. Those instructions should inform the physicians that the issue was the present sanity of the individual and should be determined on the basis of whether the individual is capable of presently understanding the nature and object of the proceedings going on against the individual and rightly comprehends the individual's own condition in reference to such proceedings, and was capable of rendering the individual's attorneys such assistance as a proper defense to the proceedings preferred against the individual demands. Since the basic issue is the individual's sanity at a time subsequent to conviction, or, in effect, the individual's present sanity, the appropriate test should be that as employed upon a special plea of insanity under former Code 1933, § 27-1502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130). 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-123.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 50 et seq.

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Defendant's Competency to Stand Trial, 40 POF2d 171.

Adequacy of Quasi-Miranda Warning Prior to Involuntary Civil Commitment, 40 POF2d 733.

Wrongful Confinement to a Mental Health or Developmental Disabilities Facility, 44 POF3d 217.

ALR. — Constitutionality of statutes relating to determination of plea of insanity in criminal case, 67 A.L.R. 1451.

Judicial declaration of sanity, made after alleged offense but before acquittal on ground of insanity at time of offense, as affecting duty of court to commit defendant to asylum for insane, 88 A.L.R. 1084.

Admissibility of evidence of reputation on issue of mental condition, or testamentary or contractual incapacity or capacity, 105 A.L.R. 1443.

Investigation of present sanity to determine whether accused should be put, or continue, on trial, 142 A.L.R. 961.

Validity and construction of statutes providing for psychiatric examination of accused to determine mental condition, 32 A.L.R.2d 434.

Counsel's right, in consulting with accused as client, to be accompanied by psychiatrist, psychologist, hypnotist, or similar practitioner, 72 A.L.R.2d 1120.

Release of one committed to institution as consequence of acquittal of crime on ground of insanity, 95 A.L.R.2d 54.

Appealability of orders or rulings, prior to final judgment in criminal case, as to accused's mental competency, 16 A.L.R.3d 714.

Modern status of rules as to burden and sufficiency of proof of mental irresponsibility in criminal case, 17 A.L.R.3d 146.

Validity of statutory provision for commitment to mental institution of one acquitted of crime on ground of insanity without formal determination of mental condition at time of acquittal, 50 A.L.R.3d 144.

Necessity or propriety of bifurcated criminal trial on issue of insanity defense, 1 A.L.R.4th 884.

Modern status of test of criminal responsibility — state cases, 9 A.L.R.4th 526.

Admissibility of testimony regarding spontaneous declarations made by one incompetent to testify at trial, 15 A.L.R.4th 1043.

Power of court, in absence of statute, to order psychiatric examination of accused for purpose of determining mental condition at time of alleged offense, 17 A.L.R.4th 1274.

Competency to stand trial of criminal defendant diagnosed as "mentally retarded" — modern cases, 23 A.L.R.4th 493.

Mental or emotional disturbance as defense to or mitigation of charges against attorney in disciplinary proceeding, 26 A.L.R.4th 995.

Competency to stand trial of criminal defendant diagnosed as "schizophrenic" — modern state cases, 33 A.L.R.4th 1062.

Pyromania and the criminal law, 51 A.L.R.4th 1243.

Probation revocation: insanity as defense, 56 A.L.R.4th 1178.

"Guilty but mentally ill" statutes: validity and construction, 71 A.L.R.4th 702.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client — issues of incompetency, 70 A.L.R.5th 1.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client — pretrial conduct or conduct at unspecified time regarding issues of insanity, 72 A.L.R.5th 109.

Qualification of nonmedical psychologist to testify as to mental condition or competency, 72 A.L.R.5th 529.

Am. Jur. 2d. — 40 Am. Jur. 2d, Homicide, § 96 et seq.

42 Am. Jur. 2d, Infants, § 120 et seq.

17-7-130.1. Evidence as to defendant's sanity at time of offense; examination and testimony by psychiatrist or psychologist.

At the trial of a criminal case in which the defendant intends to interpose the defense of insanity, evidence may be introduced to prove the defendant's sanity or insanity at the time at which he is alleged to have committed the offense charged in the indictment or information. When notice of an insanity defense is filed, the court shall appoint at least one psychiatrist or licensed psychologist to examine the defendant and to testify at the trial. This testimony shall follow the presentation of the evidence for the prosecution and for the defense, including testimony of any medical experts employed by the state or by the defense. The medical witnesses appointed by the court may be cross-examined by both the prosecution and the defense, and each side may introduce evidence in rebuttal to the testimony of such a medical witness.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-7-130.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 637, § 1.

Administrative rules and regulations. — Disposition of guilty but mentally ill and guilty but mentally retarded offenders, Official Compilation of the Rules and Regulations of the State of Georgia, Department of Human Services, Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities and Addictive Diseases, Chapter 290-4-8.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of death penalty decisions, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 139 (2005); 58 Mercer L. Rev. 111 (2006). For annual survey on criminal law, see 61 Mercer L. Rev. 79 (2009).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Section not applicable to sentencing assistance. — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 deals only with an insanity defense and does not apply to a defendant's motion for expert assistance for sentencing. Bright v. State, 265 Ga. 265, 455 S.E.2d 37, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 872, 116 S. Ct. 196, 133 L. Ed. 2d 131 (1995).

Court did not need to inquire sua sponte into defendant's competency. — Despite the defendant's contentions that the trial court erred in not ensuring the competency required to control the defense, nothing before the appellate court indicated that the defendant was incompetent to stand trial, nor was there any evidence that should have indicated to the trial court that a sua sponte inquiry into competency was required. Rivera v. State, 282 Ga. 355, 647 S.E.2d 70 (2007).

Legislative intent. — Clear legislative intent of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 is that the factfinder should resolve the issue of sanity based upon the evidence before the factfinder, including expert testimony. Tolbert v. State, 260 Ga. 527, 397 S.E.2d 439 (1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 921, 111 S. Ct. 2025, 114 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1991).

"Fair warning" aspect of the void-for-vagueness doctrine is inapplicable to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1, which is part of the statutory scheme for handling insanity defenses in criminal cases and provides, inter alia, for the examination of the defendant by a court-appointed psychiatrist or psychologist; and the statute sets forth sufficient guidelines to avoid the statute's arbitrary and discriminatory implementation, so the statute is not unconstitutionally vague. Lamar v. State, 278 Ga. 150, 598 S.E.2d 488 (2004).

Listing name of court-appointed expert not required. — When a court-appointed mental health expert was not called by the state but by the court itself in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1, the expert's name was not required to be listed by the state in response to the defendant's demand under former law. Moore v. State, 220 Ga. App. 434, 469 S.E.2d 211 (1996).

Appointment of second expert not required. — Since the court appointed a mental health expert who was independent of either party and was impartial, the defendant was not entitled to have another expert appointed to examine the defendant and testify at trial after the defendant filed notice of an insanity defense. Moore v. State, 220 Ga. App. 434, 469 S.E.2d 211 (1996).

Authority to assert insanity defense. — O.C.G.A. §§ 16-3-2 and 16-3-3 provide the authority for any defendant to assert an insanity defense, and there is nothing in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 which limits that authority. Motes v. State, 256 Ga. 831, 353 S.E.2d 348 (1987).

Self-incrimination protection. — If the defendant wants to introduce expert testimony as to the defendant's mental state, the state must be allowed the same privilege, and the defendant, in light of the defendant's partial waiver of the right to remain silent, must cooperate by talking to the court-appointed expert. But if the defendant chooses to prove insanity by means other than expert testimony, the partial waiver does not arise, the case may proceed as any other, the defendant choosing whether or not to talk to the court appointed expert, and the court should not forbid the defendant's use of the insanity defense if the defendant refuses to submit to examination. Motes v. State, 256 Ga. 831, 353 S.E.2d 348 (1987).

It was not error to admit a defendant's statements to an expert appointed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 to examine the defendant upon the defendant's assertion of an insanity defense because: (1) the state had a statutory right, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1, to call the expert to rebut the testimony of the defendant's expert regarding the defendant's mental state at the time of the crimes charged; (2) the defendant had no Sixth Amendment right to counsel during the expert's examination or Fifth Amendment right requiring the repetition of the defendant's Miranda rights during the interview with the appointed expert; and (3) the defendant's counsel was aware of the psychiatric interview and chose not to attend. Walker v. State, 290 Ga. 467, 722 S.E.2d 72 (2012).

Court-appointed expert not agent of state. — Court-appointed medical expert cannot be classified as an agent of the state, but must be considered as an independent and impartial witness. The same rule applies to a medical expert, appointed prior to indictment, whose professional opinion might be needed so that the court is able to fashion a proper disposition of matters before the court. Tolbert v. State, 260 Ga. 527, 397 S.E.2d 439 (1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 921, 111 S. Ct. 2025, 114 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1991).

There were no violations of due process and separation of powers when a psychiatrist employed by a state hospital served as the court-appointed witness and was introduced to the jury by the trial court as the state's witness because the fact that the expert's opinion that the defendant was not insane when the defendant shot the victim supported the position of the state did not make the expert a witness for the prosecution. Danenberg v. State, 291 Ga. 439, 729 S.E.2d 315 (2012), cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1124, 133 S. Ct. 941, 184 L. Ed. 2d 726 (2013).

Patient-psychologist privilege does not apply when the defense is insanity and the statement in question is made during an evaluation by a court-appointed psychologist. The same is true if the examining psychologist is the state's psychologist. Harris v. State, 256 Ga. 350, 349 S.E.2d 374 (1986).

Cooperation with court's expert. — Defendant who obtains expert assistance to assist the defendant in the evaluation, preparation, and presentation of an insanity defense, and to initially prepare that defense in secret, need not submit to an examination of a state expert until the defendant has had an opportunity to decide whether to present expert testimony at trial; however, pursuant to the state's interest under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 to have an opportunity to rebut the defendant's expert testimony at trial, the defendant must cooperate with the court expert in time for the state to adequately prepare the state's evidence in response to the defendant's testimony. Bright v. State, 265 Ga. 265, 455 S.E.2d 37, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 872, 116 S. Ct. 196, 133 L. Ed. 2d 131 (1995).

Because O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1, which is part of the statutory scheme for handling insanity defenses in criminal cases and provides, inter alia, for the examination of the defendant by a court-appointed psychiatrist or psychologist, does not require a defendant to cooperate with the court's expert and provides no sanctions against a defendant who refuses to so cooperate the statute is not overbroad. Lamar v. State, 278 Ga. 150, 598 S.E.2d 488 (2004).

Medication of defendant during interview. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing a court-appointed psychologist to testify as to the defendant's mental condition at the time of the commission of the crime, even though the defendant was medicated during the defendant's interview but was not medicated during the commission of the crime. Frazier v. State, 216 Ga. App. 111, 452 S.E.2d 803 (1995).

Insanity defense inappropriate when defendant claimed sleep walking. — In a malice murder prosecution, as the defendant claimed he unintentionally killed his wife while sleepwalking, and expert testimony supported this claim, the trial court erred in classifying the defense as an insanity defense under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1, and in instructing the jury on the defense of insanity, as this detracted from the defendant's primary defense that the defendant did not commit the acts in question voluntarily and with criminal intent. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 33, 663 S.E.2d 155 (2008).

Ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to plead guilty but mentally retarded not found. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for kidnapping, aggravated sodomy, and aggravated sexual battery, the defendant was not rendered ineffective assistance of counsel as a result of the trial counsel's decision not to file a plea of guilty but mentally retarded and, instead, attacked the credibility of the victim as trial counsel's decision as to which theory of defense to pursue was a matter of trial strategy and tactics that was not unreasonable and thus did not constitute ineffective assistance. Hampton v. State, 294 Ga. App. 857, 670 S.E.2d 502 (2008).

Sentencing phase. — Since the defendant withdrew the defendant's notice of insanity as a defense prior to trial, but offered evidence as to the defendant's mental health during the sentencing phase, the tender of such evidence was not the assertion of an insanity defense, and O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 does not apply to authorize the trial court to call a psychiatrist; however, such action was not an improper comment by the court on issues of mitigation since the court had discretion to summon and examine witnesses of the court's own choosing. Henry v. State, 265 Ga. 732, 462 S.E.2d 737 (1995).

Cited in Guilford v. State, 258 Ga. 253, 368 S.E.2d 116 (1988); Taylor v. State, 261 Ga. 287, 404 S.E.2d 255; Guillen v. State, 258 Ga. App. 465, 574 S.E.2d 598 (2002).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Insanity Defense, 41 POF2d 615.

ALR. — Admissibility of results of computer analysis of defendant's mental state, 37 A.L.R.4th 510.

Right of indigent defendant in state criminal case to assistance of psychiatrist or psychologist, 85 A.L.R.4th 19.

Right of indigent defendant in state criminal prosecution to ex parte in camera hearing on request for state-funded expert witness, 83 A.L.R.5th 541.

17-7-131. Proceedings upon plea of insanity or mental incompetency at time of crime.

(a) For purposes of this Code section, the term:

(1) "Insane at the time of the crime" means meeting the criteria of Code Section 16-3-2 or 16-3-3. However, the term shall not include a mental state manifested only by repeated unlawful or antisocial conduct.

(2) "Intellectual disability" means having significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning resulting in or associated with impairments in adaptive behavior which manifested during the developmental period.

(3) "Mentally ill" means having a disorder of thought or mood which significantly impairs judgment, behavior, capacity to recognize reality, or ability to cope with the ordinary demands of life. However, the term "mental illness" shall not include a mental state manifested only by repeated unlawful or antisocial conduct.

(b)(1) In all cases in which the defense of insanity, mental illness, or intellectual disability is interposed, the jury, or the court if tried by it, shall find whether the defendant is:

(A) Guilty;

(B) Not guilty;

(C) Not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime;

(D) Guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime, but the finding of guilty but mentally ill shall be made only in felony cases; or

(E) Guilty but with intellectual disability, but the finding of intellectual disability shall be made only in felony cases.

(2) A plea of guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime or a plea of guilty but with intellectual disability shall not be accepted until the defendant has undergone examination by a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist and the court has examined the psychological or psychiatric reports, held a hearing on the issue of the defendant's mental condition, and is satisfied that there is a factual basis that the defendant was mentally ill at the time of the offense or has intellectual disability to which the plea is entered.

(2.1) A plea of not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime shall not be accepted and the defendant adjudicated not guilty by reason of insanity by the court without a jury until the defendant has undergone examination by a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist and the court has examined the psychological or psychiatric reports, has held a hearing on the issue of the defendant's mental condition, and the court is satisfied that the defendant was insane at the time of the crime according to the criteria of Code Section 16-3-2 or 16-3-3.

(3) In all cases in which the defense of insanity, mental illness, or intellectual disability is interposed, the trial judge shall charge the jury, in addition to other appropriate charges, the following:

(A) I charge you that should you find the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime, the defendant will be committed to a state mental health facility until such time, if ever, that the court is satisfied that he or she should be released pursuant to law.

(B) I charge you that should you find the defendant guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime, the defendant will be placed in the custody of the Department of Corrections which will have responsibility for the evaluation and treatment of the mental health needs of the defendant, which may include, at the discretion of the Department of Corrections, referral for temporary hospitalization at a facility operated by the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities.

(C) I charge you that should you find the defendant guilty but with intellectual disability, the defendant will be placed in the custody of the Department of Corrections, which will have responsibility for the evaluation and treatment of the mental health needs of the defendant, which may include, at the discretion of the Department of Corrections, referral for temporary hospitalization at a facility operated by the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities.

(c) In all criminal trials in any of the courts of this state wherein an accused shall contend that he or she was insane, mentally ill, or intellectually disabled at the time the act or acts charged against him or her were committed, the trial judge shall instruct the jury that they may consider, in addition to verdicts of "guilty" and "not guilty," the additional verdicts of "not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime," "guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime," and "guilty but with intellectual disability."

(1) The defendant may be found "not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime" if he or she meets the criteria of Code Section 16-3-2 or 16-3-3 at the time of the commission of the crime. If the court or jury should make such finding, it shall so specify in its verdict.

(2) The defendant may be found "guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime" if the jury, or court acting as trier of facts, finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of the crime charged and was mentally ill at the time of the commission of the crime. If the court or jury should make such finding, it shall so specify in its verdict.

(3) The defendant may be found "guilty but with intellectual disability" if the jury, or court acting as trier of facts, finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of the crime charged and is with intellectual disability. If the court or jury should make such finding, it shall so specify in its verdict.

(d) Whenever a defendant is found not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime, the court shall retain jurisdiction over the person so acquitted and shall order such person to be detained in a state mental health facility, to be selected by the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities, for a period not to exceed 30 days from the date of the acquittal order, for evaluation of the defendant's present mental condition. Upon completion of the evaluation, the proper officials of the mental health facility shall send a report of the defendant's present mental condition to the trial judge, the prosecuting attorney, and the defendant's attorney, if any.

(e)(1) After the expiration of the 30 days' evaluation period in the state mental health facility, if the evaluation report from the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities indicates that the defendant does not meet the inpatient commitment criteria of Chapter 3 of Title 37 or Chapter 4 of Title 37, the trial judge may issue an order discharging the defendant from custody without a hearing.

(2) If the defendant is not so discharged, the trial judge shall order a hearing to determine if the defendant meets the inpatient commitment criteria of Chapter 3 of Title 37 or Chapter 4 of Title 37. If such criteria are not met, the defendant must be discharged.

(3) The defendant shall be detained in custody until completion of the hearing. The hearing shall be conducted at the earliest opportunity after the expiration of the 30 days' evaluation period but in any event within 30 days after receipt by the prosecuting attorney of the evaluation report from the mental health facility. The court may take judicial notice of evidence introduced during the trial of the defendant and may call for testimony from any person with knowledge concerning whether the defendant is currently a mentally ill person in need of involuntary treatment, as defined by paragraph (12) of Code Section 37-3-1, or a person with a developmental disability, as defined in paragraph (8) of Code Section 37-1-1, who presents a substantial risk of imminent harm to himself or herself or others. The prosecuting attorney may cross-examine the witnesses called by the court and the defendant's witnesses and present relevant evidence concerning the issues presented at the hearing.

(4) If the judge determines that the defendant meets the inpatient commitment criteria of Chapter 3 of Title 37 or Chapter 4 of Title 37, the judge shall order the defendant to be committed to the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities to receive involuntary treatment under Chapter 3 of Title 37 or to receive services under Chapter 4 of Title 37. The defendant is entitled to the following rights specified below and shall be notified in writing of these rights at the time of his or her admission for evaluation under subsection (d) of this Code section. Such rights are:

(A) A notice that a hearing will be held and the time and place thereof;

(B) A notice that the defendant has the right to counsel and that the defendant or his or her representatives may apply immediately to the court to have counsel appointed if the defendant cannot afford counsel and that the court will appoint counsel for the defendant unless he or she indicates in writing that he or she does not desire to be represented by counsel;

(C) The right to confront and cross-examine witnesses and to offer evidence;

(D) The right to subpoena witnesses and to require testimony before the court in person or by deposition from any person upon whose evaluation the decision of the court may rest;

(E) Notice of the right to have established an individualized service plan specifically tailored to the person's treatment needs, as such plans are defined in Chapter 3 of Title 37 and Chapter 4 of Title 37; and

(F) A notice that the defendant has the right to be examined by a physician or a licensed clinical psychologist of his or her own choice at his or her own expense and to have that physician or psychologist submit a suggested service plan for the patient which conforms with the requirements of Chapter 3 of Title 37 or Chapter 4 of Title 37, whichever is applicable.

(5)(A) If a defendant appears to meet the criteria for outpatient involuntary treatment as defined in Part 3 of Article 3 of Chapter 3 of Title 37, which shall be the criteria for release on a trial basis in the community in preparation for a full release, the court may order a period of conditional release subject to certain conditions set by the court. The court is authorized to appoint an appropriate community service provider to work in conjunction with the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities to monitor the defendant's compliance with these conditions and to make regular reports to the court.

(B) If the defendant successfully completes all requirements during this period of conditional release, the court shall discharge the individual from commitment at the end of that period. Such individuals may be referred for community mental health, developmental disabilities, or substance abuse services as appropriate. The court may require the individual to participate in outpatient treatment or any other services or programs authorized by Chapter 3, 4, or 7 of Title 37.

(C) If the defendant does not successfully complete any or all requirements of the conditional release period, the court may:

(i) Revoke the period of conditional release and return the defendant to a state hospital for inpatient services; or

(ii) Impose additional or revise existing conditions on the defendant as appropriate and continue the period of conditional release.

(D) For any decision rendered under subparagraph (C) of this paragraph, the defendant may request a review by the court of such decision within 20 days of the order of the court.

(E) The Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities and any community services providers, including the employees and agents of both, providing supervision or treatment during a period of conditional release shall not be held criminally or civilly liable for any acts committed by a defendant placed by the committing court on a period of conditional release.

(f) A defendant who has been found not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime and is ordered committed to the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities under subsection (e) of this Code section may only be discharged from that commitment by order of the committing court in accordance with the procedures specified in this subsection:

(1) Application for the release of a defendant who has been committed to the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities under subsection (e) of this Code section upon the ground that he or she does not meet the civil commitment criteria under Chapter 3 of Title 37 or Chapter 4 of Title 37 may be made to the committing court, either by such defendant or by the superintendent of the state hospital in which the said defendant is detained;

(2) The burden of proof in such release hearing shall be upon the applicant. The defendant shall have the same rights in the release hearing as set forth in subsection (e) of this Code section; and

(3) If the finding of the court is adverse to release in such hearing held pursuant to this subsection on the grounds that such defendant does meet the inpatient civil commitment criteria, a further release application by the defendant shall not be heard by the court until 12 months have elapsed from the date of the hearing upon the last preceding application. The Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities shall have the independent right to request a release hearing once every 12 months.

(g)(1) Whenever a defendant is found guilty but mentally ill at the time of a felony or guilty but has intellectual disability, or enters a plea to that effect that is accepted by the court, the court shall sentence him or her in the same manner as a defendant found guilty of the offense, except as otherwise provided in subsection (j) of this Code section. A defendant who is found guilty but mentally ill at the time of the felony or guilty but has intellectual disability shall be committed to an appropriate penal facility and shall be evaluated then treated, if indicated, within the limits of state funds appropriated therefor, in such manner as is psychiatrically indicated for his or her mental illness or intellectual disability.

(2) If at any time following the defendant's conviction as a guilty but mentally ill or guilty but with intellectual disability offender it is determined that a temporary transfer to the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities is clinically indicated for his or her mental illness or intellectual disability, then the defendant shall be transferred to the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities pursuant to procedures set forth in regulations of the Department of Corrections and the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities. In all such cases, the legal custody of the defendant shall be retained by the Department of Corrections. Upon notification from the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities to the Department of Corrections that hospitalization at a Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities facility is no longer clinically indicated for his or her mental illness or intellectual disability, the Department of Corrections shall transfer the defendant back to its physical custody and shall place such individual in an appropriate penal institution.

(h) If a defendant who is found guilty but mentally ill at the time of a felony or guilty but with intellectual disability is placed on probation under the "State-wide Probation Act," Article 2 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, the court may require that the defendant undergo available outpatient medical or psychiatric treatment or seek similar available voluntary inpatient treatment as a condition of probation. Persons required to receive such services may be charged fees by the provider of the services.

(i) In any case in which the defense of insanity is interposed or a plea of guilty but mentally ill at the time of the felony or a plea of guilty but with intellectual disability is made and an examination is made of the defendant pursuant to Code Section 17-7-130.1 or paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this Code section, upon the defendant's being found guilty or guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime or guilty but with intellectual disability, a copy of any such examination report shall be forwarded to the Department of Corrections with the official sentencing document. The Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities shall forward, in addition to its examination report, any records maintained by such department that it deems appropriate pursuant to an agreement with the Department of Corrections, within ten business days of receipt by the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities of the official sentencing document from the Department of Corrections.

(j)(1) In the trial of any case in which the death penalty is sought which commences on or after July 1, 1988, should the judge find in accepting a plea of guilty but mentally retarded, or the jury or court find in its verdict that the defendant is guilty of the crime charged but mentally retarded, the death penalty shall not be imposed and the court shall sentence the defendant to imprisonment for life.

(2) In the trial of any case in which the death penalty is sought which commences on or after July 1, 2017, should the judge find in accepting a plea of guilty but with intellectual disability, or the jury or court find in its verdict that the defendant is guilty of the crime charged but with intellectual disability, the death penalty shall not be imposed and the court shall sentence the defendant to imprisonment for life.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 1314; Code 1868, § 1395; Code 1873, § 1374; Code 1882, § 1374; Penal Code 1895, § 952; Penal Code 1910, § 977; Code 1933, § 27-1503; Ga. L. 1952, p. 205, § 1; Ga. L. 1972, p. 848, § 1; Ga. L. 1977, p. 1293, § 2; Ga. L. 1982, p. 1476, §§ 1, 2; Ga. L. 1984, p. 22, § 17; Ga. L. 1985, p. 283, § 1; Ga. L. 1985, p. 637, §§ 2-4; Ga. L. 1988, p. 1003, § 1; Ga. L. 1989, p. 14, § 17; Ga. L. 1991, p. 780, §§ 1-3; Ga. L. 1992, p. 1328, §§ 2, 3; Ga. L. 2006, p. 765, § 1/SB 398; Ga. L. 2009, p. 453, § 3-2/HB 228; Ga. L. 2011, p. 337, § 9/HB 324; Ga. L. 2013, p. 141, § 17/HB 79; Ga. L. 2017, p. 471, § 3/HB 343.

Cross references. — Mental capacity as it relates to culpability for criminal acts, § 16-3-2 et seq. Mental incompetency to be executed, § 17-10-60 et seq. Manner of service of petition for release of person detained in facility pursuant to court order under section, §§ 37-3-148, 37-4-108, 37-7-148.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1985, the term "and" was inserted after paragraph (f)(2).

Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1988, punctuation was revised in the introductory language of subsection (c).

Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1991, the parentheses enclosing "or she" following "he" in subparagraph (b)(3)(A) were deleted.

U.S. Code. — Defense of insanity, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 12.2.

Administrative rules and regulations. — Disposition of guilty but mentally ill and guilty but mentally retarded offenders, Official Compilation of the Rules and Regulations of the State of Georgia, Department of Human Services, Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities and Addictive Diseases, Subject 290-4-8.

Law reviews. — For survey article on criminal law and procedure, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 89 (1982). For lecture on law and the unreasonable person, see 36 Emory L.J. 181 (1987). For survey of 1986 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 1141 (1987). For annual survey on criminal law and procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 141 (1990). For survey article on criminal law and procedure for the period from June 1, 2002 through May 31, 2003, see 55 Mercer L. Rev. 117 (2003). For annual survey of death penalty law, see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 197 (2004). For annual survey of death penalty decisions, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 139 (2005). For annual survey on criminal law, see 64 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2012). For annual survey on the death penalty, see 64 Mercer L. Rev. 109 (2012). For article, "Annual Survey of Georgia Law: June 1, 2015 — May 31, 2016: Special Contribution: Georgia's Safe Harbor Ruling for Affirmative Defenses in Criminal Cases Should Be Revisited," see 68 Mercer L. Rev. 35 (2016). For article, "An Empirical Assessment of Georgia's Beyond a Reasonable Doubt Standard to Determine Intellectual Disability in Capital Cases," see 33 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 553 (2017). For annual survey on criminal law, see 69 Mercer L. Rev. 73 (2017).

For note, "Commitment and Release of Persons Found Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity: A Georgia Perspective," see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 1065 (1981). For note on 1991 amendment of this Code section, see 8 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 121 (1992). For note, "Can't Do the Time, Don't Do the Crime?: Dixon v. State, Statutory Construction, and the Harsh Realities of Mandatory Minimum Sentencing in Georgia," see 22 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 519 (2005).

For comment advocating legislative determination of parental liability for costs of institutional custody of child involuntarily committed to a mental health facility in response to criminal behavior in light of Treglown v. Department of Health & Social Servs., 38 Wis.2d 317, 156 N.W.2d 363 (1968), see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 457 (1968). For comment, "Capital Punishment: New Weapons in the Sentencing Process," see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 423 (1990).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Constitutionality
"Insane," "Mentally Ill," "Intellectual Disability" Defined
Jury Charge

General Consideration

Application of section to persons charged with crimes committed before its enactment. — Provisions of this section that, in the event of an acquittal of a person accused of crime by reason of insanity, the jury shall so state in the jury's verdict, and that the accused shall thereafter be confined in the state hospital for the insane, would not be unconstitutional as being retroactive or ex post facto, when applied to the trial of a person charged with a crime committed prior to the date of its passage. Bailey v. State, 210 Ga. 52, 77 S.E.2d 511 (1953).

Timing of the guilt-innocence phase determines whether the burden of proof with regard to mental retardation is beyond a reasonable doubt or by the preponderance of the evidence; when the guilt-innocence phase of a trial occurred before the enactment of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 (j) and the sentencing phase occurred afterwards, the burden of proof was by the preponderance of the evidence. Stephens v. State, 270 Ga. 354, 509 S.E.2d 605 (1998).

The 1988 amendment of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 reflects a societal consensus against the execution of mentally retarded defendants, and does not violate due process and equal protection. Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687, 386 S.E.2d 339 (1989).

When a defendant who was tried before the effective date in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 (j) alleges in a petition for habeas corpus that he or she is mentally retarded, the habeas corpus court must first determine whether the petitioner has presented sufficient credible evidence, which must include at least one expert diagnosis of mental retardation, to create a genuine issue regarding the petitioner's retardation. If, after examining the evidence, the habeas corpus court finds that there is a genuine issue, a writ shall be granted for the limited purpose of conducting a trial on the issue of retardation only. Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687, 386 S.E.2d 339 (1989).

Prison warden was not properly a party to separate proceedings following the grant of a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to the procedure set out in Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687, 386 S.E.2d 339 (1989). Zant v. Foster, 261 Ga. 450, 406 S.E.2d 74 (1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 921, 112 S. Ct. 1297, 117 L. Ed. 2d 519 (1992).

Petitioner who was awarded a trial pursuant to Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687, 386 S.E.2d 339 (1989) had a right to appointed counsel, bore the burden of proving petitioner's mental retardation by a preponderance of the evidence, and had the right to have the jury selected in the same manner as a death-penalty criminal trial jury, including sequestration; and the court was required to exercise the court's discretion to determine which evidence could be excluded if the evidence's relevance were outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Zant v. Foster, 261 Ga. 450, 406 S.E.2d 74 (1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 921, 112 S. Ct. 1297, 117 L. Ed. 2d 519, overruled on other grounds, State v. Patillo, 262 Ga. 259, 417 S.E.2d 139 (1992).

Standards set forth in Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687, 386 S.E.2d 339 (1989), are not applicable to mental retardation claims raised in cases tried after the effective date of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(c)(3) and (j). Zant v. Pitts, 263 Ga. 529, 436 S.E.2d 4 (1993); Turpin v. Hill, 269 Ga. 302, 498

S.E.2d 52, cert. denied, 525 U.S. 969, 119 S. Ct. 418, 142 L. Ed. 2d 340 (1998).

When petitioner, who was tried for murder prior to July 1, 1988, and was sentenced to death, initiated state habeas corpus proceedings seeking a jury trial on the issue of the petitioner's mental retardation, once the habeas corpus court found a genuine issue regarding the petitioner's mental retardation, the issue had to be thoroughly reviewed and passed upon by a jury under the definition of mental retardation in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 and was no longer subject to waiver; thus, the trial court erred in finding that the petitioner waived the right to a jury trial on the issue by later denying mental retardation and asking for the trial proceeding to be dismissed. Rogers v. State, 276 Ga. 67, 575 S.E.2d 879 (2003).

Defendant has burden of proving mental retardation beyond reasonable doubt. Williams v. State, 265 Ga. 351, 455 S.E.2d 836 (1995).

Trial court erred in determining that a petitioner who claimed that the petitioner was guilty but mentally retarded was required to prove the petitioner's claim of retardation by a preponderance of the evidence. Georgia's requirement in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 that retardation be proved beyond a reasonable doubt was constitutional. Stripling v. State, 289 Ga. 370, 711 S.E.2d 665 (2011).

Burden of proof determined by states. — Because Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 122 S. Ct. 2242, 153 L. Ed. 2d 335 (2002) left it for the states to develop the standard of proof as to mental retardation, a federal habeas court could not find a Georgia Supreme Court decision — that O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131's reasonable doubt standard did not violate the Eighth Amendment — was an "unreasonable application" of "clearly established" federal law; thus, denial of habeas relief to petitioner death row inmate was proper. Georgia's process as to the mentally retarded and the death penalty, when evaluated as a whole, contained substantial procedural protections as § 17-7-131(c)(3) allowed a defendant to raise the issue of mental retardation in the guilt phase of the defendant's criminal trial and permitted a jury to find a defendant guilty but mentally retarded, which had two significant advantages: the jury did not hear the criminal history that was allowed in the penalty phase, and the jury was not informed that a guilty but mentally retarded verdict would preclude the death penalty. Hill v. Humphrey, 662 F.3d 1335 (11th Cir. 2011), cert. denied, 566 U.S. 1041, 132 S. Ct. 2727, 183 L. Ed. 2d 80 (2012).

Issue raised by a special plea of insanity at the time of trial is not whether the defendant can distinguish between right and wrong, but is, whether the defendant is capable at the time of the trial of understanding the nature and object of the proceedings going on against the defendant and rightly comprehends the defendant's own condition in reference to such proceedings, and is capable of rendering the defendant's attorneys such assistance as a proper defense to the indictment preferred against the defendant demands. Smalls v. State, 153 Ga. App. 254, 265 S.E.2d 83 (1980).

Death penalty. — Defendant, who was not found by the jury to be mentally ill, was not entitled to have the death sentence vacated on mental illness grounds as O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 did not preclude a death sentence on mental illness grounds, and there was no constitutional prohibition under U.S. Const., amend. 8 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII against a death sentence for a competent but mentally ill defendant. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

Habeas court did not err by failing to address in a defendant's ineffective assistance claim whether potential mental health evidence could have supported a verdict of guilty but mentally ill because O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 did not preclude a death sentence if the defendant would have obtained a verdict of guilty but mentally ill. Therefore, the habeas court did not err in failing to address the merits of the defendant's claim beyond addressing the role that potential mental health evidence might have played as mitigating evidence in the sentencing phase. Schofield v. Cook, 284 Ga. 240, 663 S.E.2d 221 (2008).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

In a 28 U.S.C. § 2254 case in which a death penalty inmate moved for reconsideration of a district court's finding that the inmate was not mentally retarded under Georgia law, the district court remained unconvinced that it should apply the Flynn Effect to reduce the inmate's IQ scores, and even if the full four point reduction requested was applied, the inmate had credible IQ scores of 73 and 75, which were still above the score of 70 that was generally considered to demonstrate significantly subaverage intellectual functioning under Georgia law. Ledford v. Head, No. 1:02-cv-1515-JEC, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24835 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 26, 2014).

In a 28 U.S.C. § 2254 case in which a death penalty inmate moved for reconsideration of a district court's finding that the inmate was not mentally retarded under Georgia law, the case law cited by the inmate did not alter the court's perception of the evidence presented in the case, nor the court's ultimate conclusion that the inmate failed to meet the inmate's burden of proving that the inmate had adaptive deficits in two or more of the relevant areas. Ledford v. Head, No. 1:02-cv-1515-JEC, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24835 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 26, 2014).

Inmate was not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus that arose from the inmate's sentence to death for kidnapping and murder related to the inmate's wife and/or sister-in-law as the inmate failed to show that the inmate was intellectually disabled for purposes of being ineligible for the death penalty as the inmate did not sufficiently prove that the inmate suffered from significant deficiencies in the inmate's adaptive behavior. Tharpe v. Warden, 834 F.3d 1323 (11th Cir. 2016).

Death row inmate was not found intellectually disabled, and thus ineligible for execution, because the inmate did not show any of the three elements required under the Georgia statute to establish intellectual disability; the federal district court applied correct legal standards in making that court's findings of fact and conclusions of law. Conner v. GDCP Warden, 784 F.3d 752 (11th Cir. 2015), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 1246, 194 L. Ed. 2d 190 (U.S. 2016).

Acquittal by reason of insanity contains implicit finding that defendant committed the act. — Implicit within a verdict of acquittal by reason of insanity is a finding that the state has carried the state's burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did commit the criminal act for which defendant was tried, although there was no criminal culpability. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

"Good cause" defined. — "Good cause" means a showing that there is reasonable cause to believe that the defendant presently meets the criteria for civil commitment. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Nature of hearing and burden of proof generally. — Hearing upon a special plea of insanity is a proceeding of a civil nature, in which the burden rests on the defendant to produce evidence of the defendant's insanity. Smalls v. State, 153 Ga. App. 254, 265 S.E.2d 83 (1980).

Rights of insane acquittee as to civil commitment hearing. — When there is a hearing on the question of whether a person acquitted of a crime by reason of insanity meets the criteria for civil commitment, equal protection requires that the following rights, which are extended to other people in civil commitment proceedings, be extended to the insanity acquittee: (1) notice of the right to the hearing; (2) notice of the right to counsel and the right to have counsel appointed if the person cannot afford counsel; (3) the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses and to offer evidence; (4) the right to subpoena witnesses and to require testimony be given in person or by deposition from any physician upon whose evaluation the decision may rest; (5) notice of the right to have established some sort of individualized plan specifically tailored to the person's treatment needs; (6) notice of the right to be examined by a physician of the acquittee's own choosing at the acquittee's own expense; and (7) a right to have representatives or guardian ad litem appointed in the acquittee's behalf. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Commitment procedures need not be identical to those for civil commitment. — Procedures for commitment after acquittal by reason of lack of mental competence need not be absolutely identical in every respect with the procedures for civil commitment. It suffices that the civil commitment criteria are to be applied in both instances. Skelton v. Slaton, 243 Ga. 426, 254 S.E.2d 704 (1979).

For case in which criteria for civil commitment are met, see Pitts v. State, 151 Ga. App. 691, 261 S.E.2d 435 (1979).

It is permissible to require judicial approval before an insanity acquittee can be released, even though other persons cannot be involuntarily committed unless a team of medical experts so recommends. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Presumption of continuing insanity at time of release hearing. — If defendant in a release hearing has been examined three separate times to determine mental competency in relation to a criminal trial, and there has been a judicial determination that the defendant was not mentally responsible for the defendant's crimes and apparently not competent to stand trial, there exists a continuing presumption of insanity at the time of the release hearing. Pitts v. State, 151 Ga. App. 691, 261 S.E.2d 435 (1979).

If a defendant who has been acquitted of a crime by reason of insanity is ordered committed to a mental hospital and files an application for release, there is a continuing presumption of insanity at the time of the release hearing. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

There is a presumption of continued existence of a mental state once proved to exist. Thus, when a defendant who has been acquitted of a crime by reason of insanity is ordered committed to a mental hospital and files application for release, there is a continuing presumption of insanity at the time of the release hearing. Williams v. State, 185 Ga. App. 559, 365 S.E.2d 141 (1988).

Superior court, in deciding applications for release of persons committed upon a plea of insanity, may rely on the presumption of continued insanity (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-21) and is not bound by the opinions of either lay or expert witnesses. The court also may take judicial notice of the evidence at trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(e). Butler v. State, 258 Ga. 344, 369 S.E.2d 252 (1988).

Presumption of continued need for inpatient involuntary treatment overcome. — Trial court erred in denying a recommendation filed by the Department of Behavioral Health with Developmental Disabilities that a patient be moved to a group home for outpatient involuntary treatment because the preponderance of the evidence supported a finding that the patient overcame the presumption under former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-21) of a continued need for inpatient involuntary treatment, and there was no evidence to support the trial court's finding that under O.C.G.A. § 37-3-1(9.1), the patient posed a substantial risk of imminent harm to the patient or others or was so unable to care for the patient's own physical health and safety as to create an imminently life-endangering crisis; the group home would have only two other suitable patient occupants, both of whom would be under the supervision of live-in supervisors and would have little opportunity to pressure the patient into misconduct, the patient would not be permitted to leave the group home unsupervised, the manager of the group home testified that as soon as patients were admitted into the group home and evaluated, an individualized service plan was created, and there was no statutory requirement that a plan exist prior to release. Nelor v. State, 309 Ga. App. 165, 709 S.E.2d 904 (2011).

Motion for continuance to procure further psychiatric examination. — When a motion for a continuance to procure further psychiatric examination is based on evidence that reasonably indicates mental instability on the part of the defendant at the time of the offense or at the time of trial and when the motion is not made for the mere purpose of delay and avoidance of prosecution, the interests of justice might be better served if the trial court's discretion were exercised in favor of the defendant, even when no special plea of insanity has been filed by counsel. Morgan v. State, 135 Ga. App.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

139, 217 S.E.2d 175, rev'd on other grounds, 235 Ga. 632, 221 S.E.2d 47, overruled on other grounds, Dent v. State, 136 Ga. App. 366, 221 S.E.2d 228, overruled on other grounds, Davis v. State, 136 Ga. App. 749, 222 S.E.2d 188 (1975).

Plea of guilty but mentally retarded. — Trial court could accept a plea of guilty but mentally retarded if the state agreed and the trial court found a factual basis for the plea. If the state objected, the trial court was required to reject the plea and hold a trial. Stripling v. State, 289 Ga. 370, 711 S.E.2d 665 (2011).

Defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea was not a proper vehicle to pursue the defendant's claim of dissatisfaction with treatment the defendant received for the defendant's mental illness. Boyette v. State, 217 Ga. App. 593, 458 S.E.2d 397 (1995).

Appellate court was not persuaded that the defendant was entitled to withdraw a plea of guilty but mentally ill due to the trial court's failure to follow the procedures in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(b)(2) because the defendant failed to prove that withdrawal of the plea was necessary to correct a manifest injustice, having presented no evidence the defendant was harmed by entry of the plea. Poole v. State, 326 Ga. App. 243, 756 S.E.2d 322 (2014).

Burden and standard of proof when insanity made part of general plea of not guilty. — If the defense of insanity is made under the general plea of not guilty, the burden rests upon the defendant, under the presumption of sanity, to show by a preponderance of the evidence, but not beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant was not mentally responsible at the time of the alleged crime. Ross v. State, 217 Ga. 569, 124 S.E.2d 280 (1962).

Burden and standard of proof when general plea of insanity filed. — If a defendant in a criminal case files a general plea of insanity, that is, the defendant argues that the defendant is not guilty of the crime by reason of being insane at the time of the crime's commission, the burden is on the defendant to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant was insane. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Prosecutor is entitled to argue vigorously that defendant is guilty, although the disputed issue at trial is not defendant's guilt but defendant's mental illness. Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1132, 105 S. Ct. 816, 83 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1985).

Insanity ordinarily a jury question. — Ordinarily, the question of insanity at the time of commission of the act is one for the determination of the jury. Brand v. State, 123 Ga. App. 273, 180 S.E.2d 579 (1971).

Discussion of law in closing argument. — Trial court erred by prohibiting the defendant during closing arguments from discussing the law regarding the different ramifications and dispositions associated with verdicts of "guilty but mentally ill," and not guilty by reason of insanity; however, this error did not contribute to the "guilty but mentally ill" verdict in this case, and thus was harmless. Minter v. State, 266 Ga. 73, 463 S.E.2d 119 (1995).

Effect of "guilty but mentally ill" verdict. — As for the issue of "mental illness," it is apparent from O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(g) that such a verdict has the same force and effect as any other guilty verdict, with an additional provision that the Department of Corrections or other incarcerating authority provide mental health treatment for a person found "guilty but mentally ill." Logan v. State, 256 Ga. 664, 352 S.E.2d 567 (1987).

Informing a jury that the jury could return a verdict of "guilty but mentally ill" does not deprive a defendant of the defense of insanity on the basis that the alternative affords the jury a "palatable verdict" of simultaneously holding a defendant responsible for the defendant's actions by finding the defendant guilty, yet mitigating that finding by also finding the defendant mentally ill, when the jury is clearly informed of the jury's task of determining the validity of the defendant's defense of insanity, and of the requirement to find the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity should the jury accept that defense. Mitchell v. State, 187

Ga. App. 40, 369 S.E.2d 487, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 369 S.E.2d 487 (1988).

"Guilty but mentally ill" verdict does not conflict with general verdict requirement. — Verdict of "guilty but mentally ill" under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 does not conflict with the requirement of a general verdict as provided by O.C.G.A. § 17-9-2. Mitchell v. State, 187 Ga. App. 40, 369 S.E.2d 487, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 369 S.E.2d 487 (1988).

Applying "guilty but mentally ill" provision retrospectively. — Since the bank robberies were committed before July 1, 1982, and a verdict of guilty was authorized by the evidence, the application of the "guilty but mentally ill" provision was not an unconstitutional application of an ex post facto law. Kirkland v. State, 166 Ga. App. 478, 304 S.E.2d 561 (1983).

Since the defendant did not seek a jury determination of the defendant's alleged mental retardation, as defined by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(a)(3), at the defendant's criminal trial for murder, that issue was procedurally defaulted pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-14-48(d); however, the court reviewed the issue under the miscarriage of justice standard and determined that Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002) did not have a retroactive effect in the defendant's collateral review proceeding instituted after the appeals from the original trial were completed. Head v. Hill, 277 Ga. 255, 587 S.E.2d 613 (2003).

Procedural requirements not retroactive. — Since the defendant pled "guilty but mentally ill" to the offense of malice murder in 1983, the plea was tendered and accepted under the original provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131, which contained no specific procedural requirements for the entry of such a plea, and the trial court was not bound by the provisions of (b)(2) as those provisions were not enacted until 1985. Logan v. State, 256 Ga. 664, 352 S.E.2d 567 (1987).

Evaluation report. — While the failure to file the statutorily required written evaluation report of the appellant's present mental condition does not rise to the level of procedural due process, nevertheless the statute does expressly require that the report be made and tendered to the trial court and counsel, and the proper remedy is to direct compliance with the statute. Williams v. State, 185 Ga. App. 559, 365 S.E.2d 141 (1988).

Effect of presenting "guilty but mentally ill" defense on insanity defense. — When the defendant's counsel acquiesced in presenting the "guilty but mentally ill" verdict option to the jury, the defendant was estopped from contending on appeal that the option infringed on the defendant's defense of insanity. Milam v. State, 255 Ga. 560, 341 S.E.2d 216 (1986).

Verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity reflected two crucial factual determinations. First, such verdict indicated a determination beyond a reasonable doubt by the finder of fact that the defendant committed the crime in question. Secondly, this verdict indicated a finding that it has been demonstrated by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant, at the time the criminal act was committed, met the criteria for civil commitment. Under former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-21), this mental state was presumed to continue so that the burden of proof in a release proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 rests on the insanity acquittee. Whitfield v. State, 158 Ga. App. 660, 281 S.E.2d 643 (1981).

"Guilty but mentally ill" plea knowingly entered. — In a malice murder case, a review of the record of the "guilty but mentally ill" plea, as well as of the collateral proceedings, revealed that the plea was knowingly and voluntarily entered by the defendant with a full understanding of the defendant's waiver of rights and the consequences of the entry of the plea. Logan v. State, 256 Ga. 664, 352 S.E.2d 567 (1987).

Establishing career offender with plea of "guilty but mentally ill." — Felony conviction for a crime of violence based on a plea of "guilty but mentally ill" under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 qualified as a predicate offense to establish career offender status under the federal sentencing guidelines. United States v. Bankston, 121 F.3d 1411 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1067, 118 S. Ct. 735, 139 L. Ed. 2d 672 (1998).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Plea of not guilty by reason of insanity is a plea of confession and avoidance. It admits the facts pled in the indictment, but avoids conviction because of the condition of insanity of the defendant at the time of the offense. Moses v. State, 167 Ga. App. 556, 307 S.E.2d 35 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Nagel v. State, 262 Ga. 888, 427 S.E.2d 490 (1993).

Plea of not guilty by reason of insanity is a plea of confession and avoidance, which admits the facts pled in the indictment, but avoids conviction because of the condition of insanity of the defendant at the time of the offense. Kelley v. State, 235 Ga. App. 177, 509 S.E.2d 110 (1998).

Jurisdiction afforded committing courts pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 is not limited to the rendition of the initial commitment order and final release decision, but also encompasses the authority to render all other decisions necessary for the treatment of the insanity acquittee as well as those decisions necessary to ensure both the acquittee's safety and the safety of the community. O'Neal v. State, 185 Ga. App. 838, 365 S.E.2d 894 (1988).

Pursuit of treatment outside treating facility. — Committing court has the authority to allow an insanity acquittee to pursue treatment, educational, or other goals outside the confines of the treating facility. O'Neal v. State, 185 Ga. App. 838, 365 S.E.2d 894 (1988).

Availability of state funding need not be mentioned. — Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(g)(1) merely specify the respective obligations of the trial court and the penal facility following a conviction based on a verdict of guilty but mentally ill, and the trial court is not obligated to instruct the jury that any required treatment would be dependent upon the availability of state funding. Summerlin v. State, 339 Ga. App. 148, 793 S.E.2d 477 (2016).

Court retains jurisdiction after plea of insanity is accepted. — If the defendant enters a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity, which is accepted, and the court commits the defendant to a hospital for treatment, the committing court retains jurisdiction of the acquitted-committed defendant. Moses v. State, 167 Ga. App. 556, 307 S.E.2d 35 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Nagel v. State, 262 Ga. 888, 427 S.E.2d 490 (1993).

Rejection of expert testimony as to sanity. — Jury is free to reject expert testimony as to sanity and may find an accused sane even without positive testimony as to sanity. Brooks v. State, 247 Ga. 744, 279 S.E.2d 649 (1981).

Trial judge, as the finder of fact, is not bound by the opinions of either lay or expert witnesses as to sanity and may rely upon the basic presumptions permitted by law. Haugebrooks v. State, 196 Ga. App. 5, 395 S.E.2d 348 (1990).

Jurors are not bound by the opinions of expert witnesses regarding a defendant's sanity; instead, jurors may rely on the presumption of sanity in O.C.G.A. § 16-2-3 unless the proof of insanity is overwhelming. Vanderpool v. State, 244 Ga. App. 804, 536 S.E.2d 821 (2000), cert denied, 532 U.S. 996, 121 S. Ct. 1658, 149 L. Ed. 2d 640 (2001).

Criminal accountability not relieved by proof of multiple personalities. — In every circumstance, including the existence of multiple personalities, the law is justified in governing accountability when at the time of the criminal act the person had mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong in relation to such act and was not acting because of a delusional compulsion as to such act which overmastered the person's will to resist committing the crime, which delusion would, if true, have justified the act. If these elements are found to be present in a case, the law will not inquire whether the individual possesses other personalities, fugues, or even moods in which the person would not have performed the act or perhaps did not even know the act was being performed. Kirkland v. State, 166 Ga. App. 478, 304 S.E.2d 561 (1983).

Verdict of guilty but mentally ill proper when multiple personalities showing. — Since the trial judge accepted that the defendant suffered from a multiple personality disorder, but ruled that the personality who robbed the banks did so with rational, purposeful criminal intent and with knowledge that the robbery was wrong, there was no error in the judge's finding that the defendant was guilty but mentally ill. Kirkland v. State, 166 Ga. App. 478, 304 S.E.2d 561 (1983).

Investigation not required prior to sentencing mentally retarded defendant. — Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant, after a finding of guilty but mentally retarded, as contrary to the defendant's assertion, neither the current nor former version of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 required a trial court to have an investigation conducted prior to sentencing a mentally retarded defendant. Moreover, contrary to the defendant's argument, the statutory and regulatory framework demonstrated that the required evaluation was an administrative rather than a judicial function that occurred post-sentencing. Chauncey v. State, 283 Ga. App. 217, 641 S.E.2d 229 (2007).

Verdicts not inconsistent. — Verdicts of not guilty by reason of insanity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(a)(1) of malice murder and guilty but mentally ill of other related offenses, including felony murder, were not mutually exclusive, and any claim that the verdicts were inconsistent was not relevant because the inconsistent verdict rule had been previously abolished. Shepherd v. State, 280 Ga. 245, 626 S.E.2d 96 (2006), overruled on other grounds by McElrath v. State, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 127 (Ga. 2020).

Separate trial not authorized. — Defendant charged with capital murder was properly denied a separate trial on the question of defendant's mental retardation because the jury in a capital trial determines "at the time of the trial on guilt or innocence" whether the defendant is mentally retarded. Livingston v. State, 264 Ga. 402, 444 S.E.2d 748 (1994).

Defendant in a capital trial is not entitled to a separate trial on the issue of mental retardation; O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(c)(3) requires the jury to determine mental retardation during the guilt/innocence phase. Jenkins v. State, 269 Ga. 282, 498 S.E.2d 502, cert. denied, 525 U.S. 968, 119 S. Ct. 416, 142 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1998).

Sentencing instructions. — Since the defendant acknowledged the defendant could not prove the defendant's tendered insanity defense, and the defendant requested and received an instruction on the guilty but mentally ill verdict, the defendant was not entitled to an instruction on the sentencing options of that verdict, as that would have no bearing on the defendant's guilt or innocence. Cranford v. State, 186 Ga. App. 862, 369 S.E.2d 50 (1988).

Maximum punishment for mentally retarded. — Prospective juror's opinion of whether a mentally retarded defendant should receive a harsher punishment than a person of normal intelligence is irrelevant since a defendant found by the jury to be mentally retarded cannot be executed and automatically receives a life sentence. Raulerson v. State, 268 Ga. 623, 491 S.E.2d 791 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1127, 118 S. Ct. 1815, 140 L. Ed. 2d 953 (1998).

Amendment of guilty verdict to guilty but mentally ill not permitted. — Because the jury was instructed on possible verdicts of guilty and guilty but mentally ill and returned a verdict of guilty, amendment of the verdict from guilty to guilty but mentally ill would constitute an impermissible substantive change. Hollis v. State, 215 Ga. App. 35, 450 S.E.2d 247 (1994).

Verdict of guilty but mentally ill supported by evidence. — When a social worker who examined the defendant testified that, although the defendant suffered from mental illness, the defendant knew the difference between right and wrong at the time of the crime, any rational trier of fact could have found from the evidence presented at trial that the defendant was guilty of the crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt, albeit mentally ill at the time of the crime. Jackson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 477, 304 S.E.2d 560 (1983). See also Awtrey v. State, 175 Ga. App. 148, 332 S.E.2d 896 (1985).

Defendant was properly found guilty, but mentally ill, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(c)(2), since expert testimony allowed the jury to conclude that the defendant knew the difference between right and wrong, planned the killings, intended for the defendant's victims to die, knew that the defendant was ending their lives, appreciated the finality of the defendant's own actions, knew the defendant had done a terrible thing, was remorseful, and knew some people would view the defendant's actions as illegal. Boswell v. State, 275 Ga. 689, 572 S.E.2d 565 (2002).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Verdict of guilty but mentally ill was not demanded since there was evidence that the defendant's mental illness was characterized by periods of normalcy, and that the defendant's criminal acts on the day in question were not motivated by the delusions from which the defendant suffered. Lebbage v. State, 244 Ga. App. 596, 536 S.E.2d 282 (2000).

"Guilty but mentally ill" plea properly accepted. — Since psychological evaluations were ordered by the court and defense counsel and the findings from both, which were consistent, were read into the record for the court's consideration at the plea hearing, the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 (b)(2) were satisfied. Cullers v. State, 247 Ga. App. 155, 543 S.E.2d 763 (2000).

Evidence did not support finding of insanity. — See Stephens v. State, 258 Ga. 320, 368 S.E.2d 754 (1988); Tarver v. State, 186 Ga. App. 905, 368 S.E.2d 828 (1988).

"Insanity" and "mentally ill" verdicts not inseparable. — Verdicts of "not guilty by reason of insanity at the time of the crime" and "guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime" are not inseparable; when the jury is instructed as to "guilty but mentally ill," the jury need not also be instructed as to "not guilty by reason of insanity" when there is no evidence to support a charge on insanity. State v. Ball, 251 Ga. 840, 310 S.E.2d 516 (1984).

Repeated charges and examples. — When proper charge concerning delusional compulsion had been given twice, there was no harmful error in judge providing jury with example of delusional compulsion. Camp v. State, 250 Ga. 228, 297 S.E.2d 26 (1982).

When insanity presumption ends. — Any presumption of insanity raised by a finding that a person is a "mentally ill person requiring involuntary treatment" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 37-3-1(12) ends when the person's involuntary commitment or hospitalization ends. Nelson v. State, 254 Ga. 611, 331 S.E.2d 554 (1985).

Dismissal of defendant's petition to correct a void judgment was proper when the procedural requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(b)(2) were fulfilled when the defendant's plea of guilty but mentally ill was taken and a factual basis for the plea was established. Barber v. State, 240 Ga. App. 156, 522 S.E.2d 528 (1999).

Court, not institution, controls release. — Ultimate power to order the release from a mental institution of an insanity acquittee is one which rests, not in the institution, but in the trial court. Loftin v. State, 180 Ga. App. 613, 349 S.E.2d 777 (1986).

Exhaustion of remedies not required before seeking habeas relief. — Because an involuntary detainee is specifically granted the right to seek habeas relief "at any time" by O.C.G.A. § 37-3-148, exhaustion of remedies is not required before a person involuntarily committed to a mental health facility following an acquittal by reason of insanity may seek habeas relief. Hogan v. Nagel, 273 Ga. 577, 543 S.E.2d 705 (2001); Hogan v. Nagel, 276 Ga. 197, 576 S.E.2d 873 (2003).

Release from not guilty by reason of insanity verdict. — Trial court erred by not releasing the defendant from the not guilty by reason of insanity verdict because the defendant rebutted the presumption of insanity and the need for continued involuntary outpatient commitment; the treating psychiatrist testified that the defendant had good insight into the defendant's condition, was coping well, was compliant, independently cared for oneself, and could be responsible for complying with treatment without the aid of an involuntary order. Coogler v. State, 324 Ga. App. 796, 751 S.E.2d 584 (2013).

Court authorized to deny mental patient's application for release. — Although the hospital physician and nurses testified that in their opinion a mental patient, involuntarily committed after being found not guilty of murdering the patient's brother by reason of insanity, did not presently meet the criteria for civil commitment and should have been released, based upon the evidence presented, including relapses suffered in the past after the patient ceased to take the patient's medication, during one of which the patient killed the patient's brother, the court was authorized to deny the application for release. Cox v. State, 171 Ga. App. 550, 320 S.E.2d 611 (1984).

It was within the court's discretion to reject conclusions reached by a patient's professional witnesses and the patient's mere promise that the patient would continue to take the patient's medication upon conditional release. Butler v. State, 225 Ga. App. 288, 483 S.E.2d 385 (1997).

Denial of release from involuntary confinement held proper. — Trial judge did not err in denying the release of a mental patient found not guilty of murder by reason of insanity from involuntary confinement despite the mental health professionals' support for the patient's release since the professional's recommendations were based on the professional's conclusions that the patient was no longer a danger to self or others because the patient's mental condition was controlled by medication, which the patient would continue to take if the patient were released; the patient was under medication at the time the patient committed the murder, but quit taking the medication because the patient decided that the patient no longer needed the medication; the patient stated the patient believed the medication was beneficial, but the patient did not believe the patient needed to take the medication to function in society; the patient also expressed other irrational beliefs about another's ability to throw "hates" at the patient; having acted upon numerous earlier requests concerning the patient's custody, the trial judge was very familiar with the defendant's mental condition and case history; and the judge's order denying release was well documented. Crawford v. State, 202 Ga. App. 653, 415 S.E.2d 300 (1992).

Trial court did not err in denying mental health patient's motion for release when the record evinced that the patient remained highly delusional and capable of acting on those delusions to the injury of oneself or others. Gross v. State, 210 Ga. App. 125, 435 S.E.2d 496 (1993).

Rational trier of fact could have found that the appellant failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the appellant was no longer insane and should be released from civil commitment when experts testified that the appellant became violently "psychotic" when the appellant engaged in substance abuse and that, although the appellant might not exhibit violently "psychotic" behavior so long as the appellant underwent the regimen of "forced abstinence" in a hospital setting, there was nothing to show that, once released from that setting and regimen, the appellant would not again engage in substance abuse and commit yet another violent "psychotic" act. Nagel v. State, 264 Ga. 150, 442 S.E.2d 446 (1994).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's petition for release from inpatient involuntary treatment under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(f) because the defendant continued to meet the statutory inpatient involuntary treatment criteria under O.C.G.A. § 37-3-1(9.1), and the defendant failed to rebut the presumption of continuing insanity and that inpatient involuntary treatment was still required; the defendant's experts testified that the defendant had physical altercations with patients and had relapsed and experienced an auditory hallucination after the trial court denied the defendant's prior request for release, which led to an increase in medications. Newman v. State, 314 Ga. App. 99, 722 S.E.2d 911 (2012).

Trial court was authorized to find that the defendant failed to prove that the defendant should be conditionally released to outpatient treatment in a group home based on the defendant's long history of substance abuse and mental illness, lack of personal support, high level of intelligence and education, the defendant's family's adamant opposition, and the expert's opinion that the defendant may not take the illness seriously and may not appreciate the gravity of the offenses. Gibson v. State, 335 Ga. App. 569, 782 S.E.2d 472 (2016).

Detainee should have treatment plan for release. — Trial court did not exceed the court's authority by granting a writ of habeas corpus, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-14-19, to an involuntary detainee who had been committed to a state hospital upon a finding of not guilty by reason of insanity in the deaths of the detainee's grandparents and ordering that the state hospital officials prepare a plan for supervision and outpatient services upon the detainee's release; the detainee was entitled to seek relief by that route, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 37-3-148(a), or by seeking a release petition pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(f). Hogan v. Nagel, 276 Ga. 197, 576 S.E.2d 873 (2003).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Extension of involuntary outpatient treatment. — When an insanity acquittee has successfully completed a conditional release program order under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(e), the trial court is required to discharge the acquittee from the order requiring involuntary inpatient treatment, but is authorized to require that the acquittee participate in involuntary outpatient treatment. Sikes v. State, 268 Ga. 19, 485 S.E.2d 206 (1997).

"Traumatic brain injury" exclusion in O.C.G.A. § 37-3-1 did not preclude the defendant's involuntary treatment since the defendant was adjudicated mentally ill as defined in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131. Sikes v. State, 221 Ga. App. 595, 472 S.E.2d 101 (1996).

Defendant failed to prove sanity. — Defendant failed to prove that the defendant was not insane when the evidence indicated, inter alia, that the defendant had multiple fixed delusions, including believing to be a secret service agent and owning the hospital where the defendant was committed. Gross v. State, 262 Ga. App. 328, 585 S.E.2d 671 (2003).

Defendant failed to carry the defendant's burden of showing by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant was sane after the defendant was found not guilty by reason of insanity on two stalking charges and was ordered into a civil commitment to a mental health facility; the verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity established both that the defendant committed the criminal offense and that the defendant did so becaue of a mental illness, and once the defendant was ruled insane, a presumption existed under former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-21) that the insanity existed thereafter, and the defendant put on very little evidence to the contrary. Bonney v. State, 295 Ga. App. 706, 673 S.E.2d 102 (2009).

Court did not need to inquire sua sponte into defendant's competency. — Despite the defendant's contentions that the trial court erred in not ensuring the competency required to control the defense, nothing before the appellate court indicated that the defendant was incompetent to stand trial, nor was there any evidence that should have indicated to the trial court that a sua sponte inquiry into competency was required. Rivera v. State, 282 Ga. 355, 647 S.E.2d 70 (2007).

Trial court did not err by failing to sua sponte order that the defendant submit to a mental health evaluation to determine the defendant's sanity, or by failing to instruct the jury that the jury was entitled to reach a verdict of guilty but mentally ill as the defendant made no request, motion, or other affirmative attempt to demonstrate to the trial court that the defendant had an insanity defense. Perkins v. State, 328 Ga. App. 508, 759 S.E.2d 626 (2014).

No error in finding lack of mental retardation. — Habeas court did not err in finding that an inmate failed to prove mental retardation, in light of the conflicting evidence, including expert and lay testimony and non-testimonial evidence. Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56, cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1070, 128 S. Ct. 728, 169 L. Ed. 2d 569 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Determinations of mental competency. — In light of Georgia's statutory bar under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(j) against executing mentally retarded individuals and the U.S. Supreme Court's holding that executing mentally retarded individuals was unconstitutional, a federal habeas court concluded that an evidentiary hearing under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e) was necessary to determine whether it was unreasonable for a prisoner's attorneys to fail to investigate or raise the issue of mental retardation at the prisoner's capital murder trial and whether the prisoner was, in fact, mentally retarded because: (1) in determining that counsels' decision not to raise or investigate the issue of mental retardation was not unreasonable, the state habeas court relied entirely on the opinions and testimony of two experts, neither of whom specifically addressed the statutory factors relevant to mental retardation under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(a)(3); and (2) the basis for the state habeas court's determination that the prisoner was not mentally retarded was unclear. Ledford v. Head, No. 1:02-CV-1515-JEC, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 76612 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 13, 2006).

Denial of the death-row inmate's petition for writ of habeas corpus was affirmed because the district court's finding that the inmate was not intellectually disabled was supported by the record since the inmate failed to demonstrate significant or substantial deficits in adaptive behavior in two adaptive skill areas as the inmate's work problems resulted from the inmate's substance abuse, rather than a limitation in an "adaptive skill area". Ledford v. Warden, Ga. Diagnostic & Classification Prison, 818 F.3d 600 (11th Cir. 2016), cert. denied, 137 S. Ct. 1432, 197 L. Ed. 2d 650 (U.S. 2017).

Procedure for opening statements and closing arguments. — Trial of a habeas corpus petitioner's claim of mental retardation should be regarded as a completion of the guilt/innocence phase of the petitioner's original trial and, therefore, the state was entitled under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 10.2 to make an opening statement before the petitioner. Under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, the state was entitled to make an initial closing argument, the petitioner could then make the petitioner's closing argument, and the state was entitled to make a final closing argument. Stripling v. State, 289 Ga. 370, 711 S.E.2d 665 (2011).

Ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to plead guilty but mentally retarded not found. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for kidnapping, aggravated sodomy, and aggravated sexual battery, the defendant was not rendered ineffective assistance of counsel as a result of trial counsel's decision not to file a plea of guilty but mentally retarded and, instead, attack the credibility of the victim as trial counsel's decision as to which theory of defense to pursue was a matter of trial strategy and tactics that was not unreasonable and thus did not constitute ineffective assistance. Hampton v. State, 294 Ga. App. 857, 670 S.E.2d 502 (2008).

Counsel's failure to raise issue deficient but not prejudicial. — Defendant's trial counsel performed deficiently in not seeking expert assistance in evaluating the defendant's mental condition at the time of the shooting and at the time of trial because the defendant was hospitalized in 1996 after stabbing the same man that the defendant murdered; and, in 1996, the defendant reported hearing a voice telling the defendant to kill for which the defendant received antipsychotic medication; however, counsel's deficient performance was not prejudicial as the defendant did not show that the jury would have returned a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity because the defendant did not receive any diagnosis of or treatment for mental illness for more than a decade before the current crimes. Scott v. State, 301 Ga. 573, 802 S.E.2d 211 (2017).

Cited in Davis v. State, 216 Ga. 110, 114 S.E.2d 877 (1960); Chandler v. State, 219 Ga. 105, 131 S.E.2d 762 (1963); Massey v. State, 222 Ga. 143, 149 S.E.2d 118 (1966); Roach v. Mauldin, 277 F. Supp. 54 (N.D. Ga. 1967); Taylor v. State, 229 Ga. 536, 192 S.E.2d 249 (1972); Pierce v. State, 231 Ga. 731, 204 S.E.2d 159 (1974); Saylor v. Terminal Transp. Co., 132 Ga. App. 760, 209 S.E.2d 133 (1974); Berryhill v. State, 235 Ga. 549, 221 S.E.2d 185 (1975); Nunnally v. State, 235 Ga. 693, 221 S.E.2d 547 (1975); Wessner v. State, 236 Ga. 162, 223 S.E.2d 141 (1976); Graham v. State, 236 Ga. 378, 223 S.E.2d 803 (1976); Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976); Myers v. State, 143 Ga. App. 195, 237 S.E.2d 662 (1977); White v. State, 143 Ga. App. 315, 238 S.E.2d 247 (1977); Lamb v. State, 241 Ga. 10, 243 S.E.2d 59 (1978); Dubose v. State, 148 Ga. App. 9, 251 S.E.2d 15 (1978); Pennewell v. State, 148 Ga. App. 611, 251 S.E.2d 832 (1979); Bell v. State, 244 Ga. 211, 259 S.E.2d 465 (1979); Cantwell v. State, 153 Ga. App. 717, 266 S.E.2d 354 (1980); Bowers v. State, 153 Ga. App. 894, 267 S.E.2d 309 (1980); Mullins v. Belcher, 159 Ga.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

App. 520, 284 S.E.2d 35 (1981); Clayton v. State, 160 Ga. App. 908, 288 S.E.2d 621 (1982); Gates v. State, 167 Ga. App. 353, 306 S.E.2d 411 (1983); Murray v. State, 253 Ga. 90, 317 S.E.2d 193 (1984); Pope v. State, 172 Ga. App. 396, 323 S.E.2d 268 (1984); Heaton v. State, 175 Ga. App. 735, 334 S.E.2d 334 (1985); Roberts v. Grigsby, 177 Ga. App. 377, 339 S.E.2d 633 (1985); Edison v. State, 256 Ga. 67, 344 S.E.2d 231 (1986); Caldwell v. State, 256 Ga. 10, 354 S.E.2d 124 (1987); Holloway v. State, 257 Ga. 620, 361 S.E.2d 794 (1987); Waldrop v. Evans, 681 F. Supp. 840 (M.D. Ga. 1988); Jacobs v. Taylor, 190 Ga. App. 520, 379 S.E.2d 563 (1989); Jones v. State, 191 Ga. App. 561, 382 S.E.2d 612 (1989); Ledbetter v. Cannon, 192 Ga. App. 392, 384 S.E.2d 875 (1989); Watkins v. State, 259 Ga. 648, 386 S.E.2d 132 (1989); Zant v. Beck, 259 Ga. 756, 386 S.E.2d 349 (1989); Stripling v. State, 261 Ga. 1, 401 S.E.2d 500 (1991); Lawrence v. State, 201 Ga. App. 7, 410 S.E.2d 136 (1991); Snyder v. State, 201 Ga. App. 66, 410 S.E.2d 173 (1991); Stephens v. State, 201 Ga. App. 744, 412 S.E.2d 571 (1991); Nagel v. State, 262 Ga. 888, 427 S.E.2d 490 (1993); Mathis v. Zant, 851 F. Supp. 1572 (N.D. Ga. 1994); Palmer v. State, 271 Ga. 234, 517 S.E.2d 502 (1999); Spivey v. Head, 207 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 2000); Heidler v. State, 273 Ga. 54, 537 S.E.2d 44 (2000); Brown v. State, 246 Ga. App. 60, 539 S.E.2d 545 (2000); King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000); Trammel v. Bradberry, 256 Ga. App. 412, 568 S.E.2d 715 (2002); Hall v. Brannan, 284 Ga. 716, 670 S.E.2d 87 (2008); Hall v. Lance, 286 Ga. 365, 687 S.E.2d 809 (2010); Brower v. State, 334 Ga. App. 262, 779 S.E.2d 32 (2015); McElrath v. State, 308 Ga. 104, 839 S.E.2d 573 (2020).

Constitutionality

Procedures established under this section were constitutional. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 is not unconstitutionally vague and does not deny due process; the statute is sufficiently worded to inform a jury as to the meaning of a verdict of "mentally ill." Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985); Wilson v. State, 257 Ga. 444, 359 S.E.2d 891 (1987).

While the definition of "mentally ill" in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 is not a model of specificity, the definition is sufficient to inform the jury of the meaning of a verdict of guilty but mentally ill and is not so vague as to violate due process. Cooper v. State, 253 Ga. 736, 325 S.E.2d 137 (1985).

Definition of "mentally ill" is not unconstitutionally vague. Keener v. State, 254 Ga. 699, 334 S.E.2d 175 (1985); Salter v. State, 257 Ga. 88, 356 S.E.2d 196 (1987).

Section does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. — Simply because O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 provides that a defendant convicted as guilty but mentally ill will be treated with funds to be appropriated, and there may exist a possibility that funds may run out or not be appropriated, there is no violation of constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment. Cooper v. State, 253 Ga. 736, 325 S.E.2d 137 (1985).

Section is not unconstitutional application of ex post facto law. — Verdict of guilty but mentally ill under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 was not an unconstitutional application of an ex post facto law merely because the crime occurred before the enactment of that section. Nelson v. State, 254 Ga. 611, 331 S.E.2d 554 (1985).

This section afforded a person due process of law prior to a final commitment order. Skelton v. Slaton, 243 Ga. 426, 254 S.E.2d 704 (1979).

Person is entitled to due process even if the person is committed temporarily to a state mental institution for evaluation. Skelton v. Slaton, 243 Ga. 426, 254 S.E.2d 704 (1979).

Due process must be afforded in sanity inquiry. — Inquiry into the sanity of the person at the time of acquittal must be conducted so as to afford the person due process of law. Skelton v. Slaton, 243 Ga. 426, 254 S.E.2d 704 (1979).

Due process requires only that the insanity acquittee be given a right to a hearing, which can be waived if the insanity acquittee, or the acquittee's appointed representative or guardian ad litem, declines to file an application for release. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Proving mental retardation does not violate due process. — Requirement that mental retardation must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt does not violate due process. Mosher v. State, 268 Ga. 555, 491 S.E.2d 348 (1997).

Inmate required to prove mental retardation. — Since O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 was previously held to be constitutional, the inmate was required to bear the burden of proving the inmate's alleged mental retardation beyond a reasonable doubt. Head v. Stripling, 277 Ga. 403, 588 S.E.2d 226 (2003).

Constitutionality of provisions regarding release. — Provisions of this section disallowing the filing of another application for release until one year has elapsed from the denial of the last preceding application and allowing release only upon court order do not offend current concepts of due process or equal protection of the laws. Skelton v. Slaton, 243 Ga. 426, 254 S.E.2d 704 (1979).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 is not violative of due process through the statute's requirement of judicial approval for the release of insanity acquittees not convicted of dangerous crimes, the statute's presumption of continuing insanity at the release hearing, or the statute's placement of the burden of proof on the insanity acquittee at the release hearing. Benham v. Ledbetter, 785 F.2d 1480 (11th Cir. 1986).

Provision in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(f)(3) that a court, after rendering an adverse release decision in a release hearing, may not hear a further release application by the insanity acquittee until 12 months have elapsed, is not violative of due process, since insanity acquittees may, during the interval, bring habeas corpus petitions challenging the legality of their detention. Benham v. Ledbetter, 785 F.2d 1480 (11th Cir. 1986).

Constitutionality of guilty but mentally ill category. — Creation of the category of guilty but mentally ill is not unconstitutionally vague and thus lacking in due process. Dimauro v. State, 185 Ga. App. 524, 364 S.E.2d 900 (1988).

Constitutionality of burden of proof of fitness for release. — Insanity acquittee is not denied equal protection of the law, if the acquittee is required to bear the burden of proving the acquittee's fitness for release while other civil committees are not. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Prohibition against execution of mentally retarded. — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 does not wholly erode the constitutional prohibition against execution of the mentally retarded. Ferrell v. Head, 398 F. Supp. 2d 1273 (N.D. Ga. 2005).

Constitutionality of differing treatment. — Judgment of acquittal by reason of insanity provides the state a rational reason for treating "insanity acquittees" differently from other persons involuntarily committed to state health facilities. Specifically, insanity acquittees have no right to be free of the burden of proof in commitment and release hearings. Also, it is not unreasonable to presume continued mental illness based on a judgment of not guilty by reason of insanity. Benham v. Ledbetter, 609 F. Supp. 125 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 785 F.2d 1480 (11th Cir. 1986).

Life imprisonment and civil commitment did not constitute double jeopardy. — Civil commitment, following finding that the defendant was not guilty by reason of insanity of malice murder, and a sentence of life imprisonment based on convictions for felony murder, with a finding of guilty but mentally ill, did not violate the defendant's double jeopardy rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, as the civil commitment procedure under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 was not punitive in nature. Shepherd v. State, 280 Ga. 245, 626 S.E.2d 96 (2006), overruled on other grounds by McElrath v. State, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 127 (Ga. 2020).

"Insane," "Mentally Ill," "Intellectual Disability" Defined

What constitutes "mental illness." — Person who is insane, that is, who is not legally responsible for the person's own actions because the person cannot distinguish between right and wrong is mentally ill under this definition. Clark v. State, 151 Ga. App. 853, 261 S.E.2d 764

"Insane," "Mentally Ill," "Intellectual Disability" Defined (Cont'd)

(1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

What constitutes delusional compulsion. — One is not criminally responsible when, though one has reason sufficient to distinguish between right and wrong, as to a particular act about to be committed, yet, in consequence of some delusion, the will is overmastered and there is no criminal intent, provided that the act itself is connected with the peculiar delusion under which the person is laboring. Hargroves v. State, 179 Ga. 722, 177 S.E. 561 (1934).

Intermittent insanity is no excuse or justification for crime, unless the defendant was incapable of knowing right from wrong at the time the act was committed. Ross v. State, 217 Ga. 569, 124 S.E.2d 280 (1962).

Weakmindedness alone is not a defense to crime. Ross v. State, 217 Ga. 569, 124 S.E.2d 280 (1962).

Mental abnormality alone is not a defense to crime. Ross v. State, 217 Ga. 569, 124 S.E.2d 280 (1962).

Mentally irresponsible at time of offense. — Mental abnormality is not a defense unless the accused was, at the time of the commission of the offense, mentally irresponsible under the test recognized by law in this state. The only exception to this is delusional insanity. Ross v. State, 217 Ga. 569, 124 S.E.2d 280 (1962).

Test of mental irresponsibility. — Test is whether the accused had reason sufficient to distinguish between right and wrong in relation to the particular offense committed. Ross v. State, 217 Ga. 569, 124 S.E.2d 280 (1962).

Defense of drug-caused mania or insanity. — Defense of mania or insanity, caused by the use of a drug, permanent and fixed in character, so as to destroy the knowledge of right and wrong as to the act, with the person laboring under such infirmity not responsible for the person's crime, must amount to a plea of insanity at the time of the commission of the act under this section. Brand v. State, 123 Ga. App. 273, 180 S.E.2d 579 (1971).

Mental retardation definition not met. — Defendant's motion for a new trial on the basis that the verdict was contrary to the evidence was properly denied when the defendant's interaction with others, defendant's letter writing, newspaper reading, and sports activities all indicated that the defendant did not meet the statutory definition of mental retardation in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(a)(3). Foster v. State, 272 Ga. 69, 525 S.E.2d 78, cert. denied, 531 U.S. 890, 121 S. Ct. 214, 148 L. Ed. 2d 151 (2000).

In a death penalty case, a habeas court did not err in considering habeas corpus petitioner's claim, raised for the first time in the habeas petition, that the petitioner was mentally retarded; the habeas court properly found that the petitioner's intelligence test scores and school records failed to prove that the petitioner met the definition of mentally retarded under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(a)(3). Head v. Ferrell, 274 Ga. 399, 554 S.E.2d 155 (2001).

In a death penalty case, the habeas corpus court correctly held that the defendant was not mentally retarded, and could thus be executed, when the evidence demonstrated that the defendant committed other crimes, one punishable by death, which required a certain degree of planning and intelligence, the defendant's school records were devoid of any indication that the defendant was retarded, and crime scene photographs supported the state's version of the crime scene and illustrated the resourcefulness displayed by the defendant to accomplish the defendant's illustrated purpose. Morrison v. State, 276 Ga. 829, 583 S.E.2d 873 (2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 940, 124 S. Ct. 1662, 158 L. Ed. 2d 363 (2004), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Inmate was denied habeas corpus relief on a claim that the defendant was ineligible for the death penalty because the defendant was mentally retarded because the defendant failed to offer any evidence that the state habeas court and the state supreme court's conclusions were based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented; the state habeas court noted that the inmate provided no concrete evidence to demonstrate that the defendant fell within the scope of the definition of mental retardation under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131, and the state supreme court rejected the claim citing numerous tests and records indicating that the inmate's mental function, while below average, did not render the defendant mentally retarded. Ferrell v. Head, 398 F. Supp. 2d 1273 (N.D. Ga. 2005).

In a habeas corpus proceeding with regard to a defendant's conviction for murder and receiving the death sentence, a jury's determination that the defendant was not mentally retarded was upheld as a rational trier of fact could have found that the defendant failed to meet the burden of proof that the defendant was mentally retarded by a preponderance of the evidence since the evidence showed that the jury heard evidence regarding six intelligence quotient (IQ) tests administered to the defendant during the defendant's lifetime, with scores of 78, 84, 85, 68, 66 (which, due to a mathematical error, should have been 70), and 89; expert testimony established that IQ scores between 70 and 84, while indicating borderline intellectual functioning, did not indicate mental retardation; and there was testimony that the defendant checked out prison library books on a regular basis and was able to use the computer. Further, three state experts who examined the defendant opined that the defendant was not mentally retarded and three experts for the defendant disagreed and, although evidence was adduced indicating that the defendant exhibited brain dysfunction, the defendant's own expert testified that there was no way to determine what caused the dysfunction and that a person can have brain dysfunction without being mentally retarded, with that expert also testifying that the use of drugs and alcohol can have a significant impact on brain function and that the defendant had reported using drugs and alcohol. Rogers v. State, 282 Ga. 659, 653 S.E.2d 31 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1311, 128 S. Ct. 1882, 170 L. Ed. 2d 747, reh'g denied, 554 U.S. 930, 128 S. Ct. 2988, 171 L. Ed. 2d 907 (2008), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Jury Charge

No "guilty but mentally ill" verdict for misdemeanor. — Trial court erred in permitting the jury to consider a verdict of guilty but mentally ill on a misdemeanor count of making harassing telephone calls as that verdict is available only in felony cases. Converting, on appeal, the verdict to guilty would have constituted an impermissible substantive change in the verdict, violative of O.C.G.A. § 17-9-40, and therefore the verdict had to be reversed. Levin v. State, 222 Ga. App. 123, 473 S.E.2d 582 (1996).

When jury charge as to insanity mandatory. — This section made it mandatory for the trial judge to instruct the jury in line with the statute's provisions. Bailey v. State, 210 Ga. 52, 77 S.E.2d 511 (1953).

When a defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, it is mandatory that the trial judge shall instruct the jury in line with the provisions of this section. Sanford v. State, 217 Ga. 825, 125 S.E.2d 478 (1962).

When the evidence makes insanity at the time of the commission of an alleged offense an issue, it is mandatory for the trial judge to charge the provisions of this section. Morgan v. State, 224 Ga. 604, 163 S.E.2d 690 (1968).

It was mandatory to charge the first part of this section relating to the form of the jury's verdict in a case involving insanity at the time of the commission of the act. Hulsey v. State, 233 Ga. 261, 210 S.E.2d 797 (1974).

Once the issue of insanity at the time of the commission of the alleged offense is raised by the evidence it is mandatory upon the trial judge to charge the jury under the provisions of this section relating to the form of the verdict in case the jury should find the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity. Williams v. State, 237 Ga. 399, 228 S.E.2d 806 (1976); Moore v. State, 142 Ga. App. 145, 235 S.E.2d 577 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 requires that in all criminal trials when an accused contends that the accused was insane or mentally incompetent at the time the acts charged against the accused were committed that the trial judge instruct the jury that in case of acquittal on such contention to specify in the jury's verdict that an acquittal on account thereof is because of mental incompetence or insanity at the time of the commission of the act. Neal v. State, 160 Ga. App. 498, 287 S.E.2d 399 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Bangs v. State, 198 Ga. App. 404, 401 S.E.2d 599 (1991).

Jury Charge (Cont'd)

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 mandates that the charge set forth in subparagraph (b)(3)(B) shall be given and the trial court erred by failing to give the charge. Spraggins v. State, 258 Ga. 32, 364 S.E.2d 861 (1988).

Trial court did not err in giving the instructions mandated by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(b)(3), as such ensured that the jury did not improperly concern itself with the lesser-known punishments associated with an insanity defense. Foster v. State, 306 Ga. 587, 832 S.E.2d 346 (2019).

Erroneous but harmless charge. — Since mental illness is not an element of the underlying offense, the burden of persuasion as to that issue is on the defendant. Further, the statutory requirement that mental illness be proved beyond a reasonable doubt is not constitutionally infirm. When the trial court instructs the jury that the court would be authorized to find the defendant guilty but mentally ill if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty, but believed by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant was mentally ill at the time of the commission of the offense, such a charge, while erroneous, has the effect of reducing the burden the defendant bears of showing mental illness, is beneficial, and does not require reversal. Hood v. State, 187 Ga. App. 88, 369 S.E.2d 348 (1988).

Trial court's instruction that if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty and if the jury also believed by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant was mentally ill at the time of the offense, then the jury would be authorized to find the defendant guilty but mentally ill, was erroneous, but harmless. Mitchell v. State, 187 Ga. App. 40, 369 S.E.2d 487, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 369 S.E.2d 487 (1988).

Even though the charge did not adequately instruct the jury concerning the alternative verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, the error was harmless because no evidence was presented to support such a verdict. McDuffie v. State, 210 Ga. App. 112, 435 S.E.2d 452 (1993).

Even though the verdict form had erroneously provided the option of "guilty but mentally ill" instead of "guilty but mentally retarded," the court's curative actions were sufficient to render the error harmless. Lyons v. State, 271 Ga. 639, 522 S.E.2d 225 (1999).

Though the trial court erred in charging the jury in defendant's murder trial by including the language in the Standard Pattern Jury Instruction on mental retardation that improperly added "at the time of the commission of the offense," no reversible error occurred because the trial court also included the requirement that the impairments in adaptive behavior had to manifest during defendant's developmental period. Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 896, 126 S. Ct. 229, 163 L. Ed. 2d 214 (2005).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 does not unconstitutionally shift the burden of proof. Because mental illness is not an element of the underlying offense, the defendant bears the burden of persuasion on that issue; and because a state may constitutionally require a criminal defendant to prove an insanity defense beyond a reasonable doubt, the provision in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(c)(2) that mental illness be proved beyond a reasonable doubt is not constitutionally infirm. Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1132, 105 S. Ct. 816, 83 L. Ed. 2d 809 (1985); Hood v. State, 187 Ga. App. 88, 369 S.E.2d 348 (1988).

Statute places no burden on a defendant to prove that the defendant is not mentally ill, or that the defendant is guilty but mentally ill. The burden is on the state to prove that the defendant is guilty of the crime charged, including the requisite element of intent, beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden is on the defendant to prove defendant is not guilty by reason of insanity by a preponderance of the evidence. This latter requirement is constitutional. Keener v. State, 254 Ga. 699, 334 S.E.2d 175 (1985).

If the defendant pleads insanity, has placed the defendant's mental health in issue, and presumably has introduced evidence of the defendant's mental illness, this does not constitute impermissible burden shifting for the court to charge the jury that it may consider a verdict of guilty but mentally ill. Cooper v. State, 253 Ga. 736, 325 S.E.2d 137 (1985).

Failure to give such mandatory instruction is error. Sanford v. State, 217 Ga. 825, 125 S.E.2d 478 (1962).

Failure to give a charge to the jury when required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 (3)(b) is reversible error. Guilford v. State, 258 Ga. 253, 368 S.E.2d 116 (1988).

Giving a summary rather than a complete charge on insanity and mental illness as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 (3) was error. Moore v. State, 217 Ga. App. 207, 456 S.E.2d 708 (1995).

Failure to instruct on "guilty but retarded" was harmless error. — Charge on the guilty but mentally retarded option under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(c) was mandatory, but failure to charge was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, since the psychiatrist testified that the defendant was highly articulate, well-spoken and very bright, and that the defendant was so articulate and coherent that the psychiatrist had no reason to suspect mental retardation and the defendant presented no evidence to the contrary. Roberts v. State, 257 Ga. App. 296, 570 S.E.2d 708 (2002).

Failure to instruct on "guilty but mentally retarded" reversible error. — When the defendant's primary defense alleged mental incompetence, and expert testimony advanced that the defendant was mentally retarded, the trial court's failure to instruct the jury that the jury could consider a verdict of guilty but mentally retarded in addition to verdicts of guilty, not guilty, not guilty by reason of insanity, and guilty but mentally ill was reversible error. Mack v. State, 206 Ga. App. 402, 425 S.E.2d 671 (1992).

Failure to properly instruct jury requires grant of new trial. Bailey v. State, 210 Ga. 52, 77 S.E.2d 511 (1953).

Instruction at sentencing phase not authorized. — In a prosecution for malice murder, the trial court did not err in refusing to charge at the sentencing phase that the jury could not return a death sentence if the jury found by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant was mentally retarded; the procedure to foreclose the execution of mentally retarded defendants had been followed at the guilt-innocence phase of the trial when the jury rejected a "guilty but mentally retarded" verdict and, at the sentencing phase, the issue of the defendant's purported mental retardation was no longer conclusive as to the defendant's sentence, but was merely one of the mitigating factors which the jury would be authorized to consider. Burgess v. State, 264 Ga. 777, 450 S.E.2d 680 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1133, 115 S. Ct. 2559, 132 L. Ed. 2d 813 (1995).

If there is no evidence to support a charge on insanity under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-3-2 and 16-3-3, then a charge under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131, with regard to the defense of insanity, never arises. Shirley v. State, 149 Ga. App. 194, 253 S.E.2d 787 (1979).

Because the defendant failed to present any evidence from which a jury could conclude that the defendant did not know right from wrong when the defendant committed the criminal acts, the trial court did not err in declining to charge the jury pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(b)(1)(C) that the defendant could be found not guilty by reason of insanity under O.C.G.A. § 16-3-2; the defendant introduced no evidence of insanity, only lay witness testimony about generalized problems. McBride v. State, 314 Ga. App. 725, 725 S.E.2d 844 (2012).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed based on the defense attorney not requesting a jury charge of not guilty by reason of insanity because the attorney testified at the hearing on the motion for a new trial that the attorney considered it but found no evidence to support such a defense theory; thus, it was reasonable trial strategy. Hosley v. State, 322 Ga. App. 425, 746 S.E.2d 133 (2013).

Counsel not ineffective for not raising issue of defendant's mental health. — Because the defendant produced no expert testimony at the motion for new trial showing that a psychological evaluation would have aided an insanity defense, the defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective for failing to investigate and raise the issue of the defendant's mental health rested on speculation and failed for lack of demonstrated prejudice. Perkins v. State, 328 Ga. App. 508, 759 S.E.2d 626 (2014).

Jury Charge (Cont'd)

If the defendant did not admit to committing the act charged. — If the defendant did not admit to committing any act that constitutes aggravated assault on a peace officer, the defendant did not establish the evidentiary foundation necessary for charging the jury on the affirmative defense of insanity. Kelley v. State, 235 Ga. App. 177, 509 S.E.2d 110 (1998).

It was mandatory to charge the first part of former Code 1933, § 27-1503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131) relating to the form of the jury's verdict. Printup v. State, 142 Ga. App. 42, 234 S.E.2d 840 (1977).

Jury charge as to form of verdict is only mandatory charge. — Only portion of this section which was mandatory for the judge to charge is that part dealing with the form of the verdict. Albert v. State, 152 Ga. App. 708, 263 S.E.2d 685 (1979).

Charging entire language of section. — While inappropriate, it was not harmful error when the court charges the entire language of this section. Printup v. State, 142 Ga. App. 42, 234 S.E.2d 840 (1977).

Trial court did not err when the court substituted the words "became clear" for "manifested" with regard to the statutory definition of mental retardation contained within O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(a)(3) because the terms "manifested" and "became clear" are synonymous under those circumstances. Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 896, 126 S. Ct. 229, 163 L. Ed. 2d 214 (2005).

Charging of provisions relating to consequences of acquittal for insanity. — It was inappropriate to charge the part of former Code 1933, § 27-1503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131) relating to the consequences of a verdict of acquittal for insanity by the jury, but charging the latter part of that section and Ga. L. 1969, p. 505 (see O.C.G.A. § 37-3-85) in such a case, though inappropriate, does not amount to harmful error requiring a reversal of the judgment. Hulsey v. State, 233 Ga. 261, 210 S.E.2d 797 (1974).

Charging the part of former Code 1933, § 27-1503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131) and Ga. L. 1969, p. 505 (see O.C.G.A. § 37-3-85), relating to the consequences of acquittal for insanity, though inappropriate, does not amount to harmful error requiring a reversal of the judgment. Coker v. State, 234 Ga. 555, 216 S.E.2d 782 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S. Ct. 2861, 53 L. Ed. 2d 982 (1977).

If the substance of former Code 1933, § 27-1503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131) was sufficiently charged, it was not necessary to charge that section in haec verba. Johnston v. State, 232 Ga. 268, 206 S.E.2d 468 (1974).

Not including mandatory language not reversible error. — Court's failure to charge the mandatory language of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(b)(3)(A) (proceedings upon plea of insanity), by failing to include the phrase "if ever" when explaining when the court is allowed to release the defendant from a mental health facility, was not reversible error, nor did the statute deprive the defendant of a fair trial or effective assistance of counsel. The charge given specified that the court would retain control over the defendant's release and did not imply that the court would be required at some point to order the defendant's release. Levin v. State, 222 Ga. App. 123, 473 S.E.2d 582 (1996).

Although exclusion of the words "if ever" is harmless error in certain contexts, the better practice is to give the charge exactly as provided in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131. Griffin v. State, 267 Ga. 586, 481 S.E.2d 223 (1997).

Subsequent disposition of the prisoner need not be explained to the jury. Biddy v. State, 138 Ga. App. 4, 225 S.E.2d 448 (1976).

Informing jury of consequences of verdict. — Absent exceptional circumstances not present here, witnesses in a trial on the issue of the defendant's mental retardation should not be examined or cross-examined in such a manner as to inject sentencing issues into the case, and the jury should not be informed that if the jury finds the defendant mentally retarded, the defendant's death sentence will be vacated. State v. Patillo, 262 Ga. 259, 417 S.E.2d 139 (1992).

Because the prosecutor did not inform the jury that the defendant could not receive a death sentence if found to be guilty but mentally retarded, and the trial court correctly charged the jury on the sentencing consequences of such a verdict, no reversible error occurred as a result of the district attorney stating during the guilt-innocence phase of closing argument that the defendant was not mentally retarded and couldn't hide behind it. Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 896, 126 S. Ct. 229, 163 L. Ed. 2d 214 (2005).

Omitting statutory language in jury charge. — If the charge as given by the trial court provided sufficient and proper guidelines for determining the defendant's guilt or innocence with regard to the defense of insanity, there was no error in the trial court's omission of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 from the court's charge. Taylor v. State, 174 Ga. App. 323, 329 S.E.2d 625 (1985).

Charge held proper. — Trial court correctly charged the jury that the defendant's inability to evaluate the quality and consequences of the defendant's acts to the same degree as a normal or average person would not excuse the defendant if the defendant was able to distinguish between right and wrong. Adams v. State, 254 Ga. 481, 330 S.E.2d 869 (1985).

Improper charge held reversible error. — Reversal was required when the trial court, in charging under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131, failed to define "mentally ill" and "mentally retarded" and failed to state that the defendant would be incarcerated if the defendant were found to be guilty but mentally ill or guilty but mentally retarded. The court could not conclude that the jury was not misled or confused. Foster v. State, 283 Ga. 47, 656 S.E.2d 838 (2008).

Instruction adequate regarding charge of "guilty but mentally ill." — See Ellis v. State, 176 Ga. App. 384, 336 S.E.2d 281 (1985).

Instruction when both defense of insanity and guilty but mentally ill raised. — When the trial court charges the jury on the defense of insanity at the time of the crime, O.C.G.A. §§ 16-3-2 and 16-3-3, and on guilty but mentally ill at the time of the crime, O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131, the trial court must make clear to the jury in the court's charge that if the jury finds the defendant did not have the mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong (or acted because of delusional compulsion), the jury must find the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity and must not find the defendant guilty but mentally ill. Keener v. State, 254 Ga. 699, 334 S.E.2d 175 (1985).

Charge stating that a verdict of "guilty but mentally ill" could be based upon a finding that defendant "committed the act alleged" and was mentally ill, was only a partially correct statement of the law; in addition to a finding that the defendant "committed the act alleged" and was mentally ill, a verdict of "guilty but mentally ill" must also be based upon a finding that the defendant was not legally insane and that the act was, therefore, a "crime" for which the defendant could be found "guilty." Foote v. State, 265 Ga. 58, 455 S.E.2d 579 (1995).

Instruction ambiguous on custody and control. — Instruction to jury that a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity would discharge the defendant from the offense charged, and the defendant "would be committed to the Department of Human Resources until he is no longer a danger to himself or others" was ambiguous with regard to the crucial issue of who would have custody and control of the defendant, and therefore constituted reversible error. Prophitt v. State, 183 Ga. App. 332, 358 S.E.2d 892 (1987).

Although the defendant suffered organic brain damage from an auto accident, the defendant was not deprived of defendant's Sixth Amendment right to defend oneself and develop substantive evidence at trial by the court's refusal to allow the defense to present evidence pertaining to the defendant's mental faculties, relevant to the issue of intent and the defendant's defenses of entrapment and coercion, and by a charge to the jury on guilty but mentally ill. Holder v. State, 194 Ga. App. 790, 391 S.E.2d 808 (1990).

Jury Charge (Cont'd)

Counsel not ineffective for failing to pursue affirmative defenses of insanity or mental illness. — Defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury instruction on insanity or mental illness because the record indicated that trial counsel actually requested a charge on guilty but mentally ill that tracked O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131, although the record did not indicate why the charge was not given; and, even assuming trial counsel withdrew the request or waived the charge, counsel testified at the motion for new trial hearing that counsel made a strategic decision not to pursue the affirmative defenses of insanity or mental illness as the defendant maintained that the defendant did not commit the murder; and the evaluator had not concluded that the defendant was insane at the time of the murder. Smith v. State, 306 Ga. 556, 832 S.E.2d 379 (2019).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Department's authority to transfer patients. — This section authorized the Department of Human Resources to make intrastate hospital transfers of persons found not guilty by reason of insanity. Only when such proposed transfers were to be out of this state must the permission of the superior court be obtained. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-44.

When the contemplated transfer will be to a hospital in another state, out of the jurisdiction of the courts of this state, the superior court needs to be consulted so that the court can issue appropriate orders relative to retention of jurisdiction, discharge procedures, and other pertinent matters. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-44.

Scope of court supervision of discharge of criminally-committed patients. — This section gave the court more supervision over the final discharge of criminally-committed patients than over civilly-committed patients by requiring the criminally-committed patient to petition the committing court for the patient's release. This discharge supervision was not diminished by the authority of the Department of Human Resources to select the hospital to which criminally-committed patients were initially committed. Similarly, there was no further diminution of the court's role by granting to the department the authority to select the hospital to which the patient was later transferred so long as the second hospital was within the state. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-44.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 33 et seq., 43 et seq.

ALR. — Constitutionality of statutes relating to determination of plea of insanity in criminal case, 67 A.L.R. 1451.

Constitutionality of statute relating to insanity as defense to crime, 74 A.L.R. 265.

Jurisdiction of proceedings for restoration to competency of one who has allegedly regained sanity after an adjudication of incompetency, 121 A.L.R. 1509.

Right of appeal in proceeding for restoration to competency, 122 A.L.R. 541.

Investigation of present sanity to determine whether accused should be put, or continue, on trial, 142 A.L.R. 961.

Irresistible impulse as excuse for crime, 173 A.L.R. 391.

Insanity of accused at time of commission of offense, not raised at trial, as ground for habeas corpus or coram nobis after conviction, 29 A.L.R.2d 703.

Validity and construction of statutes providing for psychiatric examination of accused to determine mental condition, 32 A.L.R.2d 434.

Requirement of unanimity of verdict in proceedings to determine sanity of one accused of crime, 42 A.L.R.2d 1468.

Counsel's right, in consulting with accused as client, to be accompanied by psychiatrist, psychologist, hypnotist, or similar practitioner, 72 A.L.R.2d 1120.

Release of one committed to institution as consequence of acquittal of crime on ground of insanity, 95 A.L.R.2d 54.

Instructions in criminal case in which defendant pleads insanity as to his hospital confinement in the event of acquittal, 11 A.L.R.3d 737.

Appealability of orders or rulings, prior to final judgment in criminal case, as to accused's mental competency, 16 A.L.R.3d 714.

Modern status of rules as to burden and sufficiency of proof of mental irresponsibility in criminal case, 17 A.L.R.3d 146.

Validity of statutory provision for commitment to mental institution of one acquitted of crime on ground of insanity without formal determination of mental condition at time of acquittal, 50 A.L.R.3d 144.

Admissibility on issue of sanity of expert opinion based partly on medical, psychological, or hospital records, 55 A.L.R.3d 551.

Necessity or propriety of bifurcated criminal trial on issue of insanity defense, 1 A.L.R.4th 884.

Validity of conditions imposed when releasing person committed to institution as consequence of acquittal of crime on ground of insanity, 2 A.L.R.4th 934.

Admissibility of testimony regarding spontaneous declarations made by one incompetent to testify at trial, 15 A.L.R.4th 1043.

Competency to stand trial of criminal defendant diagnosed as "mentally retarded" — modern cases, 23 A.L.R.4th 493.

Mental or emotional disturbance as defense to or mitigation of charges against attorney in disciplinary proceeding, 26 A.L.R.4th 995.

"Guilty but mentally ill" statutes: validity and construction, 71 A.L.R.4th 702.

Power of state trial court in criminal case to change venue on its own motion, 74 A.L.R.4th 1023.

Right of state prison authorities to administer neuroleptic or antipsychotic drugs to prisoner without his or her consent—state cases, 75 A.L.R.4th 1124.

Instructions in state criminal case in which defendant pleads insanity as to hospital confinement in event of acquittal, 81 A.L.R.4th 659.

Propriety of imposing capital punishment on mentally retarded individuals, 20 A.L.R.5th 177.

Propriety of transferring patient found not guilty by reason of insanity to less restrictive confinement, 43 A.L.R.5th 777.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client — issues of incompetency, 70 A.L.R.5th 1.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client — pretrial conduct or conduct at unspecified time regarding issues of insanity, 72 A.L.R.5th 109.

Qualification of nonmedical psychologist to testify as to mental condition or competency, 72 A.L.R.5th 529.

Extended commitment of one committed to institution as consequence of acquittal of crime on ground of insanity, 52 A.L.R.6th 567.

Part 3

Change of Venue

Cross references. — Venue generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II and § 17-2-2.

Law reviews. — For article, "Rule of Law Doesn't Just Happen," see 16 (No. 2) Ga. St. B.J. 24 (2010).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discretion of court in ruling on venue motions. — Grant or denial of motions for change of venue in criminal cases lies largely within the discretion of the trial judge. The exercise of that discretion will not be reversed on appeal unless it is made to appear that there has been an abuse of discretion. Jarrell v. State, 234 Ga. 410, 216 S.E.2d 258 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3223, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 504 et seq.

C.J.S. — 22 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Dismissal, nolle prosequi, or mistrial after change of venue in criminal case, as affecting jurisdiction or power of courts of respective districts as to subsequent proceedings, 18 A.L.R. 714.

Constitutionality of statute for prosecution of offense in county other than that in which it was committed, 76 A.L.R. 1034.

Change of venue by state in criminal case, 46 A.L.R.3d 295.

Choice of venue to which transfer is to be had, where change is sought because of local prejudice, 50 A.L.R.3d 760.

Power or duty of prosecuting attorney to proceed with prosecution after change of venue, 60 A.L.R.3d 864.

17-7-150. Procedures for change of venue; transfer of case; appeal from denial of change of venue.

(a)(1) The defendant, in any criminal case in which a trial by jury is provided, may move in writing for a change of venue, whenever, in the defendant's or defense counsel's judgment, an impartial jury cannot be obtained in the county where the crime is alleged to have been committed. Upon the hearing of the motion it shall not be necessary to examine all persons in the county liable to serve on juries, but the judge shall hear evidence by affidavit or oral testimony in support of or against the motion. If, from the evidence submitted, the judge is satisfied that an impartial jury cannot be obtained to try the case, the judge shall grant a change in venue; the judge shall transfer the case to any county that may be agreed upon by the prosecuting attorney and the defendant or the defense counsel, to be tried in the county agreed upon. The judge has the discretion to reject any county agreed upon; if a county is not thus agreed upon, or if the judge, in the exercise of discretion, rejects a county agreed upon, the judge shall select such county as in the judge's judgment will afford a fair and impartial jury to try the case and have it transferred accordingly.

(2) In the exercise of such discretion, the judge shall consult with the chief superior court judge of the circuit in which a county of transfer lies and consider the following factors:

(A) The existing criminal and civil trial calendars of the transfer county;

(B) The frequency of use as a transfer county;

(C) The estimated length of trial;

(D) The proposed date of trial;

(E) Whether or not the jury is to be sequestered;

(F) Which county shall be responsible for court security, prisoner security, bailiffs, jailers, and clerks of court personnel;

(G) Jury transportation;

(H) Securing hotel accommodations in the event of jury sequestration;

(I) Securing of meals for jurors and other court personnel;

(J) Which county will guarantee and pay vendors for services rendered;

(K) The necessity for deposit or prepayment of expenses by the county of the crime venue; and

(L) All other matters which reasonably may affect the orderly administration of justice in the transfer county. In the event of disagreement between the trial judge and the chief judge of the transfer circuit, the district administrative judge for the proposed transfer of venue shall have final responsibility for resolving the dispute.

(3) Either by the agreement of the defense counsel, the prosecuting attorney, and the judge or by the exercise of discretion by the judge the trial jury may be selected from qualified jurors of the transfer county, although the trial of the criminal case may take place in the county of the venue of the alleged crime. In the exercise of discretion, to select the jury in the transfer county but to try the case in the county of venue of the alleged crime, the judge shall consult with the chief superior court judge of the circuit in which the county of transfer lies and consider all of the factors provided in subparagraphs (A) through (L) of paragraph (2) of this subsection as well as the following factors:

(A) The hardship of sequestration a distance from home on the jurors;

(B) The comparison of court space available;

(C) The comparison of security, jail, clerical, and support staff;

(D) The costs to conduct the trial in each place;

(E) The impact of trial on the orderly administration of justice in each county;

(F) The impact on witnesses;

(G) The availability of hotel accommodations and meals for jurors in each county;

(H) The effect on the prosecuting attorney and defense counsel in each county; and

(I) All other matters which would afford a fair trial and the orderly administration of justice.

In the event of disagreement between the trial judge and the chief judge of the transfer circuit, the district administrative judge for the proposed transfer of venue shall have final responsibility for resolving the dispute.

(b) The judge of the court in whose jurisdiction a crime is alleged to have been committed may change the venue for trial of the case on his own motion whenever, in his judgment, there is danger of violence being committed on the defendant, if carried back to, or allowed to remain in the county where the crime is alleged to have been committed. If a motion is made by the defendant for a change of venue, the judge shall hear the motion at such time and place as the judge may direct. If the evidence submitted shall reasonably show that there is probability or danger of violence, it shall be mandatory on the judge to change the venue to such other county as, in his judgment, will reasonably avoid violence.

(c) Notwithstanding other laws, the denial of a motion to change venue shall be appealable immediately only with a certificate of immediate review. Otherwise, the denial shall be appealed with the merits of the case.

History. — Ga. L. 1895, p. 70, § 2; Penal Code 1895, § 939; Penal Code 1910, § 964; Ga. L. 1911, p. 74, § 1; Code 1933, § 27-1201; Code 1933, §§ 27-1201, 27-1202, enacted by Ga. L. 1972, p. 536, § 1; Ga. L. 1995, p. 1292, § 12.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1995, p. 1292, § 14, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the amendment to this Code section is applicable to all criminal cases in which the county of transfer has not been designated by court order.

Cross references. — Change of venue in criminal grand jury investigation, § 15-12-82. Payment of costs and expenses when venue changed, § 17-11-5. Procedure for transfer of person in custody of sheriff upon change of venue, § 42-4-11.

Law reviews. — For article, "Criminal Venue and Related Problems," see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 331 (1966). For article, "Rule of Law Doesn't Just Happen," see 16 (No. 2) Ga. St. B.J. 24 (2010).

For case note, "Coleman v. Kemp: The Problem of Pretrial Publicity and its Effect on the Alday Murder Cases," see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 1477 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Juror Impartiality
Danger of Violence to Defendant
Appellate Review

General Consideration

Constitutionality — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-150 (a)(3) is not unconstitutional. Pruitt v. State, 270 Ga. 745, 514 S.E.2d 639, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 502, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1999).

Conflicting Superior Court Rule unenforceable. — Because Uniform Superior Court Rule 19.2(B) conflicts with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-150(a), a trial court may not return jurors from the county of venue to the original county for trial. Hardwick v. State, 264 Ga. 161, 442 S.E.2d 236 (1994).

Venue determination reserved for trier of fact. — Trial court erred by making a per se determination of venue and granting the defendant's motion to transfer the case to a different county within the response to the defendant's motion to suppress because a determination of venue was reserved for the finder of fact at trial. State v. Hasson, 334 Ga. App. 1, 778 S.E.2d 15 (2015).

To establish that a change of venue is warranted, a defendant must show either circumstances which are prejudicial to the defendant's right to an impartial trial or actual jury partiality. Brooks v. Francis, 716 F.2d 780 (11th Cir. 1983).

Change of venue in death penalty cases. — Trial courts will order a change of venue for death penalty trials in those cases in which a defendant can make a substantive showing of the likelihood of prejudice by reason of extensive publicity. Jones v. State, 261 Ga. 665, 409 S.E.2d 642 (1991).

To prevail on a motion for change of venue, a defendant must show either that the setting of the trial was inherently prejudicial or that the jury selection process showed actual prejudice to a degree that rendered a fair trial impossible. Cheeks v. State, 203 Ga. App. 47, 416 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 336 (1992).

Change of venue is in court's discretion. — Question as to whether venue should be changed addresses itself to the sound discretion of the trial court. Reaves v. State, 242 Ga. 542, 250 S.E.2d 376 (1978); Johnson v. State, 242 Ga. 649, 250 S.E.2d 394 (1978).

Grant or denial of a motion for change of venue lies largely within the discretion of the trial court. Attaway v. State, 149 Ga. App. 693, 256 S.E.2d 94 (1979).

Because the granting of the defendant's motion for a change of venue had been based solely on the consent of the parties and there was no finding by the trial court that an impartial jury could not be obtained in the county and no transfer county had ever been designated, the court did not err by ordering an evidentiary hearing, and the court had the discretion to order that venue remain in the county. Morrow v. State, 272 Ga. 691, 532 S.E.2d 78 (2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 944, 121 S. Ct. 1408, 149 L. Ed. 2d 350 (2001).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in moving Bibb County jurors to Chatham County and in sequestering the jurors because local media coverage necessitated the jury's sequestration; the defendant had no legal right to demand that the jurors be instructed that the jurors had been brought to Chatham County over the defendant's objection. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

In a murder case wherein the defendant killed the defendant's father and brother and was involved with the defendant's brother's wife, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a change of venue because the defendant only alleged that there was a lot of gossip, rumor, and innuendo about the defendant's affair with the defendant's sister-in-law, but the defendant did not claim that the stories about the affair were untrue or even disputed at trial, and the defendant failed to show that the pretrial publicity was inflammatory or created a hostile atmosphere. Heidt v. State, 292 Ga. 343, 736 S.E.2d 384 (2013).

Counsel was not ineffective in failing to move for change of venue when the record showed that the decision was based on sound trial strategy and, even if the parties had agreed to change venue to a particular county, the trial court would have had to determine venue. Hammond v. State, 264 Ga. 879, 452 S.E.2d 745, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 829, 116 S. Ct. 100, 133 L. Ed. 2d 54 (1995).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Since the parties could not agree as to when the case should be transferred upon the defendant's first motion for change of venue and the judge exercised judicial discretion in selecting the county for trial of the case, and, then, when the defendant made no effort to question prospective jurors about the jurors' prior knowledge of the case, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny the defendant's second motion to change venue. Taylor v. State, 219 Ga. App. 475, 465 S.E.2d 473 (1995).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-150(a)(1) in transferring venue since: (1) the parties could not agree on a transfer county; (2) the new venue was in the same judicial circuit as the county in which the defendant committed the crime; (3) the new county had a similar population and racial breakdown; and (4) the main newspaper of the county in which the defendant committed the crime had a limited circulation in the new county. Terrell v. State, 276 Ga. 34, 572 S.E.2d 595 (2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 835, 124 S. Ct. 88, 157 L. Ed. 2d 64 (2003).

Court's rejection of parties' agreement. — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-150(a) does not preclude the trial court from exercising the court's discretion to reject the parties' agreement regarding venue and to order venue in another county. Hardwick v. State, 264 Ga. 161, 442 S.E.2d 236 (1994).

Time for ruling on change of venue in death penalty cases. — Upon hearing a motion for change of venue, the trial court may reserve ruling until after voir dire responses. Jones v. State, 261 Ga. 665, 409 S.E.2d 642 (1991).

Order for change of venue is a judgment to that effect. — Order of the Supreme Court directing a change of venue is substantially a judgment to that effect. Graham v. State, 143 Ga. 440, 85 S.E. 328, 1917A Ann. Cas. 595 (1915).

County from which venue transferred loses jurisdiction. — When venue is changed, the county from which the case is transferred loses all jurisdiction to try the accused for the offense concerned. Johnston v. State, 118 Ga. 310, 45 S.E. 381 (1903).

County retains power to compel obedience of county's judgment changing venue. — Power of the court from which the case is thus transferred to compel obedience to the court's judgment so changing the venue is neither lost nor impaired. Ruffin v. State, 28 Ga. App. 40, 110 S.E. 311 (1921).

Jurisdiction under subsequent indictment for different offense is unimpaired. — When a subsequent indictment charges a different offense, the jurisdiction of the court of the county where the indictment is found is unimpaired by the change of venue under the former indictment. Ruffin v. State, 28 Ga. App. 40, 110 S.E. 311 (1921).

Petitioner bound by change of venue once obtained. — If a judgment of the superior court refusing to grant a change of venue is excepted to by the petitioner, and is reversed by the Supreme Court, and the change granted, the petitioner is bound by the decree and may not then demand to be tried in the original venue. Graham v. State, 143 Ga. 440, 85 S.E. 328, 1917A Ann. Cas. 595 (1915).

Procedure upon denial of motion. — If the accused moves for a change of venue and the motion is denied, the proper procedure is to except to the overruling of the accused's motion. Williford v. State, 121 Ga. 173, 48 S.E. 962 (1904).

Consideration of motions pending when new judge takes office. — When the term of office of a judge expires and a successor takes office pending a motion for a change of venue, the incoming judge should pass upon the motion in the light of the record presented to that judge. Marshall v. State, 20 Ga. App. 416, 93 S.E. 98 (1917).

Motion as evidence on trial of issues raised by motion. — Motion for change of venue, though sworn to, is not evidence on the trial of the issues raised by the motion unless it is formally introduced in evidence. Rawlings v. State, 33 Ga. App. 825, 127 S.E. 881, cert. denied, 33 Ga. App. 829 (1925).

This section makes no specific provision for the filing of an answer to a petition for change of venue, but does provide for a hearing on the issues. Robinson v. State, 86 Ga. App. 375, 71 S.E.2d 677 (1952).

Timeliness of state's response to petition. — Since there is no time set for the filing of an answer to such motion, the defendant cannot complain that a pleading, reducing the contentions of the state to writing and filed within 48 hours, is filed too late. Robinson v. State, 86 Ga. App. 375, 71 S.E.2d 677 (1952).

Standard of proof for petition to change venue. — If there is a greater weight of evidence in support of the petition for a change of venue than to the contrary, if the evidence inclines the mind to belief but leaves some room for doubt, and yet is sufficient to incline a reasonable and impartial mind to the movant's side of the issue rather than to the other, the motion for change of venue should be granted. It does not mean that the judge's mind shall be free from uncertainty and doubt. Johns v. State, 47 Ga. App. 58, 169 S.E. 688 (1933); Geer v. State, 54 Ga. App. 216, 187 S.E. 601 (1936).

Proof requirements for likelihood of violence and for jury fairness compared. — Requirement for showing a likelihood or probability of violence is considerably less stringent than that relative to the matter of whether a fair and impartial jury can be obtained. Whitus v. State, 112 Ga. App. 29, 143 S.E.2d 649 (1965).

Applicant for a change of venue on the ground that a fair and impartial jury cannot be obtained must show such by clear and convincing evidence. As to the ground of personal danger the showing required is much less stringent and if a feeling emerges, after considering all the evidence, that something untoward is likely to happen the application should be granted. In both instances, it is the duty of the trial judge to hear the evidence and find the facts of the matter. The judgment may not be disturbed unless it appears that the judge has manifestly violated the judge's duty. Pierce v. State, 125 Ga. App. 490, 188 S.E.2d 181 (1972).

Ineffective assistance of counsel not established. — Defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective with regard to a motion for a change of venue failed; the defendant had not shown that the jury was tainted and had not shown how live evidence or a citizen survey could have accomplished any more than the introduction in evidence of existing pretrial publicity or voir dire. Harvey v. State, 284 Ga. 8, 660 S.E.2d 528 (2008).

No evidence supporting change in venue. — See White v. State, 221 Ga. App. 860, 473 S.E.2d 539 (1996).

Trial court properly denied murder defendant's motion for change of venue under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-150(a) based on a 1983 manslaughter conviction; trial counsel acknowledged that no potential juror indicated that he or she was aware of the 1983 homicide. Harvey v. State, 284 Ga. 8, 660 S.E.2d 528 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to transfer venue of a defendant's trial on a felony murder charge because the defendant failed to show that the setting of the trial was inherently prejudicial due to inflammatory or incorrect pretrial publicity, and the defendant failed to demonstrate that the defendant could not receive a fair trial due to the prejudice of individual jurors. Edmond v. State, 283 Ga. 507, 661 S.E.2d 520 (2008).

Cited in Gunn v. State, 245 Ga. 359, 264 S.E.2d 862 (1980); Kesler v. State, 249 Ga. 462, 291 S.E.2d 497 (1982); Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984); Devier v. State, 250 Ga. 604, 323 S.E.2d 150 (1984); Blanks v. State, 254 Ga. 420, 330 S.E.2d 575 (1985); Whitehead v. State, 255 Ga. 526, 340 S.E.2d 885 (1986); Rower v. State, 264 Ga. 323, 443 S.E.2d 839 (1994); Glean v. State, 268 Ga. 260, 486 S.E.2d 172 (1997); Torres v. State, 272 Ga. 389, 529 S.E.2d 883 (2000); Lucas v. State, 274 Ga. 640, 555 S.E.2d 440 (2001); EHCA Cartersville, LLC v. Turner, 280 Ga. 333, 626 S.E.2d 482 (2006).

Juror Impartiality

Determination of impartiality generally. — On the hearing of evidence regarding the possibility of obtaining an impartial jury, the fair trial issue relates to a future thing. Being an issue which only the future can determine absolutely, it is necessarily a matter of opinion at the time when the testimony is being heard. Jones v. State, 101 Ga. App. 851, 115 S.E.2d 576 (1960).

Discretion of trial judge regarding decision as to whether impartial jury can be obtained. — Motion for a change of venue based upon the ground that an impartial jury cannot be obtained in the county where the crime was allegedly committed is addressed to the sound discretion of the presiding judge and will not be disturbed unless an abuse of discretion is shown. Grenoble v. State, 41 Ga. App. 663, 154 S.E. 304 (1930); Ledford v. State, 107 Ga. App. 244, 129 S.E.2d 555 (1963).

Juror Impartiality (Cont'd)

The decision as to whether or not the accused can obtain an impartial jury in the county in which the indictment was presented is essentially within the discretion of the trial judge and, unless this discretion is abused and the decision reached manifestly erroneous, the decision will not be reversed. Garrett v. State, 80 Ga. App. 118, 55 S.E.2d 672 (1949).

Test as to prejudicial publicity. — Test as to whether pretrial publicity has so prejudiced a case that an accused cannot receive a fair trial is whether the jurors summoned to try the case have formed fixed opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused from the pretrial publicity. Wilkes v. State, 238 Ga. 57, 230 S.E.2d 867 (1976); Godfrey v. State, 243 Ga. 302, 253 S.E.2d 710 (1979); Shinholster v. State, 150 Ga. App. 221, 257 S.E.2d 342 (1979); Cochran v. State, 151 Ga. App. 478, 260 S.E.2d 391 (1979); Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983); Waters v. State, 248 Ga. 355, 283 S.E.2d 238 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983); Ponder v. State, 194 Ga. App. 446, 390 S.E.2d 869 (1990).

Test as to whether newspaper publicity has so prejudiced a case that an accused cannot receive a fair trial is whether the jurors summoned to try the case have formed fixed opinions as to guilt or innocence of the accused from reading such newspaper articles. Welch v. State, 237 Ga. 665, 229 S.E.2d 390 (1976); Reaves v. State, 242 Ga. 542, 250 S.E.2d 376 (1978).

Test as to whether unfavorable newspaper publicity had so prejudiced a case against one accused of a crime that a fair trial cannot be had is whether the jurors summoned to try the case have formed fixed opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused from reading such unfavorable newspaper publicity. Coleman v. State, 237 Ga. 84, 226 S.E.2d 911 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 909, 97 S. Ct. 1707, 52 L. Ed. 2d 394 (1977).

Test to determine if a change of venue is appropriate is whether the prospective jurors have formed fixed opinions as to appellant's guilt or innocence based upon reports in the media. Baker v. State, 245 Ga. 657, 266 S.E.2d 477 (1980).

Test is whether jurors can lay aside their impressions and opinions. — Test for determining whether adverse pretrial publicity has so affected the community that the defendant cannot receive a fair trial is whether the prospective jurors summoned to try the case can lay aside the jurors' impressions and opinions and render a verdict based on the evidence presented at trial. Coleman v. State, 237 Ga. 84, 226 S.E.2d 911 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 909, 97 S. Ct. 1707, 52 L. Ed. 2d 394 (1977); Johnson v. State, 242 Ga. 649, 250 S.E.2d 394 (1978).

Publicity is not grounds in itself for change of venue. — Widespread or even adverse publicity of a criminal incident is not in itself grounds to grant a change of venue. Coleman v. State, 237 Ga. 84, 226 S.E.2d 911 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 909, 97 S. Ct. 1707, 52 L. Ed. 2d 394 (1977); Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Prejudice resulting from news publicity. — Inference of prejudice requiring a change of venue is not to be drawn from the fact alone that newspapers published in the vicinity have contained articles descriptive of the offense or editorials denunciatory of the accused. Morgan v. State, 211 Ga. 172, 84 S.E.2d 365 (1954).

From the fact that two local newspapers gave a large amount of publicity to the case, it does not follow that such prejudice existed in the whole county as to make a fair and impartial trial impossible. Morgan v. State, 211 Ga. 172, 84 S.E.2d 365 (1954).

Mere fact that newspapers carried items and editorials stating that the defendant confessed to the crime for which the defendant stood indicted, or had published articles in regard to the defendant which were inflammatory in nature, would not of itself be sufficient to establish the fact that a fair and impartial trial could not be had in the county in question, without further alleging that the jurors who had been summoned to try the case had read the articles and formed a fixed opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant from reading such articles. Morgan v. State, 211 Ga. 172, 84 S.E.2d 365 (1954).

When the transcript revealed that although the defendant asked the jurors whether the jurors had heard of arrests of drug dealers, the defendant did not inquire whether the jurors could render an impartial decision despite whatever knowledge the jurors had gleaned from the media, the defendant failed to demonstrate the required prejudice, and the trial court did not err by denying the motion for a change of venue. Cheeks v. State, 203 Ga. App. 47, 416 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 336 (1992).

Defendant's motion for a change in venue was properly denied as the trial court reviewed the media coverage of the case and properly determined that the coverage would not affect the jurors' ability to remain impartial. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a defendant's motion for change of venue based upon pretrial publicity because the defendant failed to show that the pretrial publicity created an inherently prejudicial atmosphere or affected the jurors' ability to be fair and impartial. Holmes v. State, 284 Ga. 330, 667 S.E.2d 71 (2008).

Mere reference to the defendant in a newspaper article does not demand a finding that a need for change of venue exists. Miller v. State, 141 Ga. App. 382, 233 S.E.2d 460 (1977).

Remoteness of time between trial and adverse pretrial publicity is one factor in determining whether change of venue is required. Berryhill v. State, 249 Ga. 442, 291 S.E.2d 685, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 981, 103 S. Ct. 317, 74 L. Ed. 2d 293 (1982).

Effect of publicity regarding defendant's escape. — Courts will generally be less likely to closely scrutinize the prejudicial effect of publicity upon a defendant's trial in cases where that publicity is created by the defendant's escape attempt than in cases where the publicity stems from other sources. Goodman v. State, 255 Ga. 226, 336 S.E.2d 757 (1985).

Qualified jurors need not be totally ignorant of the facts and issues involved in order to guarantee that a defendant has a panel of impartial, indifferent jurors. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337 (1979).

Defendant is entitled to a panel of impartial jurors, but this does not require that the jurors be totally ignorant of the facts and issues involved. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983).

If no evidence of considerable publicity surrounding the incident to be tried has been shown to the court, the motion for change of venue is properly denied. Futch v. State, 151 Ga. App. 519, 260 S.E.2d 520 (1979).

If no showing is made that the veniremen have formed fixed opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the defendants from exposure to pretrial publicity, the trial court does not abuse the court's discretion in overruling a motion for change of venue. Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

Juror sufficiently impartial if juror can lay aside impression or opinion. — Mere existence of a preconceived notion as to the guilt or innocence of an accused, without more, is not sufficient to rebut the presumption of a prospective juror's impartiality. Rather, a juror's impartiality is sufficient if the juror can lay aside the juror's impression or opinion and render a verdict based on the evidence presented in court. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Juror's assurances that juror is equal to this task cannot be dispositive of the accused's rights, and it remains open to the defendant to demonstrate the actual existence of such an opinion in the mind of the juror as will raise the presumption of partiality. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d

Juror Impartiality (Cont'd)

337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

If 20 percent of veniremen are excused for partiality regarding guilt, a change of venue is not required due to jury prejudice regarding the guilt-innocence phase. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

When of the 89 prospective jurors who underwent voir dire, 17 were excused for bias and prejudice, three others were excused because those jurors had participated in the establishment of or had contributed to a reward fund with respect to the case, and these 20 jurors constituted only 22 percent of the entire panel, this percentage corroborated the absence of such prejudicial publicity as would require the grant of a motion for change of venue. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

If there is no reason to presume prejudice, the trial court does not abuse the court's discretion in refusing a pre-voir dire motion to change venue. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

If there is no evidence that any juror has formed a fixed and unchangeable opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant such as would not yield readily to the testimony, it cannot be said that the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the motion for change of venue. Hopkins v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 236, 215 S.E.2d 241 (1975).

If the evidence greatly preponderates that an impartial jury can be obtained to try the case, it is not an abuse of discretion by the trial court to deny a motion based upon this ground. Pinkston v. State, 80 Ga. App. 268, 55 S.E.2d 877 (1949).

Relevance of opinion evidence. — If opinion evidence is relevant to show that the defendant may obtain a fair trial, opinion evidence is also relevant when offered to show that the defendant may not obtain a fair trial when the facts upon which the opinion is based are stated. Jones v. State, 101 Ga. App. 851, 115 S.E.2d 576 (1960).

If the evidence in support of a motion consists of the opinions of witnesses of the county where venue has been laid, unsupported by facts upon which the opinions are based, the trial judge is not bound, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, to grant the change when in the judge's opinion the change of venue is not required in order for the defendant to procure a fair trial. Ponder v. Williams, 80 Ga. App. 145, 55 S.E.2d 668 (1949).

Allegation of bias and prejudice of trial court does not address itself to change of venue. — In a criminal case, a change of venue is predicated upon the determination of the trial judge that an impartial jury cannot be obtained in the county where the crime is alleged to have been committed. That ground of a motion for change of venue which alleges bias and prejudice on the part of the trial court does not address itself to a change of venue, but addresses itself to the disqualification of the trial judge. Wyciskala v. State, 147 Ga. App. 518, 249 S.E.2d 329 (1978).

Superior court judge lacks the authority to grant a change of venue on the judge's own motion in a criminal case and over defense objection, on the ground that a fair and impartial jury cannot be obtained in the county where the crime was allegedly committed. Patterson v. Faircloth, 256 Ga. 489, 350 S.E.2d 243 (1986), disapproving dicta in Wheeler v. State, 42 Ga. 306 (1871).

When motion asserting systematic exclusion of groups insufficient for appeal. — If counsel does not move to quash the indictments but rather on the morning the trial begins files a motion for change of venue complaining of systematic exclusion of blacks and women, such a motion is insufficient to preserve for appeal an assertion of error on the ground that the trial court erred in failing to quash the indictment or, in the alternative, failed to grant counsel a delay of the trial so counsel might have sufficient opportunity to prove counsel's claim of systematic exclusion of blacks and women from grand and petit jury. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

Danger of Violence to Defendant

Right of defendant and witnesses to freedom from intimidation and violence generally. — Any defendant is entitled to have the venue of the defendant's case laid in a county where the defendant and the defendant's witnesses are free from intimidation and violence, and when the defendant has the right to expect protection on behalf of oneself and the defendant's witnesses from all law enforcement agencies. Yancey v. State, 98 Ga. App. 797, 107 S.E.2d 265 (1959).

What constitutes violence. — Violence referred to in this section meant not only that physical violence threatened by mobs or other lawless elements, but also violence to the defendant's fundamental right to a fair trial. Yancey v. State, 98 Ga. App. 797, 107 S.E.2d 265 (1959).

This section was sufficiently broad to include danger or probability of violence to the defendant's attorney. Ferguson v. State, 104 Ga. App. 215, 121 S.E.2d 338 (1961).

"Probability" defined. — Probability is defined as likelihood or appearance, a resemblance of truth founded upon reason. Johns v. State, 47 Ga. App. 58, 169 S.E. 688 (1933).

Degree of evidence which would be sufficient to establish a danger of violence to the accused is a question of much difficulty, and which must necessarily vary so greatly with the circumstances of each case that it would be impossible to define its limits with exactitude. The danger may be obvious in some cases and latent in others and may be more threatening because the danger is unannounced. Pinkston v. State, 80 Ga. App. 268, 55 S.E.2d 877 (1949).

When the evidence fails to reasonably show the probability or danger of lynching or other violence, it is not error on the part of the judge to refuse to change the venue. Grenoble v. State, 41 Ga. App. 663, 154 S.E. 304 (1930); Goumas v. State, 44 Ga. App. 210, 160 S.E. 682 (1931); Morakis v. State, 72 Ga. App. 790, 35 S.E.2d 155 (1945), aff'd, 201 Ga. 425, 40 S.E.2d 120 (1946).

Duty of trial judge when probability of violence shown. — If the evidence reasonably shows that there is a probability of violence, then it shall be mandatory upon the judge to change the venue. Johns v. State, 47 Ga. App. 58, 169 S.E. 688 (1933); Pinkston v. State, 80 Ga. App. 268, 55 S.E.2d 877 (1949); Ledford v. State, 107 Ga. App. 244, 129 S.E.2d 555 (1963).

Under former Code 1933, § 27-1201 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-150), it was the duty of the trial judge, upon the judge's own motion or upon it being shown at a hearing on a motion for change of venue, that there is probability or danger of lynching, or other violence, to grant a change of venue. This provision was mandatory. Griffin v. State, 59 Ga. App. 333, 1 S.E.2d 41 (1939); Crane v. State, 94 Ga. App. 63, 93 S.E.2d 667 (1956), appeal dismissed, 213 Ga. 386, 98 S.E.2d 903 (1957); Ferguson v. State, 104 Ga. App. 215, 121 S.E.2d 338 (1961).

Georgia Laws 1911, p. 74, § 1, which amended Ga. L. 1895, p. 70, § 2, showed that the General Assembly was unwilling to leave change of venue, as it stood before that amendment, to the general determination of the judge as to whether a fair and impartial trial could be obtained. It passed this additional Act which did not merely confer upon the judge a power or discretionary right but placed upon the judge a solemn and mandatory duty. A reading of this amendment will show the imperative nature of the duty placed upon the judge if the evidence reasonably shows that there is a probability or danger of lynching or other violence. The judge's mind does not necessarily have to be free from uncertainty or doubt but if there exists in the judge's mind a probability that personal violence will be done the accused the judge should change the venue. Avery v. State, 83 Ga. App. 700, 64 S.E.2d 589 (1951), aff'd, 209 Ga. 116, 70 S.E.2d 716 (1952).

After all of the evidence is considered, if the mind of a reasonable man is left with the feeling that something untoward is likely to happen in the event of a trial of the defendants in the county where the crime was committed, the judge ought to move the trial by granting the motion. Whitus v. State, 112 Ga. App. 29, 143 S.E.2d 649 (1965).

Danger of Violence to Defendant (Cont'd)

State and county also have interest in removing threat of armed violence. — When there is doubt as to the threat of future armed violence, the welfare of the state, as well as that of the citizens of the county in which the alleged crime was committed, demands no less than the welfare of the individual defendant that such doubt should be removed. This can only be accomplished by a change of venue by which the state's case is in no way prejudiced and the society of this state as a whole in no way suffers. It is the province and duty of the courts, not only to punish lawlessness, but insofar as possible to guard against lawlessness, and a reasonable doubt as to the safety of the defendant, in the event of acquittal, should be resolved in the defendant's favor for the welfare of society as a whole by laying the venue in a county disassociated from the turbulence and rancor of the disturbances. Pinkston v. State, 80 Ga. App. 268, 55 S.E.2d 877 (1949).

Withdrawal or waiver of change of venue, once obtained, is not permitted. — When the accused has obtained, on the accused's motion, a change of venue from the county where the crime was alleged to have been committed to another county, on the ground that there was a probability or danger of violence to the accused, the accused cannot subsequently withdraw or waive the change of venue and demand a trial in the county of the offense. Geer v. State, 58 Ga. App. 424, 198 S.E. 829 (1938).

Determination of probability of violence is primarily a question for the judge. — While it is mandatory upon the judge to whom a petition for a change of venue is presented to change the venue if the evidence submitted reasonably shows that there is a probability of danger, of lynching or other violence, it is primarily a question for the judge, upon the hearing of such petition, to determine from the evidence whether or not such probability or danger of lynching or other violence exists. Wilburn v. State, 140 Ga. 138, 78 S.E. 819 (1913); Graham v. State, 141 Ga. 812, 82 S.E. 282 (1914); Nix v. State, 22 Ga. App. 136, 95 S.E. 534 (1918); Davis v. State, 23 Ga. App. 223, 98 S.E. 111 (1919); Broxton v. State, 24 Ga. App. 31, 99 S.E. 635 (1919); Ruffin v. State, 28 Ga. App. 40, 110 S.E. 311 (1921); Wilson v. State, 28 Ga. App. 574, 112 S.E. 295, cert. denied, 28 Ga. App. 820 (1922); Grenoble v. State, 41 Ga. App. 663, 154 S.E. 304 (1930); Goumas v. State, 44 Ga. App. 210, 160 S.E. 682 (1931); Griffin v. State, 59 Ga. App. 333, 1 S.E.2d 41 (1939); Morakis v. State, 72 Ga. App. 790, 35 S.E.2d 155 (1945), aff'd, 201 Ga. 425, 40 S.E.2d 120 (1946); Barronton v. State, 80 Ga. App. 44, 55 S.E.2d 252 (1949); Crane v. State, 94 Ga. App. 63, 93 S.E.2d 667 (1956), appeal dismissed, 213 Ga. 386, 98 S.E.2d 903 (1957); McGruder v. State, 96 Ga. App. 874, 102 S.E.2d 54 (1958).

Judge's discretion is coupled with a duty, and the Supreme Court may remedy the abuse of such discretion. Kennedy v. State, 141 Ga. 314, 80 S.E. 1012 (1914).

Appellate Review

Issue on review generally. — In determining whether the trial court erred in denying a change of venue, the reviewing court asks whether it was too clear and certain to admit of dispute that the court erred in refusing to change the venue, or whether it manifestly appears that the lower court erred in the court's judgment under the evidence. Geer v. State, 54 Ga. App. 216, 187 S.E. 601 (1936).

Test on appeal for reversal of trial court's decision. — Decision to grant a motion for a change of venue is largely within the trial court's discretion and the court's decision will be reversed on appeal only for an abuse of discretion. Allen v. State, 235 Ga. 709, 221 S.E.2d 405 (1975).

Decision to grant a change of venue motion lies within the discretion of the trial court and will not be reversed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. Welch v. State, 237 Ga. 665, 229 S.E.2d 390 (1976); Watson v. State, 147 Ga. App. 847, 250 S.E.2d 540 (1978); Shinholster v. State, 150 Ga. App. 221, 257 S.E.2d 342

(1979); Cochran v. State, 151 Ga. App. 478, 260 S.E.2d 391 (1979); Baker v. State, 245 Ga. 657, 266 S.E.2d 477 (1980); Waters v. State, 248 Ga. 355, 283 S.E.2d 238 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1983).

Fair trial issue is in the judge's discretion, and the judge's ruling will not be reversed unless manifestly abused. Miller v. State, 141 Ga. App. 382, 233 S.E.2d 460 (1977).

Test on appeal of a trial judge's order refusing a change of venue is whether the trial judge abused the judge's discretion in denying the change of venue. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Overruling of motion is not appealable absent a certificate of review. — Overruling of the motion for change of venue is an interlocutory order which is not an appealable judgment absent a certificate of review. Butler v. State, 127 Ga. App. 386, 193 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

In the absence of a certificate for immediate review, the denial of a motion for a change of venue under former Code 1933, § 27-1201 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-150) standing alone was not an appealable judgment under Ga. L. 1965, p. 18 (see O.C.G.A. T. 5, C. 6, Art. 2). Brooks v. State, 229 Ga. 593, 194 S.E.2d 256 (1972).

Appellant must exhaust peremptory challenges before overruling of motion is reversed on appeal. The general rule is that appellate courts will not reverse the trial court's overruling of a motion for change of venue when the appellant has not exhausted the appellant's peremptory challenges. Coleman v. State, 237 Ga. 84, 226 S.E.2d 911 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 909, 97 S. Ct. 1707, 52 L. Ed. 2d 394 (1977); Cochran v. State, 151 Ga. App. 478, 260 S.E.2d 391 (1979).

Review of the trial judge's finding should not be merely perfunctory, and simply because any citizen or county official states that the individual has not heard of any intended violence or expresses the opinion that the individual thought there was no danger, the reviewing court should not, as a matter of course, affirm the judgment denying a change of venue. Johns v. State, 47 Ga. App. 58, 169 S.E. 688 (1933).

Reversal requires showing that discretion was abused. — Granting of the change of venue is within the discretion of the court, and the Supreme Court will not control that discretion unless the discretion has been plainly and manifestly abused. Rawlins v. State, 124 Ga. 31, 52 S.E. 1 (1905), aff'd, 201 U.S. 638, 26 S. Ct. 560, 50 L. Ed. 899 (1906).

If after hearing evidence, the trial court is satisfied that a fair and impartial jury may be had in the county where the crime is alleged to have been committed, the court on appeal will not reverse the court's judgment refusing to change the venue unless it is made to appear that there has been an abuse of discretion. Grenoble v. State, 41 Ga. App. 663, 154 S.E. 304 (1930); Goumas v. State, 44 Ga. App. 210, 160 S.E. 682 (1931).

Before the Court of Appeals is authorized to reverse the judgment of the lower court in a proceeding to change venue, it must appear that such discretion was abused. Hartley v. State, 76 Ga. App. 390, 46 S.E.2d 71 (1948).

Trial court's finding that a defendant can receive a fair trial in the county in which the crime was committed must be upheld if not manifestly erroneous. Cheeks v. State, 203 Ga. App. 47, 416 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 336 (1992).

Jurisdiction on review. — Jurisdiction on review of all venue cases not involving capital convictions has been vested in the Court of Appeals and not the Supreme Court, provided no constitutional question was raised in the lower court. Humphrey v. State, 175 Ga. 666, 165 S.E. 587 (1932).

Finality of finding and judgment when evidence conflicts. — When the evidence is conflicting upon the issue as to whether or not upon the petition such a case for a change of venue is made as requires the judge to grant the motion, the judge hearing the motion passes upon the issues that are to be determined upon evidence, and the judge's finding and judgment is final and controlling, unless manifestly erroneous. Butler v. State, 56 Ga. App. 126, 192 S.E. 238 (1937).

Reversal of denial of motion when evidence conflicts. — If the evidence upon the issue of violence conflicts, the judgment denying the defendant's motion to change the venue will not be reversed, unless manifestly erroneous. Grenoble v. State, 41 Ga. App. 663, 154 S.E. 304 (1930); Goumas v. State, 44 Ga. App. 210, 160 S.E. 682 (1931) Griffin v. State, 59 Ga. App. 333, 1 S.E.2d 41 (1939); Morakis v. State, 72 Ga. App. 790, 35 S.E.2d 155 (1945), aff'd, 201 Ga. 425, 40 S.E.2d 120 (1946); Barronton v. State, 80 Ga. App. 44, 55 S.E.2d 252 (1949); Crane v. State, 94 Ga. App. 63, 93 S.E.2d 667 (1956), appeal dismissed, 213 Ga. 386, 98 S.E.2d 903 (1957); McGruder v. State, 96 Ga. App. 874, 102 S.E.2d 54 (1958); Ledford v. State, 107 Ga. App. 244, 129 S.E.2d 555 (1963).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

Venue change based on opinion evidence. — When the evidence upon the issue of violence is based upon opinion evidence without specific facts or acts upon which to base a judgment changing venue, a judgment denying the defendant's motion for such change will not be reversed. Crane v. State, 94 Ga. App. 63, 93 S.E.2d 667 (1956), appeal dismissed, 213 Ga. 386, 98 S.E.2d 903 (1957); McGruder v. State, 96 Ga. App. 874, 102 S.E.2d 54 (1958).

Denial of motion for change of venue not abuse of discretion. — Because only 12 potential jurors were dismissed on account of their inability to be impartial based on their prior knowledge of the case, the excusal rate was only 23%, which was not indicative of such prejudice that the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a change of venue was an abuse of discretion. Moss v. State, 305 Ga. 878, 828 S.E.2d 309 (2019).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 504 et seq., 521, 527, 532, 537.

C.J.S. — 22 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Propriety or effect of denial of application for change of venue in criminal prosecution predicated upon local prejudice as affected by the fact that trial jury was obtained from another county or district, 136 A.L.R. 1405.

Binding effect of order on motion for change of venue, where action is terminated otherwise than on merits and reinstituted, 85 A.L.R.2d 993.

Pretrial publicity in criminal case as ground for change of venue, 33 A.L.R.3d 17.

Right of accused in misdemeanor prosecution to change of venue on grounds of inability to secure fair trial and the like, 34 A.L.R.3d 804.

Change of venue by state in criminal case, 46 A.L.R.3d 295.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding venue and recusation matters, 7 A.L.R.4th 942.

17-7-151. Transfer upon change of venue of evidence, list of witnesses, and papers; issuance of subpoenas to witnesses and others by clerk of court selected to try case.

Whenever a change of venue is made, the clerk of the court from which the case has been transferred shall send to the court to which the case has been transferred a transcript of the order for the change of venue, the evidence before the court of inquiry, a list of all the witnesses subpoenaed in the case, and all other papers connected with the case. The clerk of the court selected to try the case shall issue subpoenas to the witnesses and such others as may be applied for by either party.

History. — Ga. L. 1895, p. 70, § 4; Penal Code 1895, § 940; Penal Code 1910, § 965; Code 1933, § 27-1202; Code 1933, § 27-1203, enacted by Ga. L. 1972, p. 536, § 1.

Cross references. — Transfer of prisoner upon change of venue, § 42-4-11.

U.S. Code. — Transfer of trials, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 21(c).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Sending of copies of order to court acquiring venue. — Certified copy of the order granting the change of venue may be sent to the county acquiring venue, but other papers transmitted must be the originals. Graham v. State, 143 Ga. 440, 85 S.E. 328, 1917A Ann. Cas. 595 (1915).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 535 et seq.

17-7-152. Subsequent changes of venue.

If, on motion, the judge presiding in the court to which a case has been transferred is satisfied that a fair and impartial jury cannot be obtained therein, he shall, in the manner prescribed in subsection (a) of Code Section 17-7-150, transfer the case to some other county where a fair and impartial jury can be obtained.

History. — Ga. L. 1895, p. 70, § 5; Penal Code 1895, § 941; Penal Code 1910, § 966; Code 1933, § 27-1203; Code 1933, § 27-1204, enacted by Ga. L. 1972, p. 536, § 1.

U.S. Code. — Transfer of trials because of prejudice against defendant, and annotations pertaining thereto, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 21(a).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 504 et seq., 527 et seq.

C.J.S. — 22 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 1 et seq.

ARTICLE 7

DEMAND FOR TRIAL; ANNOUNCEMENT OF READINESS FOR TRIAL

Law reviews. — For comment, "The Right to a Speedy Trial," see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 197 (1977).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Mistrial does not satisfy speedy trial requirements. — Mistrial based on the jury's inability to reach a verdict does not satisfy the speedy trial requirements, at least when the defendant could have been retried before the expiration of the term. Orvis v. State, 237 Ga. 6, 226 S.E.2d 570 (1976).

Request for final disposition of detainers is not demand for trial. — Request for final disposition of detainers on a prisoner's record (see O.C.G.A. § 42-6-1 et seq.) is not the equivalent of a demand for trial and the failure to try the inmate at the term at which such request is made or at the next succeeding term does not authorize the inmate's discharge and acquittal of the offense charged in the pending indictment, accusation, or information. Spurlin v. State, 228 Ga. 2, 183 S.E.2d 765 (1971).

Cited in Horne v. State, 212 Ga. 421, 93 S.E.2d 356 (1956).

17-7-170. Demand for speedy trial; service; discharge and acquittal for lack of prosecution; expiration; reversal on direct appeal; mistrial and retrial; special pleas of incompetency.

(a) Any defendant against whom a true bill of indictment or an accusation is filed with the clerk for an offense not affecting the defendant's life may enter a demand for speedy trial at the court term at which the indictment or accusation is filed or at the next succeeding regular court term thereafter; or, by special permission of the court, the defendant may at any subsequent court term thereafter demand a speedy trial. In either case, the demand for speedy trial shall be filed with the clerk of court and served upon the prosecutor and upon the judge to whom the case is assigned or, if the case is not assigned, upon the chief judge of the court in which the case is pending. A demand for speedy trial filed pursuant to this Code section shall be filed as a separate, distinct, and individual document and shall not be a part of any other pleading or document. Such demand shall clearly be titled "Demand for Speedy Trial"; reference this Code section within the pleading; and identify the indictment number or accusation number for which such demand is being made. The demand for speedy trial shall be binding only in the court in which the demand for speedy trial is filed, except where the case is transferred from one court to another without a request from the defendant.

(b) If the defendant is not tried when the demand for speedy trial is made or at the next succeeding regular court term thereafter, provided that at both court terms there were juries impaneled and qualified to try the defendant, the defendant shall be absolutely discharged and acquitted of the offense charged in the indictment or accusation. For purposes of computing the term at which a misdemeanor must be tried under this Code section, there shall be excluded any civil term of court in a county in which civil and criminal terms of court are designated; and for purposes of this Code section it shall be as if such civil term was not held.

(c) Any demand for speedy trial filed pursuant to this Code section shall expire at the conclusion of the trial or upon the defendant entering a plea of guilty or nolo contendere.

(d) If a case in which a demand for speedy trial has been filed, as provided in this Code section, is reversed on direct appeal, a new demand for speedy trial shall be filed within the term of court in which the remittitur from the appellate court is received by the clerk of court or at the next succeeding regular court term thereafter.

(e) If the case in which a demand for speedy trial has been filed as provided in this Code section results in a mistrial, the case shall be tried at the next succeeding regular term of court.

(f) If a defendant files a special plea of incompetency to stand trial pursuant to Code Section 17-7-130 or if the court, pursuant to Code Section 17-7-129, conducts a trial on the competency of the defendant, the period of time during which such matter is pending shall not be included in the computation of determining whether a demand for speedy trial has been satisfied.

History. — Ga. L. 1859, p. 60, § 1; Code 1863, § 4534; Code 1868, § 4554; Code 1873, § 4648; Code 1882, § 4648; Penal Code 1895, § 958; Penal Code 1910, § 983; Code 1933, § 27-1901; Ga. L. 1985, p. 637, § 5; Ga. L. 1987, p. 841, § 1; Ga. L. 2003, p. 154, § 3; Ga. L. 2006, p. 893, § 1/HB 1421; Ga. L. 2011, p. 372, § 3/HB 421.

Cross references. — Requests by inmates for final disposition of indictments or accusations pending against them, § 42-6-3. Filing and processing, caption, Uniform Superior Court Rules, Rule 36.3.

Law reviews. — For annual survey on criminal law and procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 141 (1990). For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (2005); 58 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2006).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Timing
Procedure
Role of Clerk
Qualified Jury
Demand
Waiver
Impact of Motions for Mistrials
Discharge and Acquittal
Application
Appeals

General Consideration

This section was known as the demand statute. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967).

This section was imperative and admits of no exceptions. Consequently, trial or acquittal are the only alternatives. Hunley v. State, 105 Ga. 636, 31 S.E. 543 (1898); Harris v. State, 84 Ga. App. 1, 65 S.E.2d 267 (1951).

This section conferred a right upon the defendant, in aid of the constitutional guarantee of speedy trial, which does not admit of an implied exception in the case of a mistrial which is the result of an inevitable accident. Rider v. State, 103 Ga. App. 184, 118 S.E.2d 749 (1961).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

This section was jurisdictional. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975).

Strict construction of section necessary. — Because the penalty imposed by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 against the state is so great, the statute must be strictly construed. Day v. State, 187 Ga. App. 175, 369 S.E.2d 796 (1988).

Protection conferred. — Defendant's demand for a speedy trial was premature when it was filed before the solicitor (now district attorney) filed the accusation and citations, because the protection conferred by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 attaches with the formal indictment or accusation and the clock starts running on the time for the accused to make a speedy trial demand on the date an accusation or indictment is filed with the clerk of court. State v. Bloodsworth, 241 Ga. App. 840, 528 S.E.2d 285 (2000).

Attachment upon arrest. — Unlike the statutory protections conferred by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 that attach with a formal indictment or accusation, a defendant's constitutional speedy trial right attaches upon arrest and can be asserted thereafter; likewise, the procedural bar created by the specific time deadlines found in the speedy trial statute do not apply to constitutional claims. Nusser v. State, 275 Ga. App. 896, 622 S.E.2d 105 (2005).

Purpose is to implement constitutional speedy trial provisions. — This section was framed to carry into effect that provision of the Constitution which declares that "in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial." Stripland v. State, 115 Ga. 578, 41 S.E. 987 (1902); Bishop v. State, 11 Ga. App. 296, 75 S.E. 165 (1912).

Purpose of this section was to make effective the provision of the Constitution providing that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial. Dickerson v. State, 108 Ga. App. 548, 134 S.E.2d 51 (1963).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 was enacted to implement the constitutional provision for a speedy trial. Hubbard v. State, 254 Ga. 694, 333 S.E.2d 827 (1985).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 applies to outright dereliction by the state in failing to provide a speedy trial if one could have been had; the statute does not operate to force the state to impanel a jury for one defendant who makes a late demand. West v. State, 193 Ga. App. 117, 387 S.E.2d 44 (1989).

Section is in aid and implementation of state constitutional right. — Since the right of a speedy trial became a guarantee under the state constitution, this section was to be regarded as an aid and implementation of the state constitutional right and to secure to a defendant in a criminal case the defendant's right thereunder. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967).

No distinction between constitutional and statutory right. — There is no distinction between the constitutional right to a speedy trial under the U.S. Const., amend. 6 and the statutory right to a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 as the statutory provision is obviously analogous in its purpose to the constitutional right to a speedy trial; as the concept of double jeopardy is closely implicated in both provisions, a defendant may directly appeal from the pretrial denial of either a constitutional or statutory speedy trial claim. Callaway v. State, 258 Ga. App. 118, 572 S.E.2d 751 (2002).

Constitutional right is broader than statutory right. — Unlike the statutory protections conferred by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171 that attach with formal indictment or accusation, the Sixth Amendment provides constitutional protection over and above the statutory provisions and under that amendment, the right to a speedy trial attaches upon arrest and can be asserted thereafter; a trial court properly denied the defendant's statutory speedy trial demand when no indictment was filed, but improperly overlooked or failed to consider defendant's constitutional speedy trial demand and, thus, the trial court's judgment was vacated and the case was remanded with direction to the trial court to address the defendant's constitutional claims. Smith v. State, 266 Ga. App. 529, 597 S.E.2d 414 (2004).

Statute affords guidelines as to state, but not federal, right to speedy trial. — This section was not regarded as affording guidelines in relation to the federal constitutional provisions guaranteeing the right to a speedy trial, being limited to and in a proper case applicable only to the state right. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967).

Section originally enacted to implement common-law right to speedy trial. — This section as originally enacted was doubtless in aid of and to implement the common-law right to a speedy trial existing in Georgia at least prior to 1861. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967).

Right to speedy trial may be implemented by a demand for trial. — Defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to a speedy trial may be implemented by a written demand for trial. Underhill v. State, 129 Ga. App. 65, 198 S.E.2d 703 (1973).

Demand simply a factor in determining violation of right to speedy trial. — United States Const., amend. 6 is an independent guarantee of the right to a speedy trial, and the defendant's assertion or failure to assert the defendant's statutory right is simply one of the factors to be considered in determining whether the right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 has been impinged. Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597 (1974).

Demand not required when constitutional issue. — Although the defendant did not file a statutory demand for speedy trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, the defendant was not required to do so in order to prevail on a constitutional speedy trial claim. Miller v. State, 313 Ga. App. 552, 722 S.E.2d 152 (2012).

Duty of courts to uphold right to speedy trial. — Since the purpose of this section was to secure to defendants the rights to a speedy and public trial, the courts should seek to uphold rather than whittle away by judicial construction this and other provisions of the Bill of Rights, which secure the guarantees of freedom upon which this country is founded. Rider v. State, 103 Ga. App. 184, 118 S.E.2d 749 (1961).

Duty to bring the defendant to trial following arrest and accusation rests upon the court, the prosecutor, and the clerk of court, not the defendant. Klinetob v. State, 194 Ga. App. 52, 389 S.E.2d 551 (1989).

Defendant's duty to demand trial to alleviate pretrial stress. — Although it is true that an accused who suffers emotional stress while awaiting the disposition of the charges against the defendant is inherently prejudiced, the defendant has some obligation to attempt to alleviate this stress by requesting a speedy trial or filing a statutory demand for trial pursuant to this section. Cravey v. State, 147 Ga. App. 29, 248 S.E.2d 13 (1978).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 did not require that defendant answer readily when the defendant's case was called for trial. Riley v. State, 212 Ga. App. 519, 442 S.E.2d 7 (1994).

This section applied to the offense only for which the demand for trial was made; not an offense nominally the same but substantially different. Brown v. State, 85 Ga. 713, 11 S.E. 831 (1890).

Filing of accusation brings right to demand trial. — This section applied to any person against whom a true bill of indictment is found and also to cases in which an accusation has been filed. Fisher v. State, 143 Ga. App. 493, 238 S.E.2d 584 (1977).

Right to make a demand for trial applies equally when a defendant is charged by accusation, rather than a bill of indictment. Frank v. State, 145 Ga. App. 678, 244 S.E.2d 619 (1978).

Rights to demand trial and to have demand entered on minutes. — It is the right of the defendant to demand a trial at the term of the court in which the indictment is returned and to have that demand entered on the minutes of the court. Jeffries v. State, 140 Ga. App. 477, 231 S.E.2d 369 (1976).

Counsel's notice of conflicts. — Since the filing of a notice of conflicts is mandatory under Uniform Superior Court Rules, Rule 17.1, it cannot be evidence that the defendant consented to have the defendant's case tried at a later term. Fisher v. State, 273 Ga. 721, 545 S.E.2d 895 (2001).

After filing a notice of conflicts under

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Uniform Superior Court Rules, Rule 17.1, defense counsel's actions in failing to notify the affected trial courts once a higher priority matter concluded waived the defendant's speedy trial demand. Fisher v. State, 273 Ga. 721, 545 S.E.2d 895 (2001).

Failure of counsel to move for dismissal. — Defendant's appellate counsel was ineffective in not raising trial counsel's failure to move for dismissal pursuant to a statutory speedy trial demand. Sloan v. Sanders, 271 Ga. 299, 519 S.E.2d 219 (1999).

Exercise of discretion under this section lied with the trial judge rather than the appellate courts. Newman v. State, 121 Ga. App. 692, 175 S.E.2d 144 (1970).

Effect of statutory amendment changing terms of court. — Amendment of a statutory provision, so as to change the dates of commencement of terms of court, was not an ex post facto law as applied to the defendant, who was not at any time entitled to discharge and acquittal of the offenses with which the defendant was charged. Aspinwall v. State, 201 Ga. App. 203, 410 S.E.2d 388 (1991).

Due to an error in the enactment, an amendment changing the terms of court from four to two had not gone into effect at the time the defendant moved for acquittal; thus, the defendant was entitled to acquittal for failure to try the defendant within the term when the defendant's speedy trial demand was made. Houston v. State, 217 Ga. App. 783, 459 S.E.2d 583 (1995).

State's failure to obtain evidence no excuse. — Even if the accused was guilty, the failure of the state to obtain evidence furnished no justification for disregarding this section. Bishop v. State, 11 Ga. App. 296, 75 S.E. 165 (1912).

Extended or special session of a regular term of court constitutes a regular term, not a special term, for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Barkley v. State, 179 Ga. App. 795, 348 S.E.2d 122 (1986).

Defendant absent due to extradition. — Defendant who is unable to satisfy the second proviso of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 because of involuntary extradition to another state is not without a speedy trial remedy since the defendant can invoke the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 42-6-20 et seq. Bashlor v. State, 165 Ga. App. 329, 299 S.E.2d 418 (1983).

If defendant was incarcerated in another state on the date the demand for speedy trial was filed, and the defendant failed to show that juries were impaneled and qualified in the county from the time the defendant was extradited and returned until the end of the term, the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal was premature. Cooper v. State, 224 Ga. App. 621, 481 S.E.2d 607 (1997).

Defendant must have been "available" for trial before the defendant's speedy trial demand ran; because the defendant had been incarcerated in Texas and Louisiana since the defendant's indictment, the defendant was not available to the trial court, the defendant's speedy trial demand did not run, and the trial court correctly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Baldwin v. State, 270 Ga. App. 201, 605 S.E.2d 889 (2004).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's plea in bar based on speedy-trial grounds because the defendant's incarceration in Michigan extended the time for the defendant's speedy trial demand as the defendant was not available for trial because the defendant was in the custody of a different sovereign and the Interstate Agreement on Detainers Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-6-20 et seq., did not apply; there was no inherent authority in a Georgia court to compel the defendant's presence or in-court attendance since the defendant was incarcerated by or in the control of a different sovereign, specifically Michigan; and nothing in the record reflected the defendant's desire to waive the defendant's right to be present at trial. Gosline v. State, 341 Ga. App. 708, 802 S.E.2d 275 (2017).

Extradition to another jurisdiction does not waive presence requirement. — Although the defendant moved for discharge and acquittal for delay in trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and sought to circumvent defendant's absence from the jurisdiction by arguing the state voluntarily released the defendant to the United States court, the presence requirement was not waived by the state's action. Luke v. State, 180 Ga. App. 378, 349 S.E.2d 391 (1986), overruled as to presence requirement, State v. Collins, 201 Ga. App. 500, 411 S.E.2d 546 (1991).

Defendant's incarceration in federal custody at the time the defendant filed a demand for trial and time during which jurors were impaneled extended time in which the state had to try the defendant. McIver v. State, 205 Ga. App. 648, 423 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 27 (1992).

Strict compliance required. — Dismissal of a criminal case pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 is an extreme sanction which can be invoked only if there has been strict compliance with the statute. Head v. State, 189 Ga. App. 111, 375 S.E.2d 46 (1988); Hanson v. State, 196 Ga. App. 589, 396 S.E.2d 510 (1990); Merrill v. State, 201 Ga. App. 247, 411 S.E.2d 283, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 411 S.E.2d 283 (1991).

Construction with Ga. Unif. Sup. Ct. R. 32.1. — Because the trial court's calendar did not allow for the defendant's trial to be continued within the current term of court and hence a demand for a speedy trial could not be met and in light of the fact that the court gave the parties an opportunity to dispose of the case by way of a plea agreement, the court's noncompliance with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 32.1, denial of a motion to continue, and dismissal of the case for want of prosecution were not an abuse of discretion. State v. Hitchcock, 285 Ga. App. 140, 645 S.E.2d 631 (2007).

Trial court did not wholly fail to comply with the seven-day notice requirement of Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 32.1 because the trial court gave at least five days notice, and it was apparent by the defendant's demand for trial that the defendant had shortened the time for trial, which constituted a factor for the trial court to consider when setting the trial date; the trial court was attempting to comply with the demand for trial, and the only way to do so was by deviating from the notice requirement. Higuera-Hernandez v. State, 289 Ga. 553, 714 S.E.2d 236 (2011).

Defendant's burden to establish that there were qualified jurors impaneled. — Term of court, during which the defendant filed a demand for a speedy trial during the final week, would count for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(b) only if jurors were impaneled and qualified at the time of the defendant's demand, or thereafter in the term, and it was defendant's burden to establish that there were qualified jurors impaneled during the relevant court terms so as to trigger that section. Union v. State, 273 Ga. 666, 543 S.E.2d 683 (2001).

Because the defendant failed to show that jurors were impaneled and qualified to try the defendant's case during the relevant time period after the defendant filed the speedy trial demand, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Cown v. State, 259 Ga. App. 8, 576 S.E.2d 20 (2002).

Cited in Dacey v. State, 15 Ga. 286 (1854); Stripland v. State, 115 Ga. 578, 41 S.E. 987 (1902); Campbell v. State, 6 Ga. App. 539, 65 S.E. 307 (1909); Sneed v. State, 72 Ga. App. 102, 33 S.E.2d 29 (1945); Horne v. State, 94 Ga. App. 522, 95 S.E.2d 288 (1956); Connelly v. Balkcom, 213 Ga. 491, 99 S.E.2d 817 (1957); Butler v. State, 126 Ga. App. 22, 189 S.E.2d 870 (1972); Adams v. State, 129 Ga. App. 839, 201 S.E.2d 649 (1973); McRoy v. State, 131 Ga. App. 307, 205 S.E.2d 445 (1974); Wood v. State, 234 Ga. 758, 218 S.E.2d 47 (1975); State v. Clendinin, 136 Ga. App. 303, 221 S.E.2d 71 (1975); Cross v. State, 136 Ga. App. 400, 221 S.E.2d 615 (1975); State v. Weeks, 136 Ga. App. 637, 222 S.E.2d 117 (1975); State v. King, 137 Ga. App. 26, 222 S.E.2d 859 (1975); State v. Fields, 137 Ga. App. 726, 224 S.E.2d 829 (1976); Hightower v. State, 137 Ga. App. 790, 224 S.E.2d 842 (1976); State v. Rowe, 138 Ga. App. 904, 228 S.E.2d 3 (1976); Williams v. State, 140 Ga. App. 505, 231 S.E.2d 366 (1976); Gay v. State, 140 Ga. App. 516, 231 S.E.2d 509 (1976); Gibson v. Giles, 242 Ga. 720, 251 S.E.2d 231 (1978); Garrett v. Arrington, 245 Ga. 47, 262 S.E.2d 808 (1980); State v. Benton, 154 Ga. App. 141, 267 S.E.2d 775 (1980); Collins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509 (1980); Pate v. State, 158 Ga. App.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

395, 280 S.E.2d 414 (1981); State v. Adamczyk, 162 Ga. App. 288, 290 S.E.2d 149 (1982); State v. Edwards, 162 Ga. App. 291, 290 S.E.2d 362 (1982); Reed v. State, 249 Ga. 344, 290 S.E.2d 469 (1982); Forbus v. State, 162 Ga. App. 307, 290 S.E.2d 559 (1982); State v. Floyd, 162 Ga. App. 291, 291 S.E.2d 264 (1982); Wallace v. State, 162 Ga. App. 367, 291 S.E.2d 437 (1982); Day v. State, 163 Ga. App. 839, 296 S.E.2d 145 (1982); Waller v. State, 251 Ga. 124, 303 S.E.2d 437 (1983); Mullins v. State, 167 Ga. App. 670, 307 S.E.2d 61 (1983); Dickerson v. State, 172 Ga. App. 267, 322 S.E.2d 502 (1984); Malpass v. State, 173 Ga. App. 690, 327 S.E.2d 753 (1985); Lawrence v. State, 174 Ga. App. 518, 330 S.E.2d 445 (1985); State v. Mintz, 179 Ga. App. 451, 346 S.E.2d 591 (1986); Dean v. State, 180 Ga. App. 770, 350 S.E.2d 489 (1986); State v. Spence, 179 Ga. App. 750, 347 S.E.2d 612 (1986); Stephens v. State, 185 Ga. App. 546, 365 S.E.2d 136 (1988); Brooks v. State, 187 Ga. App. 92, 369 S.E.2d 349 (1988); Claypool v. State, 188 Ga. App. 642, 373 S.E.2d 765 (1988); In re M.O.B., 190 Ga. App. 474, 378 S.E.2d 898 (1989); State v. Stewart, 191 Ga. App. 35, 381 S.E.2d 50 (1989); Stirling v. State, 192 Ga. App. 39, 383 S.E.2d 595 (1989); Dixon v. State, 196 Ga. App. 15, 395 S.E.2d 577 (1990); Proveaux v. State, 198 Ga. App. 119, 401 S.E.2d 12 (1990); Quick v. State, 198 Ga. App. 353, 401 S.E.2d 758 (1991); Redd v. State, 261 Ga. 300, 404 S.E.2d 264 (1991); Howard v. State, 200 Ga. App. 188, 407 S.E.2d 769 (1991); Hall v. State, 201 Ga. App. 133, 410 S.E.2d 448 (1991); Wells v. State, 201 Ga. App. 398, 411 S.E.2d 125 (1991); Butler v. State, 207 Ga. App. 824, 429 S.E.2d 280 (1993); State v. Smith, 209 Ga. App. 404, 433 S.E.2d 599 (1993); McIver v. State, 212 Ga. App. 670, 442 S.E.2d 855 (1994); Obiozor v. State, 213 Ga. App. 523, 445 S.E.2d 553 (1994); Pope v. State, 214 Ga. App. 458, 448 S.E.2d 54 (1994); Walker v. State, 216 Ga. App. 236, 454 S.E.2d 156 (1995); State v. Ganong, 221 Ga. App. 250, 470 S.E.2d 794 (1996); Jackson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 700, 475 S.E.2d 717 (1996); Ganong v. State, 223 Ga. App. 163, 477 S.E.2d 324 (1996); Ingram v. State, 224 Ga. App. 271, 480 S.E.2d 302 (1997); Cross v. State, 272 Ga. 282, 528 S.E.2d 241 (2000); Copeland v. State, 248 Ga. App. 346, 546 S.E.2d 351 (2001); Williams v. State, 248 Ga. App. 353, 545 S.E.2d 621 (2001); Patten v. State, 250 Ga. App. 498, 552 S.E.2d 110 (2001); Brooks v. State, 257 Ga. App. 515, 571 S.E.2d 504 (2002); Mayfield v. State, 264 Ga. App. 551, 593 S.E.2d 851 (2003); Reedman v. State, 265 Ga. App. 162, 593 S.E.2d 46 (2003); Farmer v. State, 268 Ga. App. 831, 603 S.E.2d 16 (2004); Brown v. State, 275 Ga. App. 281, 620 S.E.2d 394 (2005); Burdett v. State, 285 Ga. App. 571, 646 S.E.2d 748 (2007); Ruffin v. State, 284 Ga. 52, 663 S.E.2d 189 (2008); Grizzard v. State, 301 Ga. App. 613, 688 S.E.2d 402 (2009); Teasley v. State, 307 Ga. App. 153, 704 S.E.2d 248 (2010); Weems v. State, 310 Ga. App. 590, 714 S.E.2d 119 (2011); Walker v. State, 290 Ga. 696, 723 S.E.2d 894 (2012); Neal v. Hibbard, 296 Ga. 882, 770 S.E.2d 600 (2015); State v. Brown, 333 Ga. App. 643, 777 S.E.2d 27 (2015); In the Interest of M.D.H., 300 Ga. 46, 793 S.E.2d 49 (2016).

Timing

Time for filing accusation. — Solicitor's (now district attorney) delay of approximately six weeks in filing the accusation was not unreasonable. State v. Frazier, 201 Ga. App. 6, 410 S.E.2d 134 (1991).

When defendant may demand trial. — Defendant cannot demand trial until there is a case in the court which has jurisdiction to try that defendant. Flint v. State, 12 Ga. App. 169, 76 S.E. 1032 (1913).

When the defendant did not file a demand for trial as a matter of right during either the court term at which the accusation was filed or the next regular court term, and did not seek special permission from the court to file at the subsequent term, the defendant's motion was not properly filed. Clark v. State, 236 Ga. App. 130, 510 S.E.2d 616 (1998), aff'd, 271 Ga. 519, 520 S.E.2d 694 (1999).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal after the defendant filed a demand for a speedy trial of the defendant's three traffic offenses in the recorder's court, an assistant solicitor filed charges based on the same three offenses in the state court, the charges in the recorder's court were dismissed, and the defendant filed a motion for discharge and acquittal in the state court; since the recorder's court did not impanel juries nor have regular terms, the speedy trial demand filed in that court was not a filing of a speedy trial demand filed in the state court and because the defendant did not file a demand for a speedy trial in the state court, the trial court was not obligated to dismiss the defendant's case on that basis. Oliver v. State, 262 Ga. App. 637, 586 S.E.2d 333 (2003).

Time of demand. — In order to trigger this section, the defendant must make the defendant's demand at a time that a traverse jury is impaneled and qualified to try the defendant. Although the order entering the demand recites that the demand truly states that such was the case, the order is not conclusive. State v. McDonald, 242 Ga. 487, 249 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

Defendant's motion for acquittal and discharge based on the defendant's demand for a speedy trial was properly denied as the defendant failed to prove that jurors were impaneled at the time the defendant filed the defendant's demand on December 15, 2016, because the evidence showed that, although jurors were impaneled at the beginning of the day on December 15, 2016, the jurors were excused at some point during the morning or afternoon as the cases for which the jurors had been summoned were resolved by plea; and the defendant did not show at what time the defendant filed the defendant's demand on December 15, 2016, and whether the jurors had not yet been discharged at the time that the defendant filed the defendant's demand that day. Zarouk v. State, 344 Ga. App. 261, 810 S.E.2d 156 (2018).

Time for filing a speedy trial demand did not depend on whether jurors were impaneled; when the defendant's speedy trial demand was not filed within the same term that the accusation was filed or the next succeeding term, it was untimely filed, regardless of the fact that there were no jurors impaneled for the remainder of the term during which the accusation was filed, and the trial court's denial for discharge and acquittal was proper. Nesmith v. State, 267 Ga. App. 530, 600 S.E.2d 644 (2004).

Motion based on first demand for speedy trial. — In prosecution charging the defendant with two counts of obstruction of an officer, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 because the motion was based on the defendant's first demand for a speedy trial, which the defendant made before the indictment was returned. Collins v. State, 259 Ga. App. 587, 578 S.E.2d 201 (2003).

Since the defendant did not file a speedy trial demand until three terms following the term in which the defendant was indicted, the demand was untimely pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a); the trial court would have had authority to dismiss the defendant's speedy trial demand even in the absence of a motion by the state since the demand was untimely. Branton v. State, 279 Ga. App. 300, 630 S.E.2d 787 (2006).

Timing of demand for speedy trial. — Demand for speedy trial pursuant to the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 may not be made until an indictment has been returned or an accusation preferred. Robinson v. State, 182 Ga. App. 423, 356 S.E.2d 55 (1987); Wilson v. State, 186 Ga. App. 190, 366 S.E.2d 826 (1988); Little v. State, 188 Ga. App. 410, 373 S.E.2d 260 (1988).

When the defendant was arrested on a warrant and filed a pro se demand for a speedy trial from the issuance of the warrant rather than from an indictment or accusation, it was held that only a person who has been indicted or otherwise formally charged with a crime can invoke the rights afforded by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, and although the defendant was not without a means to produce a speedy trial, the defendant simply utilized the wrong method by prematurely invoking the provisions of that section rather than the constitutional protections which were available to the defendant. Subsequent filing of the indictment did not breathe life into the premature demand. State v. Hicks, 183 Ga. App. 715, 359 S.E.2d 712, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 907, 359 S.E.2d 712 (1987).

Timing (Cont'd)

Demand for speedy trial filed the day before an indictment was returned was a nullity, and service of this prematurely filed demand, even after the indictment, was still only notice of a void demand. Thus, the trial court did not err by denying the motion. Grier v. State, 198 Ga. App. 840, 403 S.E.2d 857 (1991).

If an indictment is required in order to prosecute the offense, an accusation alone is insufficient, and a demand for speedy trial filed before an indictment is premature. Groom v. State, 212 Ga. App. 133, 441 S.E.2d 259 (1994).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 did not apply when the defendant unilaterally filed a "waiver of indictment" and "consent to be tried upon accusation" and concurrently filed a demand for trial prior to presentment of the defendant's case to the grand jury. That section is available only to those against whom a true bill of indictment or an accusation is filed, not those who otherwise consent to jurisdiction. Smith v. State, 218 Ga. App. 392, 461 S.E.2d 561 (1995).

Defendant's right to demand a speedy trial was implicated when a uniform traffic citation was filed with the state court clerk's office on March 4 and, therefore, the defendant's speedy trial demand, filed on March 19, was timely. Hayek v. State, 269 Ga. 728, 506 S.E.2d 372 (1998).

Absent a waiver of indictment, the defendant's speedy trial demand filed prior to the defendant's indictment for a felony offense was premature. Ellsworth v. State, 232 Ga. App. 164, 500 S.E.2d 642 (1998).

Because all jurors were dismissed and not subject to recall at the time the defendant filed a motion at 4:00 p.m. on the last business day of the "present" term, the motion did not trigger the two-term period until the next succeeding term. Redstrom v. State, 239 Ga. App. 769, 521 S.E.2d 904 (1999).

Defendant's demand was not filed during the current or succeeding terms and the defendant did not receive special permission from the court to file untimely; thus, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Price v. State, 245 Ga. App. 128, 535 S.E.2d 766 (2000).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment because the defendant never filed an effective statutory demand for a speedy trial and, as to the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial, the 68-month delay was presumed prejudicial, but the defendant prolonged the proceedings due to the defendant's own issues with retaining counsel, including the defendant's original counsel obtaining various leaves of absences due to illness and the defendant's unsuccessful efforts to retain other private counsel. Henderson v. State, 290 Ga. App. 427, 662 S.E.2d 652 (2008).

Premature demand. — Finding that the defendant's demand for a speedy trial was premature was proper because no uniform traffic citation, indictment, or other accusation had been filed by the state, and the defendant could not "file" the case personally by submitting citations and a speedy trial demand to the court clerk. Shire v. State, 225 Ga. App. 306, 483 S.E.2d 694 (1997).

Demand for speedy trial filed before the indictment is returned is a nullity. Daniels v. State, 235 Ga. App. 296, 509 S.E.2d 368 (1998).

Speedy trial demand that was filed prior to the solicitor's (district attorney's) consent to the filing of uniform traffic citations was premature, and the demand was not resuscitated when the formal accusation was filed. Meservey v. State, 230 Ga. App. 382, 496 S.E.2d 518 (1998).

Defendant's pro se demand for a speedy trial filed upon the defendant's arrest and prior to presentment of the accusation charging the defendant with criminal trespass was not filed timely. Carter v. State, 231 Ga. App. 42, 497 S.E.2d 812 (1998), but see Malloy v. State, 293 Ga. 350 (2013).

Because accusations and uniform traffic citations had not been filed at the time the defendant filed a demand, it was premature and the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal and, even though the case was assigned a case number and an arraignment date, it was not "filed" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Lagyak v. State, 245 Ga. App. 546, 538 S.E.2d 467 (2000).

Although the defendant filed a speedy trial demand prematurely, nonetheless the demand placed all parties on notice that the defendant wanted a speedy trial, and in considering the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on constitutional grounds, the trial court weighed this factor in the defendant's favor. State v. Bazemore, 249 Ga. App. 584, 549 S.E.2d 426 (2001).

Defendant's premature demand for trial was a nullity because it was filed the day before the defendant was indicted and was therefore fatally premature. Roberts v. State, 278 Ga. 610, 604 S.E.2d 781 (2004).

Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on statutory speedy trial grounds pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a) because the defendant's speedy trial demand was premature and a nullity since the "complaint" was filed after the defendant's arrest, was not an accusation pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-70 and 17-7-70.1, and the prosecution did not proceed on the "complaint." Campbell v. State, 294 Ga. App. 166, 669 S.E.2d 190 (2008).

Prematurely filed speedy trial demand cannot be resuscitated by a later returned accusation or indictment whether the accusation or indictment is filed in the same term or not. State v. McKenzie, 184 Ga. App. 191, 361 S.E.2d 54 (1987).

Premature speedy trial demand. — Given the defendant's premature speedy trial demand, made after the defendant's arrest, but before the grand jury indictment was filed, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Roberts v. State, 263 Ga. App. 472, 588 S.E.2d 242 (2003).

Pre-trial speedy trial demand could not be made via habeas petition. — Because the issue of whether a defendant's prosecution was barred pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 was a statutory defense which could be raised in the pending criminal action and the claim was not relevant to the validity of any pre-trial detention, the habeas court properly dismissed the defendant's pre-trial habeas petition without an evidentiary hearing. Mungin v. St. Lawrence, 281 Ga. 671, 641 S.E.2d 541 (2007).

Period for filing a demand for speedy trial may expire before arraignment. — Once a defendant knows a criminal charge has been brought against the defendant, the defendant is under a duty to monitor the status of the case if the defendant wishes to file a timely demand pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, and thus trigger the state's obligation to act to arraign and try the defendant within the allotted time. Smith v. State, 207 Ga. App. 762, 429 S.E.2d 149 (1993).

State has reasonable time to prepare and try state's case. — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 affords the state a reasonable time frame in which to prepare and try the state's case against the accused. This would be no less true in a retrial after reversal on appeal. The state is able and obligated to try the case only during periods when the court has jurisdiction of the case. Ramirez v. State, 196 Ga. App. 11, 395 S.E.2d 315 (1990), aff'd, 211 Ga. App. 356, 439 S.E.2d 4 (1993), overruled on other grounds, Henry v. James, 264 Ga. 527, 449 S.E.2d 79 (1994).

Defendant's affirmative action tolls period. — Moving to quash the indictments or other affirmative action, including the granting of a remittitur, tolls the period for demand of speedy trial. Fletcher v. State, 213 Ga. App. 401, 445 S.E.2d 279 (1994).

When an indictment is quashed on defendant's motion and the defendant is subsequently reindicted, a defendant must file a new speedy trial demand and the time limits for trial run only from the term in which the new demand is filed. Willingham v. State, 232 Ga. App. 244, 501 S.E.2d 575 (1998).

Time of demand if charged by accusation. — Right to make a demand for trial applying equally when the defendant is charged by accusation, the defendant had the right, without the necessity of obtaining special permission of the court, to file a demand for trial during the term of the accusation or the next succeeding regular term. Huckeba v. State, 157 Ga. App. 795, 278 S.E.2d 703 (1981).

Timing (Cont'd)

Section provides for demand after indictment but speedy trial right attaches upon arrest. — Although former Code 1933, § 27-1901 and Ga. L. 1952, p. 299, §§ 1 and 2 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171) prescribed a means of asserting one's right to a speedy trial after indictment, there was a right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to a speedy trial, which attaches at arrest and can be asserted thereafter. Haisman v. State, 242 Ga. 896, 252 S.E.2d 397 (1979); Glidewell v. State, 169 Ga. App. 858, 314 S.E.2d 924 (1984).

Protection conferred by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 attaches with the formal indictment or accusation, but over and above the statutory provisions, Sixth Amendment rights to speedy trial attach upon arrest. Andrews v. State, 175 Ga. App. 22, 332 S.E.2d 299 (1985).

Right attached at remittitur. — Delay in scheduling the defendant's trial was measured not from the defendant's arrest nor from the defendant's second indictment, but from the remittitur to the trial court on an earlier case involving the same charges; the delay of two and a half months between the remittitur and the scheduling of trial was not presumptively prejudicial and the defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated. Roberts v. State, 279 Ga. App. 434, 631 S.E.2d 480 (2006), overruled on other grounds, DeSouza v. State, 285 Ga. App. 201, 645 S.E.2d 684 (2007).

Computation of two-term requirement. — In computing the time allowed by the two-term requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 (b), terms or remainders of terms during which no jury is impaneled are not counted. Smith v. State, 199 Ga. App. 771, 406 S.E.2d 118 (1991).

In computing the time allowed by the two-term requirement, terms or remainders of terms during which no jury is impaneled are not counted. Kaysen v. State, 191 Ga. App. 734, 382 S.E.2d 737 (1989); Deadwiley v. State, 192 Ga. App. 229, 384 S.E.2d 221 (1989); McIver v. State, 205 Ga. App. 648, 423 S.E.2d 27, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 27 (1992).

Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal in a case when the jury was unable to reach a unanimous verdict and the trial court was thus forced to declare a mistrial on the last business day of the term of court as the trial itself was commenced within the statutory two-term limit and the state immediately announced the state was ready to try the defendant on the unresolved charges; accordingly, the state had the right to try the defendant in that term if jurors were available, and, if not, the next succeeding regular term of court, again providing that there were juries impaneled and qualified to hear the case. State v. Varner, 277 Ga. 433, 589 S.E.2d 111 (2003).

As to "next succeeding term" in court to which indictment is transferred, see Castleberry v. State, 11 Ga. App. 757, 76 S.E. 74 (1912).

Demandant's rights cannot be defeated by adjourning one regular term into another regular term. Nix v. State, 5 Ga. App. 835, 63 S.E. 926 (1909).

State may not repeatedly schedule trial to conflict with defense counsel's schedule. — When the procedural evidence was very clear that the state scheduled trial only when the appellant's counsel was absent or otherwise heavily engaged in other trials set by the state, the denial of the appellant's statutory right to absolute discharge and acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 on grounds it was appellant who affirmatively sought to avoid any trial was clearly erroneous. Birts v. State, 192 Ga. App. 476, 385 S.E.2d 120 (1989).

Effect of publishing trial calendar. — That the trial calendar for jury trials had been published before a defendant filed the defendant's demand for a speedy trial did not mean that there were no juries impaneled and qualified to try the defendant. A calendar serves the convenience of and promotes the orderly business of a court in disposing of the court's duties; nonetheless, the convenience of a set calendar must give way to the clear mandate of statutory law. O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 clearly puts the burden on the state to try a defendant within the time limits set by statute. Campbell v. State, 199 Ga. App. 25, 403 S.E.2d 882 (1991).

Continuance at defendant's request. — Since the state was ready to proceed with the defendant's trial within four months of the offense, but the defendant requested a continuance to prepare the defendant's case, any delay in trial was caused by the defendant's own actions, and the defendant was not denied a speedy trial. Myron v. State, 248 Ga. 120, 281 S.E.2d 600 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1154, 102 S. Ct. 1025, 71 L. Ed. 2d 310 (1982).

Counsel's request for a continuance and consent to reset the trial to a time outside the period allowed by the demand for speedy trial waived the defendant's right to automatic discharge and acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. State v. Davis, 243 Ga. App. 867, 534 S.E.2d 159 (2000).

Continuance after speedy trial demand. — Trial court improperly denied a continuance based on the ground that the defendant filed a speedy trial demand; a brief continuance did not waive a speedy trial demand when the court still could have tried the case within the time required, and nothing showed that the defendant here could not have been tried for the remainder of the term. Ingram v. State, 286 Ga. App. 662, 650 S.E.2d 743 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Counting terms of court after filing of remittitur. — In a case when a speedy trial demand was filed and, after an unrelated appeal, the remittitur from the Court of Appeals was filed near the end of the court term when no jury was present and available, that term did not count as one of the two terms in which the state must try the defendant. Pope v. State, 265 Ga. 473, 458 S.E.2d 115 (1995).

Impanelling of two traverse juries is sufficient; one when the demand is made, the other at the next succeeding term. Adams v. State, 65 Ga. 516 (1880).

Term at which impanelment requirement should be fulfilled. — Fact that at the initial term at which the demand was made there was no jury impaneled is of no consequence, provided at least two terms pass at which a jury was impaneled. Bush v. State, 152 Ga. App. 598, 263 S.E.2d 499 (1979).

Special terms do not count toward time limit. — This section referred to regular terms of court, and a party was not entitled to be discharged because the state failed to try the party at a special term held after demand was made. Stripland v. State, 115 Ga. 578, 41 S.E. 987 (1902).

Thirty-four month delay in requesting speedy trial. — Although over 34 months elapsed from the date of a defendant's arrest to the date of the denial of a motion to dismiss the indictment based on an alleged Sixth Amendment speedy trial violation, the motion was properly denied. The defendant never filed a statutory demand for speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and only raised the constitutional right to a speedy trial in a motion filed 30 months after indictment; the state never sought a continuance; the delay was solely due to the congested docket; and the defendant had been free on bail and did not show that the defendant's ability to present a defense would be impaired. West v. State, 295 Ga. App. 15, 670 S.E.2d 833 (2008).

Defendant's demand for a speedy trial was timely filed. — Trial counsel was not ineffective because the second defendant's speedy trial demand was filed in a timely fashion. Maldonado v. State, 325 Ga. App. 41, 752 S.E.2d 112 (2013).

Procedure

Filing of demand. — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 does not require the defendant to be tried within 120 days of the filing of a demand for trial. Carver v. State, 203 Ga. App. 197, 416 S.E.2d 810, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 810 (1992).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 imposes no requirement that demand be made in a certain form or delivered to a specified officer of the court. Pless v. State, 157 Ga. App. 681, 278 S.E.2d 475 (1981).

Demand for jury trial is not sufficient. — Court of Appeals in the case of State v. Adamczyk, 162 Ga. App. 288, 290 S.E.2d 149 (1982), expressly rejected as adequate a demand for "trial by jury" without more, and expressly overruled all cases allowing such loose language to stand for a proper demand for trial so as to invoke the penalty provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Smith v. State, 166 Ga. App. 352, 304 S.E.2d 476 (1983).

Procedure (Cont'd)

Demand to enjoy a trial by a jury of 12 cannot reasonably be construed as a demand for trial within the next succeeding term of court. Getz v. State, 251 Ga. 462, 306 S.E.2d 918 (1983).

Document filed by the defendant, captioned "Plea of Not Guilty and Demand for a Jury Trial," did not amount to a request for a speedy trial, but merely set forth a request for a trial by jury. Boyd v. State, 200 Ga. App. 591, 409 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, No. S91C1482, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 584 (Ga. Sept. 6, 1991).

If the defendant sought a copy of the indictment and list of witnesses and requested that the defendant be "tried by a jury and waives nothing," this was not a speedy trial demand pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Daniels v. State, 235 Ga. App. 296, 509 S.E.2d 368 (1998).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for acquittal and discharge since the demand simply documented the defendant's request to be tried by a jury. Chastain v. State, 237 Ga. App. 640, 516 S.E.2d 362 (1999).

When demanding a speedy trial, the minimum acceptable standard required that a demand for trial be coupled with some other language placing the state on reasonable notice that a speedy trial under the sanctions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 was being invoked, i.e., a reference to trial at the next term, reference to a "speedy trial," use of the language of the statute, or reference to the statute section. Merrow v. State, 268 Ga. App. 47, 601 S.E.2d 428 (2004).

Pleading caption reasonably construed as demand. — Defendant's pleading captioned as defendant's "DEMAND," which included a demand for "trial by jury pursuant to the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, Section 17-7-170 ...." could reasonably be construed as a demand for a speedy trial. Green v. State, 191 Ga. App. 873, 383 S.E.2d 359 (1989).

Pleading captioned a "waiver of jury trial & demand for jury trial," and demanding a jury trial in the event the defendant's case were transferred from the recorder's court to the superior court, constituted a demand for speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, when the pleading served the important purpose of notifying the state and the court of the defendant's intention to proceed to a trial, or be discharged, at a subsequent term. Huff v. State, 201 Ga. App. 408, 411 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 411 S.E.2d 60 (1991).

Caption "demand for jury trial" on defendant's motion was legally sufficient to place the state on notice of the defendant's demand for speedy trial since the body of the notice stated clearly "this is a request for speedy trial under this section." Aranza v. State, 213 Ga. App. 192, 444 S.E.2d 349 (1994).

Demand for trial was sufficient even though it was captioned with an inaccurate indictment number. State v. Wright, 221 Ga. App. 584, 472 S.E.2d 144 (1996).

When counsel for a defendant charged with rape filed a document entitled "Entry of Appearance of Counsel and Demand for Trial," which simply demanded a trial, this was insufficient to invoke the sanctions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 for violation of the right to speedy trial. Merrow v. State, 268 Ga. App. 47, 601 S.E.2d 428 (2004).

Form not adequate to constitute demand. — Document entitled "Arraignment Plea and Waiver" upon which a box was checked by the appellee next to the statement "I request a jury trial" did not constitute a demand for speedy trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. State v. King, 164 Ga. App. 834, 298 S.E.2d 586 (1982).

Demand for speedy trial was insufficient when the demand failed to identify the charges upon which the defendant demanded a speedy trial by name, date, term of court, or case number. Aranza v. State, 213 Ga. App. 192, 444 S.E.2d 349 (1994).

Provision in the fifth paragraph of a document entitled "Motion Filed on Behalf of Defendant" stating "causes now, the defendant in the above styled case and makes demand upon the state for a speedy trial," was insufficient to invoke speedy trial requirements. Dyal v. State, 211 Ga. App. 816, 440 S.E.2d 716 (1994).

Defendant's motion that requested a jury trial and referenced O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 could not reasonably be construed to demand a speedy trial. Bennett v. State, 244 Ga. App. 149, 534 S.E.2d 881 (2000).

Pleading caption held insufficient. — Caption "JURY DEMAND" failed to set out the exact nature of a pleading as a demand for trial. A demand for trial will not be considered sufficient to invoke the extreme sanction of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 unless it is presented for what it is — a demand to be tried within the next succeeding term of court. Kramer v. State, 185 Ga. App. 254, 363 S.E.2d 800, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 363 S.E.2d 800 (1987).

Defendant's "Omnibus Motion" was insufficient to invoke O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 when, although the motion contained language requesting a trial, the caption of the motion obfuscated the nature of the pleading. Wilder v. State, 192 Ga. App. 891, 386 S.E.2d 685 (1989).

Because the defendant did not strictly comply with the pleading requirements, having titled the pleading "Defendant's Waiver of Formal Arraignment, Entry of 'Not Guilty Plea' and Demand for Jury Trial" rather than "Demand for Speedy Trial" and failing to make it a separate pleading, the trial court properly determined that the defendant was not entitled to discharge and acquittal. Uribe v. State, 346 Ga. App. 264, 816 S.E.2d 113 (2018).

Demand insufficient to invoke section. — Letter addressed to and delivered to the district attorney by the defendant's attorney requesting a trial by jury is not a demand sufficient to invoke the discharge provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Forbus v. State, 250 Ga. 24, 295 S.E.2d 530 (1982).

Writing a request for speedy trial on the back of the indictment did not constitute actual notice to the prosecutor as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and the trial court did not err in denying the defendant the extreme sanction of a directed verdict of acquittal and discharge. Carter v. State, 226 Ga. App. 198, 486 S.E.2d 79 (1997).

Demand in letter held sufficient. — Defendant's letter containing a specific request to be tried "at this or the next succeeding term of court" and a specific reference to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 was sufficient to invoke the extreme sanction of acquittal. State v. Prestia, 183 Ga. App. 24, 357 S.E.2d 829, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 907, 357 S.E.2d 829 (1987).

Obvious mistake in naming another person as the movant in the body of the demand could not have misled the state's attorney since the defendant was correctly identified as the defendant in the style of the pleading, and the citation numbers referencing the charges against the defendant were correctly set forth therein. Verscharen v. State, 188 Ga. App. 746, 374 S.E.2d 349 (1988).

Service of process. — Defendant was not entitled to a motion for discharge and acquittal on speedy trial grounds when the prosecution rebutted prima facie evidence of the certificate of service as strict compliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 was a prerequisite for relief. Leimbach v. State, 251 Ga. App. 589, 554 S.E.2d 771 (2001).

Failure to serve demand for trial. — Trial court's finding that the state's attorney was not served with the defendant's demand for trial is supported by an absence of certificates of service showing that the state's attorney had been served with the defendant's demand for trial and by the state's attorney's statement that neither the state attorney nor the district attorney's office had been served with the defendant's demand for trial. Under these circumstances, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea of autrefois acquit. Johnson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 896, 418 S.E.2d 155 (1992).

Trial court properly denied a pre-indictment motion for discharge and acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 after the defendant filed the waiver of formal indictment and demand for trial without serving a copy upon the prosecutor or the trial judge. Webb v. State, 278 Ga. App. 9, 627 S.E.2d 925 (2006).

Failure to serve speedy trial demand on trial court. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion autrefois convict in a rape case under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1; the defendant did not substantially comply with the O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 requirements for filing a speedy trial demand on sexual battery charges that were pending before the instant rape charge was filed because the defendant failed to file the demand on the trial judge and thus no speedy trial demand was made. Baker v. State, 270 Ga. App. 762, 608 S.E.2d 38 (2004).

Procedure (Cont'd)

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motions for discharge and acquittal pursuant to the defendant's statutory right to a speedy trial because, despite the defendant's assertions to the contrary, the defendant did not show that the defendant properly served the trial court judge with the motion for speedy trial as, on the motion's face, there was nothing in the certificate of service that showed that the defendant properly served the trial court judge as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Wimbush v. State, 345 Ga. App. 54, 812 S.E.2d 489 (2018).

Defendant failed to perfect service of defendant's demand for trial on either the official charged with prosecuting offenses in the recorder's court (where the demand was filed) or the official responsible for prosecuting offenses in the superior court (where the case had been transferred prior to the defendant's filing a demand for trial); there was no error in denying the defendant's plea of autrefois acquit based on the defendant's failure to serve the appropriate official with a copy of the defendant's demand. Vondolteren v. State, 184 Ga. App. 344, 361 S.E.2d 833, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 911, 361 S.E.2d 833 (1987).

Defendant need not repeat demand upon grant of a new trial. — If at a term when a demand for trial is operative, a trial is had resulting in a verdict of guilty, and a new trial is thereafter granted, the defendant is not required to again demand a trial since the state is already on notice of the demand, and if two regular terms go by in which juries are impaneled and qualified, and the defendant is not tried, the defendant shall be absolutely discharged and acquitted of the offense in which a demand for trial has been made. Dennis v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 671, 118 S.E.2d 923 (1961).

Trial as to other charges when new trial granted as to one. — When a demand for trial is filed and a new trial is granted as to one charge upon the remittitur of the Supreme Court being made the order of the lower court, this section being tolled during the period as to that charge, nevertheless, the demand for trial as to the other charge requires a trial at the next succeeding regular term thereafter, provided at both terms there were juries impaneled and qualified to try the accused, or the petitioner would be entitled to discharge and acquittal of the latter offense. Dennis v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 671, 118 S.E.2d 923 (1961).

Forfeiture of bond for nonappearance is no bar to demanding trial provided there is a jury qualified to try the cause when the demand is made. Hall v. State, 21 Ga. 148 (1857).

Effect of nolle prosequi on demand. — Entry of a nolle prosequi without the accused's consent would not affect the accused's rights. The demand would stand over to be complied with at the next term. Brown v. State, 85 Ga. 713, 11 S.E. 831 (1890).

If compliance with the notice requirement of Rule 31.2, Uniform Superior Court Rules, would cause the state to violate defendant's right to a speedy trial, a trial court does not abuse the court's discretion in proceeding to trial in accordance with the defendant's speedy trial demand. Kellibrew v. State, 239 Ga. App. 783, 521 S.E.2d 921 (1999).

Motion for severance properly denied. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion to sever the offenses charged in the indictment because all but one of the charged offenses occurred within a five-week period, the offenses took place at the same location, three of the offenses shared common witnesses, and since the jury acquitted the defendant of aggravated battery, aggravated assault, and battery, it was clear that the jury was able to distinguish the evidence and apply the law intelligently as to each offense. Rossell v. State, 341 Ga. App. 356, 799 S.E.2d 34 (2017).

Role of Clerk

Function of placing the demand on the minutes is to give notice to the state that the time in which trial must be had is running. Newman v. State, 121 Ga. App. 692, 175 S.E.2d 144 (1970).

Court's duty to allow demand to be placed on minutes. — It is the duty of the trial court, upon notice, to allow the demand to be placed on the minutes of the court. Jeffries v. State, 140 Ga. App. 477, 231 S.E.2d 369 (1976).

Right to speedy trial unaffected by fact that demand is not entered on minutes. — Fact that a demand for trial is not actually entered by the clerk upon the minutes of the court may not affect the defendant's statutory right to speedy trial. Jeffries v. State, 140 Ga. App. 477, 231 S.E.2d 369 (1976).

If demand is filed with clerk, failure to actually enter demand is immaterial. — If the demand is filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court, prior to the adjournment of that court, it is immaterial that such demand was not actually entered by the clerk upon the minutes of the court. Bryning v. State, 86 Ga. App. 35, 70 S.E.2d 779 (1952).

If clerk is at fault for omission from minutes, special plea in bar not thereby defeated. — If all other requisites of this section had been met and the omission of the demands from the minutes is the fault of the clerk of court and not of the defendants or defendants' counsel, such omission does not defeat the special plea in bar. Jeffries v. State, 140 Ga. App. 477, 231 S.E.2d 369 (1976).

Correction of minutes to eliminate omission. — If as a matter of fact the minutes fail to speak the truth in that the minutes do not show the demand, the court has the power to correct the minutes and eliminate the omission so that the court's own records conform to the truth. Jeffries v. State, 140 Ga. App. 477, 231 S.E.2d 369 (1976).

If demand not permitted, recording demand serves no purpose. — It serves no purpose to record a demand in the usual fashion when permission to make the demand has not been granted. Newman v. State, 121 Ga. App. 692, 175 S.E.2d 144 (1970).

Defendant's right to inclusion of jury demand in minutes. — If jury demand be made, it is the right of the accused to have the demand spread upon the minutes and the duty of the clerk to do it. Pless v. State, 157 Ga. App. 681, 278 S.E.2d 475 (1981); Lusher v. State, 192 Ga. App. 606, 386 S.E.2d 364 (1989); Larouche v. State, 192 Ga. App. 610, 386 S.E.2d 367 (1989).

Qualified Jury

"Qualified" defined. — Word "qualified" as used in this section related to the general qualification of the panels, rather than to the particular qualification of an individual juror appearing thereon. If the panel is a qualified panel, or if the array is not subject to challenge, the defendant should be tried upon the defendant's demand, or discharged. If necessary, the court may cause the panels to be filled in the event any of the jurors disqualify or are otherwise put off for cause. Campbell v. State, 6 Ga. App. 539, 65 S.E. 307 (1909).

Qualification of jury. — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 only requires that during the court terms there be juries impaneled and qualified to try a defendant; the statute does not require such a jury the moment appellant files a demand for trial. Lusher v. State, 192 Ga. App. 606, 386 S.E.2d 364 (1989); Larouche v. State, 192 Ga. App. 610, 386 S.E.2d 367 (1989).

Jurors impaneled in county superior court were qualified to try the defendant in the state court of the county and, thus, the defendant was entitled to discharge and acquittal when the defendant was not tried during the term in which the defendant's demand for trial was made. Scott v. State, 206 Ga. App. 17, 424 S.E.2d 325 (1992).

When jurors were summoned for a special civil trial session of the July 1993 term of court, and the defendant filed a demand for trial during that term, at a time when the jurors were impaneled and qualified, the fact that the state's attorney did not wish to work the jurors impaneled did not warrant the trial court's conclusion that the time for the defendant's demand did not begin to run until the next (October) term of the court and that the demand would not trigger a bar to prosecution until the expiration of the January

Qualified Jury (Cont'd)

1994 term. McKnight v. State, 215 Ga. App. 899, 453 S.E.2d 38 (1994).

For purposes of a state court prosecution, a term in which superior court jurors were impaneled did not apply to a speedy trial determination because the jurors were not qualified to serve as state court jurors since the summons sent to the jurors referred only to the superior court. George v. State, 229 Ga. App. 632, 494 S.E.2d 526, aff'd, 269 Ga. 863, 505 S.E.2d 743 (1998).

If there is a demand for a speedy trial in a state court case in a term for which no state court jurors are impaneled, a jury impaneled by a superior court may serve in state court if the conditions of O.C.G.A. § 15-12-130 are met. George v. State, 269 Ga. 863, 505 S.E.2d 743 (1998).

If no jury is impaneled and qualified to try a person when the demand is filed, the time designated in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 does not begin to run until the term at which jurors are impaneled and qualified to try the person. Kersey v. State, 191 Ga. App. 847, 383 S.E.2d 348 (1989).

Consideration of number of available jurors. — Court of appeals erred in holding that the term in which the defendant filed a speedy trial demand did not count for purposes of determining entitlement to discharge and acquittal. The court of appeals erred in finding there were only five jurors available as the remaining 32 who appeared were either serving on other trials or had been committed for other trials; O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 did not require the court to examine how many jurors were serving on other trials or committed to other trials. Williamson v. State, 295 Ga. 185, 758 S.E.2d 790 (2014).

Demand

Purpose of demand. — Purpose of entry of demand is to notify the state of the defendant's intention to proceed to a trial, or be discharged at a subsequent term. Stripland v. State, 115 Ga. 578, 41 S.E. 987 (1902).

Conflict with local law. — As O.C.G.A. § 15-7-43(b), enacted in 1983, incorporates the speedy trial provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 by reference, those provisions supersede a 1981 local law provision entitling a defendant in a state court to discharge and acquittal if no trial is had at the term when the demand is made or within the next two succeeding regular terms thereafter. Majia v. State, 174 Ga. App. 432, 330 S.E.2d 171, aff'd, 254 Ga. 660, 333 S.E.2d 834 (1985); Parks v. State, 239 Ga. App. 333, 521 S.E.2d 370 (1999).

As between O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and the Act establishing the State Court of Gwinnett County, Ga. L. 1977, p. 3331, as amended by Ga. L. 1981, pp. 3033, 3034, O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 controls and governs the practice in the State Court of Gwinnett County. Hensler v. State, 174 Ga. App. 609, 332 S.E.2d 45, aff'd, 254 Ga. 660, 333 S.E.2d 834 (1985); Dean v. State, 177 Ga. App. 678, 340 S.E.2d 647 (1986).

Demand applies only in courts which have terms and impanel juries. — Implicit in the wording of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 is that the demand is applicable only in courts which have terms and impanel juries. Ramsey v. State, 189 Ga. App. 91, 375 S.E.2d 63 (1988).

Demand for trial would be effective to invoke the statutory sanction of mandatory acquittal only if filed in a court of record having both regular terms and the authority to impanel juries. Cliatt v. State, 194 Ga. App. 110, 389 S.E.2d 568 (1989).

Demand must be made in the court when the case is pending. Hunley v. State, 105 Ga. 636, 31 S.E. 543 (1898).

Defendant failed to file a demand for speedy trial in the superior court as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 when, although the defendant filed a demand in the probate court where the charges were filed, the defendant failed to file a new demand in the superior court after the charges were transferred pursuant to the defendant's request for transfer. Conley v. State, 267 Ga. App. 185, 598 S.E.2d 897 (2004).

Order entering demand for trial is not conclusive when entered. — Ex parte order which enters a demand for trial and which recites that such demand truly made at a time that a traverse jury was impaneled and qualified to try the case is not conclusive upon the trial court when entered. State v. McDonald, 242 Ga. 487, 249 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

Defendant cannot claim the benefits of this section if the defendant made no demand for trial. Dansby v. State, 140 Ga. App. 104, 230 S.E.2d 64 (1976).

Defendant's presence not required. — O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 does not require the physical presence of a defendant in the trial court in order to pursue a demand for trial. The statute is satisfied if a defendant is available for trial, whether physically present in court or not. State v. Collins, 201 Ga. App. 500, 411 S.E.2d 546 (1991).

Defendant's presence required. — Fact that the defendant was unable to appear due to involuntary extradition to another state did not alleviate the requirement that the defendant be present and announce ready for trial. Bashlor v. State, 165 Ga. App. 329, 299 S.E.2d 418 (1983).

Demand binding only in court in which it is filed. — Although the defendant's demand was filed in a municipal court, and a copy of the demand was sent to the state court prosecutor, the demand was ineffective as to the state court because the demand was "binding only in the court in which the demand is filed." Adams v. State, 189 Ga. App. 345, 375 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Demand follows the indictment to whatever court the case may be transferred. Castleberry v. State, 11 Ga. App. 757, 76 S.E. 74 (1912).

It is immaterial that the court to which the indictment is transferred is without authority to try the accused. Brock v. Slaton, 18 Ga. App. 175, 89 S.E. 156 (1916).

Transfer of case. — Demand for trial is deemed to be transferred along with the case when the case is transferred from one court to another, and, therefore, the defendant was entitled to an acquittal when the demand was not included in the materials forwarded to the other court and the case was not tried within two terms after the filing of the demand. Turner v. State, 188 Ga. App. 267, 372 S.E.2d 826 (1988).

Defendant's demand for a speedy trial was binding in superior court after the defendant's case was transferred to the superior court, even though the superior court did not receive the motion until after July 1, 1987, the effective date of the amendment to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 providing that a demand for a speedy trial is binding only in the court in which it is filed, when the defendant filed the demand prior to the effective date of the amendment. O'Neal v. State, 188 Ga. App. 270, 372 S.E.2d 833 (1988).

Since a Uniform Traffic Citation accusation expired when the defendant's case was transferred to the superior court for indictment and trial, and the defendant's demand for speedy trial was made only as to the indictment, the demand did not transfer to the state court as a demand for trial on an accusation filed after the indictment had been dismissed. Ramsey v. State, 189 Ga. App. 91, 375 S.E.2d 63 (1988).

Defendant who did not make a demand in a court which could not give the defendant a trial in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 is not precluded from making a demand for trial after being bound over to the jurisdiction of another court after a new accusation is filed and the defendant makes a demand at that term or the next regular term. Marks v. State, 192 Ga. App. 106, 384 S.E.2d 186, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 902, 384 S.E.2d 186 (1989).

Defendant, charged with a traffic violation, filed a demand for trial in the recorder's court but not in the state court after the case was transferred, but that demand for trial was ineffective to invoke the sanction of discharge and acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, and the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Cliatt v. State, 194 Ga. App. 110, 389 S.E.2d 568 (1989), cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 389 S.E.2d 568 (1990).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea in bar as the defendant's demand for a speedy trial applied only to the prosecution against the defendant on misdemeanor traffic charges in the probate court when the defendant made the demand; since the defendant expressly waived the right to a speedy trial when the defendant requested that the defendant's case be transferred to the superior court, the defendant's speedy trial rights were not violated. Bishop v. State, 261 Ga. App. 445, 582 S.E.2d 571 (2003).

Demand (Cont'd)

Demand not inferred. — Demand for speedy trial as to an accusation under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 will not be inferred unless a demand is specifically made. Ramsey v. State, 189 Ga. App. 91, 375 S.E.2d 63 (1988).

Ambiguous demand insufficient. — Demand which merely requests a trial by jury is insufficient; to invoke the extreme sanction of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 the demand must provide a reasonable reference to the provisions of that section, or otherwise clearly indicate that it is a demand for a speedy trial. Kevinezz v. State, 207 Ga. App. 456, 428 S.E.2d 366 (1993).

When no indictment is necessary. — Statutory language referring to "a true bill of indictment or an accusation" applies to an accusation only in those cases in which no indictment is necessary, either because of the nature of the offense or a defendant's written waiver of indictment. Groom v. State, 212 Ga. App. 133, 441 S.E.2d 259 (1994).

Time demand is entered as affecting rights. — If the demand was entered and allowed, the accused was entitled to all the rights of this section, regardless of the term at which the demand was entered. Dublin v. State, 126 Ga. 580, 55 S.E. 487 (1906).

Filing demand after indictment not prerequisite for asserting violation of constitutional speedy trial right. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss an indictment on the ground that the state violated the defendant's right to a speedy trial under the Sixth Amendment because the trial court failed to consider the facts showing that the defendant was out on bond and without counsel during the 42-month period between the defendant's arrest and indictment; the defendant was not entitled to file a statutory demand for a speedy trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 during the 42 months following the arrest but prior to the indictment, and the filing of a demand after the indictment was not a prerequisite for asserting a violation of the constitutional right to a speedy trial. Goffaux v. State, 313 Ga. App. 428, 721 S.E.2d 635 (2011).

In order to trigger this section, the defendant must make a demand at a time that a traverse jury is impaneled and qualified to try the defendant. State v. McDonald, 242 Ga. 487, 249 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

Demand for trial must be made at a regular term of court at which there was a jury impaneled and qualified to try the defendant, and while no order of the court may be necessary if it was filed during the term at which the defendant was indicted, this section expressly requires permission of the court if the demand was made at a regular term subsequent to the term of indictment and the first term thereafter. Hatfield v. State, 139 Ga. App. 535, 228 S.E.2d 720 (1976).

In order to invoke the provisions of this section, the defendant must move for an immediate trial, the trial court must accept the demand, and note the demand on the minutes of the court. The movant must also be in attendance or available at the court in which the movant demands trial. There is no inherent authority in a court of this state to compel a defendant's in-court attendance when such defendant is incarcerated outside this state pursuant to a sentence imposed by a different sovereign. Hunt v. State, 147 Ga. App. 787, 250 S.E.2d 517 (1978).

Demand for jury trial on last day of term. — Because a criminal defendant made a demand for a jury trial on January 31, the last day of the November term of court, when there were no juries available for service, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea in bar filed in the May term. Kirk v. State, 194 Ga. App. 801, 392 S.E.2d 249 (1990).

Demand for trial need not be presented to the trial judge and approved by the judge. Jeffries v. State, 140 Ga. App. 477, 231 S.E.2d 369 (1976).

Approval of the trial judge was not required under this section when the demand is made at the term at which the indictment is returned or the next succeeding regular term thereafter. Nor was it necessary to present the demand to the judge rather than to the clerk of court in order to apprise the court of the demand's existence. Dickerson v. State, 108 Ga. App. 548, 134 S.E.2d 51 (1963).

Decision holding that demand for trial must be made to the judge and not to the clerk. — See Turner v. State, 136 Ga. App. 42, 220 S.E.2d 57 (1975).

Demand for trial need not be presented to the judge rather than to the clerk of court. Dickerson v. State, 108 Ga. App. 548, 134 S.E.2d 51 (1963).

Right to demand trial during term in which indictment found. — Every person against whom a bill of indictment is found shall be tried at the term of court at which the indictment is found, unless the absence of a material witness or the principles of justice require a postponement of the trial, in which event the court shall allow a postponement until the next term. In keeping with this policy, this section provided that an accused person may demand such trial. Harris v. State, 84 Ga. App. 1, 65 S.E.2d 267 (1951).

Defendant does not have to wait a term before making a demand for trial but may make the demand at the term at which the indictment was returned. Harris v. State, 84 Ga. App. 1, 65 S.E.2d 267 (1951).

Demand must be for trial at next term. — Demand for trial will not be sufficient to invoke the extreme sanction of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 unless the demand is presented for what it is — a demand to be tried within the next succeeding term of court. Smith v. State, 166 Ga. App. 352, 304 S.E.2d 476 (1983).

If a defendant fails to make a demand for trial at the term at which the indictment was returned, or at the next term and did not obtain the permission of the court to make an out-of-time demand, the defendant's claims under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 are without merit. Hubbard v. State, 176 Ga. App. 622, 337 S.E.2d 60 (1985); Ramsey v. State, 183 Ga. App. 48, 357 S.E.2d 869, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 357 S.E.2d 869 (1987).

Demand by defendant who is not within state nor subpoena power of the state's courts. — If the defendant applies for a speedy trial under former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170) but cannot procedurally seek a speedy trial under that section because the defendant is not physically present or within the subpoena power of the Georgia courts, the defendant's right to a speedy trial must be determined under the Interstate Agreement of Detainers, Art. 2, Ch. 6, T. 42, if that statute was utilized to secure the defendant's trial. Johnson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 512, 268 S.E.2d 782 (1980).

Demand for jury trial was a demand for trial sufficient to invoke this section. Wallis v. State, 154 Ga. App. 764, 270 S.E.2d 45 (1980).

Motion for opportunity to select fair jury is not a demand for trial. — Motion to require that the defendant have an opportunity to select a fairly constituted traverse jury was not a demand for trial operating to invoke this section. Bennett v. State, 153 Ga. App. 21, 264 S.E.2d 516 (1980).

Notice sent to the Board of Offender Rehabilitation requesting a final disposition of an escape charge does not have the same effect as a demand for trial. Halm v. State, 125 Ga. App. 618, 188 S.E.2d 434 (1972).

Demand may be made by one of two persons jointly indicted after one has secured a severance. Winkle v. State, 20 Ga. 666 (1856).

Standing over of demand to next term upon securing of new trial by convicted defendant. — When a convicted defendant who filed a demand for speedy trial successfully takes action to negate the determination of guilt and secures a new trial, the demand will stand over to be complied with at the next term. Bennett v. State, 158 Ga. App. 421, 280 S.E.2d 429 (1981).

Demand for trial may be waived by counsel. Hogan v. State, 193 Ga. App. 543, 388 S.E.2d 532 (1989).

Defendant did not waive a demand for trial by a letter from defense counsel to the solicitor advising the defendant that it "would not be necessary to hear the motions" in the defendant's case since a demand for trial is not a motion and therefore was not the subject of the letter. Larouche v. State, 192 Ga. App. 610, 386 S.E.2d 367 (1989).

Demand (Cont'd)

Demand not waived by pretrial motions. — Defendants' filing of pretrial motions did not constitute a consent or other affirmative act amounting to waiver of a demand for trial in the next succeeding term of court. Peek v. State, 189 Ga. App. 584, 377 S.E.2d 8 (1988), aff'd sub nom. Parks v. Norred & Assocs., 206 Ga. App. 494, 426 S.E.2d 12 (1992).

Order not entered pursuant to demand. — In order to invoke the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, a defendant must make a demand for trial. The court's order, requiring that the sheriff or the sheiff's deputy "pick up … defendant and bring him before [the] Court for the disposition of his case as soon as possible," neither indicated that it was entered pursuant to a demand for trial made by the defendant, nor was the order sufficient to invoke the extreme sanction of that Code section. Coggins v. State, 188 Ga. App. 455, 373 S.E.2d 269 (1988).

If there is no jury impaneled and qualified at the time the demand is made, the demand is not good for that term. State v. McDonald, 146 Ga. App. 83, 245 S.E.2d 446, rev'd on other grounds, 242 Ga. 487, 249 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

Since the defendant filed a demand for a speedy trial during a term in which no jurors were impaneled, the term did not count in computing the two-term requirement under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a). Spencer v. State, 259 Ga. App. 664, 577 S.E.2d 817 (2003).

Because jurors were dismissed and not subject to recall, the jurors were not empanelled for service when the defendant made the defendant's demand for speedy trial; thus, the term in which the demand was filed did not count for computation of the two-term requirement. Johnson v. State, 264 Ga. App. 195, 590 S.E.2d 145 (2003).

Pro se demand invalid if defendant has counsel. — Because, at the time the defendants filed the defendants' pro se demand for discharge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, the defendants were represented by counsel, the trial court was clearly authorized to find that this pro se demand was of no legal effect. Goodwin v. State, 202 Ga. App. 655, 415 S.E.2d 472 (1992); Maddox v. State, 218 Ga. App. 320, 461 S.E.2d 286 (1995).

Since the defendant was represented by counsel when the defendant filed a pro se demand for speedy trial, that demand was of no legal effect whatsoever. Daniels v. State, 235 Ga. App. 296, 509 S.E.2d 368 (1998).

Defendant's demand for speedy trial was filed pro se while the defendant was represented by counsel, and because such demand was filed before the indictment was returned against the defendant, the defendant's demand had no legal effect. Brown v. State, 264 Ga. App. 9, 589 S.E.2d 830 (2003), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 831, 125 S. Ct. 172, 160 L. Ed. 2d 48 (2004).

Accused may sit mute at the second term. — Only duty imposed on the defendant being that the defendant be not voluntarily absent from the court, and that the defendant shall have done no other act which in law would amount to a waiver of the defendant's demand. Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S.E. 562 (1912).

Demand including request for trial by jury. — Because the defendant filed a single demand which was specifically captioned and written as a "Demand For Speedy Trial By Jury Under OCGA § 17-7-170", the defendant's subsequent "Withdrawal of Jury Demand", without more, served to withdraw the defendant's single, previously filed demand in the demand's entirety. Price v. State, 245 Ga. App. 128, 535 S.E.2d 766 (2000).

Waiver

Silence at second term and failure to bring demand to court's attention not waiver. — Accused may waive the right under this section, but mere silence at the second term and failure to bring the demand to the court's attention will not amount to a waiver. Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S.E. 562 (1912).

Allowing jury to be discharged is not waiver. Dacey v. State, 15 Ga. 286 (1854).

Absence when the case is called constitutes waiver. Moreland v. State, 51 Ga. 192 (1874); Odom v. State, 25 Ga. App. 746, 105 S.E. 54 (1920).

Voluntary absence from court constituted a waiver by the accused of rights under this section. Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S.E. 562 (1912).

Voluntary absence from the court amounts to a waiver of the demand for trial and the defendant is not entitled to discharge and acquittal. Daniels v. State, 199 Ga. App. 400, 405 S.E.2d 88, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 405 S.E.2d 88 (1991); State v. Collins, 201 Ga. App. 500, 411 S.E.2d 546 (1991).

Absence from calendar call not waiver. — Absence of the defendant and, by extension, the defendant's counsel from a calendar call is not, per se, sufficient grounds to find waiver of the trial demand. McKnight v. State, 215 Ga. App. 899, 453 S.E.2d 38 (1994).

No waiver of the defendant's demand for a speedy trial occurred as a result of defense counsel's absence from the courtroom when the case was called for trial because under the facts in the case defense counsel justifiably believed counsel was "on call." State v. McKnight, 265 Ga. 701, 462 S.E.2d 142 (1995).

Waiver. — If defense counsel failed to appear at a calendar call, failed to file a conflict letter, and failed to contact the court when a conflicting trial ended (in accordance with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 17.1(C)), counsel's actions amounted to a waiver of the defendant's O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 speedy trial demand. Oni v. State, 268 Ga. App. 840, 602 S.E.2d 859 (2004).

Speedy trial demand in a non-capital case did not impose a requirement to announce a readiness for trial; rather, a request for a continuance outside the term of the demand waived the speedy trial demand. Dingler v. State, 281 Ga. App. 721, 637 S.E.2d 120 (2006).

When the court previously found that a defendant waived the defendant's statutory speedy trial claim, the defendant could not relitigate the issue in a subsequent appeal despite a delay following remittitur. Oni v. State, 285 Ga. App. 342, 646 S.E.2d 312 (2007).

Waiver by guilty plea. — Despite attempts by the defendant to reserve the right prior to a plea, the defendant waived the right to assert on appeal that the state failed to comply with the speedy trial requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(b) by a guilty plea. Hewell v. State, 277 Ga. App. 265, 626 S.E.2d 237 (2006).

Failure to make demand as waiver of speedy trial. — While the burden was on the defendant to protect the defendant's statutory rights to a speedy trial by making a timely demand for trial under this section, the defendant's failure to do so did not, of itself, work a waiver of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597 (1974).

While there is a burden on a defendant to protect the defendant's right to a speedy trial, failure to make a demand does not amount to a waiver of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Simpson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 814, 258 S.E.2d 634 (1979).

Defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated because the defendant did not file a statutory demand for speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and the delay was partially attributable to the defendant. Manning v. State, 250 Ga. App. 187, 550 S.E.2d 762 (2001).

Trial court erred in dismissing the defendant's demand for a speedy trial on the state's motion to dismiss; although the defendant was required to obtain special permission of the court to file such a demand for trial because the defendant had not entered such a demand during the court term in which the indictment was filed or at the next succeeding regular term of court, the record showed that the trial court essentially granted permission by instructing the defendant at a bond revocation hearing to file such a demand. Prather v. State, 261 Ga. App. 506, 583 S.E.2d 191 (2003).

Defendant's motion for continuance did not constitute waiver. — Defendant's action in moving for a continuance until scientific test results were forthcoming, when the state failed to produce scientific test results the state had informed the trial court would be ready on the day of trial, did not constitute a waiver of the defendant's rights under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Weidlund v. State, 191 Ga. App. 668, 382 S.E.2d 709 (1989).

Defendant's attorney did not waive demand by agreeing to continuance. — Although a defendant's attorney agreed to a continuance in early December 2004, there was no evidence that the attorney agreed to continue the case past that term of court which, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-5-3, did not end until February 2005, and in which the case could have been tried and was required to be tried following the defendant's speedy trial demand under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 in the prior court term. Thornton v. State, 301 Ga. App. 784, 689 S.E.2d 361 (2009).

Waiver (Cont'd)

Waiver by motion to quash. — Defendant's O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 speedy trial claim was properly denied because the defendant's motions to quash the indictments were affirmative actions which forced the state to reindict, the defendant failed to support, with evidence the assertion that there were jurors ready to hear trials toward the end of the term of court, and, finally, after the third indictment, the defendant requested to be tried within the current or following term, which included the August term during which the defendant filed the motion that led to the appeal; defendant's latest request for a speedy trial afforded no ground for relief at that time. Tyner v. State, 298 Ga. App. 42, 679 S.E.2d 82 (2009).

Waiver of rights by numerous continuances. — Defendant's numerous requested continuances and leaves of absence, and the defendant's consenting to a notice resetting the case over to the next court term, waived the defendant's speedy trial demand and right to automatic discharge. Jones v. State, 250 Ga. App. 829, 553 S.E.2d 24 (2001), aff'd, 276 Ga. 171, 575 S.E.2d (2003).

By challenging the jury pool, defendant waives the right to a jury trial during that term and to use that term in the computation of terms under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 (b). Wilson v. State, 181 Ga. App. 337, 352 S.E.2d 189 (1986).

Waiver of demand for speedy trial would result from continuance granted on motion of accused, or from any other act on the accused's part showing affirmatively that the accused consented to passing the case until a subsequent term. Bennett v. State, 158 Ga. App. 421, 280 S.E.2d 429 (1981).

Requesting a continuance is not the only way to waive a demand for trial since any affirmative action of the defendant which results in a continuance or a failure to try the case within the time fixed by statute after the filing of the demand has the effect of tolling the time. Sykes v. State, 236 Ga. App. 518, 511 S.E.2d 566 (1999).

Defendant waived the right to a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 as the defendant repeatedly acknowledged that the defendant's motion for a continuance would constitute a waiver of the defendant's right to an automatic discharge and acquittal. Furthermore, there was no evidence that the state intended to manipulate the trial calendar by re-indicting the defendant; although the new indictment required proof of a new element, the defendant was given two weeks' notice of the state's intent to present the new indictment to the grand jury, and it was the defendant who requested a continuance on the last date in which it was possible to try the case in accordance with the defendant's speedy trial demand. Trimm v. State, 297 Ga. App. 861, 678 S.E.2d 567 (2009).

Waiver by filing subsequent formal demand for trial. — Although timely demand for jury trial is sufficient to trigger O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, the defendant waives the right to rely upon that demand by filing a subsequent formal demand for trial during the succeeding term or the following term and thus the defendant, in effect, consented to extending the defendant's demand for trial. Huckeba v. State, 157 Ga. App. 795, 278 S.E.2d 703 (1981).

Defense counsel's actions waived demand. — Conduct of the defendant and defense counsel of demanding and proceeding to trial, not consenting to a substitute judge, and objecting to a recess of the case in addition to requesting a mistrial, realizing that such action would pass the case into the next term, amounted to conduct to avoid trial and affirmatively waived the demand. Cates v. State, 226 Ga. App. 519, 486 S.E.2d 654 (1997).

Because defense counsel did not comply with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 16.2 governing a leave of absence, counsel's failure to appear at trial acted as a waiver of the defendant's speedy trial rights. Linkous v. State, 254 Ga. App. 43, 561 S.E.2d 128 (2002), aff'd, sub nom. Jones v. State, 276 Ga. 171, 575 S.E.2d 456 (2003).

In an action in which the defendant filed a demand for a speedy trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a), but the defendant's counsel later consented to the continuance of the case beyond the time when trial was to be held, the defendant was deemed to have waived the right to automatic discharge. Cobb v. State, 275 Ga. App. 554, 621 S.E.2d 548 (2005).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's pro se demand for a speedy trial on the ground that the defendant was represented by counsel when the defendant filed the motion because the defendant was represented by a public defender when the defendant filed the pro se demand; at the bond hearing, the defendant's attorney stated that the attorney spoke with the defendant and that they were not adopting the pro se speedy trial demand filed previously, which operated as a waiver of the defendant's right to an automatic discharge under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, and once the case was tried, the defendant's demand for a speedy trial expired. Works v. State, 301 Ga. App. 108, 686 S.E.2d 863 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0458, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 251 (Ga. 2010).

State carried the state's burden of demonstrating that the defendant waived the demand for a speedy trial because trial counsel announced that the demand for speedy trial was withdrawn, and counsel made the announcement only after consulting the defendant; counsel also announced that the defendant was making a joint motion with the state for a continuance. Twiggs v. State, 315 Ga. App. 191, 726 S.E.2d 680 (2012).

Waiver by pro se defendant who failed to demand speedy trial. — When a pro se defendant moved to dismiss the indictment for lack of a speedy trial, but the record contained no evidence that the defendant filed a demand for speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, the issue could not be considered by the appellate court. Owens v. State, 258 Ga. App. 647, 575 S.E.2d 14 (2002).

In a criminal case when defense counsel requested leave exceeding a total of 30 days but was never granted such leave by the trial court under Ga. Unif. St. Ct. R. 16.2, no valid leave of absence was in place and defense counsel effectively waived the defendant's speedy trial demand under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 by being absent, without excuse, on the only days left in the term when the defendant could have been tried. Jones v. State, 276 Ga. 171, 575 S.E.2d 456 (2003).

Demand waived by agreement to postpone outside term. — Waiver of a demand for a trial in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 does not result from an agreement by the defendant to postpone the trial to a time within the term of the demand; for waiver to occur, the agreement must be to postpone to a time outside the term of demand. State v. McNeil, 176 Ga. App. 323, 335 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

Proof of waiver. — State has the burden of showing that the defendant or defense counsel took such affirmative action resulting in a waiver of the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. State v. Grant, 217 Ga. App. 358, 457 S.E.2d 263 (1995).

Defendant made a timely demand for trial and was convicted following the erroneous denial of the defendant's motion for a continuance, and such conviction was reversed and the case remitted for new trial, the motion for a continuance and appeal did not constitute an affirmative action by the defendant resulting in delay and a waiver of the defendant's original demand and the defendant was entitled to a retrial within the two-term limits of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. State v. Grant, 217 Ga. App. 358, 457 S.E.2d 263 (1995).

State failed to establish waiver. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on statutory speedy trial grounds because the state failed to establish a waiver based upon the fact that the defendant's counsel had filed several notice of conflict letters pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 17.1; the conflict letters were filed after the two terms of court had expired and were not relevant to the waiver issue. Gifford v. State, 301 Ga. App. 50, 686 S.E.2d 831 (2009).

Impact of Motions for Mistrials

Effect of mistrial or grant of new trial. — If there is a mistrial in the case, or if the accused is convicted and a new trial granted, the accused will not lose the accused's rights under the demand, but the accused will be entitled to a trial or discharge at the next succeeding term. Gordon v. State, 106 Ga. 121, 32 S.E. 32 (1898); Dublin v. State, 126 Ga. 580, 55 S.E. 487 (1906).

Mistrial does not satisfy speedy trial requirements. — Mistrial based on the jury's inability to reach a verdict does not satisfy the speedy trial requirements, at least if the defendant could have been retried before the expiration of the term. Orvis v. State, 237 Ga. 6, 226 S.E.2d 570 (1976).

Motion for mistrial not waiver of demand. — Defendant's motion for mistrial did not constitute an affirmative waiver of the defendant's statutory demand for a speedy trial. State v. Allen, 165 Ga. App. 86, 299 S.E.2d 158 (1983).

Mistrial was not a trial within the meaning of this section, and a defendant was accordingly entitled to be again tried during the term or released at the term's end. Rider v. State, 103 Ga. App. 184, 118 S.E.2d 749 (1961).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial and abridging the defendant's constitutional right to be tried by the originally impaneled jury without first considering less drastic alternatives when the assigned courtroom was unavailable at the appointed time. The procedure the court used was flawed, not the result. A trial court is not categorically required to grant a continuance under similar circumstances; merely the court should consider a continuance as an alternative to declaring a mistrial. Since the trial court told defense counsel that if the defendant did not plead guilty, the court would declare a mistrial, the court took little or no heed to the defendant's constitutional rights thereby constituting an abuse of discretion. McGee v. State, 287 Ga. App. 839, 652 S.E.2d 822 (2007).

Accused need not take any steps to bring the case to trial again after mistrial; it is only requisite that the accused remain in attendance before the court. Thornton v. State, 7 Ga. App. 752, 67 S.E. 1055 (1910).

Trial in next term following mistrial. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(b), since the defendant's trial ended in a mistrial, the defendant could have been tried at any time during the next term of court, which was the April term; the denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss and the filing of the defendant's notice of appeal were both in the April term and the denial of the defendant's motion was proper because the state complied with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Rivers v. State, 279 Ga. App. 906, 633 S.E.2d 74 (2006).

Discharge and Acquittal

Discharge of defendant generally. — Upon entry of the demand for trial on the minutes, if the defendant is not tried at the term when the demand is made, or at the next succeeding regular term thereafter, provided, that at both terms there were juries impaneled and qualified to try the defendant, then the defendant is absolutely entitled to be discharged and acquitted of the offense charged in the indictment. Dickerson v. State, 108 Ga. App. 548, 134 S.E.2d 51 (1963).

Defendant who has made a proper demand for a trial is entitled to an automatic discharge without further motion if the defendant is not tried on the second term of court, provided a jury is present at each term who is qualified to try the defendant. Parker v. State, 135 Ga. App. 620, 218 S.E.2d 324 (1975).

This section was explicit in that if the defendant was not tried within two terms after the defendant filed a demand for speedy trial, the defendant must be absolutely acquitted and discharged of the offense. State v. Cox, 140 Ga. App. 30, 230 S.E.2d 87 (1976).

Statutory right is imperative and means that if the state fails to try a defendant eligible for trial as set forth in this section, the prisoner absolutely shall be discharged and acquitted of the offense with which the defendant stands charged. Jeffries v. State, 140 Ga. App. 477, 231 S.E.2d 369 (1976).

This section and the cases interpreting it, stand for the proposition that when demand was made and two terms of court expire, at both of which juries are impaneled and qualified to try the defendant, then discharge and acquittal must follow. Bush v. State, 152 Ga. App. 598, 263 S.E.2d 499 (1979).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 provides that the defendant is to be discharged and acquitted if the defendant is not tried during the term the demand is made or the next succeeding term provided that "at both court terms there were juries impaneled and qualified to try him." Whether or not a defendant sought a bench trial when the defendant was arraigned is immaterial. Pursuant to the statute, acquittal depends on the availability of a jury (and, logically, the court sitting without a jury) to try the defendant. Strickland v. State, 192 Ga. App. 613, 386 S.E.2d 165 (1989).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 provides that when a person makes a demand for trial the person is entitled to be discharged and acquitted of the offense charged if the person is not tried during the term in which the person's demand for trial is made or at the next succeeding regular term, and there were juries impaneled and qualified to try the person at each of those terms. Scott v. State, 206 Ga. App. 17, 424 S.E.2d 325 (1992).

In an action in which the trial court in the defendant's criminal matter entered an order of nolle prosequi regarding criminal charges against the defendant, the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal, based on a claim that the trial court failed to comply with the demand for a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, should have still been ruled on; accordingly, it was error to find that the defendant's petition for a writ of mandamus, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-6-20, seeking to have the trial court judge rule on the motion for discharge and acquittal, was rendered moot. Davis v. Wilson, 280 Ga. 29, 622 S.E.2d 325 (2005).

Defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal was properly granted even though a trial judge had been recused on the defendant's own initiative resulting in a delay of the proceedings. State v. Allen, 192 Ga. App. 730, 386 S.E.2d 394 (1989).

Trial court properly granted the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal of charges against the defendant, upon reconsideration, based on the state's failure to have speedily tried the defendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(b); although originally denied, the trial court granted the motion upon submission by the defendant of a jury manager's affidavit that indicated that there were qualified jurors who were impaneled and ready to try the case. State v. Edminson, 265 Ga. App. 91, 593 S.E.2d 18 (2003).

Defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal was improperly denied. — Defendant was denied the constitutional right to a speedy trial and to due process based on the state's intentional act of trading discovery responses for a speedy trial right, and the resulting prejudice from the disappearance of a material witness. The trial court therefore abused the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Ditman v. State, 301 Ga. App. 187, 687 S.E.2d 155 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0539, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 243 (Ga. 2010).

Because a defendant did not waive the defendant's statutory right to a speedy trial on the accusations charging the defendant with fleeing and attempting to elude and reckless driving, and because the state failed to try the defendant during the term in which the demand was filed or the next succeeding regular term of court, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(b), the defendant was entitled to an acquittal on those charges. Goddard v. State, 310 Ga. App. 2, 712 S.E.2d 528 (2011).

Failure of motion for discharge and acquittal. — When two counts of an indictment charged a defendant with crimes arising from the same conduct, and the crimes were known to the prosecutor at the time of commencing the prosecution and were within the jurisdiction of the same court, the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal of count two was properly denied despite the admitted failure of the state to try the defendant in the time proscribed. State v. Luster, 204 Ga. App. 156, 419 S.E.2d 32, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 922, 419 S.E.2d 32 (1992).

To be entitled to discharge, demand must be on minutes. — To entitle the defendant to an order of discharge, the defendant must show by the minutes of the court that the defendant has made the demand required by this section. Couch v. State, 28 Ga. 64 (1859).

Discharge and Acquittal (Cont'd)

Discharge is effective whether the order is ever entered on the minutes or not; however, as a matter of form and regularity the discharge should be entered. Thornton v. State, 7 Ga. App. 752, 67 S.E. 1055 (1910).

Acquittal results automatically, by operation of law, after the adjournment of the second term. Thornton v. State, 7 Ga. App. 752, 67 S.E. 1055 (1910); Bishop v. State, 11 Ga. App. 296, 75 S.E. 165 (1912); Smith v. State, 192 Ga. App. 604, 386 S.E.2d 370, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 903, 386 S.E.2d 370 (1989).

In an appeal of the trial court's denial of appellant's absolute discharge and acquittal for failure of speedy trial, since the appellant filed a demand for speedy trial on May 20, 1988, and appellant's case was not placed on the first two trial term calendars or on any other calendar, and in September appellant filed a motion for absolute discharge and acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, the trial court erred in denying the appellant's motion since the statute provides that upon proper demand, the defendant shall be acquitted and discharged, if the defendant is not tried when the demand is made or at the next succeeding regular court term thereafter. Birts v. State, 192 Ga. App. 476, 385 S.E.2d 120, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 901, 385 S.E.2d 120 (1989).

Demand not a prerequisite to invoke sanction of acquittal. — Because the filing of a statutory speedy trial demand was not a prerequisite to seeking discharge and acquittal based on a denial of the defendant's constitutional rights to a speedy trial, such could not serve as a valid argument to overturn the trial court's order in granting the defendant a discharge and acquittal on speedy trial grounds. State v. Moore, 289 Ga. App. 99, 656 S.E.2d 156 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0808, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 483 (Ga. 2008).

Demand insufficient to invoke sanction of acquittal. — Although the defendant's demand contained neither a specific reference to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 nor a specific request to be tried within the next succeeding term of court, its denomination as a "demand for trial as guaranteed by the law of the State of Georgia . . . filed during the April term of 1984 while jurors are impaneled to try the defendant" provided reasonable reference to that section and was sufficient to invoke the extreme sanction of acquittal. Edwards v. State, 177 Ga. App. 557, 340 S.E.2d 229 (1986).

Defendant, whose case was transferred from the recorder's court to the superior court, was not entitled to acquittal since it was questionable whether the defendant's speedy trial demand had any efficacy at all, in that the demand was filed only in a court which did not have terms or juries, and the demand was not refiled in the court which did have such. Huff v. State, 201 Ga. App. 408, 411 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 411 S.E.2d 60 (1991).

Trial court erred by granting the defendant's plea in bar and by granting the defendant's request for acquittal and discharge of aggravated battery and aggravated assault counts based on procedural double jeopardy protections as the defendant was never placed in jeopardy as to those charges, which were brought in a new indictment against the defendant, and the defendant's speedy trial request did not apply to the new indictment since the case had been transferred to the superior court. State v. Jones, 290 Ga. App. 879, 661 S.E.2d 573 (2008).

Request for speedy trial, absent identification of charges. — Defendant's handwritten request for "speedie [sic] trial of any or all charges Pickens County and/or Jaspe [sic] City would have against me," which request did not identify the charges pending by name, date, term of court, or case number, could not be reasonably construed as sufficient to convey notice of the defendant's intention to invoke the extreme sanction (discharge and acquittal) of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Ferris v. State, 172 Ga. App. 729, 324 S.E.2d 762 (1984).

Inasmuch as the defendant's demand for speedy trial did not identify the charges pending against the defendant, it could not reasonably be construed as sufficient to put the authorities on notice of defendant's intention to invoke the extreme sanction of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Cummins v. State, 202 Ga. App. 155, 413 S.E.2d 773 (1991), cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 773, 413 S.E.2d 773 (1992).

Statute tolled by successful motion to suppress evidence. — Since the defendant successfully moved to suppress evidence, the defendant invoked the entire procedure applicable to that issue including the state's right to a direct appeal, and the statute was tolled for the time required for that procedure to occur. State v. Dymond, 248 Ga. App. 582, 546 S.E.2d 69 (2001).

Discharge is available to defendant even if absent from county having jurisdiction to try defendant. — Absence of the defendant from the county having jurisdiction to try the defendant does not render the remedy of this section unavailable since the defendant had available the writ of habeas corpus ad deliberandum et recipiendum to compel the production of the defendant's person in the county having jurisdiction for the purpose of trying the defendant on the pending charge. Josey v. State, 102 Ga. App. 707, 117 S.E.2d 641 (1960).

Formal entry of discharge can be made at any time, nunc pro tunc. Collins v. Smith, 7 Ga. App. 653, 67 S.E. 847 (1910).

Exception to discharge when accused responsible for delay. — Exception to the operation of this section existed when the accused was personally responsible for a delay in bringing the case to trial after the demand had been made. Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S.E. 562 (1912).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal after the defendant was brought to trial 14 years beyond the time the defendant was supposed to be tried for DUI —less safe driver, as the delay in bringing the defendant to trial was brought about solely by the defendant failing to appear at the defendant's scheduled trial, of which the defendant was given notice at the time of the defendant's initial arrest. Smith v. State, 260 Ga. App. 403, 579 S.E.2d 829 (2003).

Discharge improper absent evidence that accusation filed prior to demand for trial. — Since the state brought a direct appeal from the trial court's grant of the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, and the current version of that Code section required that an accusation be filed with the clerk before an accused may file a demand for trial, without evidence that a uniform traffic citation or a formal accusation was filed in the state court prior to the defendant's demand for trial, the trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion for discharge. State v. Lipsky, 191 Ga. App. 842, 383 S.E.2d 204 (1989).

Discharge properly granted. — Defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial was violated due to an unexplained four year delay between arrest and the call of case for trial, especially in light of the death of a key defense witness. State v. Allgood, 252 Ga. App. 638, 556 S.E.2d 857 (2001).

Trial court properly granted the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal which included jury manager's affidavit stating that jurors were summoned during each week in the two previous terms, were available for state and superior courts, and were not released until Thursday evening of each week. State v. Shields, 265 Ga. App. 473, 594 S.E.2d 692 (2004).

Orders of discharge and acquittal of the defendants on the ground that the defendants' statutory rights to a speedy trial had been violated were affirmed because the defendants remaining silent and failing to object was an insufficient affirmative act to waive the defendants statutory demand for a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Georgia precedent clearly establishes that remaining silent and failing to object is an insufficient affirmative act to waive a defendant's statutory demand for a speedy trial. State v. Marshall, 337 Ga. App. 336, 787 S.E.2d 290 (2016).

Discharge properly refused since demand not actually filed. — Trial judge did not err in refusing to discharge and acquit the defendant of the offenses charged since the demand upon which the defendant relied bore no filing stamp, and the trial court made a specific determination, on the basis of the evidence presented at the dismissal hearing, that the demand had never actually been filed. Head v. State, 189 Ga. App. 111, 375 S.E.2d 46, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 375 S.E.2d 46 (1988).

Discharge and Acquittal (Cont'd)

Denial of the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal predicated on the defendant's failure to obtain special permission for an out-of-time speedy trial demand was proper because the trial court's statements regarding the defendant's options after the defendant waived pending demands did not amount to a grant of permission. Jackson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 187, 498 S.E.2d 780 (1998).

Because the defendant waived the defendant's original demand for a speedy trial and never filed another demand, the defendant had no valid demand on which to rely for a second statutory claim; thus, the defendant was not entitled to have a second motion for discharge and acquittal granted. Oni v. State, 285 Ga. App. 342, 646 S.E.2d 312 (2007).

Nolle prosequi as discharge. — When at the term next succeeding that in which trial is demanded the solicitor general (now district attorney) asks that the case be nol prossed, and the court so orders, the defendant, not consenting to that order but insisting on the defendant's demand for trial, is entitled to a discharge. Hurt v. State, 62 Ga. App. 878, 10 S.E.2d 136 (1940).

Entry of a nolle prosse did not prevent the defendant from claiming the benefits of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, and since the defendant had been automatically discharged and acquitted by operation of law, the defendant was entitled to a formal acknowledgment of discharge and acquittal. Coker v. State, 181 Ga. App. 559, 353 S.E.2d 56 (1987).

Entry of an order of nolle prosequi in a case does not prevent a defendant as a matter of law from claiming the benefits of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. The trial court should entertain the merits of a motion for autrefois acquit based upon O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(b) and decide the motion as required by O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(b). A refusal to rule on the merits of the defendant's motion for autrefois acquit on the basis of any intervening nolle prosequi is deemed a final and appealable determination by the court. Ciprotti v. State, 187 Ga. App. 61, 369 S.E.2d 337 (1988); State v. Daniels, 206 Ga. App. 443, 425 S.E.2d 366 (1992).

Defendant who has filed a demand for a speedy trial in one term of court is not automatically acquitted if the indictment is thereafter nolle prosequi in the next succeeding term. It is the state's failure to try a defendant pursuant to the defendant's original demand for a speedy trial, not the subsequent entry of a nolle prosequi, that results in an automatic acquittal. Knight v. State, 197 Ga. App. 250, 398 S.E.2d 202 (1990); State v. Daniels, 206 Ga. App. 443, 425 S.E.2d 366 (1992).

Although the defendant was entitled to discharge and acquittal of charges set forth in a first indictment (subsequently nolle prossed) and repeated in reindictment, the speedy trial demand directed at the first indictment was ineffective as to a new count added by the reindictment. State v. Daniels, 206 Ga. App. 443, 425 S.E.2d 366 (1992).

Nolle prosequi does not bar benefits. — Inasmuch as more than two terms of court passed since the defendant filed a demand for trial and juries were impaneled for the purpose of trying criminal cases during each of those terms, the defendant is entitled to a discharge and acquittal because the entry of the nolle prosequi did not prevent the defendant from claiming the benefits of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Bond v. State, 212 Ga. App. 608, 442 S.E.2d 482 (1994).

Motion for discharge and acquittal constitutes a plea in bar. — When a person filed a motion for discharge and acquittal because of the failure to grant the person's demand for trial under this section, such a motion constituted a plea in bar. State v. Benton, 246 Ga. 132, 269 S.E.2d 470 (1980).

If a person files a motion for discharge and acquittal because of the failure to grant the person's demand for trial, such a motion constitutes a plea in bar which is filed and ruled on before the person is put in jeopardy. State v. Benton, 246 Ga. 132, 269 S.E.2d 470 (1980).

If the offense is the same as that for which trial demanded, though differently designated, the accused may plead a discharge obtained under this section. Holt v. State, 38 Ga. 187 (1868).

Defendant may waive defendant's right to automatic discharge by some action on the defendant's part or on the part of defense counsel, such as defense counsel's own request for a continuance of the case. Parker v. State, 135 Ga. App. 620, 218 S.E.2d 324 (1975).

If the defendant filed and was granted a motion to suppress, and the state exercised the state's right to a direct appeal of the granting of the motion, the defendant, by virtue of having filed the motion, was deemed to have consented to the delay resulting from resolution of the appeal and to have waived the right to automatic discharge that would have otherwise been available as a result of the delay. State v. Waters, 170 Ga. App. 505, 317 S.E.2d 614 (1984).

Defendant was not entitled to discharge and acquittal when the defendant waived a right to be tried before expiration of the court term by requesting a postponement less than two weeks before expiration of the term and then filing a plea of former jeopardy and a request for a hearing on the plea. Jennings v. State, 230 Ga. App. 661, 497 S.E.2d 13 (1998).

Trial court correctly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal after counsel failed to appear due to noticed conflicts and the defendant acquiesced in the continuance of the case outside the period allowed by the demand for speedy trial. Fisher v. State, 244 Ga. App. 113, 534 S.E.2d 845 (2000).

Demand not waived by continuance. — Request for a three to four day continuance prior to the last week in which a trial could be held in accordance with the demand for a speedy trial did not waive the defendant's right to a speedy trial. Williams v. State, 216 Ga. App. 109, 454 S.E.2d 142 (1995).

Defendant's continued participation in a pre-trial hearing and acquiescence to a continuance proposed by the trial judge after the end of the second term of court did not constitute a waiver of the defendant's speedy trial rights and the defendant's demand was still in effect. Ringo v. State, 219 Ga. App. 753, 466 S.E.2d 660 (1996).

Burden of showing a waiver is on the state. Parker v. State, 135 Ga. App. 620, 218 S.E.2d 324 (1975).

Absence after the requisite time for discharge had passed would not waive rights under this section. Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S.E. 562 (1912).

Proof required for reversal of denial of discharge. — That there are qualified juries at both terms must affirmatively appear to the Supreme Court in order for the Supreme Court to reverse a judgment of the superior court denying the discharge. Roebuck v. State, 57 Ga. 154 (1876).

Motion properly denied if prejudice not shown. — Denial of the defendant's O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 motion for discharge and acquittal was affirmed when, inter alia: the defendant failed to show the defendant was prejudiced by delay in trial; there was no evidence of oppressive pretrial incarceration as all but a couple of months of the time the defendant was incarcerated before trial was attributable to service of other sentences; nor was there evidence of impairment of the defendant's defense due to the delay as none of the witnesses who testified at the first trial were allegedly unavailable. Weldon v. State, 262 Ga. App. 782, 586 S.E.2d 452 (2003).

Defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal was in a form sufficient to be recognized as a motion for speedy trial since the demand directly referred to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and thus could be reasonably construed as a demand for trial under the statutory provisions. State v. Allen, 192 Ga. App. 730, 386 S.E.2d 394 (1989).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion and amended motion to withdraw a guilty plea as the entry of the plea waived any right to assert a speedy trial issue on appeal. Moreover, given the fact that the defendant was represented by counsel at the time both pro se speedy trial motions were filed, and absent evidence that counsel filed or adopted the motions, no viable demand for a speedy trial existed in the record to support a discharge and acquittal based on O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Wallace v. State, 288 Ga. App. 480, 654 S.E.2d 442 (2007).

Discharge and Acquittal (Cont'd)

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on statutory speedy trial grounds because the state's contention that the defendant had failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 since the defendant had not been physically present in court when the case was called for trial was misplaced; the reason the defendant was not physically present in court was that the defendant remained in state custody and had not been returned from prison to the courtroom. Gifford v. State, 301 Ga. App. 50, 686 S.E.2d 831 (2009).

Application

Nine-month delay following seven-year delay. — Since the issue of a seven-year trial delay had been addressed previously, denial of a motion to dismiss was proper as the court properly found the defendant was not prejudiced by a nine-month trial delay, especially since the defendant waited until the eve of trial to assert the defendant's right to a speedy trial. Brannen v. State, 262 Ga. App. 719, 586 S.E.2d 383 (2003).

Eleven-month delay. — Defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal should have been granted since an 11-month delay in the filing of the accusation was unreasonable, and the failure to file the accusation in a timely manner after the accusation was transferred to the state court was attributable to a clerical error by a court official, not to any failure of the defendant to follow the requirements set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Klinetob v. State, 194 Ga. App. 52, 389 S.E.2d 551 (1989).

Fourteen-month absence of necessary and material witness. — While the trial court was authorized to conclude that the "lead officer" in the prosecution against the defendant was a material and necessary witness who was unavailable for 14 months while the defendant's case was pending, and thus a continuance during that period was proper under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-31, despite the fact that no explanation was given for the remainder of the delay, given that the defendant failed to prove any of the other Barker v. Wingo factors in determining whether a speedy trial violation occurred, the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on speedy trial grounds was properly denied. Bell v. State, 287 Ga. App. 300, 651 S.E.2d 218 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0031, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 811 (Ga. 2007).

Fifteen-month delay. — Because the defendant failed to show evidence that any prejudice resulted by a 15-month delay in the filing of formal charges, specifically, evidence of either actual anxiety or concern or any specific evidence as to how the delay impaired the ability to present a defense, the trial court abused the court's discretion in finding otherwise. State v. Moore, 289 Ga. App. 99, 656 S.E.2d 156 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0808, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 483 (Ga. 2008).

A 27-month delay between the defendant's arrest and the date the defendant filed a motion to dismiss did not violate the defendant's right to a speedy trial when the state's primary reason for delay was to wait for several significant appellate court decisions, the defendant did not assert the defendant's statutory or constitutional right during the period of the delay, the defendant did not demonstrate any isolated or distinct oppressiveness, anxiety, or concern the defendant suffered due to incarceration, and the sole example of impairment of evidence, the memory lapses of police officers, worked to the defendant's advantage. Howard v. State, 215 Ga. App. 343, 450 S.E.2d 824 (1994).

A 67 month delay between arrest and placement of case on trial calendar was presumptively prejudicial and authorized the trial court to dismiss the case for violation of the defendant's speedy trial rights when the prosecutor told defense counsel that the case would be dead docketed; the state could not explain the reason for the delay; defense counsel, relying on the state's representation destroyed the defendant's file; critical evidence related to the scene no longer existed; and a defense witness had died.

State v. Redding, 274 Ga. 831, 561 S.E.2d 79 (2002).

Five-year delay. — Constitutional right of the defendant charged with vehicular homicide and hit and run to a speedy trial was violated when the defendant was not indicted for three years, without explanation, and two additional years of delay between the defendant's indictment and a possible trial were attributable to the state, despite the defendant's five-year delay in demanding a speedy trial because the defendant's delay was mitigated by the delay in indicting the defendant and by the delay in appointing counsel for the defendant until the statutory time for demanding a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a). Hester v. State, 268 Ga. App. 94, 601 S.E.2d 456 (2004).

Superior court abused the court's discretion in dismissing an indictment on speedy trial grounds, despite a five-year delay in bringing the defendant to trial, which was held to be excessively long and not to be excused; however, because the delay was caused by the state's negligence or other court-related circumstances which were not to be weighed heavily against the state and because the defendant failed to assert a speedy trial violation or show prejudice from the delay, dismissal of the indictment was reversed. State v. Giddens, 280 Ga. App. 586, 634 S.E.2d 526 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that a defendant failed to show a constitutional violation of the defendant's right to a speedy trial and by denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal with regard to the defendant's convictions for sexual assault as the defendant never filed a speedy trial demand; there was no evidence nor finding by the trial court that the state intentionally delayed the trial to impair the defendant's defense; the defendant's failure to assert either a statutory or constitutional right to a speedy trial was entitled to strong evidentiary weight against the defendant; and the fact that the defendant never filed a speedy trial demand suggested that the defendant was not suffering anxiety or stress from the delay. The reviewing court noted that the five year delay in bringing the defendant to trial was solely based on requests from defense counsel due to illness, death in the family, or death of an expert witness. Disharoon v. State, 288 Ga. App. 1, 652 S.E.2d 902 (2007).

Seven year delay, caused in part by the state's negligence in prosecuting the case and loss of a 911 tape critical to the defendant's claim of self defense, authorized the trial court to find that defendant was denied the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial. State v. Johnson, 274 Ga. 511, 555 S.E.2d 710 (2001).

Trial court's failure to apply proper case law balancing test. — Trial court erred by denying the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment for pre-indictment delay and granting the defendant's motion to dismiss for delay in prosecution because the court failed to properly weigh the case law factors and improperly analyzed the defendant's claim for pre-indictment delay as a due process violation. State v. Curry, 317 Ga. App. 611, 732 S.E.2d 459 (2012).

Effect of guilty plea. — Because, during the term that a trial was required after the defendant's original speedy trial demand, a guilty plea hearing was held in lieu of a bench trial, the defendant's guilty plea constituted a withdrawal of the speedy trial demand. Thompson v. State, 240 Ga. App. 539, 524 S.E.2d 239 (1999).

Denial of motion to dismiss for lack of time to prepare defense. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss the charges against the defendant based on the defendant's lack of sufficient time to prepare a defense since it did not appear that the defendant ever moved for a continuance, but rather it appeared that, acting through retained counsel, the defendant filed a demand for trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, at a time when the defendant was incarcerated in Alabama on unrelated charges, and that the defendant's subsequent trial in Georgia occurred during the last term in which the defendant could have been tried pursuant to that section. Miller v. State, 183 Ga. App. 563, 359 S.E.2d 359 (1987).

Distinction between capital and noncapital offenses for purposes of demanding trial. — Furman v. Georgia,

Application (Cont'd)

408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972), which struck down punishment by death of persons convicted of certain capital offenses, did not have the effect of abolishing the category of "capital offenses" for purposes of determining the term of court by which a defendant must be given a trial, after having made the demand, before the defendant must be absolutely discharged and acquitted of the offense charged in the indictment. Letbedder v. State, 129 Ga. App. 196, 199 S.E.2d 270 (1973), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1134, 94 S. Ct. 877, 38 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1974).

While the death penalty could not be constitutionally imposed for a rape conviction when the victim did not die, rape was still a capital offense, for purposes of the speedy trial statutes, O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171, because a determination that the death penalty could not be imposed did not affect the legislature's decision that rape was a crime for which the state should be allowed additional time to prepare the state's case, so, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(b), the state had until the end of the third term of court following the term in which a speedy trial demand was made to try such a case. Merrow v. State, 268 Ga. App. 47, 601 S.E.2d 428 (2004).

If a multi-count indictment includes both capital and noncapital offenses, the time for trial upon a proper demand by a defendant is the time allowed under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171 for the more serious offenses. Cleary v. State, 258 Ga. 203, 366 S.E.2d 677 (1988), overruled on other grounds, Mize v. State, 262 Ga. 489, 422 S.E.2d 180 (1992).

Armed robbery as a capital offense. — Conviction for armed robbery standing alone will not authorize the incorporation of the death penalty and for appellate jurisdictional purposes armed robbery was no longer a capital felony. Notwithstanding the above, armed robbery was still considered a capital offense under the aggravating circumstances provision of former Code 1933, § 27-2534 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30). Simmons v. State, 149 Ga. App. 830, 256 S.E.2d 79 (1979).

Armed robbery was a capital offense even when the state does not seek the death penalty. It therefore falls under the three-term speedy trial requirements of Ga. L. 1952, p. 299, §§ 1 and 2 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171), rather than the two-term requirement for noncapital offenses under former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170). Orvis v. State, 237 Ga. 6, 226 S.E.2d 570 (1976).

Notwithstanding that the death penalty can no longer be imposed, this punishment statute places the offense of armed robbery within the definition of a capital offense and the state was not required to try the defendant on the armed robbery charges by the end of the next term after the defendant's demand for trial. Accordingly, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. White v. State, 202 Ga. App. 291, 414 S.E.2d 297 (1991).

This section did not apply to a murder indictment, which was a capital offense and may therefore affect the life of the defendant. Turner v. State, 136 Ga. App. 42, 220 S.E.2d 57 (1975).

Renovations to courthouse making it impossible to hold court. — Denial of the discharge by reason of the failure of the state to afford the defendant a trial pursuant to the defendant's demand is proper when renovations to the courthouse make it impossible to hold court. Stone v. State, 132 Ga. App. 697, 209 S.E.2d 116 (1974).

Defendant's acquiescence in defense counsel's delays. — Defendant waived the right to discharge and acquittal by acquiescing in defense counsel's numerous absences, which resulted in a continuance of the defendant's trial outside the period of speedy trial demand. State v. Dodge, 251 Ga. App. 361, 553 S.E.2d 83 (2001).

Defendant's agreement to extended discovery. — Since the defendant agreed to a proposed scheduling order that extended discovery and pushed the trial to beyond the speedy trial deadline, the defendant waived the right to an automatic discharge for the violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Spencer v. State, 259 Ga. App.

664, 577 S.E.2d 817 (2003).

No special permission to file late. — Defendant was not entitled to a dismissal for the failure to try the defendant's criminal matter in a timely manner as the defendant's demand for a speedy trial was not filed during the term that the indictment was filed, nor was the demand filed during the next succeeding term as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a); the trial court judge merely accepted the demand for filing, but the judge never indicated that the defendant had special permission to file the defendant's demand late. Rogers v. State, 271 Ga. App. 698, 610 S.E.2d 679 (2005).

Admissibility of evidence at resentencing hearing. — State was not barred from introducing, at the resentencing phase of the defendant's trial, evidence pertaining to crimes for which the defendant was acquitted under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(b). Such evidence would not be barred, either on grounds of collateral estoppel or double jeopardy, because the defendant was not being tried for those prior crimes. Morgan v. State, 257 Ga. 596, 361 S.E.2d 793 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1009, 108 S. Ct. 1739, 100 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1988).

Defendant reindicted. — Defendant, who did not file a new speedy trial demand after being reindicted but instead adopted an original demand, was entitled to discharge of the original charges, but the demand was ineffective as to an additional vehicular homicide charge that was added upon reindictment. Banks v. State, 251 Ga. App. 421, 554 S.E.2d 500 (2001).

Failure to request speedy trial for additional charges. — When the defendant was charged in city court with driving under the influence, being a less safe driver, serious injury by vehicle, hit and run, and failure to exercise due care, the defendant demanded a speedy trial, and the case was then transferred to superior court, and then the defendant was indicted for homicide by vehicle in the first degree, hit and run, less safe driver, and failure to exercise due care. Defendant's speedy trial demand was effective as to the charges which had been filed in city court because the city court had jury jurisdiction and two terms, and the defendant did not request the transfer to superior court, but the demand was not effective as to the new vehicular homicide charge; therefore, when the speedy trial time limits were violated, the defendant was entitled to discharge, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a) and (b), as to the charges carried over from city court to superior court, but was not entitled to discharge as to the vehicular homicide charge as the defendant did not file a new speedy trial demand after indictment. Sa v. State, 274 Ga. App. 773, 618 S.E.2d 616 (2005).

Defendant using demand to manipulate system. — Defendant was originally indicted on two charges of child molestation, but failed to make a speedy trial demand as to this indictment and was later re-indicted as to those two original charges, and additional charges as well, and timely filed a demand as to the second indictment. However, since the defendant failed to file a demand as to the original indictment, the defendant waived the defendant's rights with respect to the repeated charges, but not as to the new charges. Further, through defendant's attorney's petition for leave, the defendant consented to the passing of the defendant's case to the next term, and when the defendant's attorney then "revoked" the attorney's petition for leave late in the term, which impeded the trial court's scheduling ability, the appellate court found that the defendant was manipulating the judicial system and that the trial court should have denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on the remaining charges. State v. Summage, 266 Ga. App. 630, 597 S.E.2d 641 (2004).

Failure to file traffic citation. — Denial of a defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on speedy trial grounds was upheld on appeal since to be effective a demand for a speedy trial must be filed in the court after the accusation or uniform traffic citation has been filed; since the traffic citation against the defendant was never filed with the trial court, the statutory demand for speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 was never triggered. Walker v. State, 285 Ga. App. 529, 646 S.E.2d 734 (2007).

Traffic offenses. — Defendant's demand for a speedy trial upon receipt of a uniform traffic citation and complaint form was not premature since such a citation itself contains the accusation, the preferring of which is a prerequisite to a demand for speedy trial. Majia v. State, 174 Ga. App. 432, 330 S.E.2d 171, aff'd, 254 Ga. 660, 333 S.E.2d 834 (1985).

Application (Cont'd)

Uniform traffic citation does not qualify as an accusation under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and, therefore, a speedy trial demand filed after receipt of the citation was premature. State v. McKenzie, 184 Ga. App. 191, 361 S.E.2d 54 (1987).

Defendant did not make a timely claim for speedy trial when the traffic citations had been stamped January 15 and the defendant's demand for speedy trial was filed on May 21, which did not satisfy the requirement that the request be filed within the next two terms of court. Even if the citations were not filed in the court on January 15 so that the time for demand began with the filing of the formal accusations on July 1, then the defendant's request would be premature. State v. Black, 213 Ga. App. 331, 444 S.E.2d 368, cert. denied, No. S94C1374, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 929 (1994).

Mere issuance of a uniform traffic citation, without subsequently filing the citation with the clerk of the courts, is not sufficient to authorize the entry of a filed demand for speedy trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a). Ghai v. State, 219 Ga. App. 479, 465 S.E.2d 498 (1995).

Speedy trial demand is premature and a nullity if the demand is filed before the uniform traffic citation or accusation is filed with the court. State v. Stang, 228 Ga. App. 204, 491 S.E.2d 382 (1997).

Defendant's speedy trial demand was premature when the demand was filed prior to the filing of misdemeanor traffic citations in state court. Ellsworth v. State, 232 Ga. App. 164, 500 S.E.2d 642 (1998).

Defendant did not file a speedy trial demand until two terms after the traffic citations were filed; thus, the demand was untimely under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a) and the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Parks v. State, 239 Ga. App. 333, 521 S.E.2d 370 (1999).

Filing of uniform traffic citation. — Right to demand a speedy trial of a traffic offense in state court attaches when the uniform traffic citation is filed with the court, not only when a formal accusation is filed. State v. Gerbert, 267 Ga. 169, 475 S.E.2d 621 (1996), reversing State v. Gerbert, 219 Ga. App. 720, 467 S.E.2d 177 (1995); Tyler v. State, 224 Ga. App. 550, 481 S.E.2d 228 (1997).

First possible opportunity for the defendant to demand a speedy trial is the state's filing of a uniform traffic citation or a formal accusation, if no citation has been filed. Shire v. State, 225 Ga. App. 306, 483 S.E.2d 694 (1997).

Speedy trial demand filed before the state filed uniform traffic citations or an accusation with the court was premature and a nullity. Millan v. State, 231 Ga. App. 121, 497 S.E.2d 664 (1998).

When uniform traffic citation is a "found" accusation. — It is not until the traffic violations bureau loses jurisdiction to the state court under O.C.G.A. § 40-13-62 that a uniform traffic citation becomes an accusation and is "found" for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Keller v. State, 183 Ga. App. 717, 359 S.E.2d 714 (1987).

When the state filed uniform traffic citations with the court, the citations functioned as an accusation, commenced the prosecution, and established the term of court at which the right to a speedy trial attached. Clark v. State, 236 Ga. App. 130, 510 S.E.2d 616 (1998), aff'd, 271 Ga. 519, 520 S.E.2d 694 (1999).

Defendant's demand for a speedy trial was not timely filed since the demand was filed in the next term following the filing of the formal accusation, rather than in the next term following the filing of the uniform traffic citation. Clark v. State, 271 Ga. 519, 520 S.E.2d 694 (1999), affirming Clark v. State, 236 Ga. App. 130, 510 S.E.2d 616 (1998).

Demands for speedy trial filed in a probate court, which was not a court of record, were ineffective; thus, if cases were transferred to the state court and the defendants did not file demands for speedy trial, the state court did not err in denying the defendants' motions for discharge and acquittal on such basis.

Fausnaugh v. State, 244 Ga. App. 263, 534 S.E.2d 554 (2000).

Dismissal of defendant's demand for speedy trial was improper when no affirmative act of the accused delayed the trial during the period mandated by the defendant's demand. Ciprotti v. State, 190 Ga. App. 639, 379 S.E.2d 802 (1989).

Motion for acquittal correctly denied. — See Caracena v. State, 186 Ga. App. 763, 368 S.E.2d 532 (1988).

When 13 people were each charged by consecutively numbered accusations with theft from their common employer, and each filed a motion requesting that all motions filed by any of them be adopted as motions made by all, but no written order was entered on the motions to adopt, the trial court correctly denied a motion for acquittal predicated on the state's failure to bring nine of the defendants to trial in the term within which the defendants' demands for trial had been made or the next succeeding term, as only one defendant (not one of the nine) actually filed a demand for trial. Jordan v. State, 194 Ga. App. 415, 390 S.E.2d 614, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 390 S.E.2d 614 (1990), aff'd sub nom., Parks v. Norred & Assocs., 206 Ga. App. 494, 426 S.E.2d 12 (1992).

Defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal was correctly denied since the defendant's first demand for speedy trial was invalid because the defendant filed the demand before the indictment was returned and the defendant's second demand was filed after the time allotted under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(a). Freeman v. State, 232 Ga. App. 715, 503 S.E.2d 601 (1998).

Trial court acted properly in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal when, after filing a demand, the defendant withdrew the demand in an attempt to delay trial, filed an appeal, and then insisted that the demand was somehow automatically revived upon remittitur. Doehling v. State, 238 Ga. App. 293, 518 S.E.2d 137 (1999).

Since the record showed that juries were impaneled and qualified to try the defendant during the December term after the defendant's demand was filed, the defendant's demand for speedy trial was effective in the December term; since the record further showed that juries were impaneled and qualified to try the defendant during the February term, the defendant was entitled to discharge and acquittal. Campbell v. State, 199 Ga. App. 25, 403 S.E.2d 882 (1991).

Since the defendant's motion to suppress was not granted and appealed by the state, but derived more than two terms after the demand for trial was filed, and there was no evidence that the defendant took any action by which the defendant or defendant's counsel caused or consented to a delay of the trial to a subsequent term, the defendant was entitled to discharge and acquittal. Ballew v. State, 211 Ga. App. 672, 440 S.E.2d 76 (1994).

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal as the defendant demanded a speedy trial during the trial court's September term, and did not waive that demand when the trial court failed to timely notify the defendant of the defendant's trial date during the November term, which caused the defendant to miss the defendant's trial since the defendant's trial was not held within the time provided for by Georgia statutory law. Clark v. State, 259 Ga. App. 573, 578 S.E.2d 184 (2003).

Trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to dismiss which alleged a speedy trial violation as the delay in bringing the defendant to trial was prejudicial, especially when, after an assertion of the right, an additional seven months passed before the court ruled on the claim, and in the interim, an alleged material defense witness died. Hardeman v. State, 280 Ga. App. 168, 633 S.E.2d 595 (2006).

Trial court did not err in failing to grant the defendant a discharge and acquittal on statutory speedy trial grounds because the defendant failed to file a valid demand pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, but filed a pro se demand while represented by counsel. Smith v. State, 332 Ga. App. 849, 775 S.E.2d 211 (2015).

Demand sufficient to invoke section. — Although the defendants' demand for trial did not specifically reference O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, because the defendants' demand for trial both requested a speedy trial and recited the style of the case and the indictment number to which the demand applied, the demand was sufficient to invoke the provisions of that section providing for discharge and acquittal. Baker v. State, 212 Ga. App. 731, 442 S.E.2d 815 (1994).

Application (Cont'd)

Request for final disposition of detainers is not demand for trial. — Request for final disposition of detainers on a prisoner's record (see O.C.G.A. § 42-6-1 et seq.) is not the equivalent of a demand for trial and the failure to try the inmate at the term at which such request is made or at the next succeeding term does not authorize the inmate's discharge and acquittal of the offense charged in the pending indictment, accusation, or information. Spurlin v. State, 228 Ga. 2, 183 S.E.2d 765 (1971).

Appeals

Denial of a motion under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 is directly appealable. Smith v. State, 169 Ga. App. 251, 312 S.E.2d 375 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Collins, 201 Ga. App. 500, 411 S.E.2d 546 (1991).

Denial of a motion to dismiss based upon O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 is directly appealable under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a). Hubbard v. State, 254 Ga. 694, 333 S.E.2d 827 (1985).

Although not technically a final judgment, the denial of a motion to dismiss (more properly, a motion for acquittal) based upon O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 is directly appealable under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a). Cook v. State, 183 Ga. App. 720, 359 S.E.2d 716 (1987).

Defendant's direct appeal from the denial of a speedy trial motion to dismiss was proper given the state of Georgia law; however, the motion was properly denied because the defendant, who had been incarcerated in the interim period, was equally responsible for the pretrial delay, never asserted the right to trial, never requested disposition of the subject offenses, suffered no prejudice, and did not suffer oppressive pretrial incarceration. Lamar v. State, 262 Ga. App. 735, 586 S.E.2d 416 (2003).

State's right of appeal from grant of motion for discharge and acquittal. — State had the right under Ga. L. 1973, p. 297, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 5-7-1) to appeal a trial court's grant of a criminal defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal since such motion was based on the denial of the defendant's demand for trial pursuant to former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170). State v. Benton, 246 Ga. 132, 269 S.E.2d 470 (1980).

State's appeal tolled speedy trial period. — When the defendant's motion to suppress was granted and the state appealed, the appeal tolled, but did not waive, the speedy trial period; the defendant's subsequent requests for bond to allow participation in rehabilitation programs did not demonstrate a desire to delay the trial and therefore did not waive the defendant's speedy trial demand. Banks v. State, 251 Ga. App. 421, 554 S.E.2d 500 (2001).

Time for trial after interlocutory appeal. — On defendant's interlocutory appeal, after filing of the remittitur in the lower court, the state has the remainder of that term and one additional regular term of court in which to try the defendant pursuant to the defendant's demand for trial, provided there are juries impaneled and qualified to try the defendant. Henry v. State, 214 Ga. 527, 449 S.E.2d 79 (1994).

Interlocutory appeal not required. — Criminal defendant is not required to follow the interlocutory procedures of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b) when appealing, prior to the conclusion of a trial on the merits, from the denial of a plea in bar based on O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. Hubbard v. State, 254 Ga. 694, 333 S.E.2d 827 (1985).

Recommencement of demand clock after interlocutory appeal. — On defendant's interlocutory appeal, filing of the remittitur in the lower court is the point in time at which the demand clock resumes ticking on a pre-appeal demand for trial, not when the trial court makes the appellate court judgment the judgment of the lower court, overruling Ramirez v. State, 211 Ga. App. 356, 439 S.E.2d 4 (1993). Henry v. State, 214 Ga. 527, 449 S.E.2d 79 (1994).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

In order to receive the right or privilege granted under this section, the defendant must show a demand made in accordance with the statute. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-70.

Demand by person already serving another sentence. — Individual making a proper demand for trial under this section must be produced for trial within the statutorily allotted time, even though the individual may be serving another sentence under the jurisdiction of the Board of Offender Rehabilitation at the time of demand. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-70.

Fact that a demand for jury trial is filed on the last day of the term has no legal significance as long as there are jurors impaneled and qualified to try the case. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-39.

Section inapplicable to probate courts. — Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 do not apply to probate courts, since no juries are available in that court, and therefore there would be no "juries inpaneled and qualified to try" the defendant. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-13.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 267 et seq., 278 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16B C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 1328. 16C C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 1696. 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 554. 23 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, §§ 793 et seq., 820 et seq.

ALR. — Discharge of accused under a limitation statute as a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, 3 A.L.R. 519.

Remedy for delay in bringing accused to trial or to retrial after reversal, 58 A.L.R. 1015.

Waiver or loss of defendant's right to speedy trial in criminal case, 129 A.L.R. 572; 57 A.L.R.2d 302.

Discharge of accused for holding him excessive time without trial as bar to subsequent prosecution for same offense, 50 A.L.R.2d 943.

Continuance of criminal case because of illness of accused, 66 A.L.R.2d 232.

Effect of abolition of capital punishment on procedural rules governing crimes punishable by death — post-Furman decisions, 71 A.L.R.3d 453.

Illness or incapacity of judge, prosecuting officer, or prosecution witness as justifying delay in bringing accused speedily to trial — state cases, 78 A.L.R.3d 297.

Waiver, after not guilty plea, of jury trial in felony case, 9 A.L.R.4th 695.

Bail: effect on liability of bail bond surety of state's delay in obtaining indictment or bringing defendant to trial, 32 A.L.R.4th 600.

Application of speedy trial statute to dismissal or other termination of prior indictment or information and bringing of new indictment or information, 39 A.L.R.4th 899.

Disruptive conduct of spectators in presence of jury during criminal trial as basis for reversal, new trial, or mistrial — spoken words, 102 A.L.R.6th 279.

Disruptive conduct of spectators in presence of jury during criminal trial as basis for reversal, new trial, or mistrial — laughter, crying, and other nonverbal sounds by spectators, 103 A.L.R.6th 35.

What constitutes accused's consent to court's discharge of jury or to grant of motion for mistrial which will constitute waiver of former jeopardy plea — silence or failure to object or protest, 103 A.L.R.6th 137.

Construction and application of Speedy Trial Act, 18 USCS §§ 3161 to 3174 — United States Supreme Court cases, 46 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 129.

17-7-171. Time for demand for speedy trial in capital cases; discharge and acquittal when no trial held before end of two court terms of demand; counting of terms in cases in which death penalty is sought; special pleas of incompetency.

(a) Any person accused of a capital offense may enter a demand for speedy trial at the term of court at which the indictment is found or at the next succeeding regular term thereafter; or, by special permission of the court, the defendant may at any subsequent term thereafter demand a speedy trial. The demand for speedy trial shall be filed with the clerk of court and served upon the prosecutor and upon the judge to whom the case is assigned or, if the case is not assigned, upon the chief judge of the court in which the case is pending. A demand for trial filed pursuant to this Code section shall be filed as a separate, distinct, and individual document and shall not be a part of any other pleading or document. Such demand shall clearly be titled "Demand for Speedy Trial"; reference this Code section within the pleading; and identify the indictment number or accusation number for which such demand is being made. The demand for speedy trial shall be binding only in the court in which such demand is filed, except where the case is transferred from one court to another without a request from the defendant.

(b) If more than two regular terms of court are convened and adjourned after the term at which the demand for speedy trial is filed and the defendant is not given a trial, then the defendant shall be absolutely discharged and acquitted of the offense charged in the indictment, provided that at both terms there were juries impaneled and qualified to try the defendant and provided, further, that the defendant was present in court announcing ready for trial and requesting a trial on the indictment.

(c) In cases involving a capital offense for which the death penalty is sought, if a demand for speedy trial is entered, the counting of terms under subsection (b) of this Code section shall not begin until the convening of the first term following the completion of pretrial review proceedings in the Supreme Court under Code Section 17-10-35.1.

(d) If a defendant files a special plea of incompetency to stand trial pursuant to Code Section 17-7-130 or if the court, pursuant to Code Section 17-7-129, conducts a trial on the competency of the defendant, the period of time during which such matter is pending shall not be included in the computation of determining whether a demand for speedy trial has been satisfied.

History. — Ga. L. 1952, p. 299, §§ 1, 2; Ga. L. 1983, p. 452, § 3; Ga. L. 1988, p. 1437, § 3; Ga. L. 1990, p. 8, § 17; Ga. L. 2006, p. 893, § 2/HB 1421; Ga. L. 2011, p. 372, § 4/HB 421.

Cross references. — Requests by inmates for final disposition of indictments or accusations pending against the inmates, § 42-6-3.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (2005); 58 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2006). For annual survey on the death penalty, see 64 Mercer L. Rev. 109 (2012).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Application
Appeals

General Consideration

Rights attach upon indictment but constitutional right to speedy trial attaches upon arrest. — Although Ga. L. 1952, p. 299, §§ 1 and 2 and former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171) prescribe a means of asserting one's right to a speedy trial after indictment, there was a right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to a speedy trial which attaches at arrest and can be asserted thereafter. Haisman v. State, 242 Ga. 896, 252 S.E.2d 397 (1979).

Unlike the statutory protections conferred by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171 that attach with formal indictment or accusation, the Sixth Amendment provides constitutional protection over and above the statutory provisions and under that amendment, the right to a speedy trial attaches upon arrest and can be asserted thereafter; a trial court properly denied the defendant's statutory speedy trial demand when no indictment was filed, but improperly overlooked or failed to consider the defendant's constitutional speedy trial demand, and thus, the trial court's judgment was vacated and the case was remanded with direction to the trial court to address the defendant's constitutional claims. Smith v. State, 266 Ga. App. 529, 597 S.E.2d 414 (2004).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171 does not deprive defendants of equal protection of the law, despite the possibility of relatively longer trial waitings than in those circuits with more terms of court per year. Henry v. State, 263 Ga. 417, 434 S.E.2d 469 (1993).

Distinction between capital and noncapital offenses for purpose of demanding trial. — Furman v. Georgia, 508 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972), which struck down punishment by death of persons convicted of certain capital offenses did not have the effect of abolishing the category of "capital offense" for purposes of determining the term of court by which a defendant must be given a trial, after having made the demand, before the defendant must be absolutely discharged and acquitted of the offense charged in the indictment. Letbedder v. State, 129 Ga. App. 196, 199 S.E.2d 270 (1973), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1134, 94 S. Ct. 877, 38 L. Ed. 2d 759 (1974).

While the death penalty could not be constitutionally imposed for a rape conviction when the victim did not die, rape was still a capital offense for purposes of the speedy trial statutes, O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171, because a determination that the death penalty could not be imposed did not affect the legislature's decision that rape was a crime for which the state should be allowed additional time to prepare the state's case, so, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(b), the state had until the end of the third term of court following the term in which a speedy trial demand was made to try such a case. Merrow v. State, 268 Ga. App. 47, 601 S.E.2d 428 (2004).

Armed robbery is a capital offense within the purview of Ga. L. 1952, p. 299, §§ 1 and 2 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171). Simmons v. State, 149 Ga. App. 830, 256 S.E.2d 79 (1979).

Even when state does not seek death penalty. — Armed robbery is a capital offense even if the state does not seek the death penalty, and therefore falls under the three-term speedy trial requirements of Ga. L. 1952, p. 299, §§ 1 and 2

General Consideration (Cont'd)

(see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171) rather than the two-term requirement for noncapital offenses under former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170). Orvis v. State, 237 Ga. 6, 226 S.E.2d 570 (1976).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(a) does not require that jurors be impaneled at the time the demand is entered in order for the demand to be timely; it simply requires that the demand be entered either at the term of court at which the indictment was found or at the next succeeding regular term thereafter. Mize v. State, 262 Ga. 489, 422 S.E.2d 180 (1992).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(b) provides a three-prong procedure which must be complied with in order for a demand for speedy trial to be effective. First, the demand must actually be filed with the court. Second, there must be juries impaneled and qualified to try the defendant at both of the first two regular terms of court following the term at which the demand is filed. Third, at some time during both of the first two regular terms of court following the term at which the demand is filed, the defendant must be present in court announcing ready for trial and requesting a trial on the indictment. Smith v. State, 261 Ga. 298, 404 S.E.2d 115 (1991).

Because pretrial review proceedings were not yet complete in the Supreme Court, the counting of terms under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(b) had not begun, and the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal was proper. Franks v. State, 266 Ga. 707, 469 S.E.2d 651 (1996).

Terms of court control when demand required. — Defendant failed to file a new demand for trial following dismissal of the defendant's first demand and did not file a motion for dismissal of the indictment before proceeding to trial after five terms of court passed caused a waiver of the defendant's right to a speedy trial by the defendant's own acts or failure to act. Mize v. State, 262 Ga. 489, 422 S.E.2d 180 (1992).

On defendant's interlocutory appeal, after filing of the remittitur in the lower court, the state has the remainder of that term and one additional regular term of court in which to try the defendant pursuant to the defendant's demand for trial, provided there are juries impaneled and qualified to try the defendant. Henry v. State, 214 Ga. 527, 449 S.E.2d 79 (1994).

Defendant was indicted for felony murder and other charges during the June 2014 term of the trial court; the defendant did not file a valid demand in that term or the subsequent September 2014 term; and the December 2014 term began on December 1, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-6-3(20), making the defendant's December 5 speedy trial demand untimely under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(a). Johnson v. State, 300 Ga. 252, 794 S.E.2d 60 (2016).

Waiver of the demand. — Speedy trial demand in a non-capital case did not impose a requirement to announce a readiness for trial; rather, a request for a continuance outside the term of the demand waived the speedy trial demand. Dingler v. State, 281 Ga. App. 721, 637 S.E.2d 120 (2006).

Although statutory right asserted untimely, court was required to consider constitutional factors. — Trial court properly denied a felony murder defendant's motion as to the defendant's statutory speedy trial right as untimely under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(a); however, the trial court failed to make the required findings and conclusions to enable review of the defendant's motion with respect to the defendant's constitutional speedy trial right under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI, requiring remand. Johnson v. State, 300 Ga. 252, 794 S.E.2d 60 (2016).

Mere silence or inaction does not satisfy O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171. Crawford v. State, 252 Ga. App. 722, 556 S.E.2d 888 (2001).

When special permission of court needed to file motion for speedy trial. — Defendant whose conviction was set aside, but who was not reindicted needed special permission of the court to file a motion for speedy trial in order to invoke the benefits of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171. Thus, the trial court did not err in refusing to grant the defendant's motion for acquittal. Abiff v. State, 260 Ga. 434, 396 S.E.2d 483 (1990), cert. denied, 497 U.S. 1072, 111 S. Ct. 797, 112 L. Ed. 2d 858 (1991).

Court cannot make out-of-time demand. — While a trial court can grant a defendant special permission to file an out-of-time demand for speedy trial, a trial court cannot actually make that demand for defendants. Smith v. State, 261 Ga. 298, 404 S.E.2d 115 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171 must be complied with in order to be discharged and acquitted thereunder. Dennis v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 671, 118 S.E.2d 923 (1961); Burns v. State, 265 Ga. 763, 462 S.E.2d 622 (1995), overruled on other grounds, Walker v. State, 290 Ga. 696, 723 S.E.2d 894 (2012).

Conditions that the defendant be present in court at each term, announcing ready, and that the defendant request a trial at that term must be complied with for the defendant to be discharged and acquitted. Hakala v. State, 225 Ga. 629, 170 S.E.2d 406 (1969).

Demand not a prerequisite to invoke sanction of acquittal. — Because the filing of a statutory speedy trial demand was not a prerequisite to seeking discharge and acquittal based on a denial of the defendant's constitutional rights to a speedy trial, such could not serve as a valid argument to overturn the trial court's order in granting the defendant a discharge and acquittal on speedy trial grounds. State v. Moore, 289 Ga. App. 99, 656 S.E.2d 156 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0808, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 483 (Ga. 2008).

If speedy trial not denied, release not authorized. — If the defendant is not denied a speedy trial, an appellate court is not authorized to order the defendant's release under this section. Butler v. State, 126 Ga. App. 22, 189 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

Terms of court. — Ga. L. 1996, p. 627, which establishes two terms of court for the City Court of Atlanta, is not unconstitutional because it violates equal protection. Cross v. State, 272 Ga. 282, 528 S.E.2d 241 (2000).

Cited in Horne v. State, 212 Ga. 421, 93 S.E.2d 356 (1956); Horne v. State, 94 Ga. App. 522, 95 S.E.2d 288 (1956); Hakala v. State, 225 Ga. 629, 170 S.E.2d 406 (1969); Mays v. State, 229 Ga. 609, 193 S.E.2d 825 (1972); Letbedder v. State, 129 Ga. App. 196, 199 S.E.2d 270 (1973); Treadwell v. State, 233 Ga. 468, 211 S.E.2d 760 (1975); Turner v. State, 136 Ga. App. 42, 220 S.E.2d 57 (1975); Holmes v. State, 136 Ga. App. 572, 222 S.E.2d 121 (1975); Sheats v. State, 237 Ga. 757, 229 S.E.2d 600 (1976); Arnold v. State, 239 Ga. 752, 238 S.E.2d 876 (1977); Gibson v. Giles, 242 Ga. 720, 251 S.E.2d 231 (1978); High v. Zant, 250 Ga. 693, 300 S.E.2d 654 (1983); Buxton v. State, 253 Ga. 137, 317 S.E.2d 538 (1984); Satterfield v. State, 256 Ga. 593, 351 S.E.2d 625 (1987); Matthews v. State, 181 Ga. App. 819, 354 S.E.2d 175 (1987); Brown v. State, 261 Ga. 66, 401 S.E.2d 492 (1991); Redd v. State, 261 Ga. 300, 404 S.E.2d 264 (1991); Walker v. State, 216 Ga. App. 236, 454 S.E.2d 156 (1995); State v. McKnight, 265 Ga. 701, 462 S.E.2d 142 (1995); Freeman v. State, 232 Ga. App. 715, 503 S.E.2d 601 (1998); Azizi v. State, 274 Ga. 207, 274 A. 207, 553 S.E.2d 273 (2001); Herndon v. State, 277 Ga. App. 374, 626 S.E.2d 579 (2006); In the Interest of M.D.H., 300 Ga. 46, 793 S.E.2d 49 (2016).

Application

Motion should have been denied when prejudice from delay not shown. — Because the defendant failed to show evidence that any prejudice resulted by a 15-month delay in the filing of formal charges, specifically, evidence of either actual anxiety or concern or any specific evidence as to how the delay impaired the ability to present a defense, the trial court abused the court's discretion in finding otherwise. State v. Moore, 289 Ga. App. 99, 656 S.E.2d 156 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0808, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 483 (Ga. 2008).

Applying four-part Barker speedy trial test: (1) the length of the delay; (2) the reason for the delay; (3) the assertion of the right to a speedy trial; and (4) prejudice to the defendant, the appeals court decided that the defendant's U.S. Const. amend. 6, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a), and O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171, speedy trial rights were not violated—inter alia deciding that the three-year delay from arrest to trial was presumptively prejudicial, that the loss of DUI blood test result evidence was an equal loss to the defendant and the state, and that the defendant's delay in asserting the right was an indication that the defendant was not anxious or stressed. Allen v. State, 268 Ga. App. 161, 601 S.E.2d 485 (2004).

Application (Cont'd)

Under the Barker test, passage of 26 to 27 months between the defendant's arrest and the trial, even though the defendant was in state custody on another sentence, did not violate speedy trial rights as there was no showing that the state dragged the state's feet in any effort to impede the defendant's defense. Brown v. State, 277 Ga. App. 169, 626 S.E.2d 128 (2006).

Nine month delay acceptable. — Nine-month delay between a defendant's indictment for murder and the defendant's filing of a motion to dismiss the indictment on constitutional grounds was not a speedy trial violation under the Sixth Amendment as the defendant filed no demand for a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171; did not raise the speedy trial issue for nine months; was imprisoned on other charges during those nine months; and showed no prejudice from the delay. Jones v. State, 284 Ga. 320, 667 S.E.2d 49 (2008).

Twelve month delay acceptable. — Trial court did not err when the court denied the defendant's motion to dismiss based on a purported violation of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial because the circumstances of the case warranted a finding that the twelve-month, ten-day delay between the defendant's indictment and the filing of the defendant's motion to dismiss was not presumptively prejudicial. The defendant was serving a sentence on an unrelated charge in Mississippi when the indictment was returned, a requisition warrant had to be obtained from the Mississippi Governor, which process was initiated within a month of the defendant's indictment and took three months before the warrant was issued, and the defendant was brought to Georgia two months after the warrant issued and was arraigned approximately two months later. Rogers v. State, 286 Ga. 387, 688 S.E.2d 344 (2010).

54 month delay. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a defendant's motion to dismiss on the basis that the state violated the defendant's right to a speedy trial pursuant to the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a) because although the 54-month delay between the defendant's arrest and the filing of the defendant's motion was presumptively prejudicial, and the state offered no explanation for the delay, the defendant did not file a request for speedy trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171, the defendant did not assert the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial for the 54 months between the defendant's arrest and the filing of the defendant's motion to dismiss, and the trial court specifically found that the defendant failed to establish prejudice; the defendant's late assertion of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial weighed heavily against the defendant as did the defendant's failure to show prejudice in light of such delay. Falagian v. State, 300 Ga. App. 187, 684 S.E.2d 340 (2009), overruled on other grounds, McNair v. State, 293 Ga. 282 (2013).

Five year delay acceptable. — Superior court abused the court's discretion in dismissing an indictment on speedy trial grounds, despite a five-year delay in bringing the defendant to trial, which was held to be excessively long and not to be excused; however, because the delay was caused by the state's negligence or other court-related circumstances which were not to be weighed heavily against the state and because the defendant failed to assert a speedy trial violation or show prejudice from the delay, dismissal of the indictment was reversed. State v. Giddens, 280 Ga. App. 586, 634 S.E.2d 526 (2006).

Despite the state's five-year delay in bringing the defendant's child molestation case to trial, the defendant's motion to dismiss based on the defendant's speedy trial right was denied because the defendant waited more than five years to assert the defendant's statutory right under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171, and the defendant failed to show any prejudice resulting from the delay. Arbegast v. State, 301 Ga. App. 462, 688 S.E.2d 1 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0630, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 348 (Ga. 2010).

Negligence of state in trying defendant not always harmful. — Although the state was negligent in failing to bring the defendant to trial in a timely fashion, that consideration was outweighed by the facts that the defendant suffered little actual prejudice from the delay and no unduly oppressive pretrial incarceration, and waited a significant amount of time before asserting a speedy trial right; hence, the defendant's constitutional rights to a speedy trial were not violated. Christian v. State, 281 Ga. 474, 640 S.E.2d 21 (2007).

Speedy trial rights violated. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss which alleged a speedy trial violation as the delay in bringing the defendant to trial was prejudicial, especially when, after an assertion of the right, an additional seven months passed before the court ruled on the claim, and, in the interim, an alleged material defense witness died. Hardeman v. State, 280 Ga. App. 168, 633 S.E.2d 595 (2006).

Speedy trial rights not violated. — Although the delay of eight years and two months between the defendant's arrest and the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment was uncommonly long and presumptively prejudicial, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment because: (1) the case was dead-docketed for five years when the state could not locate the victim; (2) nothing in the record showed that the state deliberately attempted to delay the trial to hamper the defense; and (3) fourteen months of the delay could be attributed to the defendant's failure to appear for several court dates; the defendant did not show actual prejudice to the defendant's defense because the police officers who arrested the defendant were available, and every person who was an eyewitness to or participant in the incident for which the defendant was arrested was available to testify. Gray v. State, 303 Ga. App. 97, 692 S.E.2d 716 (2010).

Defendant was not entitled to be discharged and acquitted until the close of the third term of court after the term in which the defendant filed the defendant's demand for a speedy trial because that was when more than two regular terms of court would have convened and adjourned after the term at which the demand for speedy trial was filed. Because the State of Georgia filed the state's notice of intent to seek the death penalty during the third term, which was before the defendant was entitled to be discharged and acquitted, that notice reset the statutory speedy trial clock, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(c), and the defendant's motion was premature. Walker v. State, 290 Ga. 696, 723 S.E.2d 894 (2012).

Defendant was not deprived of the defendant's statutory right to a speedy trial because the defendant was indicted during the March 2010 term of court and was tried within two terms, during the March 2011 term of court. Morrison v. State, 303 Ga. 120, 810 S.E.2d 508 (2018).

Acts of defendant amount to waiver of right. — Statutory right to a speedy trial is not jurisdictional in nature and may be waived by an accused's affirmative acts and/or failures to act; conduct of an accused, both before and after the filing of the speedy trial demand, may result in an accused waiving the accused's right to a speedy trial. Mize v. State, 262 Ga. 489, 422 S.E.2d 180 (1992).

It was not error for the trial court to deny the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal based on the defendant's demand for a speedy trial since the defendant waived the right to a speedy trial by not: (1) serving the demand on the county district attorney; and (2) letting the court know that the defendant was ready for trial. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. App. 367, 574 S.E.2d 416 (2002).

By acquiescing in the trial court's action of striking the defendant's first speedy-trial demand under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171, in response to the defendant's counsel's illness at the time set for trial, the defendant abandoned any arguments with regard to the speedy trial, and the defendant's later failure to file an out-of-time demand after gaining permission to do so constituted a waiver. Tolbert v. State, 313 Ga. App. 46, 720 S.E.2d 244 (2011).

Effect of consent order. — Consent order was properly interpreted to allow the state two terms beyond the term in which the order was entered to comply with the defendant's speedy trial demand. Turner v. State, 269 Ga. 392, 497 S.E.2d 560 (1998).

Application (Cont'd)

Must announce ready for trial. — Failure to comply with the express language of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171 requiring that the defendant be in court announcing that the defendant is ready for trial following the filing of a speedy trial demand operated as a waiver of that demand; the statutory requirements were mandatory and required strict adherence, and a defendant could waive the right to a speedy trial by the defendant's own actions or inaction. Crawford v. State, 252 Ga. App. 722, 556 S.E.2d 888 (2001).

Failure to serve trial judge. — Defendant's failure to serve the trial judge with the defendant's demand for a speedy trial, in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171, rendered the demand invalid; therefore, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal by concluding that the defendant either withdrew or waived the speedy trial demand. Burdett v. State, 285 Ga. App. 571, 646 S.E.2d 748 (2007).

Continuance granted at defendant's request operated as waiver of speedy trial demand, even though the continuance expired while time remained in that term. Rice v. State, 264 Ga. 846, 452 S.E.2d 492 (1995).

Escape of defendant and absence from court amounts to waiver of demand. — If the defendant is not tried within two successive terms of court following the term in which the defendant filed a demand for trial, the defendant's escape and voluntary absence from the court amounts to a waiver of the demand for trial and does not entitle the defendant to discharge and acquittal under Ga. L. 1952, p. 299, §§ 1, 2. Holmes v. State, 136 Ga. App. 572, 222 S.E.2d 121 (1975).

Failure to make demand not excused by fact that defendant is in custody. — Defendant was not entitled to discharge and acquittal as to an indictment since the record did not show that the defendant was present in court, announcing ready and requesting a trial thereon, for two terms after the term at which the demand was filed, as required by this section, despite an argument that since defendant was in custody during the period, defendant could not be present in court and announce ready, as defendant was represented by counsel who could have done this for the defendant. Dennis v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 671, 118 S.E.2d 923 (1961).

Weighing the state's negligent delay of trial against the defendants' failure to demonstrate that the defendants' defenses would be impaired by the delay as well as the defendants' failure to timely assert the defendants' Sixth Amendment right, the trial court did not err in denying the defendants' motions to dismiss indictments. Jackson v. State, 272 Ga. 782, 534 S.E.2d 796 (2000).

Continuance at defendant's request. — When the state was ready to proceed with defendant's trial within four months of the offense, but the defendant requested a continuance to prepare the defendant's case, any delay in trial was caused by the defendant's own actions, and the defendant was not denied a speedy trial. Myron v. State, 248 Ga. 120, 281 S.E.2d 600 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1154, 102 S. Ct. 1025, 71 L. Ed. 2d 310 (1982).

Right not asserted until trial. — Two-year delay between commission of the crime and the beginning of the trial is not unconstitutional when some of the delay was due to separate trials of codefendants, the defendant did not assert the defendant's speedy-trial right until just before trial, and the only prejudice due to the delay was to the state. Harrison v. State, 257 Ga. 528, 361 S.E.2d 149 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 982, 108 S. Ct. 1281, 99 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1988).

Constructive compliance inadequate. — Defendant's correspondences to the trial judge and assistant district attorney did not satisfy the third prong of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(b) since the statute does not provide for constructive compliance and since the correspondence fell far short of demonstrating a readiness for trial during the court terms at issue. Levester v. State, 270 Ga. 485, 512 S.E.2d 258 (1999).

In a multi-count indictment which includes both capital and noncapital offenses, the time for trial upon a proper demand by a defendant is the time allowed under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171 for the more serious offenses. Cleary v. State, 258 Ga. 203, 366 S.E.2d 677 (1988), overruled on other grounds, Mize v. State, 262 Ga. 489, 422 S.E.2d 180 (1992).

Right to acquittal affected by nolle prosequi order. — Defendant was entitled to a hearing, based on the defendant's written demand for a speedy trial, to determine whether or not the defendant was entitled to discharge and acquittal on 13 counts on which an order of nolle prosequi was entered to the extent the statute of limitations had not run on any of the offenses. Day v. State, 216 Ga. App. 29, 453 S.E.2d 73 (1994).

State's reindictment valid as procedural correction. — Because the record did not support the defendant's contention that the state reindicted the defendant in an attempt to extend the time in which the state could bring the defendant to trial, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal. Dalton v. State, 263 Ga. 138, 429 S.E.2d 89 (1993), overruled on other grounds, Rice v. State, 264 Ga. 846, 452 S.E.2d 492 (1995).

Trial found held before expiration of time period. — When the defendant filed a demand for trial during the July 1986 term of the superior court and the defendant was tried during the January 1987 term of court — i.e., during the second regular term of court following the term in which the defendant's demand was filed, notwithstanding that special juries had been empanelled in the interim, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-6-20, the defendant was given a trial before more than two regular terms of court were convened and adjourned after the term at which the demand was filed. Wade v. State, 258 Ga. 324, 368 S.E.2d 482 (1988), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 112 S. Ct. 941, 117 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1992).

Defense counsel's unexcused failure to announce request and ready for trial. — Defense counsel's mere explanation that "the district attorney chose not to call the case because they had not procured defendant's presence for trial" provided no basis for excusing strict compliance with the mandatory three-prong requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171(b). State v. Moore, 207 Ga. App. 677, 428 S.E.2d 815 (1993).

Trial of defendant in fourth term after indictment not a denial of speedy trial rights when the trial in the first term resulted in a hung jury, the defendant was granted a continuance in second term but agreed to an additional term of court, and the defendant failed to announce readiness for trial in the third term. Davis v. State, 221 Ga. App. 168, 471 S.E.2d 14 (1996).

Effect of mistrial. — Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal in a case when the jury was unable to reach a unanimous verdict and the trial court was thus forced to declare a mistrial on the last business day of the term of court as the trial itself was commenced within the statutory two-term limit and the state immediately announced the state was ready to try the defendant on the unresolved charges; accordingly, the state had the right to try the defendant in that term if jurors were available, and, if not, the next succeeding regular term of court, again providing there were juries impaneled and qualified to hear the case. State v. Varner, 277 Ga. 433, 589 S.E.2d 111 (2003).

Appeals

Time for trial after interlocutory appeal. — There is no authority holding that the time for exercising the right to make a demand for trial on one indictment is extended while the trial of another indictment against the same defendant is pending. Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 413, 148 S.E.2d 192 (1966).

Recommencement of demand clock after interlocutory appeal. — On the defendant's interlocutory appeal, filing of the remittitur in the lower court is the point in time at which the demand clock resumes ticking on a pre-appeal demand for trial, not when the trial court makes the appellate court judgment the judgment of the lower court, overruling Ramirez v. State, 211 Ga. App. 356, 439 S.E.2d 4 (1993). Henry v. State, 214 Ga.

Appeals (Cont'd)

527, 449 S.E.2d 79 (1994).

Right to appeal. — Defendant may directly appeal from the pre-trial denial of either a constitutional or statutory speedy trial claim. Mayfield v. State, 264 Ga. App. 551, 593 S.E.2d 851 (2003).

Although the trial court orally indicated that the court was signing an order allowing the defendant's counsel to withdraw, no such order was in the record, and counsel's withdrawal notice had no effect on the defendant's representation; therefore, a pro se notice of appeal filed by the defendant following the denial of the defendant's speedy trial motion was ineffective because the defendant was represented at the time of the notice. Tolbert v. Toole, 296 Ga. 357, 767 S.E.2d 24 (2014).

Although denial of the defendant's constitutional speedy trial demand was not immediately appealable, the denial of the defendant's statutory speedy trial right was immediately appealable, and the constitutional speedy trial ruling was appealable along with it under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(d). Johnson v. State, 300 Ga. 252, 794 S.E.2d 60 (2016).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 8A Am. Jur. 2d, Bail and Recognizance, § 1 et seq. 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 265 et seq., 275 et seq.

C.J.S. — 8 C.J.S., Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings, §§ 25 et seq., 41 et seq. 16B C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 1328 et seq. 23 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 793 et seq.

ALR. — Waiver or loss of accused's right to speedy trial, 129 A.L.R. 572; 57 A.L.R.2d 302.

Discharge of accused for holding him excessive time without trial as bar to subsequent prosecution for same offense, 50 A.L.R.2d 943.

Effect of abolition of capital punishment on procedural rules governing crimes punishable by death — post-Furman decisions, 71 A.L.R.3d 453.

17-7-172. Requirement of announcement by state of readiness for trial prior to announcement by defendant; speedy trial.

The state shall be required in every case to announce ready or not ready for trial, except in those cases where the defendant is entitled by law to demand a speedy trial, before the defendant shall be called on to make such announcement.

History. — Ga. L. 1862-63, p. 138, § 1; Code 1868, § 4613; Code 1873, § 4710; Code 1882, § 4710; Penal Code 1895, § 959; Penal Code 1910, § 984; Code 1933, § 27-1902; Ga. L. 2006, p. 893, § 3/HB 1421.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Continuance at defendant's request. — Since the state was ready to proceed with the defendant's trial within four months of the offense, but the defendant requested a continuance to prepare the defendant's case, any delay in trial was caused by the defendant's own actions, and the defendant was not denied a speedy trial. Myron v. State, 248 Ga. 120, 281 S.E.2d 600 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1154, 102 S. Ct. 1025, 71 L. Ed. 2d 310 (1982).

Cited in Young v. Ricketts, 242 Ga. 559, 250 S.E.2d 404 (1978); Garner v. State, 159 Ga. App. 244, 282 S.E.2d 909 (1981); Ruffin v. State, 284 Ga. 52, 663 S.E.2d 189 (2008).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 267 et seq., 278 et seq., 284.
C.J.S. — 23 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, §§ 793 et seq., 823 et seq.

ARTICLE 8

PROCEDURE FOR SECURING ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES AT GRAND JURY OR TRIAL PROCEEDINGS

Cross references. — Compulsory process to obtain witnesses, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV. Subpoenas for attendance of witnesses, § 24-13-20 et seq. Securing attendance of prisoners, § 24-13-60 et seq. Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State, § 24-13-90 et seq.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Court's witnesses (other than expert) in state criminal prosecution, 16 A.L.R.4th 352.

17-7-190. Subpoena of material witnesses for state for appearance before grand jury; furnishing of prosecuting officers with list of persons subpoenaed.

When any person accused of a criminal offense before a court of inquiry is bound over or committed for trial in superior court, the judicial officer holding the court of inquiry shall, at the time of the commitment hearing, give a subpoena to all material witnesses examined for the state to appear and testify before the grand jury at the term to which the defendant is committed or bound to appear; and, after the hearing and commitment or binding over, the prosecutor may apply to the clerk of the superior court and obtain a subpoena for any person deemed by him to be a material witness for the state before the grand jury. The subpoenas issued under this Code section shall be effectual in compelling the attendance of the witnesses to appear and give evidence before the grand jury. The judicial officer holding the court of inquiry and the clerk of the superior court shall, on the first day of the term of court to which the defendant is committed or bound to appear, furnish the prosecuting officers with a complete list of all persons so subpoenaed.

History. — Ga. L. 1873, p. 33, §§ 1, 2; Code 1873, § 3846; Code 1882, § 3846; Penal Code 1895, § 917; Penal Code 1910, § 942; Code 1933, § 27-413.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Adverse presumption or inference based on state's failure to produce or examine law enforcement personnel — modern cases, 81 A.L.R.4th 872.

17-7-191. Subpoena process for witnesses of defendant; when subpoenas may be extended to witnesses outside of county.

The defendant may, upon application to the committing judicial officer or to the clerk of the court to which he is committed or bound to appear for trial, obtain subpoenas for such witnesses as he deems material for his defense. The judicial officer or the clerk of the court shall issue such subpoenas requiring the witnesses to appear at the term of the court to which the defendant is committed or bound to appear and until his case is ended. The subpoenas so issued shall have the power and authority to compel the attendance of the witnesses at the court but shall not extend to witnesses for the defendant who reside outside the county until a true bill of indictment is found or an accusation is filed against the defendant.

History. — Ga. L. 1873, p. 33, § 3; Code 1873, § 3847; Code 1882, § 3847; Penal Code 1895, § 918; Penal Code 1910, § 943; Code 1933, § 27-414.

Cross references. — Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State, § 24-13-90 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This section applied in seduction cases. Dowda v. State, 71 Ga. 481 (1883).

Defendant given reasonable time to locate witness. — Defendant should be granted a reasonable time within which to locate and procure the attendance of the absent witness, or a continuance of the case for the term. Battle v. State, 133 Ga. 182, 65 S.E. 382 (1909).

Continuance to procure testimony. — Defendant is entitled to a continuance to procure testimony of witnesses. Chatfield v. State, 10 Ga. App. 40, 72 S.E. 513 (1911).

Accused had the right to have the presence of the inmate compelled by court order, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-61 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-61), and when the witness, without fault on the part of the accused, failed to be present when the case was called, the accused was entitled to a continuance in order to obtain the presence of the witness. Grant v. State, 212 Ga. App. 565, 442 S.E.2d 899 (1994).

Despite the defendant's failure to move for a continuance, when the effect of the trial court's ruling as to a sought-after witness was to grant the defendant a continuance to allow the defendant the opportunity to subpoena the witness, the defendant's argument that the trial court failed to grant a continuance on this ground was not supported by the record. Schramm v. State, 286 Ga. App. 156, 648 S.E.2d 392 (2007).

When continuance because of absence of defense witness unavailable. — If, after being committed by a magistrate, the defendant fails to exercise the defendant's right to subpoena a defense witness who is then available for service, and attempts to serve the witness after the defendant's indictment one month later, at which time the witness has left the county, the defendant has not employed means for securing the witness which were within the defendant's power to employ and therefore is not entitled to a continuance because of the absence of such witness. Coker v. State, 87 Ga. App. 411, 74 S.E.2d 12 (1953).

State's failure to call witness on the state's list did not deny the defendant's Sixth Amendment rights because under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-191, the defendant could have subpoenaed the witness if deemed necessary to the defendant for impeachment purposes. Johnson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 717, 503 S.E.2d 603 (1998).

Authority to determine materiality of testimony of subpoenaed witnesses. — When the trial court, having conducted several hearings, is aware of the defendant's inept handling of the defendant's case, the court may act within the court's inherent authority to control proceedings before the court by requiring some competent person to determine materiality of testimony sought to be introduced by subpoenaed witnesses. Myron v. State, 248 Ga. 120, 281 S.E.2d 600 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1154, 102 S. Ct. 1025, 71 L. Ed. 2d 310 (1982).

Court of appeals erred when the court concluded that a request under the former Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State in Criminal Proceedings, former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-90 et seq. (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-90 et seq.), that an out-of-state corporation be required to produce purportedly material evidence in the corporation's possession had to be accompanied by the identification as a material witness of the corporate agent through which the corporation was to act because if the certificate of materiality was issued by the Georgia court, it was for the Kentucky corporation to identify the human agent through whom the corporation would act, perhaps in conjunction with the hearing that would be held in Kentucky upon receipt of the Georgia certificate of materiality. Yeary v. State, 289 Ga. 394, 711 S.E.2d 694 (2011).

Court of appeals erred in ruling that the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion under the former Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State, former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-90 et seq. (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-90 et seq.), to obtain evidence possessed by a witness in Kentucky because the proper statute was not applied since the court of appeals stated that the defendant was required to show that the out-of-state witness was necessary and material to the case; whether the witness was "necessary and material" is one of the determinations that must be made under the Act, former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-92(b) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-92), by the judge in the county where the out-of-state witness is located, and the Georgia trial court evaluates the request under the Act, former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-94 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-94), and must determine only whether the out-of-state witness was a "material witness" in the Georgia criminal prosecution and whether the court should issue the certificate requesting the out-of-state court to order the out-of-state witness to attend the criminal proceeding in Georgia. Davenport v. State, 289 Ga. 399, 711 S.E.2d 699 (2011).

Preservation of alleged error for review. — Because the trial court could not compel a witness sought by the defendant to testify when the defendant failed to subpoena the witness, and there was no evidence in the record that the trial court ever ordered the witness to appear, no error resulted from the trial court's failure to enforce an order the court never issued; although the defendant filed a motion to compel the witness's attendance, absent an order on the motion, any alleged error related thereto was not preserved. Schramm v. State, 286 Ga. App. 156, 648 S.E.2d 392 (2007).

Full faith and credit given to out-of-state order. — Trial court did not err by requiring the defendant to proceed to trial without the source code and other requested information because the court had granted a certificate pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-13-94 to permit the defense an opportunity to obtain the information from the manufacturer located in Kentucky, set the case with enough time to do so, and, after the Kentucky court issued an order denying the request, which order was entitled to full faith and credit, required the defendant to proceed to trial.

Phillips v. State, 324 Ga. App. 728, 751 S.E.2d 526 (2013).

Cited in Carter v. State, 11 Ga. App. 141, 74 S.E. 846 (1912); West v. State, 68 Ga. App. 56, 22 S.E.2d 115 (1942); Murphy v. State, 132 Ga. App. 654, 209 S.E.2d 101 (1974); Dodd v. State, 236 Ga. 572, 224 S.E.2d 408 (1976); Key v. State, 147 Ga. App. 800, 250 S.E.2d 527 (1978); Teat v. State, 181 Ga. App. 735, 353 S.E.2d 535 (1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 88 C.J.S., Trial, § 78 et seq. 97 C.J.S., Witnesses, §§ 3 et seq., 19 et seq.

17-7-192. Continuance for nonattendance of witnesses not subpoenaed by defendant.

A defendant who fails to use the subpoena power provided for in Code Section 17-7-191, when it is within his power to do so, shall not be entitled to a continuance because a witness material to his defense is not in attendance at the term of the court when his case is called for trial, if he is prosecuted for the same criminal act.

History. — Ga. L. 1873, p. 33, § 3; Code 1873, § 3848; Code 1882, § 3848; Penal Code 1895, § 919; Penal Code 1910, § 944; Code 1933, § 27-415.

Cross references. — Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State, § 24-13-90 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-192 does not require subpoena issued by clerk of court in addition to an order of the superior court commanding the presence of an inmate witness. Grant v. State, 212 Ga. App. 565, 442 S.E.2d 899 (1994).

Abuse of discretion in denial of motion. — Denial of a motion for continuance on the ground of an absent witness lies within the discretion of the trial court and unless manifestly abused, the denial thereof will not be disturbed. Wellons v. State, 144 Ga. App. 218, 240 S.E.2d 768 (1977).

Motion for continuance should state how attendance to be procured. — On the hearing of a motion for a continuance, based upon the absence of a material witness of the defense, when the court is authorized to find that the witness was beyond the jurisdiction of the court, that the witness's absence was not temporary, and that the court was powerless to force the witness to attend, although the movant states that the movant expected to have the witness present at the next term of the court, if possible, in these circumstances the motion should go further and state the means whereby the movant expects to procure the witness's attendance, as that the witness had promised to attend, or that the movant has some other ground for the movant's expectation. Wright v. State, 71 Ga. App. 346, 30 S.E.2d 839 (1944).

When continuance because of absence of defense witness unavailable. — When, after being committed by a magistrate, the defendant fails to exercise the defendant's right to subpoena a defense witness who is then available for service, and attempts to serve the witness after the defendant's indictment one month later, at which time the witness has left the county, the defendant has not employed means for securing the witness which were within the defendant's power to employ and therefore the defendant is not entitled to a continuance because of the absence of such witness. Coker v.

State, 87 Ga. App. 411, 74 S.E.2d 12 (1953).

Requirements for continuance when witnesses in county. — As to witnesses residing in the county, the accused must, in order to make a showing complete, either show that the accused has had the witnesses subpoenaed under the provisions of the preceding sections, or else that there has been a commitment trial. Chatfield v. State, 10 Ga. App. 40, 72 S.E. 513 (1911).

Proof of materiality of testimony may be required. Hood v. State, 93 Ga. 168, 18 S.E. 553 (1893).

Applicability to procedure to secure attendance of out-of-state witnesses. — Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-192, which deal with the accused's right to obtain subpoenas for such absent witnesses as the accused may deem material for the accused's defense, did not apply to the procedure set forth in the former Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State, former O.C.G.A. T. 24, C. 10, Art. 5 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-13-90 et seq.). Farrell v. State, 160 Ga. App. 321, 287 S.E.2d 318 (1981).

Cited in Carter v. State, 11 Ga. App. 141, 74 S.E. 846 (1912); West v. State, 68 Ga. App. 56, 22 S.E.2d 115 (1942); Parrish v. State, 125 Ga. App. 97, 186 S.E.2d 541 (1971); Reid v. State, 129 Ga. App. 657, 200 S.E.2d 454 (1973); Key v. State, 147 Ga. App. 800, 250 S.E.2d 527 (1978); Gilmore v. State, 154 Ga. App. 429, 268 S.E.2d 693 (1980); Cave v. State, 171 Ga. App. 22, 318 S.E.2d 689 (1984); Sosebee v. State, 190 Ga. App. 746, 380 S.E.2d 464 (1989).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 17 Am. Jur. 2d, Continuance, §§ 10 et seq., 54 et seq. 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 293 et seq., 381.

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 35, 36. 22 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 895 et seq.

ALR. — Right of accused to continuance because of absence of witness who is fugitive from justice, 42 A.L.R.2d 1229.

ARTICLE 9

DISCOVERY

Editor's notes. — For current provisions as to discovery in general, see O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq.

17-7-210, 17-7-211.

Reserved. Repealed by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 1, effective January 1, 1995.

Editor's notes. — These Code sections were based on Code 1933, §§ 27-1302 and 27-1303, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1388, § 2.

CHAPTER 8

TRIAL

Article 1

General Provisions

Sec.
17-8-1. Cases to be called in order in which they stand on docket; exceptions; preferred scheduling when alleged victim is disabled adult or elder person.
17-8-2. Indictments and special presentments to be presented to jury; exception for settlements between prosecutor and defendant which are approved by court.
17-8-3. Entry of nolle prosequi.
17-8-4. Procedure for trial of jointly indicted defendants; right of defendants to testify for or against one another; order of separate trials; acquittal or conviction where offense requires joint action or concurrence; number of strikes allowed defendants.
17-8-5. Recordation of testimony in felony cases; entering testimony on minutes of court where guilty verdict found; preparation of transcript where death sentence imposed; preparation of transcript where mistrial results in felony case.
17-8-6. Authority of municipal court to seal criminal records.

Article 2

Continuances

Sec.
17-8-20. Showing of due diligence required of applicants for continuances generally.
17-8-21. When showing for continuance required of state.
17-8-22. Consideration of motion for continuance by court generally; allowance of counter-showing to motion.
17-8-23. Absence of party as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-24. Absence or illness of counsel as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-25. Absence of witness as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-26. Party or party's attorney in attendance at General Assembly as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-27. Attorney General in attendance at General Assembly as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-28. Witness in attendance at General Assembly as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-29. Party or party's counsel in attendance at meeting of Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-30. Party or party's counsel in attendance at meeting of Board of Human Services or Board of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities as grounds for granting continuance.
17-8-31. Party, leading attorney, or material witness in attendance on active duty as member of National Guard or component of armed forces of the United States as grounds for granting continuance; setting bail in certain cases.
17-8-32. Effect of admission by opposing party of facts to be proved upon allowance of continuance.
17-8-33. Granting of continuances where indictment found or accusation made; continuance where material witness unavailable; continuances required by principles of justice; granting of continuance where postponement possible to later date in term.
17-8-34. Granting of continuances in cases returned by appellate court for trial.

Sec.
17-8-35. Effect of continuance by defendant upon trial of codefendants.
17-8-36. Entry of date of continuance upon docket of court; announcement of continuance in open court.
17-8-37. Duration of continuance.
17-8-38. Case not reached at trial term continued.

Article 3

Conduct of Proceedings

17-8-50. Courts in which trials of inmates escaping from correctional institutions to take place; admissibility of records pertaining to former trials of such inmates; testimony of other inmates.
17-8-51. Admissibility of testimony of inmates in trials for crime of mutiny.
17-8-52. Oath to be administered to witnesses.
17-8-53. Exclusion of public from courtroom when evidence vulgar or obscene.
17-8-54. Persons in courtroom when person under age of 16 testifies concerning sexual offense.
Sec.
17-8-55. Testimony of child less than 17 years old outside physical presence of accused.
17-8-56. Writing out and reading of charge to jury; filing of charge; furnishing of copies of charge.
17-8-57. Expression or intimation of opinion by judge as to matters proved or guilt of accused.
17-8-58. Objections to jury charges prior to the jury retiring to deliberate; failure to raise objections.

Article 4

Conduct and Argument of Counsel

17-8-70. Number of counsel permitted to argue case.
17-8-71. Order of argument after evidence presented.
17-8-72. Misdemeanors and cases arising from inferior judicatories; time limits on closing argument.
17-8-73. Noncapital and capital felony cases; time limits on closing argument.
17-8-74. Allowance of additional time for closing argument.
17-8-75. Improper statements by counsel.
17-8-76. Argument to or in front of jury as to possibility of clemency.

Cross references. — Guarantee of trial by jury, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI. Criminal penalties for unlawfully influencing jurors, influencing witnesses, tampering with evidence, and other acts, § 16-10-90 et seq. Trial calendar, Uniform State Court Rules, Rule 8.3.

Law reviews. — For annual survey article discussing developments in criminal law, see 52 Mercer L. Rev. 167 (2000).

U.S. Code. — Trials, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rules 23-31.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Criminal trial of deaf, mute, or blind person, 80 A.L.R.2d 1084.

When does jeopardy attach in a nonjury trial, 49 A.L.R.3d 1039.

Jury's discussion of parole law as ground for reversal or new trial, 21 A.L.R.4th 420.

Propriety and effect of jurors' discussion of evidence among themselves before final submission of criminal case, 21 A.L.R.4th 444.

Competency of nonexpert witness to testify, in criminal case, based upon personal observation, as to whether person was under the influence of drugs, 21 A.L.R.4th 905.

Validity and efficacy of minor's waiver of right to counsel — modern cases, 25 A.L.R.4th 1072.

Impeachment of defendant in criminal case by showing defendant's prearrest silence — state cases, 35 A.L.R.4th 731.

Right of accused, in state criminal trial, to insist, over prosecutor's or court's objection, on trial by court without jury, 37 A.L.R.4th 304.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to prevent disturbance by spectators or defendant, 55 A.L.R.4th 1170.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to avoid intimidation of witness, 55 A.L.R.4th 1196.

Closed-circuit television witness examination, 61 A.L.R.4th 1155.

Disqualification from criminal proceeding of trial judge who earlier presided over disposition of case of coparticipant, 72 A.L.R.4th 651.

Adverse presumption or inference based on party's failure to produce or examine spouse — modern cases, 79 A.L.R.4th 694.

Adverse presumption or inference based on party's failure to produce or examine friend — modern cases, 79 A.L.R.4th 779.

Propriety of substituting juror in bifurcated state trial after end of first phase and before second phase is given to jury, 89 A.L.R.4th 423.

Actions by state official involving defendant as constituting "outrageous" conduct violating due process guaranties, 18 A.L.R.5th 1.

ARTICLE 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Cross references. — Criminal trial calendar, Uniform Superior Court Rules, Rule 32.

17-8-1. Cases to be called in order in which they stand on docket; exceptions; preferred scheduling when alleged victim is disabled adult or elder person.

(a) The cases on the criminal docket shall be called in the order in which they stand on the docket unless the accused is in jail or, otherwise, in the sound discretion of the court.

(b)(1) As used in this Code section, the terms "disabled adult" and "elder person" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 16-5-100.

(2) When the alleged victim is a disabled adult or elder person, the prosecuting attorney shall notify the accused if it intends to seek preferred scheduling. The notice shall be in writing and shall:

(A) Allege the specific factor or factors that will inhibit a disabled adult from attending or participating in court proceedings if he or she is a disabled adult; or

(B) State the age of the alleged victim if he or she is an elder person.

(3) When notice has been given pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subsection, the court shall set a date for a hearing on the issue within 14 days after the filing of such notice. The court shall consider the matter and if the court determines that preferred scheduling is necessary, the trial shall not be:

(A) Subject to subsection (a) of this Code section; and

(B) Earlier than 30 days from the date of the hearing.

History. — Ga. L. 1862-63, p. 139, § 1; Code 1863, § 4592; Code 1868, § 4613; Code 1873, § 4710; Code 1882, § 4710; Penal Code 1895, § 942; Penal Code 1910, § 967; Code 1933, § 27-1301; Ga. L. 2015, p. 598, § 1-5/HB 72.

Law reviews. — For article on the 2015 amendment of this Code section, see 32 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 63 (2015).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This section was directory, not mandatory. Rosenbrook v. State, 78 Ga. 111 (1886); Merrill v. State, 130 Ga. App. 745, 204 S.E.2d 632 (1974); Williams v. State, 188 Ga. App. 496, 373 S.E.2d 281 (1988).

Defendant was entitled to have case called in the proper order. In re Brookins, 153 Ga. App. 82, 264 S.E.2d 560 (1980).

Although the cases on the criminal docket shall be called in the order in which the cases stand on the docket, a trial court retains discretion to call the cases out of order; there was no error in calling the defendant's case for trial, despite the fact that another pending matter had been pending longer on the trial court's docket, because the defendant in the other case was expected to enter a plea following the sentencing in another matter. Kuykendoll v. State, 278 Ga. App. 369, 629 S.E.2d 32 (2006).

Injury resulting from change in order must be shown. — Before a party can be heard to object to the order in which the court proceeds, the party must show injury to oneself resulting from the act of the court. Rosenbrook v. State, 78 Ga. 111 (1886); Lister v. State, 143 Ga. App. 483, 238 S.E.2d 591 (1977).

Trial court did not err by calling a case out of the order listed on the trial calendar when both the prosecuting attorney and defense counsel announced that they were ready for trial and the defendant was not prejudiced by the case being called out of order. Wilkins v. State, 246 Ga. App. 667, 541 S.E.2d 458 (2000).

Grant or denial of continuance in court's discretion. — Grant or denial of a continuance to a criminal defendant is in the sound discretion of the court, especially when the defendant is in jail. Gann v. State, 166 Ga. App. 172, 303 S.E.2d 510 (1983).

Allowing the district attorney to call cases out of the order listed on the criminal trial calendar was an abuse of discretion. Cuzzort v. State, 271 Ga. 464, 519 S.E.2d 687 (1999).

Defendant was not entitled to reversal of the defendant's conviction on the basis of an illegal case assignment system pursuant to which the district attorney called the case for trial, and assigned the case to a judge since the case assignment system was not unconstitutional and it was highly improbable that the assignment contributed to the jury's verdict. State v. Wooten, 273 Ga. 529, 543 S.E.2d 721 (2001).

Defendant's case called before others with lower docket numbers. — When neither injury nor abuse of sound discretion are shown, the trial judge does not err in ruling against a defendant's motion for continuance on the ground that the defendant's case was called for trial prior to another case having a lower number on the docket. Merrill v. State, 130 Ga. App. 745, 204 S.E.2d 632 (1974).

"Speedy trial demand" cases. — Rule does not prohibit a local policy moving a "speedy trial demand" case to the top of a calendar; in fact, such a policy is only common sense and designed to accommodate the demand of the accused. Culliver v. State, 247 Ga. App. 877, 545 S.E.2d 392 (2001).

Prejudice from sounding several indictments against same defendant all at once. — Frequently, when several indictments are pending against the same defendant, the indictments are all sounded on the call of the docket in the hearing of the jurors who are assembled in the courtroom to try those and other cases on the calendar. This may be somewhat prejudicial to such defendants, but it is, nevertheless, the only proper and expedient method of sounding out the docket. It is no more prejudicial when another indictment is publicized to the jurors through error, than in the manner pointed out first, and to hold such conduct to be prejudicial would reflect on the authority of the trial court to call the docket as required by this section. Dye v. State, 77 Ga. App. 517, 48 S.E.2d 742 (1948).

There was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in denying the motion for a mistrial or disqualifying the jurors after the prosecutor apparently read the criminal calendar in the presence of the panel of potential jurors prior to commencement of trial, which calendar allegedly contained three felony charges against the defendant, who moved for a mistrial on the ground that it placed the defendant's character in issue and made it impossible to obtain jurors who had not heard the prejudicial information about the defendant and, in the alternative, asked that all jurors present when the calendar was read be disqualified. Anderson v. State, 165 Ga. App. 885, 303 S.E.2d 57 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 252 Ga. 103, 312 S.E.2d 113 (1984).

Arraigning for different offenses at same time. — This section did not vest in the solicitor general (now district attorney) the right to arraign a defendant, read to the defendant the indictment against the defendant, require the defendant to plead thereto, and upon receiving the defendant's plea of not guilty, proceed further to read two more indictments against the defendant involving different offenses, and receive pleas of guilty or not guilty thereto. Sides v. State, 213 Ga. 482, 99 S.E.2d 884 (1957).

Dismissal of continued case when state unprepared. — When a criminal case was called for trial, the court granted the state's motion for continuance and the state was placed on terms, the case was then reset for trial, and the state was not ready to try the case on that date, the court properly dismissed the charges against the defendant. State v. Grimes, 194 Ga. App. 736, 392 S.E.2d 727 (1990).

Sufficiency of harm. — Failure to try the defendant's case in the order in which the case appeared on the trial calendar resulting in the loss of contact with a witness who possessed exculpatory testimony provided an insufficient showing of harm since the content of the witness' expected testimony was never revealed. State v. Jessup, 187 Ga. App. 429, 370 S.E.2d 489 (1988).

Forfeiture of bail bond. — Bail bond was properly forfeited for nonappearance even though the defendant's case was called out of order on the trial calendar. Taylor v. State, 194 Ga. App. 245, 390 S.E.2d 601 (1990).

Cited in Barrentine v. State, 136 Ga. App. 802, 222 S.E.2d 103 (1975); Arnsdorff v. State, 152 Ga. App. 515, 263 S.E.2d 176 (1979); Garner v. State, 159 Ga. App. 244, 282 S.E.2d 909 (1981); Ramsey v. State, 169 Ga. App. 920, 315 S.E.2d 472 (1984); State v. Finkelstein, 170 Ga. App. 608, 317 S.E.2d 648 (1984).

17-8-2. Indictments and special presentments to be presented to jury; exception for settlements between prosecutor and defendant which are approved by court.

All indictments or special presentments shall be submitted to and passed upon by a jury under the direction of the presiding judge unless there is a settlement of the case between the prosecutor and the defendant, which settlement shall be valid only by the approval and order of the court on examination into the merits of the case.

History. — Laws 1850, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 864; Code 1863, § 4588; Code 1868, §§ 4609, 4610; Ga. L. 1870, p. 422, § 2; Code 1873, § 4706; Code 1882, § 4706; Penal Code 1895, § 956; Penal Code 1910, § 981; Code 1933, § 27-1701.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Once indictment occurs, O.C.G.A. § 17-8-2 applies, and the defendant and victim may not settle the offense between themselves without approval of the court. Pratt v. State, 167 Ga. App. 819, 307 S.E.2d 714 (1983).

Submission to jury not required when essential element of charge not provable. — There was no error when the trial judge dismissed one count of an indictment on the defendant's motion even though there was no settlement of the case between the defendant and the prosecutor since the trial judge had the authority to keep the case from a jury after the judge determined that the state could not as a matter of law establish an essential element of the offense charged. State v. Finkelstein, 170 Ga. App. 608, 317 S.E.2d 648 (1984).

What settlements require court approval. — This section required court approval of settlements only in cases which have proceeded by indictment or special presentment. Goolsby v. Bush, 53 Ga. 353 (1874); Childs v. State, 118 Ga. App. 706, 165 S.E.2d 577 (1968).

Settlement independent of court for minor offenses. — There may be a settlement independent of the court in such offenses as are not punishable by fine and imprisonment or a more severe penalty, but offenses of a higher grade than these cannot be settled without the consent of both the prosecutor and the court. McDaniel v. State, 27 Ga. 197 (1859).

Mere consideration for settlement will not suppress prosecution. — Neither former penal Code 1895, § 956 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-2) nor former Civil Code 1895, §§ 3894 and 3895 (see O.C.G.A. § 51-11-20) allow a settlement merely for a consideration to suppress a prosecution, whether the offense be a felony or a misdemeanor. Jones v. Dannenberg Co., 112 Ga. 426, 37 S.E. 729, 52 L.R.A. 271 (1900).

Court may exercise court's discretion. McDaniel v. State, 27 Ga. 197 (1859).

Action for malicious prosecution may not be based on settled case. — When the defendant in a criminal prosecution settles with the prosecutor the claim which is the subject matter in issue, the prosecution, although thereby terminated, is not terminated favorably to the defendant for purposes of an action for malicious prosecution. It being essential to a right of action for a malicious prosecution by a defendant in a criminal prosecution that the prosecution must have terminated favorably to the defendant. Suit brought by the defendant in a criminal proceeding against the prosecutor to recover damages for an alleged malicious prosecution, wherein the only allegation as respects the termination of the criminal proceedings is that the plaintiff, after the defendant has instituted criminal proceedings against the defendant, made an adjustment and settled the matter at a discount with the prosecutor, and that the prosecution was never further pursued, but that warrant went dismissed by the operation of law, fails to show a termination of the criminal prosecution favorable to the plaintiff as the defendant in the criminal prosecution, and therefore fails to set out a cause of action. Smith v. Otwell, 51 Ga. App. 741, 181 S.E. 493 (1935).

Cited in Statham v. State, 41 Ga. 507 (1871); Brown v. State, 44 Ga. 300 (1871); Jones v. Peterson, 117 Ga. 58, 43 S.E. 417 (1903); Sanders v. McKee, 145 Ga. 507, 89 S.E. 484 (1916); Smith v. Embry, 103 Ga. App. 375, 119 S.E.2d 45 (1961); Childers v. State, 130 Ga. App. 555, 203 S.E.2d 874 (1974).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Cases brought by accusation. — Criminal case brought by accusation may be settled by the district attorney by a procedure like that outlined in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-2, although the statute, by the statute's terms, does not apply to cases brought by accusation. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-8.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 690 et seq.

ALR. — Duty to dismiss criminal proceedings on motion of attorney general or prosecuting attorney, pursuant to promise of immunity, 66 A.L.R. 1378.

Construction and effect of statute authorizing dismissal of criminal action upon settlement of civil liability growing out of act charged, 42 A.L.R.3d 315.

Admissibility of defense communications made in connection with plea bargaining, 59 A.L.R.3d 441.

Propriety of sentencing justice's consideration of defendant's failure or refusal to accept plea bargain, 100 A.L.R.3d 834.

17-8-3. Entry of nolle prosequi.

After an examination of the case in open court and before it has been submitted to a jury, the prosecuting attorney may enter a nolle prosequi with the consent of the court. After the case has been submitted to a jury, a nolle prosequi shall not be entered except by the consent of the defendant. The prosecuting attorney shall notify the defendant and the defendant's attorney of record within 30 days of the entry of a nolle prosequi either personally or in writing; such written notice shall be sent by regular mail to the defendant at the defendant's last known address and to the defendant's attorney of record.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 836; Code 1863, § 4535; Code 1868, § 4555; Ga. L. 1870, p. 422, § 1; Code 1873, § 4649; Ga. L. 1877, p. 108, § 1; Code 1882, § 4649; Penal Code 1895, § 957; Penal Code 1910, § 982; Code 1933, § 27-1801; Ga. L. 1989, p. 585, § 1.

Law reviews. — For survey article on death penalty law, see 59 Mercer L. Rev. 123 (2007).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Object of this section was to prevent entries of nolle prosequi by the solicitor general (now district attorney) without the sanction and approval of the judge, who presumably will not allow such entries to be made except for good reason. Examination in open court is required in order that the judge may have proper and lawful information upon which to base the judge's action. Lewis v. State, 101 Ga. 532, 28 S.E. 970 (1897).

Provisions of this section were directory and for the protection of the public. Doyal v. State, 70 Ga. 134 (1883).

Timeliness of nolle prosequi motion. — Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.1 did not apply to the state's motion for entry of nolle prosequi; the timeliness of an entry of nolle prosequi is governed by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-3. State v. Serio, 257 Ga. App. 369, 571 S.E.2d 168 (2002).

Trial court properly vacated the court's first nolle prosequi order entered pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-3 and substituted one entered in open court almost two years later; while a trial court could vacate an order of nolle prosequi at will only during the term of its court, and the trial court here indisputably vacated the court's order outside the term, this situation was governed by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, and treating the second ground of the defendant's motion as a motion to set aside under § 9-11-60(d)(2), the trial court was within the court's rights in essentially modifying the court's order under § 9-11-60(h). Montgomery v. State, 259 Ga. App. 153, 575 S.E.2d 917 (2003).

Recommendation of nol-prossed by district attorney. — It is duty of district attorney to determine whether it is in public interest to recommend to court that case be nol-prossed. State v. Davis, 159 Ga. App. 537, 284 S.E.2d 51 (1981).

Prosecutor's discretion to dismiss. — Prosecutor, as part of the authority of the prosecutor's office, has sole discretion to dismiss cases prior to indictment. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Trial court has discretion to order the entry of a nolle prosequi, instead of quashing the indictment, to avoid the application of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-53.1. Blanton v. State, 324 Ga. App. 610, 751 S.E.2d 431 (2013).

Court's discretion to follow nol-prossed recommendation. — When recommendation is made that indictment be nol-prossed, it is within the discretion of the trial court whether to follow the recommendation. State v. Davis, 159 Ga. App. 537, 284 S.E.2d 51 (1981).

Plea bargain was not "judicially coerced" when the court agreed to accept the nolle prosequi only if the defendant's coindictee exonerated the defendant or accepted primary responsibility for the crimes charged, and declined to consent to the nolle prosequi when the state could not produce this evidence. Wilcox v. State, 236 Ga. App. 235, 511 S.E.2d 597 (1999).

Disclosure of nolle prosequi agreement to jury. — When the jury is made aware of a nolle prosequi agreement between a codefendant and the prosecutor by the prosecutor's disclosure of the agreement, the requirements of due process were satisfied. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 683, 261 S.E.2d 430 (1979).

Purpose of requirement for examination of case in open court. — Requirement that the nolle prosequi be entered after an examination of the case in open court would appear to be for the purpose of protecting the interests of both the accused and the state by making all the proceedings conducted openly in the courtroom in the presence of anyone who legitimately may be present, rather than covertly so as to conceal or at least give the appearance of concealing the fact and the true purposes of such proceedings. Thompson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 888, 237 S.E.2d 419, rev'd on other grounds, 240 Ga. 296, 240 S.E.2d 87 (1977).

Failure to enter nolle prosequi of original indictment in open court may affect the validity of the attempted nolle prosequi, but it does not affect the validity of a new indictment. Casillas v. State, 267 Ga. 541, 480 S.E.2d 571 (1997).

De novo investigation was not required before the entry of nolle prosequi orders on an original indictment when the court conducted an examination in open court. Larochelle v. State, 219 Ga. App. 792, 466 S.E.2d 672 (1996).

Accused's consent not required prior to attachment of jeopardy. — Nolle prosequi may be entered without the consent of the accused at any time prior to the attachment of jeopardy. McIntyre v. State, 189 Ga. App. 764, 377 S.E.2d 532 (1989).

Nolle prosequi as adjudication of guilt or innocence. — Nolle prosequi does not adjudicate either the innocence or guilt of the accused unless the accused has been placed in jeopardy. Hunter v. State, 104 Ga. App. 576, 122 S.E.2d 172 (1961).

For case to be considered submitted, jury must be impanelled and sworn. — Case is not submitted to the jury, within the meaning of this section, until the jury has been impanelled and sworn in the cause. Fortson v. State, 13 Ga. App. 681, 79 S.E. 746 (1913); Martin v. State, 73 Ga. App. 573, 37 S.E.2d 411, cert. denied, 329 U.S. 760, 67 S. Ct. 115, 91 L. Ed. 655 (1946).

Consent of the court is a necessity after the case has been submitted to the jury. Lascelles v. State, 90 Ga. 347, 16 S.E. 945, 35 Am. St. R. 216 (1892), aff'd, 148 U.S. 537, 13 S. Ct. 687, 37 L. Ed. 549 (1893).

Nolle prosequi cannot be entered without the consent of the trial court since such consent is conclusive upon the validity of the nolle-pros. State v. Davis, 159 Ga. App. 537, 284 S.E.2d 51 (1981).

To the extent that the state agrees to nolle prosequi certain charges, such agreement is not binding without a trial court's consent. Palmer v. State, 260 Ga. App. 670, 580 S.E.2d 539 (2003).

Court's consent is conclusive as to validity of nolle prosequi. Lascelles v. State, 90 Ga. 347, 16 S.E. 945, 35 Am. St. R. 216 (1892), aff'd, 148 U.S. 537, 13 S. Ct. 687, 37 L. Ed. 549 (1893); State v. Davis, 196 Ga. App. 785, 397 S.E.2d 58 (1990).

Rescission of approval of entry of nolle prosequi. — State can revive a prosecution by petitioning the trial court to vacate the court's order consenting to the entry of nolle prosequi. Buice v. State, 239 Ga. App. 52, 520 S.E.2d 258 (1999), aff'd, 272 Ga. 323, 528 S.E.2d 788 (2000).

An order of nolle prosequi may be vacated within the same term of court in which the order was rendered in those instances where the state has demonstrated a meritorious reason and there is no prejudice to the accused which would constitute a manifest abuse of the trial court's discretion in vacating the order. Buice v. State, 272 Ga. 323, 528 S.E.2d 788 (2000), affirming Buice v. State, 239 Ga. App. 52, 520 S.E.2d 258 (1999).

Nolle prosequi must go on the minutes with the court's cognizance thereof. Statham v. State, 41 Ga. 507 (1871).

Consent of accused not required. — Consent of the accused is not required if the case has not gone to the jury. Fortson v. State, 13 Ga. App. 681, 79 S.E. 746 (1913).

Consent of the accused is not required even if the case is on a rehearing after a reversal for lack of evidence to support the verdict. Lewis v. State, 101 Ga. 532, 28 S.E. 970 (1897).

Consent required when accused has been in jeopardy. — After the accused has been in jeopardy, the accused cannot again be prosecuted for the same offense if the nolle prosequi was without the accused's consent. Doyal v. State, 70 Ga. 134 (1883).

Conclusiveness of judgment entering nolle prosequi. — Judgment of the court allowing the entry of nolle prosequi has the same force and conclusiveness ordinarily incident to judgments, and cannot be collaterally attacked. Peeples v. Walker, 12 Ga. 353 (1852); Clark v. Black, 136 Ga. 812, 72 S.E. 251 (1911).

Nolle prosequi after mistrial doesn't result in acquittal. — Effect of a nolle prosequi of a bill of indictment is a termination of the case pending on that bill, with all recognizances and other incidents of that particular prosecution. Lamp v. Smith, 56 Ga. 589 (1876).

Nolle prosequi has the effect of preventing an appeal for error in overruling a demurrer to an indictment. Jones v. State, 115 Ga. 814, 42 S.E. 271 (1902).

Properly granted mistrial removes the case from the jury and a nolle prosequi entered after a mistrial, even without the consent of the defendant, does not have the effect of acquittal. Rhyne v. State, 209 Ga. App. 548, 434 S.E.2d 76 (1993), aff'd, 264 Ga. 176, 442 S.E.2d 742 (1994).

Nolle prosequi as to one codefendant but not others. — When a separate written order on a nolle prosequi is entered as to one codefendant, showing clearly that a count of the indictment was abandoned only as to that defendant, there is not a termination of the charge against the other codefendant. Williams v. State, 244 Ga. 485, 260 S.E.2d 879 (1979).

While the statute clearly establishes the authority of the prosecuting attorney and court and the right of the defendant involved, the statute gives no right to a codefendant to have a voice in the decision of whether to enter a nolle prosequi. Broomfield v. State, 264 Ga. 145, 442 S.E.2d 242 (1994).

Conclusion that the appellant has no standing to complain of the trial court's decision to consent to the entry of nolle prosequi to appellant's codefendant does not mean that the appellant cannot complain of the manner in which the situation was handled in the trial court. Broomfield v. State, 264 Ga. 145, 442 S.E.2d 242 (1994).

Reindictment after nolle prosequi. — When a nolle prosequi is entered by the prosecuting attorney with the consent of the court, a new indictment may be found within six months from the time the first indictment is quashed or the nolle prosequi entered and its effect therefore is not necessarily the ending of the prosecution, but the continuance of the prosecution. Not until the expiration of the six-month period within which a new indictment for the same offense may be preferred, or some other act or declaration which amounts to an abandonment, is the prosecution at an end. Earlywine v. Strickland, 145 Ga. App. 626, 244 S.E.2d 118 (1978); Bowens v. State, 157 Ga. App. 334, 277 S.E.2d 326 (1981).

When a nolle prosequi has been entered to an indictment before the indictment has been submitted to the jury, this is not a sufficient ground to sustain a plea in bar to a reindictment for the same offense. Bowens v. State, 157 Ga. App. 334, 277 S.E.2d 326 (1981).

When in superior court, before a jury is impaneled and sworn, the state enters a nolle prosequi of the indictment and, subsequently, one of the charges is transferred to the county solicitor's office where it subsequently is included in an accusation before the state court, this does not result in an improper termination or constitute the basis for prosecutorial misconduct such as to bar the prosecution based on double jeopardy. Newman v. State, 166 Ga. App. 609, 305 S.E.2d 123 (1983).

Prosecutor was entitled, with the permission of the recorder's court, to enter a nolle prosequi of the charges pending there against the defendant, which rendered those charges dead, but did not prevent the prosecutor from reaccusing the defendant for the same offenses; contrary to the finding of the state court, the fact that charges against the defendant were pending in both the recorder's court and the state court for one day did not render the state's conduct "improper." State v. Serio, 257 Ga. App. 369, 571 S.E.2d 168 (2002).

Because the defendant was never tried and convicted under a first indictment, jeopardy never attached as to that indictment; therefore, any failure to follow the procedures of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-3 in filling a nolle prosequi on the first indictment did not bar the defendant's subsequent conviction under the second indictment. Montgomery v. State, 259 Ga. App. 153, 575 S.E.2d 917 (2003).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by granting the nolle prosequi as to a first indictment nor did the court err in denying the defendant's plea of former jeopardy and motion to dismiss a third indictment because under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-3 the state did not need the defendant's consent to obtain an order of nolle prosequi before the case was submitted to a jury and the state had the discretion to order the nolle prosequi, instead of quashing the indictment to avoid the application of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-53.1. Blanton v. State, 324 Ga. App. 610, 751 S.E.2d 431 (2013).

Entries of nolle prosequi do not trigger the bar to prosecution in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-53.1. Blanton v. State, 324 Ga. App. 610, 751 S.E.2d 431 (2013).

Under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-3, the state does not need a defendant's consent to obtain an order of nolle prosequi before the case has been submitted to a jury and that the entry of such orders renders the motions to quash moot. Blanton v. State, 324 Ga. App. 610, 751 S.E.2d 431 (2013).

When nolle prosequi bars subsequent indictment. — Entry of a nolle prosequi is a bar to a subsequent indictment only when entered after the case has gone to the jury and without the consent of the accused. Jones v. State, 55 Ga. 625 (1876); Doyal v. State, 70 Ga. 134 (1883); Jackson v. State, 76 Ga. 551 (1886).

Costs may not be demanded or received when case nol prossed. — No officer has the right to demand or receive of one accused of crime costs on a criminal case which has been nol prossed. Hunter v. State, 104 Ga. App. 576, 122 S.E.2d 172 (1961).

Failure to inform jury of plea agreement when jury is informed of nolle prosequi. — If in the prosecutor's opening statement the prosecutor informs the jury of the prosecutor's agreement to nol prosse the codefendant's indictment in exchange for that codefendant's testimony, the state's failure to inform the jury of its plea bargaining agreement with the codefendant, who testified against the appellant on behalf of the state, does not constitute reversible error. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 683, 261 S.E.2d 430 (1979).

Nolle prosequi after submission to jury is error and equivalent to acquittal. — After submission to the jury on a good indictment, a nolle prosequi without the consent of the accused is error and is equivalent to an acquittal on a plea of former jeopardy. Jones v. State, 55 Ga. 625 (1876).

Nolle prosequi on two counts after submission to jury required new trial. — Trial court erred in allowing the state to nolle prosequi the two methamphetamine possession charges over the defendant's objection and proceed only on a trafficking charge because the case had been submitted to the jury within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-3. Also, this procedure essentially allowed the state to amend the indictment. Truelove v. State, 302 Ga. App. 418, 691 S.E.2d 549 (2010).

Cited in Price v. Cobb, 60 Ga. App. 59, 3 S.E.2d 131 (1939); Williams v. State, 126 Ga. App. 302, 190 S.E.2d 807 (1972); In re Pending Cases, 234 Ga. 264, 215 S.E.2d 473 (1975); Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976); Wood v. State, 242 Ga. 277, 248 S.E.2d 612 (1978); Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981); Rhear v. State, 171 Ga. App. 435, 319 S.E.2d 895 (1984); Merrill v. State, 201 Ga. App. 671, 411 S.E.2d 750 (1991); Brown v. State, 322 Ga. App. 446, 745 S.E.2d 699 (2013).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Discretion of court in addressing motion. — As a general rule, a motion to nolle prosequi a state indictment can only be entered upon the court's consent. Whether to consent to the nolle prosequi is a matter addressed to the sound discretion of the court. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U88-21.

No disqualification of prosecuting attorney for denial of motion. — Once an indictment or accusation has been filed, a district attorney's motion to nolle prosequi or dead docket requires consent of the court. If the trial court refuses to grant the district attorney's motion to nolle prosequi or dead docket the case, the district attorney is not thereby disqualified. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U88-25.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 685 et seq.

C.J.S. — 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 275 et seq.

ALR. — Power of court to enter nolle prosequi or dismiss prosecution, 69 A.L.R. 240.

Nolle prosequi or discontinuance of prosecution in one court and instituting new prosecution in another court of coordinate jurisdiction, 117 A.L.R. 423.

17-8-4. Procedure for trial of jointly indicted defendants; right of defendants to testify for or against one another; order of separate trials; acquittal or conviction where offense requires joint action or concurrence; number of strikes allowed defendants.

(a) When two or more defendants are jointly indicted for a capital offense, any defendant so electing shall be separately tried unless the state shall waive the death penalty. When indicted for a capital felony when the death penalty is waived, or for a felony less than capital, or for a misdemeanor, such defendants may be tried jointly or separately in the discretion of the trial court. In any event, a jointly indicted defendant may testify for another jointly indicted defendant or on behalf of the state. When separate trials are ordered in any case, the defendants shall be tried in the order requested by the state. If the offense requires joint action and concurrence of two or more persons, acquittal or conviction of one defendant shall not operate as acquittal or conviction of others not tried.

(b) When two or more defendants are tried jointly for a crime or offense, such defendants shall be entitled to the same number of strikes as a single defendant if tried separately. The strikes shall be exercised jointly by the defendants or shall be apportioned among the defendants in the manner the court shall direct. In the event two or more defendants are tried jointly, the court, upon request of the defendants, shall allow an equal number of additional strikes to the defendants, not to exceed five each, as the court shall deem necessary, to the ends that justice may prevail. The court may allow the state additional strikes not to exceed the number of additional strikes as are allowed to the defendants.

History. — Laws 1836, Cobb's Digest, p. 841; Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 266, § 1; Ga. L. 1858, p. 99, § 1; Code 1863, § 4574; Code 1868, § 4595; Code 1873, § 4692; Ga. L. 1878-79, p. 59, § 1; Code 1882, § 4692; Penal Code 1895, § 969; Penal Code 1910, § 995; Code 1933, § 27-2101; Ga. L. 1971, p. 891, § 1; Ga. L. 1972, p. 618, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 9/HB 170.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-5. Number of peremptory challenges, § 15-12-165.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 1/HB 170, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Criminal Justice Act of 2005.'"

Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 17/HB 170, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the 2005 amendment applies to all trials which commence on or after July 1, 2005.

U.S. Code. — Joinder of offenses and of defendants, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 8.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Separate Trials

Prejudice
Application
Juror Strikes in Joint Trials

General Consideration

Constitutionality of distinction between capital cases in which death penalty sought and other capital cases. — Distinction which former Code 1933, § 27-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4) drew between capital cases in which the state was seeking the death penalty and other capital cases did not constitute a violation of equal protection and due process. Reaves v. State, 242 Ga. 542, 250 S.E.2d 376 (1978).

Discretion of court to join or sever. — It is within the discretion of the trial court to try the defendants jointly or separately when two or more defendants are indicted for a capital felony in which the state does not seek the death penalty, and absent an abuse of discretion, denial of a motion to sever is not grounds for reversal. Mapp v. State, 258 Ga. 273, 368 S.E.2d 511 (1988).

It is well established that joinder of the codefendants is within the discretion of the trial court. Sheppard v. State, 205 Ga. App. 373, 422 S.E.2d 66 (1992).

Whether to grant a motion to sever the trial of some of the defendants is within the discretion of the trial court and the appellants were required to do more that raise the possibility that a separate trial would have given the appellants a better chance of obtaining an acquittal. The test is whether the number of defendants will create confusion during the trial; whether the strength of the evidence against one defendant will engulf the others with a "spillover" effect; and whether the defendants' claims are antagonistic to each other's rights. Overton v. State, 295 Ga. App. 223, 671 S.E.2d 507 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0654, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 212 (Ga. 2009).

Three factors for consideration on motion to sever. — In exercising the court's discretion on a motion to sever, the trial court must consider three factors: (1) whether the number of defendants creates confusion as to the law and evidence to be applied to each; (2) whether a danger exists that evidence admissible against one defendant might be considered against the other notwithstanding instructions to the contrary; and (3) whether the defenses are antagonistic to each other or each other's rights. Robinson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 555, 578 S.E.2d 214 (2003).

Guilt or innocence of joint defendants must be separately determined. — When two or more persons are indicted jointly each defendant is entitled to be considered separately as to that defendant's guilt or innocence. In considering the evidence the jury should not treat the defendants as a single entity or unit but should consider the guilt or innocence of each of the defendants as individuals and distinct from one another, and the guilt of any one of the defendants must be determined on the facts showing what part that defendant had in the commission of the crime charged, and the guilt of one person named in the indictment creates no presumption of the guilt of any other. Thomas v. State, 153 Ga. App. 686, 266 S.E.2d 335 (1980).

Court not compelled to try one defendant before a codefendant. — There is no authority for the argument that the court should compel the state to try one defendant before a codefendant, at least when there is an absence of evidence of actual prejudice to the codefendant. House v. State, 203 Ga. App. 55, 416 S.E.2d 108, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 416 S.E.2d 108 (1992).

Failure to instruct jury as to guilt or innocence of one who is being separately tried. — When the accused is being separately tried, it is not error for the trial judge to charge the jury that the jury is not concerned with the guilt or innocence of the codefendant. Bates v. State, 18 Ga. App. 718, 90 S.E. 481 (1916).

Although the trial court did not give the defendant's own particularized instruction regarding the possible motives of testifying witnesses, the court gave the pattern jury charge on testifying witnesses and, thus, the jury was properly instructed that the jurors were to decide the believability of the witnesses. Kitchens v. State, 296 Ga. 384, 768 S.E.2d 476 (2015).

Number of arguments allowed if tried jointly. — If two are tried together without objection, the two have a right to only one argument. Bloodworth v. State, 161 Ga. 332, 131 S.E. 80 (1925).

Length of argument in joint trial. — There is no error in the refusal of a court to grant counsel for the defendants two hours for the argument of a joint case. Curry v. State, 17 Ga. App. 377, 87 S.E. 685 (1915).

Prior acquittal of one joint defendant on underlying charge as affecting subsequent conspiracy trial. — Prior acquittal of one defendant of the offense jointly charged against that defendant and another does not determine in the second defendant's case that the defendants did not enter into a conspiracy to commit that offense. Weeks v. State, 66 Ga. App. 553, 18 S.E.2d 503 (1942).

Use of proof of conspiracy when one coconspirator has been acquitted. — Rule that the acquittal of one of two alleged conspirators negates the existence of the conspiracy does not apply if proof of the conspiracy is sought to be introduced merely as an evidentiary fact to sustain another charge, such as murder. In such case, the conspiracy may be inquired into notwithstanding the acquittal of one of the alleged conspirators. Weeks v. State, 66 Ga. App. 553, 18 S.E.2d 503 (1942).

Defendant's conviction for conspiracy is not invalidated by the fact that the only other conspirator named in the indictment is subsequently acquitted at a separate trial. Any language to the contrary in Weeks v. State, 66 Ga. App. 553, 18 S.E.2d 503 (1942), is mere dicta and is not authority for a contrary ruling. Smith v. State, 162 Ga. App. 821, 292 S.E.2d 423, aff'd, 250 Ga. 264, 297 S.E.2d 273 (1982), overruled on other grounds by Thornton v. State, 298 Ga. 709, 784 S.E.2d 417 (2016).

Issue of severance must be raised at trial. — First defendant did not show that the trial court erred in severing the first defendant's armed robbery trial from that of the second defendant as the first defendant did not join in the second defendant's motion to sever and did not raise the issue until appeal; although the trial court normally had discretion to determine whether a trial should be severed, the first defendant's failure to raise the issue in the trial court meant the issue was waived on appeal. Bennett v. State, 266 Ga. App. 502, 597 S.E.2d 565 (2004).

Issue of codefendants' testimony and severance was waived on appeal since the issue was not raised as a basis for the codefendants' pretrial severance motion, nor was there any place in the record when the defendants renewed the defendants' motion to sever in order to raise this issue and secure the trial court's ruling thereon. York v. State, 242 Ga. App. 281, 528 S.E.2d 823 (2000).

Any error waived if trial court did not rule. — Defendant waived any error in the trial court's failure to sever the defendant's trial from the trial of a codefendant as the defendant failed to obtain a ruling from the trial court on the defendant's motion to sever. Terrell v. State, 268 Ga. App. 173, 601 S.E.2d 500 (2004).

Joinder of offenses permitted. — Joinder of charges from 15 robberies was permitted since there were sufficient similarities in the crimes to show a pattern of conduct, and offenses were not joined solely because the offenses were of the same or similar character. Allen v. State, 268 Ga. App. 519, 602 S.E.2d 250 (2004).

Separate Trials

Severance not constitutional right. — While, as a general matter, courts should grant severance whenever it appears necessary to achieve a fair determination of the guilt or innocence of a defendant, severance is not a constitutional right. Glover v. State, 188 Ga. App. 330, 373 S.E.2d 39 (1988).

Considerations by court in exercising discretion. — Considerations for the court in exercising the court's discretion on a motion to sever are: whether the number of defendants will create confusion of the evidence and law applicable to each individual defendant; whether there is a danger that evidence admissible against one defendant will be considered against another despite the admonitory precaution of the court; and whether the defenses of the defendants are antagonistic to each other or to each other's rights. Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856 (1975); Jones v. State, 243 Ga. 584, 255 S.E.2d 702 (1979); Myrick v. State, 155 Ga. App. 496, 271 S.E.2d 637 (1980); Ledford v. State, 173 Ga. App. 474, 326 S.E.2d 834 (1985); Lawrence v. State, 174 Ga. App. 788, 331 S.E.2d 600 (1985); Tanner v. State, 176 Ga. App. 77, 335 S.E.2d 133 (1985); Owens v. State, 192 Ga. App. 335, 384 S.E.2d 920 (1989); Hill v. State, 193 Ga. App. 401, 387 S.E.2d 910 (1989); Bailey v. State, 203 Ga. App. 133, 416 S.E.2d 151 (1992); Griffin v. State, 273 Ga. 32, 537 S.E.2d 350 (2000).

Separate Trials (Cont'd)

Factors to be considered by the court in the court's exercise of discretion are as follows: (1) will the number of defendants create confusion as to evidence and law relative to the separate defendants; (2) is there a danger that evidence admissible against only one defendant (or, when there are more than two defendants, only against certain ones of the defendants) will nevertheless be considered against another; and (3) are the defendants' respective defenses antagonistic to the defenses or the rights of another. It is the defendant who has the burden of showing, on the defendant's motion to sever, that any of the named criteria are applicable so as to prejudice the defendant's defense. Causey v. State, 192 Ga. App. 294, 384 S.E.2d 674 (1989); Sweat v. State, 203 Ga. App. 290, 416 S.E.2d 845 (1992); Brown v. State, 262 Ga. 223, 416 S.E.2d 508 (1992).

In exercising discretion regarding the severance of trials of the codefendants, the trial court should consider: whether a joint trial will create confusion of evidence and law; whether there is a danger that evidence implicating one defendant will be considered against the other despite cautionary instructions to the contrary; and whether the codefendants will press antagonistic defenses. Jackson v. State, 249 Ga. 751, 295 S.E.2d 53 (1982); Owens v. State, 251 Ga. 313, 305 S.E.2d 102 (1983).

What necessary for motion for severance to be granted. — In order to have the defendant's motion for severance granted, the defendant must show not only that a codefendant will probably not testify at trial when the defendant could cross-examine that codefendant or elicit the testimony desired, but also that the testimony of the codefendant would tend to exculpate the defendant. Flores v. State, 159 Ga. App. 336, 283 S.E.2d 372 (1981); Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990).

Showing of harm is necessary before the court must sever. — Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856 (1975).

Defendant seeking severance must make a clear showing of harm or prejudice to the defendant and a consequent denial of due process that would result from a denial of the defendant's motion for severance. Jones v. State, 243 Ga. 584, 255 S.E.2d 702 (1979); Louis v. State, 185 Ga. App. 472, 364 S.E.2d 607 (1988); Brown v. State, 262 Ga. 223, 416 S.E.2d 508 (1992).

To mandate severance of trials it must be demonstrated that harm resulted from failure to sever. Tookes v. State, 159 Ga. App. 423, 283 S.E.2d 642 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1443, 71 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1982).

If consolidation of defendants at trial hinders a fair determination of each defendant's guilt or innocence, then the defendants must be tried separately. Magouirk v. State, 158 Ga. App. 517, 281 S.E.2d 283 (1981).

While certain evidence was introduced pertaining solely to the codefendant, since the appellant did not show how such evidence prejudiced the defendant's own case, it was not error to deny the motion to sever. Jackson v. State, 249 Ga. 751, 295 S.E.2d 53 (1982).

Since the defendant failed to articulate any specific reason for severance, the defendant failed to show any actual prejudice or denial of due process which resulted from the failure to sever, and the trial court did not err in denying the motion to sever. Majors v. State, 203 Ga. App. 139, 416 S.E.2d 156 (1992).

In an armed robbery prosecution, as the evidence and law against the defendant and the codefendant was nearly identical and all of the evidence admissible against one was admissible against the other, the fact that the defendants' defenses were antagonistic was not alone sufficient to warrant severing the defendants' trials under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 absent a showing of harm. Bailey v. State, 295 Ga. App. 480, 672 S.E.2d 450 (2009).

When severance should be granted generally. — On motion, severance should be granted if severance is deemed appropriate to promote a fair determination of each defendant's guilt or innocence of each offense. Padgett v. State, 239 Ga. 556, 238 S.E.2d 92 (1977); Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 398, 280 S.E.2d 419 (1981).

Severance generally should be granted if severance is necessary to achieve a fair determination of the guilt or innocence of a defendant. Padgett v. State, 239 Ga. 556, 238 S.E.2d 92 (1977).

Defendant entitled to separate trial if conviction is more likely to result from evidence against codefendants than from evidence against the defendant. Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 183, 279 S.E.2d 483 (1981).

Codefendant's opposition to severance. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 neither mentions any right to oppose a codefendant's request for severance nor provides a statutory procedure pursuant to which a defendant may seek the joinder of another defendant's trial. Broomfield v. State, 264 Ga. 145, 442 S.E.2d 242 (1994).

Testimony stronger against one defendant does not demand severance. — Mere fact that testimony as to one of two codefendants is stronger than that linking the other to the crime does not demand a finding that the denial of a motion to sever is an abuse of discretion. Martin v. State, 162 Ga. App. 703, 292 S.E.2d 864 (1982); Davis v. State, 244 Ga. App. 345, 535 S.E.2d 528 (2000).

Defendant and the first codefendant each consistently denied participation in crimes without directly implicating the other, and both equally sought to place responsibility on a second codefendant; thus, their defenses were not antagonistic, and the mere fact that the case against the defendant was stronger than the case against the first codefendant did not necessitate a separate trial; therefore, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever. Wicks v. State, 278 Ga. 550, 604 S.E.2d 768 (2004).

Denial of severance proper. — Trial court did not err in denying a codefendant's request for severance because a joint trial with the defendant did not present a significant likelihood of confusion of the evidence and law or the possibility that evidence introduced against the defendant could be improperly considered against the codefendant; the law applicable to the defendant and the codefendant was substantially the same, and the evidence at trial showed that the defendants acted together in killing the victim. Krause v. State, 286 Ga. 745, 691 S.E.2d 211 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for severance because the defendant did not show any prejudice that could have been avoided by severing the trial; a codefendant said nothing to the police that contradicted witnesses regarding threats the witnesses heard the defendant make. Allen v. State, 288 Ga. 263, 702 S.E.2d 869 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever because there was no danger of confusion when only two defendants were on trial in connection with the same occurrence, and there was no evidence admissible against the defendant that was not admissible against the codefendant; the fact that the codefendant elicited a witness's testimony concerning a coconspirator's out-of-court declarations as a coconspirator did not show prejudice, and the witness's testimony was admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-8-801). White v. State, 308 Ga. App. 38, 706 S.E.2d 570 (2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of an accomplice because the defendant did not demonstrate any clear prejudice and denial of due process that could have been avoided by severing the trials; the testimony of the accomplice implicating the defendant would be admissible in a separate trial, as would evidence of the defendant's attempted flight and, under certain circumstances, statements the defendant made while cooperating with the state. Flores v. State, 308 Ga. App. 368, 707 S.E.2d 578 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1072, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 527 (Ga. 2011).

Separate Trials (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever the trial from that of the codefendant because the codefendant's testimony implicating the defendant would have been admissible in a separate trial; even if the defendant suffered some prejudicial effect from the admission of evidence of the codefendant's prior conviction, the admission did not amount to the denial of due process necessary to constitute an abuse of discretion that would make the denial of severance reversible error. Smith v. State, 290 Ga. 428, 721 S.E.2d 892 (2012).

It was not an abuse of discretion to deny the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of the defendant's codefendant because: (1) the defendant did not show the evidence might have confused the jurors; (2) the defendant did not show the defendant's defenses were antagonistic to the defendant's codefendant's defenses or that any evidence admitted at trial was inadmissible against the defendant in a separate trial; and (3) the evidence showed the defendant's active participation in the crimes alleged. Jones v. State, 315 Ga. App. 427, 727 S.E.2d 216 (2012).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's pretrial motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of the codefendant, because the number of defendants was small enough so that the danger of confusion was minimal, especially as both were charged without jointly participating in the same offense. Jones v. State, 318 Ga. App. 26, 733 S.E.2d 72 (2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from a codefendant because the defendant failed to meet the defendant's burden of showing clearly that the joint trial prejudiced the defendant's defense, resulting in a denial of due process, since the defendant did not point to any evidence that the defendant contended was not admissible against the defendant but was admissible against the codefendant, and the defendant did not claim that the defendant's defense was antagonistic to that of the codefendant. Garmon v. State, 317 Ga. App. 634, 732 S.E.2d 289 (2012).

Denial of the second defendant's request to sever was not erroneous because the trial court gave appropriate limiting instructions cautioning the jury that the similar transaction action could only be considered against the first defendant. Billings v. State, 293 Ga. 99, 745 S.E.2d 583 (2013).

Trial court did not err in denying the first defendant's motion to sever because the evidence of the DVD player pawned by the second defendant did not prejudice the defense of the first defendant given the extensive nature of the evidence tying the first defendant to the victim's murder including all of the items belonging to the victim found in the first defendant's home. Perera v. State, 295 Ga. 880, 763 S.E.2d 687 (2014).

Trial court did not err in denying the second defendant's motion to sever as the defense of the second defendant was not harmed by the introduction of jailhouse letters written to the second defendant by the first defendant given the voluminous evidence linking the second defendant directly to the victim's murder; and because those letters would have been admissible against both of the defendants, even if the defendants had been tried separately as both of the defendants were part of a criminal conspiracy and the criminal project was still ongoing at the time the letters were written. Perera v. State, 295 Ga. 880, 763 S.E.2d 687 (2014).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever as the defendant and the co-defendants were jointly tried for almost the same offenses, which involved the same witnesses, whose credibility the co-defendants jointly attacked, and the state's evidence indicated that the defendants acted in concert. Blackledge v. State, 299 Ga. 385, 788 S.E.2d 353 (2016).

Trial court did note err in failing to sever the trial or exclude post-arrest statements made by the codefendants as the defendants did not have antagonistic defenses because the defendants all took the position that the defendants had no involvement in the robbery, and, since none of the defendants testified or presented evidence, there was no defense theory presented by one that was antagonistic to the others. Ray v. State, 338 Ga. App. 822, 792 S.E.2d 421 (2016).

Trial court did not err in denying the second defendant's motion to sever because the jury was not confused by the counts in the indictment as the jury returned a verdict of not guilty as to counts 65-80 of the indictment; and, had there been separate trials, evidence of the gang activities of the co-defendants would have been admissible at the second defendant's trial. Daniels v. State, 302 Ga. 90, 805 S.E.2d 80 (2017), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

In the defendant's trial for attempted armed robbery and aggravated assault arising out of a home invasion in which the victim was shot five times, the defendant failed to explain how trying the defendant together with a co-defendant could have confused the jury, given that the evidence showed a relatively brief and straightforward attempted robbery and the assault of a single victim by both defendants, and their defenses of alibi were not mutually exclusive. Cuyler v. State, 344 Ga. App. 532, 811 S.E.2d 42 (2018), cert. denied, No. S18C0874, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 482 (Ga. 2018).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to seek severance of the defendant's trial from that of the second co-defendant because the mere fact that the case against the second co-defendant was stronger than the case against the defendant did not necessitate a separate trial; the defendant pointed to no evidence with regard to the murder that would have been excluded had the defendant's severance motion been granted and the defendant were tried alone; the defendant was being tried under the theory that the defendant was a party to the crime; and, even if counsel had filed a motion to sever, the court would not have abused the court's discretion in denying the motion as the defendant would not have been able to show prejudice from a joint trial. Green v. State, 302 Ga. 816, 809 S.E.2d 738 (2018).

Trial court did not err in severing the defendant's trial from the codefendant because the law applicable to both was substantially the same, all of the evidence presented at trial was admissible against both the defendants, and there was minimal risk of the jury being confused or of evidence being improperly considered against either of the defendants. Palmer v. State, 303 Ga. 810, 814 S.E.2d 718 (2018).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from the defendant's child's trial as there was nothing particularly confusing about the evidence supporting the defendant's conviction for evidence tampering; and the jury demonstrated the jury's ability to decide each case separately, rather than assuming the defendant's guilt based solely on the criminal conduct of the defendant's child, because the jury acquitted the defendant of making false statements to police. Elkins v. State, 350 Ga. App. 816, 830 S.E.2d 345 (2019).

At the time of trial, trial counsel believed that the trial court had obviated any Bruton violation concerns, and trial counsel was entitled to rely on the steps the trial court had taken in formulating counsel's opinion about filing a motion to sever; thus, the second defendant's counsel did not perform deficiently by failing to file a motion to sever, and the second defendant was not entitled to a new trial on that basis. Hill v. State, 351 Ga. App. 58, 830 S.E.2d 478 (2019).

First defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to file a motion to sever as the first defendant did not show antagonistic defenses, that evidence admissible only against the second defendant was improperly used against the first defendant, or that the joint trial created confusion; and the first defendant's argument that had the trials been severed the first defendant would have been able to confront and cross-examine the second defendant's statements was specious as the statements the first defendant pointed to were made during a hearing outside the presence of the jury, and nothing prevented the first defendant from cross-examining the narcotics investigator about the statements as the jury would not have heard that testimony. Hill v. State, 351 Ga. App. 58, 830 S.E.2d 478 (2019).

Separate Trials (Cont'd)

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever because the case involved only two codefendants, tried for the same crimes based on largely the same evidence, and the state's theory was that the defendants acted together. Thus, there was little likelihood that the issues to be tried would be confused or that evidence against one defendant would improperly be considered against the other. Floyd v. State, 307 Ga. 789, 837 S.E.2d 790 (2020).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever because it was not required under the applicable law on party to a crime to show that any specific co-defendant physically possessed a weapon for that defendant to be convicted of felony murder or of the predicate offense of aggravated assault as a party to a crime; and the fact that the evidence as to one of the co-defendants was stronger did not demand a finding that the denial of a severance motion was an abuse of discretion since there was evidence showing that the defendants acted in concert. Smith v. State, 308 Ga. 81, 839 S.E.2d 630 (2020).

Prejudice

Burden on defendant to show prejudice. — Without a showing of prejudice, the fact that defenses are antagonistic will not require severance. Everett v. State, 238 Ga. 80, 230 S.E.2d 882 (1976).

Without a clear showing of prejudice and harm by movant, the mere fact that the codefendant's defenses are antagonistic is not sufficient in itself to warrant separate trials. Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990).

To warrant a severance, the defendants must show the probability of prejudice and may not present just argument that there is a better probability a separate trial would give the defendants a better chance of acquittal. To obtain a new trial at the appellate level the defendants must show actual prejudice and denial of due process. Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990).

There must be a clear showing of prejudice resulting from the joinder, rather than the mere possibility that a separate trial would improve a defendant's chance of acquittal, before severance will be required. Tanner v. State, 176 Ga. App. 77, 335 S.E.2d 133 (1985).

In making a motion for severance, the defendant had the burden to make a clear showing of prejudice and consequent denial of due process. Allen v. State, 255 Ga. 513, 340 S.E.2d 187 (1986).

Showing of clear prejudice required. — Trial court does not manifestly abuse the court's discretion by refusing to sever when appellants failed to make "a showing of clear prejudice" as required to warrant a severance. York v. State, 242 Ga. App. 281, 528 S.E.2d 823 (2000).

Defendant must clearly show prejudice and denial of due process. — Trial judge must exercise the judge's discretion in each particular case, but the burden is on the defendant requesting the severance to do more than raise the possibility that a separate trial would give defendant a better chance of acquittal; the defendant must make a clear showing of prejudice and a consequent denial of due process. Majors v. State, 203 Ga. App. 139, 416 S.E.2d 156 (1992).

Because the defendant has made a clear showing of prejudice and consequent denial of due process based on the fact that the jury found the defendant guilty of a codefendant's crimes, for which the defendant was not even on trial, the trial court abused the court's discretion in overruling the defendant's motion to sever. Brooks v. State, 311 Ga. App. 857, 717 S.E.2d 490 (2011).

Defendant must establish prejudice from failure to sever. — When the death penalty is not sought, the severance of the defendants' trials is within the sound discretion of the trial court and the court's decision will not be disturbed unless there is an abuse of that discretion; under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4, the burden is on the defendant moving for severance to demonstrate more than the possibility that a separate trial would provide the defendant with a better chance of acquittal, and the defendant must establish a clear showing of prejudice. Robinson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 555, 578 S.E.2d 214 (2003).

Must show clear prejudice to justify severance. — Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of the codefendants pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 because, even if there were antagonistic defenses, this mere fact was not sufficient in itself to warrant severance absent a showing of prejudice, and the defendant failed to show clear prejudice and denial of due process resulting from any antagonistic defenses. Taylor v. State, 285 Ga. App. 697, 647 S.E.2d 381 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1515, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 655 (Ga. 2007).

Failure to show avoidance of prejudice meant no severance. — Since there was ample evidence to show that the defendant was a party to the crime, and did not merely have a passive involvement, the defendant failed to show any prejudice that would have been avoided by a separate trial; therefore, the trial court did not abuse the courts discretion in denying severance. Harrell v. State, 253 Ga. 474, 321 S.E.2d 739 (1984).

Prejudice must be shown to establish abuse of discretion. — To find that a denial of the motion was an abuse of discretion it must appear that the defendant suffered prejudice amounting to a denial of due process. Aaron v. State, 145 Ga. App. 349, 243 S.E.2d 714 (1978).

Denial of a defendant's motion for severance is not an abuse of discretion in the absence of a clear showing of prejudice. Whitehead v. State, 149 Ga. App. 774, 256 S.E.2d 50 (1979); Depree v. State, 246 Ga. 240, 271 S.E.2d 155 (1980).

Ruling on severance reversed only if abuse of discretion shown. Since the grant or denial of a motion to sever is left to the discretion of the trial court, the court's ruling will be overturned only for an abuse of discretion. Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856 (1975); Orkin v. State, 236 Ga. 176, 223 S.E.2d 61 (1976); Graham v. State, 152 Ga. App. 233, 262 S.E.2d 465 (1979); Jones v. State, 245 Ga. 592, 266 S.E.2d 201 (1980); Brown v. State, 262 Ga. 223, 416 S.E.2d 508 (1992).

Prejudice amounting to denial of due process required to disturb ruling on severance. — If defendants do not show on appeal in what manner the defendants were prejudiced by a joint trial, it cannot be said that the trial court's denial of the defendants' motions to sever was an abuse of discretion. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585 (1975).

In the absence of a showing that the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying severance, causing the defendant to suffer prejudice amounting to a denial of due process, the trial court's ruling will not be disturbed on appeal. Carroll v. State, 147 Ga. App. 332, 248 S.E.2d 702 (1978); Smith v. State, 154 Ga. App. 258, 267 S.E.2d 863 (1980).

Specific and compelling prejudice required to overcome exercise of trial court's discretion. — Trial judge must weigh likelihood of prejudice against interests of judicial economy in ruling on a motion for severance; because that determination is discretionary, the Court of Appeals will disturb the trial court's ruling only when the defendant can show that the trial court abused the court's discretion and, in order to demonstrate an abuse of discretion, the defendant bears a heavy burden of showing specific and compelling prejudice. United States v. Morris, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Prejudice not shown. — Defendant failed to meet the defendant's burden of showing that the defendant was prejudiced as required by law when the codefendant's testimony was admissible against the defendant whether the defendants were tried together or separately. Hill v. State, 212 Ga. App. 448, 442 S.E.2d 298 (1994).

Because the defendant failed to specify how evidence implicating a codefendant "spilled over" to prejudice the defendant's case, the defendant failed to show that the trial court erred in not severing the defendant's trial from that of the codefendant. Cartledge v. State, 285 Ga. App. 145, 645 S.E.2d 633 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying a codefendant's request for severance because the codefendant did not show specific prejudice from the presentation of antagonistic defenses; although the defendant and the codefendant raised antagonistic defenses, in the sense that each of the defendants pointed to the other as the shooter and the leader in killing the victim and disposing of the body, that alone was insufficient to require severance. Krause v. State, 286 Ga. 745, 691 S.E.2d 211 (2010).

Prejudice (Cont'd)

Although the defendant complained that the defendant was not permitted to question a codefendant about the codefendant's possible past involvement in drug activity, absent a showing of prejudice to the defendant, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever. Williams v. State, 308 Ga. App. 464, 708 S.E.2d 32 (2011).

Defendant was not prejudiced by a joint trial based on the defendant and a codefendant's similar appearance because several of the witnesses had known the defendant and the codefendants for years, others were able to identify the defendant by the defendant's distinctive clothing, and any confusion at the joint trial was cleared up by the one witness who confused the defendant and the codefendant and did not amount to a denial of due process; the defendant and the codefendants urged defenses that were, for the most part, consistent; and, even to the extent that the defendant and the codefendants urged antagonistic defenses, the defendant failed to show that the joint trial denied the defendant due process. Thomas v. State, 293 Ga. 829, 750 S.E.2d 297 (2013).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the appellant's motion to sever because there was no showing of prejudice since there was no indication that the jury confused the evidence or the applicable law to the appellant and the co-defendant as all defendants were largely charged with the same offenses that stemmed from the same evidence and fact pattern. McClendon v. State, 299 Ga. 611, 791 S.E.2d 69 (2016).

Evidence insufficient to show prejudice from failure to grant separate trials. — See Tanner v. State, 176 Ga. App. 77, 335 S.E.2d 133 (1985); Berry v. State, 267 Ga. 605, 481 S.E.2d 203 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 852, 118 S. Ct. 144, 139 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1997); Dixon v. State, 268 Ga. 81, 485 S.E.2d 480 (1997); Leonard v. State, 228 Ga. App. 792, 492 S.E.2d 747 (1997); Slaughter v. State, 240 Ga. App. 758, 525 S.E.2d 130 (1999); Ricarte v. State, 249 Ga. App. 50, 547 S.E.2d 703 (2001); Boone v. State, 250 Ga. App. 133, 549 S.E.2d 713 (2001); Hayes v. State, 249 Ga. App. 857, 549 S.E.2d 813 (2001).

Application

Severance in aggravated sodomy cases. — There was no abuse of discretion in a trial court's denial of defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant as the defendant was on trial for aggravated sodomy; the court found that the defendant failed to make a clear showing that joinder would result in prejudice amounting to denial of due process. Pitts v. State, 263 Ga. App. 322, 587 S.E.2d 811 (2003).

Severance in aggravated assault with intent to commit other crimes. — In a trial of two defendants for aggravated assault with intent to rob and aggravated battery, there was no showing of loss of due process due to confusion of evidence, antagonistic defenses, or unfair implication of one defendant by the other; therefore, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in joining the defendants. Autry v. State, 230 Ga. App. 773, 498 S.E.2d 304 (1998).

Severance in child molestation cases. — Denial of wife's motion to sever her trial for child molestation from that of her codefendant husband was not an abuse of discretion since the relevant evidence against both was unambiguous and the applicable law was straightforward, and the defenses were not antagonistic but were, in fact, mutually supportive. Story v. State, 194 Ga. App. 187, 390 S.E.2d 96 (1990).

In the prosecution of parents for child molestation involving their children, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court refused to sever the trial. Graham v. State, 239 Ga. App. 429, 521 S.E.2d 249 (1999).

Motions to sever in cruelty to a child proceedings. — Trial court did not err under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 in denying a defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial for cruelty to a child and other offenses from that of a codefendant because the defendant did not establish that, if severance were granted, the defendant would have been able to call the codefendant to testify about a letter without the codefendant invoking rights under the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution; even if such questioning could have been conducted, the defendant did not show harm caused by the testimony's absence because it was uncontroverted that the codefendant wrote the letter at issue and there was no showing that the codefendant's testimony would have exculpated the defendant. White v. State, 281 Ga. 276, 637 S.E.2d 645 (2006).

Severance in cocaine cases. — There was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's denying the defendant's motion to sever since the defendant failed to show that a joint trial was confusing or misleading with regard to the law or the evidence, when there was no evidence admissible against one defendant that was not admissible against all of the defendants and when there was nothing antagonistic in the defendants' defenses; all defendants denied the charges relating to trafficking in cocaine and none of the defendants pointed to the other as having knowledge of the cocaine or of the large sum of money that was found at the apartment. Owens v. State, 192 Ga. App. 335, 384 S.E.2d 920, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 902, 384 S.E.2d 920 (1989).

Motion to sever in conspiracy cases. — Denial of the defendant's motion for severance was proper since no antagonistic testimony existed and, because there was a considerable amount of testimony which authorized the jury to conclude that there was a conspiracy between the defendant and the codefendant, any testimony against the codefendant which would show the furtherance of a conspiracy was relevant as to the defendant. Hull v. State, 265 Ga. 757, 462 S.E.2d 596 (1995).

Trial court did not deprive the first and second defendants of due process under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and U.S. Const., amend. 5 in failing to sever, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4, the defendants' trials in a case involving the three defendants, who were allegedly involved in a conspiracy; because each defendant was implicated by each defendant's own statement, the defendants failed to show how the defendants were prejudiced by the joint trial, and there was no showing of antagonistic defenses. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 14, 635 S.E.2d 723 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1215, 127 S. Ct. 1266, 167 L. Ed. 2d 91 (2007).

Motions to sever if series of continuous acts. — Because the offenses committed by a defendant and a codefendant amounted to a series of continuous acts connected together both in time and the area in which committed, and there was no likelihood of confusion, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever the trial from that of the codefendant; furthermore, the mere fact that the codefendants' defenses were antagonistic was insufficient in itself to warrant separate trials. Diaz v. State, 280 Ga. App. 413, 634 S.E.2d 160 (2006).

Motions to sever in trial for crime of false statements. — Denial of the defendant's motion to sever the false statement charges against the defendant was proper as the false statement charges stemmed from the defendant's continuing efforts to conceal the defendant's participation in a robbery and a murder. Sampson v. State, 279 Ga. 8, 608 S.E.2d 621 (2005).

Motion to sever in murder cases. — When the defendant and the defendant's codefendant were charged with murder and related offenses, the denial of the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of the defendant's codefendant was not an abuse of discretion because there was no likelihood of confusion as there were only two defendants who acted in concert, their defenses were not antagonistic in that the defendants both denied any involvement in the crimes, severance would not have limited the admission of evidence one defendant claimed was unduly prejudicial, and the physical and testimonial evidence against one defendant was not overwhelming in comparison to the evidence against the other defendant. Styles v. State, 279 Ga. 134, 610 S.E.2d 23 (2005).

Application (Cont'd)

Two defendants, jointly tried and convicted of malice murder and aggravated assault and other related offenses, failed to meet the burden of showing that the defendants were clearly prejudiced by proceeding with a joint trial since both defendants testified and were cross examined, with each blaming the other for the shooting; even if the motion to sever had been granted, the defendant could have testified at each other's separate trials and related the same testimony, and the defendants had ample opportunity to cross-examine each other concerning the defendants' respective defenses. Appling v. State, 281 Ga. 590, 642 S.E.2d 37 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Denial of motions to sever murder trials under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4(a) was proper because there was no showing of prejudice from the joint trial of the first defendant and the second defendant, the first defendant's statement to police about a prior altercation with the victim did not, standing alone, inculpate the second defendant in the charged crimes, there was no reasonable probability that the statement contributed to the guilty verdicts, and there was no danger of confusion in this case because there were only two defendants allegedly acting in concert and the evidence was not such that it confused the jury as to their individual participation in the crimes. Daniel v. State, 285 Ga. 406, 677 S.E.2d 120 (2009).

Trial court's refusal to sever two murder counts because the defendant was not involved in those murders was not an abuse of discretion because evidence regarding the subject murders was relevant to the gang's existence as a "criminal street gang" and to certain codefendants' participation in criminal street gang activity, and the jury was instructed on the purpose for which the evidence was offered. Morris v. State, 294 Ga. 45, 751 S.E.2d 74 (2013).

Defendant completely failed to show any specific prejudice such that the joint trial denied the defendant due process because there was little likelihood of actual juror confusion in the case since only four defendants were tried and the law and evidence that applied to each of the defendants were substantially the same and the trial court gave appropriate limiting instructions, indicating that the similar transaction evidence could be considered only as to each co-defendant against whom that evidence was admitted. Nwakanma v. State, 296 Ga. 493, 768 S.E.2d 503 (2015), overruled in part by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Whether to grant separate trials to co-defendants in a non-death penalty murder case is within the discretion of the trial court. The appellant failed to demonstrate the requisite prejudice from the denial of the motion to sever to establish that the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the motion. Philpot v. State, 300 Ga. 154, 794 S.E.2d 140 (2016).

In a murder case, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for severance as the applicable law was the same for the defendant and the defendant's brother; the brother did not present an antagonistic defense; substantially the same evidence would have been introduced at both trials had the defendants been tried separately; and the eyewitness accounts and video evidence were admissible against both the defendant and the defendant's brother. Solomon v. State, 304 Ga. 846, 823 S.E.2d 265 (2019).

Severance in conspiracy to murder cases. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to sever the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant since the state introduced sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case that the two were involved in a conspiracy to murder or otherwise harm the victim. Brown v. State, 262 Ga. 223, 416 S.E.2d 508 (1992).

Motion to sever in kidnapping cases. — In a kidnapping prosecution, the defendant was not entitled to sever the codefendant from the trial. Since the codefendant testified and was available for cross-examination, the codefendant's confession was admissible against both defendants; further, the codefendant's defense was not antagonistic to the defendant's as the codefendant simply denied making alleged statements to police or participating in the victim's death. Hunsberger v. State, 299 Ga. App. 593, 683 S.E.2d 150 (2009).

Motions to sever in robbery cases. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court denied the defendant's motion to separate the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant. In a non-capital case, the decision whether to give codefendants separate trials is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and in the instant case there were only two codefendants, the issues were straightforward, and after the codefendant pled guilty, the codefendant testified on the defendant's behalf in an attempt to show that the defendant was forced to participate in an armed robbery; therefore, the defendant failed to make the requisite showing of harm. Gilbert v. State, 259 Ga. App. 371, 577 S.E.2d 35 (2003).

Denial of the defendant's motion to sever the trial of two armed robbery charges was upheld as the robberies were so similar that the robberies evinced a definite pattern: the crimes were committed in the same neighborhood on Friday evening, the robber on both cases showed the robber's gun to a male friend or acquaintance and announced the robber's intention to get a car moments before the crimes were committed, and both crimes were accomplished by a man wearing a fitted cap or "do-rag" and brandishing a handgun, surprising lone women as the women got into or out of a sport-utility vehicle, and demanding car keys. Johnson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 777, 595 S.E.2d 625 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever two offenses as: (1) the two armed robberies occurred within a short time, were of hotels in the same county, and had hotel clerks as victims; (2) both victims gave the same general description of the robber and the robber's disguise; and (3) there was nothing complex about the two robberies and either crime could have been introduced at a trial of the other which minimized any prejudice from the joint trial. Dailey v. State, 271 Ga. App. 492, 610 S.E.2d 126 (2005).

For common plan or scheme in narcotics prosecution, see Plemons v. State, 155 Ga. App. 447, 270 S.E.2d 836 (1980).

Non-immunized defendant properly allowed to testify against codefendant. — Because the first of two defendants jointly tried voluntarily testified against the second defendant, and the second defendant had the opportunity to effectively cross-examine the first, or otherwise present evidence demonstrating innocence, it was pure speculation for the appeals court to assume that the first defendant's willingness to cooperate with the state without a promise of leniency or immunity would cause the jury to view the testimony presented in a positive light; thus, the trial court did not err in permitting the first defendant to testify for the state against the second defendant. Herberman v. State, 287 Ga. App. 635, 653 S.E.2d 74 (2007).

Defendant must do more than raise possibility of better chance of acquittal. — Burden is on the defendant requesting the severance to do more than raise the possibility that a separate trial would give the defendant a better chance of acquittal. Bell v. State, 239 Ga. 146, 236 S.E.2d 47 (1977); Armour v. State, 151 Ga. App. 254, 259 S.E.2d 662 (1979); Robinson v. State, 164 Ga. App. 652, 297 S.E.2d 751 (1982).

Possibility for better chance for acquittal insufficient. — To be entitled to a severance, the defendants were required to do more than raise the possibility that separate trials would have given the defendants a better chance of obtaining acquittals; the defendants were required to make a clear showing of prejudice sufficient to establish a denial of due process. Cook v. State, 221 Ga. App. 831, 472 S.E.2d 686 (1996).

Evidence stronger against one defendant. — Based on trial counsel's testimony regarding a trial strategy to have the codefendants tried together, given the opinion that the evidence was stronger against the codefendants and counsel wanted to distance the defendant from the codefendants, no abuse of discretion resulted from the trial court's failure to order severance. Adkins v. State, 280 Ga. 761, 632 S.E.2d 650 (2006).

Application (Cont'd)

Fact that evidence as to one of two codefendants is stronger does not demand a finding that denial of a motion to sever is an abuse of discretion if there is evidence showing the codefendants acted together. Whitehead v. State, 237 Ga. App. 551, 515 S.E.2d 866 (1999).

Motion to sever was properly denied even though the evidence against one conspirator was stronger than the evidence against the other conspirator but this gave no reason for severance and individual participation could be sorted out by the jury. Perry v. State, 276 Ga. 836, 585 S.E.2d 614, rev'd, 276 Ga. 839, 584 S.E.2d 253 (2003).

Evidence that jury was able to consider each defendants case separately. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in failing to sever the defendant's trial from that of four codefendants as no evidence was presented that the jurors were confused, that the defenses were antagonistic to each other, or that evidence admitted against the codefendants was improperly considered in the defendant's trial; indeed, the defendant was acquitted of kidnapping with bodily injury and aggravated assault of one of the victims, indicating that the jury was able to decide each case separately. Jordan v. State, 281 Ga. App. 419, 636 S.E.2d 151 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from the codefendant's trial, with regard to charges of armed robbery and theft by receiving stolen property involving stopping in front of a vehicle and taking the victim's purse by gunpoint as the defendant failed to show that the evidence against the codefendant was stronger since the victim identified the defendant as the driver of the vehicle that stopped in front of the victim's car. Further, the fact that the defendant and the codefendant shared the same last name (as siblings) did not confuse the jury as the case only involved the two defendants, the trial court instructed the jury to consider each of the defendants separately, and the fact that the jury acquitted the defendant of the theft by receiving stolen property crime while the codefendant, who was the owner of the vehicle, was convicted of that charge indicated that the jury had the ability to decide each charge and each of the defendants separately. Rabie v. State, 294 Ga. App. 187, 668 S.E.2d 833 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever because the defendant cited only the "volatile relationships" and "irreconcilable differences" among the various defense attorneys, the prosecutor, and the lead detective; there was no indication that the jury confused the evidence or law. All three defendants were charged with identical crimes, and the jury, in reaching different verdicts as to each codefendant, proved itself amply capable of distinguishing the evidence relevant to each. Thorpe v. State, 285 Ga. 604, 678 S.E.2d 913 (2009).

No right to joint trial of coindictees. — Although the trial court has discretion to try coindictees for non-capital crimes together or separately under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4, defendant's claim that the trial court erred by not trying the defendant and the accomplice together was rejected; the claim was not raised below and there was no right to be jointly tried with all coindictees. Holmes v. State, 265 Ga. App. 409, 593 S.E.2d 932 (2004).

Joinder allowing for uniformity. — Joinder, when offenses are part of a common scheme or plan, allows for uniformity in decision making; it eliminates a duplication of effort, saves time, and expedites the trial process. Magouirk v. State, 158 Ga. App. 517, 281 S.E.2d 283 (1981).

Joinder producing overlap. — Inherent in joinder or consolidation of defendants at trial is the possibility of overlap; that is, that culpatory evidence admitted against one defendant will be considered against another defendant. Magouirk v. State, 158 Ga. App. 517, 281 S.E.2d 283 (1981).

Joinder as restraining freedom of counsel in exercising trial strategy. — Joinder, if there is more than one counsel representing the codefendants, affects or restrains freedom of counsel in employing and exercising counsel's particular trial strategy. Magouirk v. State, 158 Ga. App. 517, 281 S.E.2d 283 (1981).

Balance interests of state with defendants. — When joinder of offenses is allowable, the trial judge may balance the interest of the state and the accused by considering such factors as whether the same evidence would be necessary and admissible in each case and whether the joining of the counts in one trial might confuse the jury. Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 398, 280 S.E.2d 419 (1981).

If defenses not antagonistic and testimony is essentially the same. — If appellants do not advance antagonistic defenses, but instead choose to testify and present essentially the same version of events concerning the only crime involved, and if the same witnesses would have testified if two trials had been held, the appellants can show neither prejudice nor an abuse of discretion by the trial court in refusing separate trials. Dixon v. State, 243 Ga. 46, 252 S.E.2d 431 (1979).

In the defendant's trial for home invasion and murder, denial of the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of the co-defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 was not error because there was no indication of confusion, both men were mostly charged with the same offenses that stemmed from the same evidence and fact pattern, and their defenses were not antagonistic. Harris v. State, 304 Ga. 276, 818 S.E.2d 530 (2018).

Codefendants with antagonistic defenses are tried together. — If codefendants assert antagonistic defenses, but the trial judge denies the defendant's motion for separate trial, the defendant is not denied the defendant's right to effective counsel or to confront the witnesses, despite the codefendants' ability to assert the privilege against self-incrimination on cross-examination in a joint trial, unless the defendant can show that the defendant was prejudiced. Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856 (1975).

Severance based on codefendants' antagonistic defenses. — Mere fact that codefendants' defenses are antagonistic is not sufficient in itself to warrant separate trials. Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856 (1975); Reaves v. State, 146 Ga. App. 409, 246 S.E.2d 427 (1978); Kennedy v. State, 253 Ga. 132, 317 S.E.2d 822 (1984).

Fact that the defenses of the codefendants jointly tried may be antagonistic does not in and of itself dictate the grant of separate trials. James v. State, 157 Ga. App. 763, 278 S.E.2d 696 (1981).

Fact of different defenses or even antagonistic defenses will not of itself require severance. Owens v. State, 251 Ga. 313, 305 S.E.2d 102 (1983).

Antagonism between codefendants is not enough in itself to require severance, rather the defendant must also demonstrate resulting harm, and if the defendant's own pre-trial statement admitting the defendant's own guilt was identical to a codefendant's statement such harm was not demonstrated. Harris v. State, 218 Ga. App. 472, 462 S.E.2d 425 (1995).

Even if the defendant's defenses are antagonistic, theoretically antagonistic defenses without harm do not warrant a reversal. Brown v. State, 268 Ga. 354, 490 S.E.2d 75 (1997).

Entry of guilty plea to one charge waives challenge to failure to sever. — Although the defendant complained that the court failed to sever the two counts of the indictment, but the defendant entered a guilty plea as to the charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, thus the defendant was tried only for murder, and therefore this enumeration of error was without merit. Gentry v. State, 250 Ga. 802, 301 S.E.2d 273 (1983).

Severance must be demanded before a hearing on the evidence. Trowbridge v. State, 74 Ga. 431 (1885).

Severance argument waived. — Defendant waived any argument concerning severance because, although the codefendants moved to sever, the defendant failed to move to sever the defendant's case from that of the codefendants. Garrison v. State, 276 Ga. App. 243, 622 S.E.2d 910 (2005).

Because the defendant made no motion to sever, made no motion to exclude the similar transaction evidence at trial or during the pretrial hearing on the issue, did not join a co-defendant's motions to sever the trial or exclude the evidence, only raised the issues in a motion for new trial, and did not raise the issues at trial, the defendant waived the right to argue the issues regarding severance and the introduction of similar transaction evidence on appeal. Davis v. State, 331 Ga. App. 585, 771 S.E.2d 232 (2015), cert. denied, No. S15C1287, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 551 (Ga. 2015).

Application (Cont'd)

Right to sever is absolute unless the state waives the death penalty. Turner v. State, 136 Ga. App. 42, 220 S.E.2d 57 (1975).

If the state was seeking the death penalty, former Code 1933, § 27-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4) gave any defendant so electing the absolute right to be tried separately. Reaves v. State, 242 Ga. 542, 250 S.E.2d 376 (1978).

Factors considered when death penalty not sought. — Factors which the trial court must consider in exercising discretion in regard to a motion to sever in case in which the death penalty is not sought are: (1) whether the number of defendants will create confusion as to law and evidence applicable to each; (2) danger that evidence admissible against one defendant will be considered against the other despite the court's instructions; and (3) whether the defenses of the defendants are antagonistic to each other or to each other's rights. Kelley v. State, 248 Ga. 133, 281 S.E.2d 589 (1981); Eady v. State, 182 Ga. App. 293, 355 S.E.2d 778 (1987), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

When the death penalty is waived, the decision of whether the defendants may be tried jointly is in the discretion of the trial judge. Owens v. State, 251 Ga. 313, 305 S.E.2d 102 (1983).

State may demand a severance if justice requires severance. Stewart v. State, 58 Ga. 577 (1877).

State may withdraw decision as to which defendant shall be tried first. Dixon v. State, 12 Ga. App. 17, 76 S.E. 794 (1912).

If a defendant is indicted separately, the defendant has a right to be tried separately under the law unless the defendant voluntarily waives that right. State v. Connelly, 138 Ga. App. 121, 225 S.E.2d 519 (1976).

Joint trial of persons indicted separately for same offense. — By voluntary waiver, persons indicted separately for a joint offense may be tried together. Towns v. State, 149 Ga. 613, 101 S.E. 678 (1919).

Court not required to sever trials if no motion made. — There was no authority under former Code 1933, § 27-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4) to require the court to sever the trial of a defendant who made no motion to sever. Way v. State, 239 Ga. 316, 236 S.E.2d 655 (1977).

Motion for separate trials is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Dixon v. State, 243 Ga. 46, 252 S.E.2d 431 (1979).

Denial of a motion to sever the defendants pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court, and the court's ruling will not be disturbed absent a clear abuse of such discretion. Dover v. State, 192 Ga. App. 429, 385 S.E.2d 417 (1989).

Whether to sever the trials of the codefendants is a matter of discretion with the trial judge, and, absent abuse, the judge's decision will not be disturbed by the appellate court. Causey v. State, 192 Ga. App. 294, 384 S.E.2d 674 (1989).

Grant or denial of a motion to sever is within the discretion of the trial court and absent an abuse of discretion, denial of a motion to sever is not grounds for reversal. Freeman v. State, 205 Ga. App. 112, 421 S.E.2d 308 (1992).

No abuse for failure to sever. — Defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial was properly denied since: (1) three defendants was not so numerous that the jury would be likely to confuse the facts and law applicable to each; (2) the relevant evidence against each codefendant was unambiguous, the applicable law was straightforward, and there was no evidence of any spillover effect from one codefendant to another; (3) defendant made no showing of prejudice and a consequent denial of due process; and (4) the fact that the evidence was not as strong against defendant as that against the co-defendants did not warrant severance. Further, the burden is on the defendant requesting the severance to do more than raise the possibility that a separate trial would give the defendant a better chance of acquittal; the defendant must make a clear showing of prejudice and a consequent denial of due process. Parnell v. State, 260 Ga. App. 213, 581 S.E.2d 263 (2003).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to sever a joint trial as: (1) each of the codefendants was jointly charged with the same offenses, and the offenses were committed simultaneously; (2) there was no danger of confusion as to the law and evidence applicable to each as virtually all of the evidence tended to show the defendants joint guilt; (3) severance was not required solely because each of the three defendants shared the same last name; and (4) the defenses were complimentary, not antagonistic, in that all argued that the state had charged the wrong men and had failed to prove the case. Hence, the defendant failed in the burden of showing prejudice and a denial of due process. Adkins v. State, 281 Ga. 301, 637 S.E.2d 714 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant; the defendant stated that the defendant could not meet the criteria to have severance granted in order to call the codefendant as a witness, and although the defendant later wanted it known that the codefendant had prior convictions, the defendant never asserted this as a basis for the defendant's motion to sever. Lee v. State, 284 Ga. App. 435, 644 S.E.2d 196 (2007).

It was not error for the trial court to refuse to sever the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant because of evidence regarding the codefendant's prior incarceration. The evidence was not complex and the defenses of the defendant and the codefendant were not antagonistic; moreover, admission of evidence suggestive of the codefendant's bad character, even if improper, was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Walker v. State, 282 Ga. 703, 653 S.E.2d 468 (2007).

Because a codefendant could have testified against the defendant in a separate trial if the defendant's motion to sever had been granted, the defendant failed to show harm from the denial of the motion to sever. Accordingly, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever due to antagonistic defenses. Hendrix v. State, 284 Ga. 420, 667 S.E.2d 597 (2008).

Trial court did not err in failing to grant a defendant's motion for severance of defendants under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4(a); because a witness did not exculpate the defendant, but implicated the defendant as a party, the defendant was not prejudiced by the codefendants' attempts to discredit the witness. As for a second defendant, failure to grant a severance was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of guilt. Metz v. State, 284 Ga. 614, 669 S.E.2d 121 (2008), overruled on other grounds, State v. Kelly, 290 Ga. 29, 718 S.E.2d 232 (2011).

With regard to several defendants challenging the trial court's denial of the defendants' motions to sever the cases from the other defendants, the defendants failed to show that the trial court abused the court's discretion by denying the motions as the defendant did not make a clear showing of prejudice sufficient to establish a denial of due process since each defendant was charged with a Georgia Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act (RICO) violation, thus, all of the evidence was admissible against all the defendants, and would have been admissible even if they had separate trials on the RICO violations. Overton v. State, 295 Ga. App. 223, 671 S.E.2d 507 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0654, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 212 (Ga. 2009).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4(a). The danger of confusion from three defendants appeared minimal; there appeared to be no danger that the evidence against one would be considered against the others, especially as the three were charged with jointly participating in the same offenses and as the offenses were committed as part of the same crime scheme; and the defenses were not antagonistic when the motion was considered, although the defenses later became so when one defendant chose to testify against the others. Lankford v. State, 295 Ga. App. 590, 672 S.E.2d 534 (2009).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from the codefendant's trial because the law applicable to each defendant was substantially the same, and the evidence at trial showed that the defendant and the codefendant acted together in killing the victim. Moreover, the defendant did not clearly show that a joint trial prejudiced the defendant's defense, resulting in a denial of due process. Herbert v. State, 288 Ga. 843, 708 S.E.2d 260 (2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of the codefendants because the familial and personal interrelationships of the three defendants and one of the victims were not so confusing as to warrant separate trials; the relationships went to motive for the shootings and would have been admissible had the codefendants been tried separately. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 706, 715 S.E.2d 85 (2011).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of the codefendant as the defenses of the defendant and the codefendant were not antagonistic and the jury was instructed that the defendants were on trial only for the offenses charged in the indictment and not for any other acts or occurrences. Harrell v. State, 322 Ga. App. 115, 744 S.E.2d 105 (2013).

Trial court did not err in failing to sever the defendant's trial from that of the codefendant as the evidence showed they acted together, the law applicable to each was the same, and the defendant failed to point to evidence that would not have been admitted in a separate trial. Coe v. State, 293 Ga. 233, 748 S.E.2d 824 (2013).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion to sever because the law applicable to each defendant was substantially the same, the evidence showed the defendants acted together, and there was no showing of prejudice from the presentation of antagonistic defenses. Flournoy v. State, 294 Ga. 741, 755 S.E.2d 777 (2014).

Defendant failed to show that the trial court abused the court's discretion in failing to sever the defendant's trial from the co-defendant's because the defendant failed to show that the evidence may have been confusing to the jurors, especially since there were only two co-defendants involved in the case and the evidence showed that the defendant acted in concert with the co-defendant by driving the getaway vehicle. Broyard v. State, 325 Ga. App. 794, 755 S.E.2d 36 (2014).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever because there was little likelihood of jury confusion as there were only two defendants at trial and no difference in the law applied to the two defendants; the jury addressed the defendants' indictments separately and returned a separate verdict for each defendant; and antagonistic defenses alone were not sufficient to mandate severance. Taylor v. State, 331 Ga. App. 577, 771 S.E.2d 224 (2015).

Trial court did not err in denying the first defendant's motion to sever as there was little likelihood of jury confusion given that there were only two defendants and no difference in the law applied to the defendants and evidence that the second defendant was a gang member would have been admissible against the first defendant in a separate trial. Zamudio v. State, 332 Ga. App. 37, 771 S.E.2d 733 (2015).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever as the presence of antagonistic defenses alone was insufficient to require severance and the defendant made no showing that the codefendant would have been likely to offer testimony exculpatory to the defendant if the offenses had been tried separately. Marquez v. State, 298 Ga. 448, 782 S.E.2d 648 (2016).

No showing of harm for failure to sever. — Because a second of two defendants failed to show the presence of any confusion engendered by the number of defendants or the law, the defenses were not antagonistic, and accomplice testimony against the first defendant did not involve or incriminate the second defendant, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the second defendant's motion to sever the trial from that of the first defendant; hence, the second defendant failed to show that the court's refusal to sever caused prejudice or a due process violation. Williams v. State, 280 Ga. 584, 630 S.E.2d 370 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial for cruelty to a child and other offenses from that of a codefendant because the mere fact that the defendants' defenses were antagonistic was not sufficient to warrant the grant of separate trials absent a showing of harm; the defendant made no such showing because the codefendant's only witness had previously testified for the state, and that evidence, as well as evidence flowing from the codefendant's cross-examinations of witnesses that arguably could have been construed as implicating the defendant, was merely cumulative of the state's evidence against the defendant. White v. State, 281 Ga. 276, 637 S.E.2d 645 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's case from the codefendant's case as the defendant made no argument that there was a confusion of law or facts, that the evidence against the codefendant had a "spillover" effect, or that the defendant's defense was antagonistic to the codefendant's defense. Salgado v. State, 268 Ga. App. 18, 601 S.E.2d 417 (2004).

Decision not to sever held not abuse of discretion. — Since a robbery victim was exceedingly clear in identifying codefendants separately, in selecting one defendant's photo from a lineup, and in testifying that that defendant and not the other was the one who physically assaulted the victim, the jury could not logically confuse the roles played by the two codefendants; thus, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in deciding not to sever the trials of the codefendants. Sims v. State, 195 Ga. App. 631, 394 S.E.2d 422 (1990).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion for severance. Emmett v. State, 199 Ga. App. 650, 405 S.E.2d 707, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 405 S.E.2d 707 (1991); Nanthabouthdy v. State, 245 Ga. App. 456, 538 S.E.2d 101 (2000); Robinson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 555, 578 S.E.2d 214 (2003).

Denial of the defendant's motion to sever was not an abuse of discretion since there was no evidence admissible against one defendant which was inadmissible against the other and there was no danger of confusion based on the number of defendants because there were only two. Pinson v. State, 266 Ga. App. 254, 596 S.E.2d 734 (2004).

Court's discretion to grant or deny severance motion. — Grant or denial of a motion for severance lies within the sound discretion of the trial court, and the court's ruling will not be reversed absent a clear abuse of such discretion. Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990); Rivers v. State, 178 Ga. App. 310, 342 S.E.2d 781 (1986).

Refusal to sever the trial of the defendants who had antagonistic defenses was not an abuse of discretion because even if the cases had been severed, the codefendant could have given the same testimony at the defendant's separate trial. Heard v. State, 274 Ga. 196, 552 S.E.2d 818 (2001).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a second defendant's motion to sever the trial from that of the first as the court aptly determined that: (1) there was no persuasive argument that evidence offered against one defendant might be considered improperly against another, and no evidence of antagonistic defenses that would jeopardize each other's right to a fair trial, though the court acknowledged the possibility of the codefendants finger-pointing at one another; and (2) the second defendant was a member of the first defendant's organization and provided security for the first defendant. Oree v. State, 280 Ga. 588, 630 S.E.2d 390 (2006).

No likelihood of confusion for failure to grant severance. — Denial of the defendant's severance motion was not an abuse of discretion because there was no likelihood of confusion as the defendant and codefendant acted in concert and their defenses were not antagonistic, substantially similar evidence was presented against the defendants, and the codefendant's statements would have been admissible in a separate trial as statements of a coconspirator. Shelton v. State, 279 Ga. 161, 611 S.E.2d 11 (2005).

Application (Cont'd)

Review of court's denial of severance. — Trial judge's ruling in denying severance will not be disturbed if there is no showing that the defendant suffered prejudice which amounts to a denial of due process. Harper v. State, 166 Ga. App. 797, 305 S.E.2d 488 (1983).

In light of the numerous witnesses called by the state who identified the defendant as the person who shot the victim, and because antagonism between the codefendants was insufficient to require severance, the defendant failed to show the clear prejudicial harm necessary to overturn the trial court's denial of a motion to sever the trial. Rivers v. State, 283 Ga. 1, 655 S.E.2d 594 (2008).

Severance in order to call codefendant as witness. — In order to be entitled to a severance on the ground defendant wishes to call a codefendant as a witness, the movant must demonstrate: (1) a bona fide need for the testimony; (2) the substance of the testimony; (3) the testimony's exculpatory nature and effect; and (4) that the codefendant will in fact testify if the cases are severed. Given such a showing, the court should: (1) examine the significance of the testimony in relation to the defendant's theory of defense; (2) assess the extent of prejudice caused by the absence of the testimony; (3) pay close attention to judicial administration and economy; and (4) give weight to the timeliness of the motion. Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990).

One of the grounds for granting a severance is the need of one defendant to use the exculpatory testimony of a codefendant. House v. State, 203 Ga. App. 55, 416 S.E.2d 108, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 416 S.E.2d 108 (1992).

Offenses which are part of common scheme or plan may be tried together. — Two or more defendants charged with different offenses may be tried jointly when the offenses are part of a common scheme or plan. Padgett v. State, 239 Ga. 556, 238 S.E.2d 92 (1977); Allen v. State, 144 Ga. App. 233, 240 S.E.2d 754 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 899, 99 S. Ct. 264, 58 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1978); Plemons v. State, 155 Ga. App. 447, 270 S.E.2d 836 (1980).

When two or more defendants are charged with identical crimes or with different offenses which are part of a common scheme or plan, the defendants may be jointly tried in the discretion of the trial court. Arnsdorff v. State, 152 Ga. App. 515, 263 S.E.2d 176 (1979).

Trial judge has discretion concerning severance of trial when there is evidence of two or more offenses based on same conduct or on series of connected acts or constituting parts of single scheme or plan. Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 398, 280 S.E.2d 419 (1981).

Offenses which are part of a common plan or scheme may be tried together; provided such a trial does not hinder a fair determination of each defendant's guilt or innocence. Arnsdorff v. State, 152 Ga. App. 515, 263 S.E.2d 176 (1979).

Ability to make fair determination of each party's guilt. — If a joint trial does not prevent or hinder a fair determination of each defendant's guilt, there is no abuse of discretion in denying severance. Allen v. State, 144 Ga. App. 233, 240 S.E.2d 754 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 899, 99 S. Ct. 264, 58 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1978).

Substantial similarity of law and juror confusion. — Defendant was charged with molesting two sisters in the same manner and place and although some acts occurred while the defendant was alone with one child, other acts were conducted on the children simultaneously; therefore, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying severance. Davidson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 605, 499 S.E.2d 697 (1998).

Joinder of crimes solely on grounds of similar character. — When two or more crimes, joined solely on the ground that the crimes are of the same or similar character, are committed at different times and places, and involve transactions with different persons, it is mandatory that the trial judge, upon the defendant's motion, order separate trials for each of the crimes charged. Padgett v. State, 239 Ga. 556, 238 S.E.2d 92 (1977).

If two or more offenses have been joined solely on the ground that the offenses are of the same or similar character, the trial judge, upon the defendant's motion for severance, must order separate trials for each of the offenses charged. Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 398, 280 S.E.2d 419 (1981).

Severance of one count in indictment not allowed. — When codefendants A and B were charged with aggravated assault, armed robbery, and criminal damage to property and B was also charged with aggravated assault on B's spouse in the same indictment, a motion by A to sever the latter charge against B from the rest of the charges in the indictment was properly denied; A's rights in regard to that count were limited to a motion to sever the trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4. Durden v. State, 219 Ga. App. 732, 466 S.E.2d 641 (1995).

Prejudicial testimony by codefendant. — Claim that codefendant's testimony implicating the defendant was prejudicial did not amount to the clear showing of prejudice and denial of due process necessary to require a severance. Kennedy v. State, 253 Ga. 132, 317 S.E.2d 822 (1984).

If harm shown, failure to sever trials is error. — While the mere fact that codefendants' defenses are antagonistic is not sufficient in itself to warrant separate trials, if the defendant can demonstrate harm resulting from the failure to sever, then such failure to sever becomes error. Price v. State, 155 Ga. App. 206, 270 S.E.2d 203 (1980), vacated in part on other grounds, 157 Ga. App. 687, 278 S.E.2d 195 (1981).

Motion for severance if codefendant will not testify at defendant's trial. — In order to have the defendant's motion for severance granted, the defendant must show not only that the codefendant will probably not testify at trial if the defendant could cross-examine the codefendant or elicit the testimony desired, but also that the testimony of the codefendant would tend to exculpate the defendant. Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856 (1975); Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990).

If a defendant moves for a separate trial, the trial judge should consider whether the codefendant would be more likely to testify if the codefendant was tried separately. Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856 (1975); Stevens v. State, 165 Ga. App. 814, 302 S.E.2d 724 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990).

Joinder with repeat offender does not require reversal for prejudice. — There is no rule of law in Georgia that prejudice requiring reversal accrues to one defendant by virtue of being tried with a repeat offender who has prior convictions alleged against the defendant in the indictment. Davis v. State, 129 Ga. App. 796, 201 S.E.2d 345 (1973).

Denial of severance not an abuse of discretion if same crime and same witnesses involved. — Trial judge did not abuse the discretion given the judge in refusing to grant a severance as to the appellant since the codefendants were jointly indicted for the same crime, which involved the same witnesses, the evidence of each of which would be admissible on the trial of the others. Deuser v. State, 138 Ga. App. 211, 225 S.E.2d 758 (1976).

Trial judge does not abuse the discretion delegated to the judge by refusing severance to codefendants who are jointly indicted for the same offenses, involving the same witnesses, and the evidence indicates that the defendants acted in concert. Hall v. State, 143 Ga. App. 706, 240 S.E.2d 125 (1977).

Count against codefendant different from common count. — If a count of an indictment against a codefendant alone involves a different crime and victim than that contained in the common count, denial of a motion to sever constitutes an abuse of judicial discretion. Burden v. State, 131 Ga. App. 522, 206 S.E.2d 533 (1974).

Failure to grant severance not error. — See Mulkey v. State, 250 Ga. 444, 298 S.E.2d 487 (1983).

Since the codefendant did testify, allowing the defendant the opportunity to cross-examine the codefendant concerning both the codefendant's trial testimony and in-custody statements, there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a separate trial. Belcher v. State, 207 Ga. App. 117, 427 S.E.2d 88 (1993).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant as the defendant offered no evidence of juror confusion, the defendant did not show that the defendant's and the codefendant's defenses were antagonistic to each other, that evidence against the codefendant was improperly considered against the defendant, or that the defendant's guilt or innocence could not otherwise be fairly determined. Moore v. State, 261 Ga. App. 752, 583 S.E.2d 588 (2003).

Admission of similar crimes evidence against a codefendant did not mandate severance since the trial judge gave specific limiting instructions regarding that evidence and the evidence itself did not implicate the defendant directly. Banks v. State, 230 Ga. App. 881, 497 S.E.2d 821 (1998).

Notice requirements on motions to sever. — Grant of the state's motion for severance without notice to the defendant and without a hearing was not a denial of due process since the defendant failed to show any harm resulting therefrom. Adams v. State, 231 Ga. App. 279, 499 S.E.2d 105 (1998).

Burden on the defendant making motion to sever. — When making a motion to sever, the burden is on the defendant to do more than raise the possibility that a separate trial would give the defendant a better chance of acquittal; the defendant must make a clear showing of prejudice and consequent denial of due process and in the absence of this showing, the trial court's denial of a motion to sever will not be disturbed. Harris v. State, 218 Ga. App. 472, 462 S.E.2d 425 (1995).

Order of trial of defendants. — State was within the state's statutory right under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4, when the state proceeded with the trial against the defendant before that of the codefendant; the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by the order of the trials, what the substance of the codefendant's proposed testimony was, or that it was more likely the codefendant would testify on behalf of the defendant if the cases were severed. Avellaneda v. State, 261 Ga. App. 83, 581 S.E.2d 701 (2003).

When the defendant was one of the people indicted in a multiple-murder case in which the state sought capital punishment, the defendant did not show that a 38-month delay between the defendant's indictment and trial was "presumptively prejudicial," because it was necessary for each coindictee to be tried separately, and this triggered the state's statutory right, under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4, to elect which defendant to try first; therefore, when the state elected to try the defendant's coindictee first, the defendant's case was prosecuted with the promptness customary for death penalty cases involving multiple defendants, and the trial court did not have to balance the factors considered in deciding whether the defendant's right to a speedy trial was violated, given the lack of presumptive prejudice. Wimberly v. State, 279 Ga. 65, 608 S.E.2d 625 (2005).

Loss of the right to open and close arguments under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 because another defendant presented evidence was held not to be grounds for severance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4. Robinson v. State, 164 Ga. App. 652, 297 S.E.2d 751 (1982).

No harm from order of closing argument. — Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial for cruelty to a child and other offenses from that of a codefendant because the defendant showed no harm resulting from evidence against the codefendant that might have spilled over to the defendant or from the fact that the defendant was required to give a closing argument before the codefendant; the mere fact that the evidence against the codefendant might have been stronger than the evidence against the defendant did not mandate severance, and no harm was shown by the order of closing arguments. White v. State, 281 Ga. 276, 637 S.E.2d 645 (2006).

Redaction from codefendant's statement sufficient. — Court's denial of the defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant was not error as the state agreed to redact from any codefendants' statements references to the defendant and this was done. Cain v. State, 212 Ga. App. 531, 442 S.E.2d 279 (1994).

Denial of defendant's motion for severance was proper, since, although the defendant testified as to statements made to the defendant by the codefendants while they were incarcerated together, the defendant never mentioned another defendant's name when testifying to a statement by one defendant. Satterfield v. State, 256 Ga. 593, 351 S.E.2d 625 (1987).

Trial court did not err by failing to grant the defendant's motion for severance requesting a separate trial from a codefendant since the codefendant failed to articulate any specific reason for severance and failed to show any actual prejudice or denial of due process which resulted from the failure to sever. Sweat v. State, 203 Ga. App. 290, 416 S.E.2d 845 (1992).

When it could not be said that the number of defendants created confusion, there was no danger that evidence that was inadmissible against one defendant was admissible against another defendant, and the defendant's and codefendant's defenses were not antagonistic, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the motion to sever. Carson v. State, 208 Ga. App. 534, 431 S.E.2d 156 (1993).

Because the evidence with which each defendant took issue was admissible against both of them inasmuch as each played a separate role in the crimes, and the evidentiary facts and the law applicable to each were substantially the same, a trial court did not err in refusing to grant the defendants' motions to sever. Bolden v. State, 278 Ga. 459, 604 S.E.2d 133 (2004).

Second defendant failed to show harm from the trial court's failure to sever the second defendant's trial from that of the two codefendants as there was no evidence that the codefendants would have been willing to testify at a separate trial, that the codefendants' testimony would have corroborated the second defendant's defense of alibi, or that the number of defendants caused confusion. Griffin v. State, 292 Ga. 321, 737 S.E.2d 682 (2013).

Defendant waived any error in failure to sever. — Defendant waived any error in the failure to sever the trial from the codefendant's trial as the defendant did not move to sever nor join in the codefendant's motion to sever. Robertson v. State, 277 Ga. App. 231, 626 S.E.2d 206 (2006).

Eleventh circuit test for review. — Test in fifth (now eleventh) circuit for reviewing denial of severance is that the defendant must be unable to obtain a fair trial without severance and must demonstrate compelling prejudice against which the trial court will be unable to afford protection. United States v. Morris, 647 F.2d 568 (5th Cir. 1981).

Right to counsel when state seeks death penalty against any one codefendant. — If the state seeks the death penalty against any one defendant in a criminal transaction, a defendant and a codefendant must be provided with separate and independent counsel. Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1980).

Counsel not prepared as to all defendants. — If defendants' counsel is prepared as to one defendant and totally unprepared as to another, it is an abuse of trial court discretion to deny a motion for severance or to fail to continue the joined case. Grant v. State, 131 Ga. App. 759, 206 S.E.2d 709 (1974).

Failure to request severance not ineffective assistance. — Trial counsel's failure to file a motion to sever a defendant's case from a codefendant's case did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel; since trial counsel testified that counsel made a tactical decision not to file a motion to sever after consultation with the defendant, and since the defendant had not shown that the defendant would have benefited from a separate trial, there was evidence to support the trial court's conclusion that trial counsel rendered effective assistance. Hubbard v. State, 274 Ga. App. 184, 617 S.E.2d 167 (2005).

Application (Cont'd)

Because a codefendant's statements were non-custodial and were made in furtherance of a conspiracy, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that the statements were admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-8-801) and did not violate Bruton; consequently, the defendant failed to demonstrate that counsel's failure to request a severance constituted ineffective assistance. Hankerson v. State, 275 Ga. App. 545, 621 S.E.2d 772 (2005).

Counsel's defense strategy in failing to move for severance of the defendant's armed robbery trial from that of a codefendant did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel as such was reasonable, even if it wasn't successful, given that: (1) the jury was unlikely to confuse the evidence applicable to either defendants; (2) the defenses were not mutually antagonistic; and (3) the defendant might have actually benefitted from being able to point to the codefendant as being the controlling figure in the robberies. Lee v. State, 281 Ga. App. 479, 636 S.E.2d 547 (2006).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for trafficking cocaine, the defendant was not rendered ineffective assistance of counsel by defense counsel failing to request that the defendant's trial be severed from a codefendant's trial since, as testified to by defense counsel at the defendant's motion for a new trial, there were no legal grounds for a severance. Namely, it was completely permissible that the codefendant testified against the defendant; the codefendant's testimony would have been admissible against the defendant even if there would have been two trials, and the defendant made no showing otherwise; and the codefendant's testimony was consistent with the defendant's theory of defense, specifically, that both tried to place the blame for the presence of the drugs exclusively on another. Mosley v. State, 296 Ga. App. 746, 675 S.E.2d 607 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1188, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 322 (Ga. 2009).

Trial counsel's failure to renew a motion to sever did not constitute deficient performance because the strategic decision fell within the wide latitude of presumptively reasonable conduct engaged in by trial attorneys; counsel testified that counsel did not renew the motion to sever because counsel had impeached the codefendant on cross-examination and believed that the trial court would not grant severance at that stage of the proceedings. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 706, 715 S.E.2d 85 (2011).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to sever the first defendant's prosecution from that of the other defendants because, during the hearing on the first defendant's motion for new trial, trial counsel testified that counsel believed it was a better course of action to ensure that the first defendant would not be tried separately; and counsel noted that the first defendant had been offered — and had rejected — a favorable plea deal, and that counsel had reason to believe that if the first defendant were tried alone, a co-defendant would accept a deal similar to the one offered to the first defendant, and would testify against the first defendant. Daniels v. State, 302 Ga. 90, 805 S.E.2d 80 (2017), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Juror Strikes in Joint Trials

Number of strikes allowed joint defendants generally. — When two or more defendants are tried jointly for a crime or offense, the defendants collectively are entitled to the same number of strikes as a single defendant tried separately, to be exercised either jointly or proportionately at the trial judge's direction, in view of Ga. L. 1972, p. 618, § 1, rather than each being entitled to that defendant's full statutory allowance as was previously the law. Munsford v. State, 129 Ga. App. 547, 199 S.E.2d 843 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Lowe v. State, 133 Ga. App. 420, 210 S.E.2d 869 (1974).

No equal protection violation. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4(b), which allows defendants tried jointly 14 peremptory challenges (while O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165 allows a defendant tried alone nine such challenges), does not violate equal protection as there are valid reasons for discriminating between the peremptory challenges of single defendants and codefendants: the avoidance of undue delay and a needless burden on the public. Dixon v. State, 285 Ga. 312, 677 S.E.2d 76 (2009), overruled on other grounds, 287 Ga. 242, 695 S.E.2d 255 (2010).

Construction with former Code 1933, § 59-805 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165) as to total strikes allowed joint defendants. — Former Code 1933, § 27-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4), which must be construed in pari materia with former Code 1933, § 59-805 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165), allows only a total of 20 peremptory challenges to two or more defendants when tried jointly. Taylor v. State, 140 Ga. App. 447, 231 S.E.2d 364 (1976).

When former Code 1933, §§ 27-2101 and 59-805 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 15-12-165 and 17-8-4) were construed in pari materia, joint defendants in the same case were entitled to a total of 20 strikes to be exercised by all of the defendants. Allen v. State, 235 Ga. 709, 221 S.E.2d 405 (1975).

Additional strikes when number of defendants exceeds number of strikes. — Under former Code 1933, § 27-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4), if more than 20 defendants are indicted and tried jointly for a felony, it does not mean that some of the defendants would have no strikes, since the trial judge is allowed to allot up to five additional strikes per defendant in excess of the number of strikes specified in former Code 1933, § 59-805 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165). Albert v. State, 235 Ga. 718, 221 S.E.2d 413 (1975).

Denial of motion for additional jury strikes generally. — If nothing in the record indicates that the denial of a motion for allowance of additional jury strikes is an abuse of the court's sole discretion, that denial will be upheld. Merrill v. State, 130 Ga. App. 745, 204 S.E.2d 632 (1974); Ramsey v. State, 165 Ga. App. 854, 303 S.E.2d 32 (1983).

Refusal to allow additional strikes if defendants have not exhausted strikes. — If the record shows that defendants have not exhausted the peremptory strikes to which the defendants are entitled, error, if any, in the trial court's refusal to allow additional peremptory strikes is harmless. Smith v. State, 154 Ga. App. 258, 267 S.E.2d 863 (1980).

Trial court did not abuse discretion by not allowing additional strikes. — Record did not indicate that the trial court abused the court's discretion by failing to allow additional jury strikes for the defense since the two defendants were being tried jointly. Majors v. State, 203 Ga. App. 139, 416 S.E.2d 156 (1992).

There was no abuse by the trial court in a joint trial by failing to allow additional jury strikes to a defendant since the defendant would have used the strikes to remove prospective jurors on the basis of race; the assertion of prejudice was without foundation because such strikes are forbidden. Adams v. State, 264 Ga. 71, 440 S.E.2d 639 (1994), overruled on other grounds by Carr v. State, 281 Ga. 43, 635 S.E.2d 767, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 640 (2006).

There was no merit to the defendant's contention that the trial court erroneously denied the defendant's motion for additional peremptory challenges in a trial in which the defendant was tried with a codefendant; O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 gave the trial court discretion as to whether to grant additional challenges, and defendant alleged no harm resulting from the selection of the jury. Denny v. State, 281 Ga. 114, 636 S.E.2d 500 (2006).

Allotment of peremptory challenges between cocounsel. — An appropriate procedure when separate counsel representing codefendants fail to agree on a method of sharing peremptory challenges is to divide the 20 strikes between the defendants and exercise discretion whether to allot up to five additional strikes to each. The exercise of those strikes should be as follows: the first juror should be placed on the state and if accepted, then on defendant A. If accepted by defendant A, then on defendant B. The second juror should be placed on the state and if accepted, then on defendant B. If accepted by defendant B, then on defendant A. Defendants A and B should be alternated in this manner and this procedure followed until the jury is selected. Henry v. State, 256 Ga. 313, 348 S.E.2d 640 (1986).

Although the political affiliations of joint defendants were not synonymous, additional strikes were not needed to remove potential members of the jury antagonistic to the political philosophy of each since undue prejudice was not shown. Monroe v. State, 250 Ga. 30, 295 S.E.2d 512 (1982).

Juror Strikes in Joint Trials (Cont'd)

Additional strikes for state. — Trial court properly granted the state two additional jury strikes after the court gave defendants four additional strikes, two for each defendant. While it is true that O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 is silent on the question of additional strikes for the state, the statute is to be construed in pari materia with former Code 1933, § 59-805 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165), which provides that the state "shall be allowed one-half the number of peremptory challenges allowed to the accused." Gerald v. State, 189 Ga. App. 155, 375 S.E.2d 134 (1988).

Jointly selected jury proper. — Trial court did not err by forcing the defendant to proceed to trial with a jury that was jointly selected. Swain v. State, 275 Ga. 150, 563 S.E.2d 122 (2002).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 157 et seq., 172 et seq.

C.J.S. — 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 534 et seq. 50A C.J.S., Juries, §§ 335 et seq., 427 et seq., 441 et seq., 474 et seq., 515 et seq.

ALR. — Right of defendant in a criminal case to cross-examine a codefendant who has taken the stand in his own behalf, 33 A.L.R. 826.

Right to severance where two or more persons are jointly accused, 70 A.L.R. 1171; 104 A.L.R. 1519; 131 A.L.R. 917.

Successful defense by one codefendant, or a finding for "defendants," as inuring to benefit of defaulting defendant, 78 A.L.R. 938.

Consolidated trial upon several indictments or informations against same accused, over his objection, 59 A.L.R.2d 841.

Husband or wife as competent witness for or against co-offender with spouse, 90 A.L.R.2d 648.

Jury: number of peremptory challenges allowed in criminal case, where there are two or more defendants tried together, 21 A.L.R.3d 725.

Inconsistency of criminal verdicts as between two or more defendants tried together, 22 A.L.R.3d 717.

Effect of abolition of capital punishment on procedural rules governing crimes punishable by death — post-Furman decisions, 71 A.L.R.3d 453.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in criminal case, 82 A.L.R.3d 245.

Right of defendants in prosecution for criminal conspiracy to separate trials, 82 A.L.R.3d 366.

Acquittal of principal, or his conviction of lesser degree of offense, as affecting prosecution of accessory, or aider and abettor, 9 A.L.R.4th 972.

Propriety of use of multiple juries at joint trial of multiple defendants in state criminal prosecution, 41 A.L.R.4th 1189.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in state homicide offenses — Factual applications, 16 A.L.R.6th 329.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in criminal cases — state narcotics offenses, 19 A.L.R.6th 115.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in state homicide offenses — applicable standard and extent of antagonism required, 24 A.L.R.6th 591.

Desire of accused to testify on just one of multiple charges as basis for severance of trials, 32 A.L.R.6th 385.

Propriety of use of multiple juries at joint trial of multiple defendants in state criminal prosecution, 41 A.L.R.6th 295.

Judicial removal for cause and peremptory strike validity under Batson against jurors based upon viewing police procedural programs, live television trials, reality legal television, or other crime and legal based television programs, 84 A.L.R.6th 229.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in criminal case — Federal homicide offenses, 7 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 415.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in criminal case — Federal cocaine offenses, 7 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 491.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in criminal case — Federal marijuana offenses, 34 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 509.

Propriety of Use of Multiple Juries at Joint Trial of Multiple Defendants in Federal Criminal Prosecution, 40 A.L.R. Fed. 3d Art. 4.

Supreme Court Jurisprudence on Article III Standing, 41 A.L.R. Fed. 3d Art. 5.

17-8-5. Recordation of testimony in felony cases; entering testimony on minutes of court where guilty verdict found; preparation of transcript where death sentence imposed; preparation of transcript where mistrial results in felony case.

(a) On the trial of all felonies the presiding judge shall have the testimony taken down and, when directed by the judge, the court reporter shall exactly and truly record or take stenographic notes of the testimony and proceedings in the case, except the argument of counsel. In the event of a verdict of guilty, the testimony shall be entered on the minutes of the court or in a book to be kept for that purpose. In the event that a sentence of death is imposed, the transcript of the case shall be prepared within 90 days after the sentence is imposed by the trial court. Upon petition by the court reporter, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia may grant an additional period of time for preparation of the transcript, such period not to exceed 60 days. The requirement that a transcript be prepared within a certain period in cases in which a sentence of death is imposed shall not inure to the benefit of a defendant.

(b) In the event that a mistrial results from any cause in the trial of a defendant charged with the commission of a felony, the presiding judge may, in his discretion, either with or without any application of the defendant or state's counsel, order that a brief or transcript of the testimony in the case be duly filed by the court reporter in the office of the clerk of the superior court in which the mistrial occurred. If the brief or transcript is ordered, it shall be the duty of the judge, in the order, to provide for the compensation of the reporter and for the transcript to be paid for as is provided by law for payment of transcripts in cases in which the law requires the testimony to be transcribed, at a rate not to exceed that provided in felony cases.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 841; Code 1863, § 4578; Code 1868, § 4599; Code 1873, § 4696; Ga. L. 1876, p. 133, § 1; Code 1882, § 4696; Penal Code 1895, § 981; Penal Code 1910, § 1007; Ga. L. 1925, p. 101, § 1; Code 1933, § 27-2401; Ga. L. 1973, p. 159, § 6; Ga. L. 1976, p. 991, § 1.

Cross references. — Powers and duties of Judicial Council with regard to reporting of judicial proceedings, § 15-5-20 et seq.

Law reviews. — For article surveying Georgia criminal law cases from June 1979 through May 1980, see 32 Mercer L. Rev. 35 (1980). For article surveying developments in Georgia criminal law from mid-1980 through mid-1981, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 95 (1981).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

"Proceedings" defined. — Intent of the term "proceedings" in former Code 1933, § 27-2401 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5) was to refer to objections, rulings, and other matters which occur during the course of the evidence as well as any post-trial procedures. State v. Graham, 246 Ga. 341, 271 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

This section related only to the testimony so taken down by the court reporter. Hughes v. State, 59 Ga. App. 885, 2 S.E.2d 513 (1939).

This section did not apply to guilty pleas. Jones v. Lee, 244 Ga. 837, 262 S.E.2d 130 (1979).

Transcript of habeas corpus hearing. — There is no clear legal duty to file the transcript of a habeas corpus hearing within a particular period of time, but the court should exercise sound discretion in inquiring into the cause for the delay in transcription and so base the court's decision for or against dismissal of complaint seeking mandamus. Everett v. Rewis, 244 Ga. 427, 260 S.E.2d 336 (1979).

All proceedings except argument must be reported. — Construing Ga. L. 1965, p. 18, § 10 (see O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41) with former Code 1933, § 27-2401 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5), it would appear that in a felony case all testimony and proceedings in the case must be reported, except the argument of counsel. Graham v. State, 153 Ga. App. 658, 266 S.E.2d 316, rev'd on other grounds, 246 Ga. 341, 271 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

Completion of record. — When the transcript does not fully disclose what transpired at trial, it is the duty of the complaining party to have the record completed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41. Mapp v. State, 204 Ga. App. 647, 420 S.E.2d 615 (1992).

Supreme court could not review the defendant's claim that the trial court set pretrial bond in an excessive and unreasonable amount because the defendant failed to have the record completed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41; testimony at the hearing on the motion for new trial was not a sufficient substitute for a transcript, and without a transcript of the bond hearing or a statutorily authorized substitute, the supreme court had to assume that the trial court's judgment was correct. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 542, 712 S.E.2d 851 (2011).

Unrecorded voir dire. — Defendant's contention that possible error occurred during voir dire or defense counsel may have been ineffective and that because of the lack of a record the defendant will never know if there was error was not sufficient basis to require a new trial. Primas v. State, 231 Ga. App. 861, 501 S.E.2d 28 (1998).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a change of venue because although the court reporter transcribed the motion for change of venue and the trial court's ruling, the actual questions and answers of the prospective jurors were not reported, and defense counsel made no motion at that time to include the responses in the record or to have the responses reconstructed for the record; since voir dire was not transcribed, it was assumed that the jurors who were not excused for cause did not have such fixed opinions that the jurors could not be impartial judges of the defendant's guilt. Walden v. State, 289 Ga. 845, 717 S.E.2d 159 (2011).

Failure to record voir dire in capital case. — Failure to record the voir dire examination of prospective jurors as to the jurors' feelings about imposing the death penalty in a case in which the sentence of death is imposed is reversible error. Owens v. State, 233 Ga. 869, 214 S.E.2d 173 (1975).

Counsel's duty to request recording of final arguments. — If counsel wants the final arguments recorded, it is the counsel's duty to see that it is done, inasmuch as it is not required. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L.

Ed. 2d 251 (1977), sentence vacated, 243 Ga. 244, 253 S.E.2d 707 (1979).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to transcribe opening and closing statements and voir dire. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to have the opening and closing statements and voir dire transcribed because the arguments of counsel at trial are not required to be transcribed; and although objections and rulings thereon made during jury selection are required to be reported and made part of the trial record, there is no requirement that the entire jury selection be reported and made part of the record in a nondeath penalty felony case. Curtis v. State, 330 Ga. App. 839, 769 S.E.2d 580 (2015).

Absent request, reporter is not required to record argument. — In the absence of a timely request that the argument of counsel be recorded, the court reporter is not required to do so. Montgomery v. State, 140 Ga. App. 286, 231 S.E.2d 108 (1976).

When the record shows no timely request that the argument of counsel be recorded and, in the absence of such a request, a court reporter is not required to record the argument of counsel. Franklin v. State, 146 Ga. App. 429, 246 S.E.2d 442 (1978).

Closing arguments should be recorded when state seeks death penalty. — Even though not required by statute, closing arguments of counsel should be taken down in a case in which the state is seeking the death penalty. However, the failure to transcribe the closing argument of counsel does not, without a showing of prejudice and harm, require the death penalty automatically be set aside. Stephens v. Hopper, 241 Ga. 596, 247 S.E.2d 92, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 667 (1978).

State has duty to have proceedings reported and transcribed. — Under Ga. L. 1965, p. 18, § 10 and former Code 1933, § 27-2401 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-41 and 17-8-5), it was the duty of the state in all felony cases to have the transcript of evidence and proceedings reported and prepared and, after a guilty verdict had been returned, to file the transcript. Parrott v. State, 134 Ga. App. 160, 214 S.E.2d 3 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Mathis v. State, 147 Ga. App. 148, 248 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

State has duty to request that proceedings be transcribed and to bear costs. — This section clearly stated that, in the event of a felony conviction, it was the duty of the state, at the state's own expense and through the agency of the presiding judge, to request the court reporter to transcribe the reported testimony. State v. Hart, 246 Ga. 212, 271 S.E.2d 133 (1980); Ivory v. State, 199 Ga. App. 283, 405 S.E.2d 90 (1991), cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 90 (1991); Whitt v. State, 215 Ga. App. 704, 452 S.E.2d 125 (1994).

No time limit on state's duty to have transcript prepared. — Under this section, the state had the duty to see that the transcript was prepared and filed, though there was no time limit on this duty. State v. Graham, 246 Ga. 341, 271 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

While the defendant alleged prejudice in the delay of the production of the trial transcript, the defendant pointed to none, and failed to identify the witnesses the defendant claims were lost by the delay; and O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5, governing the recordation of testimony in felony cases, provided no timeline for the preparation of the transcript. Morrison v. State, 303 Ga. 120, 810 S.E.2d 508 (2018).

Defendant has duty under § 5-6-42 to request transcript on appeal. — Appellant who appeals a felony conviction and states in the notice of appeal that a transcript is to be transmitted as part of the appellate record has a continuing duty under Ga. L. 1965, p. 18, § 11 (see O.C.G.A. § 5-6-42) to request the court reporter to transcribe the reported testimony at the same time that the appellant files the notice of appeal. State v. Hart, 246 Ga. 212, 271 S.E.2d 133 (1980).

Duty not relieved by state's duty to request transcript. — It is the duty of the state to request the court reporter to transcribe the reported testimony and then file the transcript after a guilty verdict has been returned in a felony case. However, the state's duty to request the court reporter to transcribe the reported testimony in a felony conviction has no time limit and thus cannot relieve an appellant in a felony conviction of the appellant's duty under Ga. L. 1965, p. 18, § 11 (see O.C.G.A. § 5-6-42) to request the court reporter to transcribe the reported testimony at the same time that the appellant files a notice of appeal. State v. Hart, 246 Ga. 212, 271 S.E.2d 133 (1980).

State's failure to file transcript denies appellant the right of appeal. — Appellant is effectively denied the right to appeal if a transcript of the trial is not available to the appellant. Wade v. State, 231 Ga. 131, 200 S.E.2d 271 (1973).

Failure of the state to file the transcript, or a correct transcript, even when caused by the state's inability to file the transcript, and not by the appellant's fault, effectively denies the appellant the right to appeal because a complete and correct transcript of the appellant's trial is not available to the appellant. Parrott v. State, 134 Ga. App. 160, 214 S.E.2d 3 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Mathis v. State, 147 Ga. App. 148, 248 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

Indigent entitled on appeal to free copy of transcript. — Indigent, on appeal, is entitled as a matter of right to a free copy of the transcript of the trial court proceedings in which the indigent has been a party. Stalling v. State, 231 Ga. 37, 200 S.E.2d 121 (1973).

Transcript of trial ending in mistrial. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a free transcript since the defendant inquired about a transcript after the defendant's first trial ended in a mistrial and the motion was made after defense counsel was made aware that the state had ordered a limited transcript of defense witnesses only. Miller v. State, 231 Ga. App. 869, 501 S.E.2d 42 (1998).

Indigent rights when proceedings adequately reviewed in habeas corpus. — Duty to provide on appeal a free copy of the transcript of the trial proceeding does not arise when the original criminal trial proceedings have been adequately reviewed in habeas corpus proceedings brought by the appellant and affirmed by the Supreme Court. Stalling v. State, 231 Ga. 37, 200 S.E.2d 121 (1973).

Reading of stenographer's notes when court and counsel differ as to testimony. — When court and counsel differ as to what a witness testifies to, it is not error for the court to require the stenographer to read from the stenographer's notes the exact words of the witness. Vann v. State, 83 Ga. 44, 9 S.E. 945 (1889).

Failure to transcribe counsel's arguments is not a constitutional violation requiring vacation of a death sentence absent showing of harm by the defendant. Corn v. Zant, 708 F.2d 549 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1220, 104 S. Ct. 2670, 81 L. Ed. 2d 375 (1984), vacated in part on other grounds sub nom., Corn v. Kemp, 772 F.2d 681 (11th Cir. 1985), judgment vacated, 478 U.S. 1016, 106 S. Ct. 3326, 92 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1986), remanded for further consideration in light of Rose v. Clark, 478 U.S. 570, 106 S. Ct. 3101, 92 L. Ed. 2d 460 (1986), aff'd, 837 F.2d 1474 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1023, 108 S. Ct. 1997, 100 L. Ed. 2d 228 (1988).

Failure to transcribe closing arguments at the sentencing phase of a death penalty case is not a per se violation of constitutional due process. Morgan v. Zant, 582 F. Supp. 1026 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 743 F.2d 775 (11th Cir. 1984), overruled on other grounds, 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 939, 107 S. Ct. 421, 93 L. Ed. 2d 371 (1986), 486 U.S. 1009, 108 S. Ct. 1739, 100 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1988).

Trial court did not err by refusing the defendant's request to have the closing arguments of counsel recorded and transcribed. Brooks v. State, 171 Ga. App. 55, 318 S.E.2d 785 (1984).

In absence of request, trial court does not err in failing to order recordation of voir dire, opening statements, and closing arguments. Simmons v. State, 160 Ga. App. 391, 287 S.E.2d 338 (1981).

Motion for new trial is part of "proceedings" as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5. Hall v. State, 162 Ga. App. 713, 293 S.E.2d 862 (1982), overruled in part by Worthen v. State, 304 Ga. 862, 823 S.E.2d 291 (2019).

Denial of complete trial transcript to indigent defendant for use upon retrial. — Trial court did not err in refusing to furnish the defendant, an indigent, with a copy of the transcript of the defendant's first trial, to be used at retrial for the purposes of impeaching and pointing out discrepancies in the testimony of witnesses, since the defendant failed to show harm attributable to such decision. Gann v. State, 190 Ga. App. 82, 378 S.E.2d 369 (1989).

If no harm from lost transcript, no new trial. — Loss of transcripts and tapes from certain pretrial proceedings did not entitle the defendants to a new trial as the defendants did not prove harm resulting from the loss. Robinson v. State, 221 Ga. App. 865, 473 S.E.2d 519 (1996).

Providing portions of transcript with objections or rulings sufficient compliance. — Court did not err in providing appellant a transcript not including the complete voir dire and argument of counsel; provision of those portions of the voir dire in which objections were made or rulings were made by the trial court was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5, as was limiting transcription of counsel's argument to those matters to which objection was made. Gardner v. State, 172 Ga. App. 677, 324 S.E.2d 535 (1984).

Absence of a complete trial transcript in a collateral post-conviction proceeding does not automatically require a new trial. Montgomery v. Tremblay, 249 Ga. 483, 292 S.E.2d 64 (1982).

Before a habeas court may grant a new trial on grounds of absence of a complete trial transcript, the court must find that a complete transcript is necessary to reach the merits of the habeas petition and that the necessary portions cannot be reconstructed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41(g), relating to reporting, preparing, and disposing of transcripts generally. Montgomery v. Tremblay, 249 Ga. 483, 292 S.E.2d 64 (1982).

Prejudicial closing arguments. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5 does not require that a transcript of the district attorney's alleged prejudicial closing argument be made. Ford v. State, 160 Ga. App. 707, 288 S.E.2d 39 (1981).

Harmless statements to jurors in defendant's absence. — When, after a lunch break during the guilt phase of the trial, the trial court made a few remarks to the jury while awaiting the return of the defendant, and the trial judge later restated the judge's comments as well as the judge could remember the comments, into the record, relating that the judge had told the jury that the trial would be slightly delayed because the defendant had eaten late, and had congratulated one of the jurors for having been elected to the board of education, there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41, regarding reporting of proceedings generally, or O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5, and any possible constitutional error relating to a defendant's right to be present during all stages of defendant's trial was clearly harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Westbrook v. State, 256 Ga. 776, 353 S.E.2d 504 (1987).

Delay in entering mistrial order on minutes. — When the first trial ended with the grant of the defendant's motion for mistrial and the order declaring the mistrial was not reduced to writing and entered on the minutes of the court until after the second trial, and when the court's written order merely perfected the record in this regard and the delay in no way affected the defendant's rights, no double jeopardy defense is established. Swafford v. State, 161 Ga. App. 139, 291 S.E.2d 3 (1982).

No right to transcript when no testimony given. — Provision to indigent appellant of transcript of continuance hearing was unnecessary for appeal from denial of motion for continuance when no testimony had been given at hearing. Miller v. State, 165 Ga. App. 487, 299 S.E.2d 174 (1983).

Probation revocation proceeding is not a felony proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5. Smith v. State, 167 Ga. App. 94, 306 S.E.2d 73 (1983).

Charge conference is not a matter which occurs during the presentation of evidence and is not considered part of the "proceedings." Ricarte v. State, 249 Ga. App. 50, 547 S.E.2d 703 (2001).

Defendant failed to show prejudice. — Defendant failed to demonstrate that the loss of two videotapes had harmed the defendant or precluded the appellate court from reviewing any of the issues raised on appeal with regard to the defendant's convictions for multiple offenses relating to the sexual molestation and exploitation of two minors. Significantly, although the videotapes were missing, the parties had stipulated to the contents of the tapes at the bench trial and to the proffered testimony of the minor victims. Mitchell v. State, 289 Ga. App. 55, 656 S.E.2d 145 (2007), cert. dismissed, No. S08C0770, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 499 (Ga. 2008).

Reconstruction of lost transcript proper. — In a mother and son trial for the murder of the son's wife, after the first day's transcript was lost, the trial court properly complied with O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41(f) and (g) in reconstructing the transcript with testimony from all five original witnesses, the Clerk of Court, and the only living prosecutor. Defendants could not refuse to participate in the reconstruction and then complain that the reconstruction was inadequate. Bamberg v. State, 308 Ga. 340, 839 S.E.2d 640 (2020).

Cited in Burnett v. State, 87 Ga. 622, 13 S.E. 552 (1891); Walden v. Nichols, 201 Ga. 568, 40 S.E.2d 644 (1946); Sawyer v. State, 112 Ga. App. 885, 147 S.E.2d 60 (1966); Aiken v. State, 226 Ga. 840, 178 S.E.2d 202 (1970); Clay v. State, 122 Ga. App. 677, 178 S.E.2d 331 (1970); Robinson v. J.C. Penney Co., 124 Ga. App. 221, 183 S.E.2d 782 (1971); Munsford v. State, 129 Ga. App. 547, 199 S.E.2d 843 (1973); Jackson v. State, 130 Ga. App. 581, 203 S.E.2d 923 (1974); Lyle v. State, 131 Ga. App. 8, 205 S.E.2d 126 (1974); M.K.H. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 565, 218 S.E.2d 284 (1975); Allen v. State, 235 Ga. 709, 221 S.E.2d 405 (1975); Ellis v. State, 137 Ga. App. 834, 224 S.E.2d 799 (1976); Godwin v. State, 138 Ga. App. 131, 225 S.E.2d 723 (1976); Newell v. State, 237 Ga. 488, 228 S.E.2d 873 (1976); Newman v. State, 239 Ga. 329, 236 S.E.2d 673 (1977); Lynch v. State, 143 Ga. App. 188, 238 S.E.2d 122 (1977); Brown v. State, 242 Ga. 602, 250 S.E.2d 491 (1978); Jackson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 386, 271 S.E.2d 32 (1980); Mason v. Balkcom, 487 F. Supp. 554 (M.D. Ga. 1980); Williams v. State, 217 Ga. App. 636, 458 S.E.2d 671 (1995); Hampton v. State, 272 Ga. 284, 527 S.E.2d 872 (2000); Woolums v. State, 247 Ga. App. 306, 540 S.E.2d 655 (2000); Countryman v. State, No. A20A0556, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 360 (June 18, 2020).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Duties and compensation of court reporter. — Based upon a reading of Ga. L. 1965, p. 18, § 10 and former Code 1933, § 27-2401 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-41 and 17-8-5), in a felony trial resulting in conviction the court reporter was under a duty to transcribe the testimony and proceedings, except for the argument of counsel, and to file the original and one copy with the clerk of the convicting trial court. The compensation of the court reporter for the filing of this original and one copy was either a charge against the public funds or included within the reporter's salary, as the individual case may be. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-513.

Custody of notes and recordings taken by court reporter. — Since this section imposed on the judge presiding at a felony trial an absolute duty to have the testimony taken down, notes and recordings taken by a court reporter in felony cases remain in the judge's custody, but subject to control by the court. 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U78-1.

Appellant requesting that transcript be filed on appeal responsible for court reporter fees. — When appellant requests that a transcript be filed as part of the record on appeal in a nonindigent criminal case, appellant is responsible for payment of court reporter fees for preparation of the transcript. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-22.

When county must pay for transcripts. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-5 makes it the duty of the court, or county officials, to require that testimony be taken down and that a written record be filed with the clerk, but does not require that all transcripts be paid for by the county. If no appeal was filed by the defendant, then the county would be the requesting party responsible for preparation of transcript and for payment of court reporter fees under that section. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-22.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Use in state court by counsel or party of tape recorder or other electronic device to make transcript of criminal trial proceedings, 67 A.L.R.3d 1013.

Court reporter's death or disability prior to transcribing notes as grounds for reversal or new trial, 57 A.L.R.4th 1049.

Failure or refusal of state court judge to have record made of bench conference with counsel in criminal proceeding, 31 A.L.R.5th 704.

17-8-6. Authority of municipal court to seal criminal records.

(a) Any judge of a municipal court of any municipality of this state or any judge hearing cases for any such court wherein a municipal court is a court of first instance in criminal cases shall have the authority to seal, to all persons except criminal justice officials, all criminal records of the municipality, including, but not limited to, records of arrest, fingerprints, and photographs, whether maintained in the police agency of the municipality or elsewhere in the municipality, related to any individual, upon a finding by such a judge that one of the following conditions exists:

(1) When, upon the call of a case for trial, criminal charges against the individual are dismissed either:

(A) Upon the motion of the arresting officer; or

(B) Because of the lack of prosecution of such charges by the arresting officer or the municipality; or

(2) When criminal charges against the individual are the subject of a pretrial disposition by the municipal prosecutor, provided that the terms and conditions of the pretrial disposition are satisfied.

(b) Any order sealing the records of an individual, as provided for in subsection (a) of this Code section, shall in no way constitute an adjudication of any illegal or wrongful action on the part of the arresting officer or the municipality.

History. — Ga. L. 1980, p. 1683, § 1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Quintana v. State, 276 Ga. 731, 583 S.E.2d 869 (2003).

ARTICLE 2

CONTINUANCES

17-8-20. Showing of due diligence required of applicants for continuances generally.

In all cases, the party making an application for a continuance must show that he has used due diligence.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3457; Code 1868, § 3477; Code 1873, § 3528; Code 1882, § 3528; Civil Code 1895, § 5135; Penal Code 1895, § 965; Civil Code 1910, § 5721; Penal Code 1910, § 991; Code 1933, § 81-1416.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-166.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Diligence required of defendants at large and incarcerated compared. — If defendant is at large under bond, a greater degree of diligence on the defendant's part is required than if the defendant has been incarcerated and unable personally to prepare the defendant's case for trial. Watts v. State, 14 Ga. App. 600, 81 S.E. 902 (1914); Amerson v. State, 18 Ga. App. 176, 88 S.E. 998 (1916).

Refusal of postponement when witness not subpoenaed. — If the witness has not been subpoenaed nor other statutory requirements met, it is not an abuse of discretion to refuse a postponement of the hearing in order to subpoena these persons. Hulett v. State, 150 Ga. App. 367, 258 S.E.2d 48 (1979).

Necessary to show due diligence before granting continuance. — Nothing in our law either requires or permits defendants to rely solely on information provided by the state for the defendants' pretrial investigation, and before the defendants are entitled to a continuance, the defendants must show the exercise of due diligence. Davis v. State, 204 Ga. App. 657, 420 S.E.2d 349 (1992).

If the trial court granted the accused at least one previous continuance to secure the same witness, and the accused offered no evidence that the witness was properly subpoenaed, the court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion for continuance. Brandon v. State, 236 Ga. App. 203, 511 S.E.2d 573 (1999).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying defense counsel's motion for continuance after the defendant stated on the morning of the trial that the defendant could identify the perpetrator; the defendant failed to use due diligence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-20 in applying for a continuance as the defendant did not show that the defendant did not and could not have known earlier the information the defendant gave counsel on the morning of the trial. Westmoreland v. State, 281 Ga. App. 497, 636 S.E.2d 692 (2006).

If need for additional time to prepare defense not stated, no continuance granted. — When defendant's counsel had over six weeks between the grant of the defendant's motion for a psychiatric examination and the beginning of the trial, yet during that period said nothing to the district attorney or the court about needing additional time to prepare the defense, and, to the contrary, filed a demand for a speedy trial in that period, there was no error in the trial court's refusal to grant a continuance as the party requesting such continuance failed to establish that the party used "due diligence." O'Neal v. State, 254 Ga. 1, 325 S.E.2d 759 (1985).

No abuse of discretion when defendant given time to amend motion. — Trial court did not err in requiring the defendant to proceed in the presentation and argument of the defendant's motion for a new trial with less than 24 hours to review the trial transcript of the proceedings, since the court gave the defendant a week to review the transcript and amend the motion to present additional grounds. Brown v. State, 214 Ga. App. 733, 449 S.E.2d 136 (1994).

No continuance when no excuse offered for delay in retaining counsel. — Because a criminal trial had been continued for six months to give the defendants time to hire counsel, the motion made by the defendants' attorney based upon the attorney's having been hired only ten minutes previously was properly denied on the ground that no excuse had been offered by the defendants for the defendants delay in retaining counsel. Patterson v. State, 202 Ga. App. 440, 414 S.E.2d 895 (1992).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a continuance because it was a rule of criminal procedure that in all cases the party making an application for a continuance must show that the party has used due diligence, O.C.G.A. § 17-8-20; defendant was given ample time to obtain counsel and call witnesses before trial, and the defendant did not offer a valid excuse for the defendant's failure to obtain counsel. Branton v. State, 258 Ga. App. 221, 573 S.E.2d 475 (2002).

Following a mistrial in the defendant's trial for attempted child molestation, although there was only about a week until the second trial, the defendant did not explain why the defendant waited until the start of the second trial to seek to hire new counsel and the defendant did not articulate why the defendant was partially displeased with appointed counsel's performance in the first trial; therefore, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's last-minute request for a continuance. Shaum v. State, 844 S.E.2d 863, No. A20A0228, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 343 (2020).

No abuse of discretion when defendant fails to show due diligence in obtaining transcript. — When the trial court granted one continuance to obtain the requested transcript of the preliminary hearing, and the defendant failed to show diligence in obtaining such transcript and failed to show a need for the transcript, there is no abuse of discretion in denial of the motion for a continuance. Hammonds v. State, 157 Ga. App. 393, 277 S.E.2d 762 (1981).

When defense counsel moves for a continuance based on the fact that defense counsel did not receive a tape or transcript of the committal hearing until approximately 24 hours before the trial and that as a consequence defense counsel was unable to adequately prepare to cross-examine or impeach the prosecution's witnesses, but defense counsel was informed some days earlier that defense counsel might pick up the tape and transcript at counsel's convenience, and defense counsel did not do so until the day preceding the trial, and by counsel's own admission defense counsel was present at the committal hearing and therefore can be presumed to know what took place there, the court does not abuse the court's discretion in denying the motion. Gaskin v. State, 166 Ga. App. 331, 303 S.E.2d 778 (1983).

Lack of due diligence clearly demonstrated. — See Lucas v. State, 174 Ga. App. 580, 330 S.E.2d 792 (1985); Mojica v. State, 210 Ga. App. 826, 437 S.E.2d 806 (1993); McTaggart v. State, 225 Ga. App. 359, 483 S.E.2d 898 (1997); Judge v. State, 240 Ga. App. 541, 524 S.E.2d 4 (1999).

Continuance properly denied. — In a burglary case, a court did not err by denying a continuance after the defendant made no showing of any attempt to hire new counsel after expressing the defendant's displeasure with the attorney and the defendant did not suggest what evidence the defendant would have put forth. McConnell v. State, 263 Ga. App. 686, 589 S.E.2d 271 (2003).

Under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-20, because the court had wide discretion as to whether to grant a continuance and because the defendant was unable to show that the defendant used due diligence in preparing for trial or provide specific information as to why the defendant needed a continuance, and failed to show any harm as a result of the court's ruling, there was no abuse of discretion in refusing the continuance. Woodward v. State, 262 Ga. App. 363, 585 S.E.2d 687 (2003).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance because, after the defendant's first request for a continuance was denied, the defendant had 13 days to subpoena witnesses or to reconstruct a transcript from the pre-arrest warrant hearing; further, the second application for a continuance was based on speculation about a witness's testimony. Kuykendoll v. State, 278 Ga. App. 369, 629 S.E.2d 32 (2006).

Because the defendant's family was aware that the defendant desired a private attorney, as evidenced by the fact that the first attorney was privately retained, and once the defendant requested and was appointed an attorney by the court, several months passed, during which the defendant did nothing to inform the court of a desire to retain an attorney, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a continuance for the defendant to hire a private attorney. Bakyayita v. State, 278 Ga. App. 624, 629 S.E.2d 539 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a continuance with regard to the defendant's motion for funds for expert assistance as defense counsel waited approximately five months before making the request for funds for expert assistance until after plea negotiations had broken down and shortly before the case was placed on the trial calendar. Under those circumstances, the defendant failed to show that due diligence was exercised and, thus, failed to demonstrate entitlement to a continuance. Fincher v. State, 289 Ga. App. 64, 656 S.E.2d 216 (2007).

Because the record on appeal showed that defense counsel had more than a week before trial to review the state's discovery, had reviewed the material with the defendant, and had also had time before trial to hire an expert, the appeals court could not conclude that the grounds alleged in support of a continuance of the trial was compelling. Robbins v. State, 290 Ga. App. 323, 659 S.E.2d 628 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion to continue a new trial hearing so that the defendant could develop evidence regarding trial counsel's failure to engage in reciprocal discovery. The court was authorized to conclude that the defendant, who knew before the hearing that trial counsel had not engaged in discovery but failed to voice concerns until after trial counsel testified, had exercised little diligence in pursuing the discovery issue and that the ends of justice did not require a continuance. Anuforo v. State, 293 Ga. App. 1, 666 S.E.2d 50 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's request for a continuance on the ground that an expert witness was not available, and the defendant needed to find another witness because the record did not demand a finding that the defendant exercised diligence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-20 in light of the fact that trial counsel was appointed some months before the trial; the defendant made no showing as to the expert's identity, no proffer of the expected testimony, and no showing of how that testimony would benefit the defendant. Sevostiyanova v. State, 313 Ga. App. 729, 722 S.E.2d 333, cert. denied, No. S12C0968, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 612 (Ga. 2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's request for a continuance, filed on the morning of trial, to obtain a private attorney as the defendant had months to hire an attorney, the case had already been continued, and it appeared that appointed counsel had worked diligently on the case and was ready to proceed. Percell v. State, 346 Ga. App. 219, 816 S.E.2d 344 (2018).

Cited in Cruce v. State, 59 Ga. 83 (1877); Glover v. State, 89 Ga. 391, 15 S.E. 496 (1892); Smith v. State, 43 Ga. App. 353, 158 S.E. 770 (1931); Reese v. State, 44 Ga. App. 251, 161 S.E. 156 (1931); Whatley v. State, 162 Ga. App. 106, 290 S.E.2d 316 (1982); Sams v. State, 162 Ga. App. 118, 290 S.E.2d 321 (1982); Hill v. State, 169 Ga. App. 940, 315 S.E.2d 480 (1984); Hunt v. State, 173 Ga. App. 638, 327 S.E.2d 500 (1985); Heaton v. State, 175 Ga. App. 735, 334 S.E.2d 334 (1985); Burgan v. State, 258 Ga. 512, 371 S.E.2d 854 (1988); Johnson v. State, 188 Ga. App.

411, 373 S.E.2d 93 (1988); Fowler v. State, 195 Ga. App. 874, 395 S.E.2d 33 (1990); Rhodes v. State, 200 Ga. App. 193, 407 S.E.2d 442 (1991); Annison v. State, 206 Ga. App. 861, 427 S.E.2d 5 (1992); Harden v. State, 211 Ga. App. 1, 438 S.E.2d 136 (1993); Strickland v. State, 212 Ga. App. 170, 441 S.E.2d 494 (1994); Marion v. State, 224 Ga. App. 413, 480 S.E.2d 869 (1997); Stocks v. State, 224 Ga. App. 433, 481 S.E.2d 230 (1997); Minor v. State, 232 Ga. App. 246, 501 S.E.2d 576 (1998); Mays v. State, 238 Ga. App. 507, 519 S.E.2d 290 (1999); Couch v. State, 256 Ga. App. 822, 570 S.E.2d 57 (2002).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. Pleading and Practice Forms. — 7A Am. Jur. Pleading and Practice Forms, Continuance, §§ 1, 106.

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 79 et seq.

ALR. — Continuance of civil case because of illness or death of party, 68 A.L.R.2d 470.

Continuances at instance of state public defender or appointed counsel over defendant's objections as excuse for denial of speedy trial, 16 A.L.R.4th 1283.

17-8-21. When showing for continuance required of state.

In all cases in which the defendant cannot, according to law, demand a speedy trial, a continuance shall not be granted to the state, except upon a reasonable showing therefor.

History. — Ga. L. 1862-63, p. 138, § 1; Code 1863, § 4592; Code 1868, § 4613; Code 1873, § 4710; Code 1882, § 4710; Penal Code, § 960; Penal Code, § 985; Code 1933, § 27-2001; Ga. L. 2006, p. 893, § 4/HB 1421.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Denial of speedy trial depends on facts and circumstances. — Whether a defendant has been denied a speedy trial is not merely a matter of time but depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Newman v. State, 121 Ga. App. 692, 175 S.E.2d 144 (1970).

Absence of witness. — It was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to grant a continuance to the state based on the absence of a police officer witness, who was not under subpoena but had been served with a notice, since the officer was prevented from testifying because the officer was placed on administrative leave. Hicks v. State, 221 Ga. App. 735, 472 S.E.2d 474 (1996).

Defendant's courses of action when trial unreasonably delayed by state. — If the defendant believes the state has delayed beyond a reasonable time in bringing the defendant to trial, the defendant can make a motion that the defendant be tried, or that the indictment be dismissed for want of prosecution, and call upon the court to apply this section and deny the state a continuance unless it shows sufficient cause for it. State v. King, 137 Ga. App. 26, 222 S.E.2d 859 (1975).

Continuance not presumed erroneous when there is no showing that it was not justified. — If there is a mistrial and the case continued until the next term, there being nothing to show that there were other jurors present, or that there was not sufficient ground for such continuance, error will not be presumed on that account. Armor v. State, 125 Ga. 3, 53 S.E. 815 (1906).

Cited in Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 413, 148 S.E.2d 192 (1966); Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 702, 149 S.E.2d 423 (1966); Butler v. State, 126 Ga. App. 22, 189 S.E.2d 870 (1972).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 17 Am. Jur. 2d, Continuance, § 1 et seq. 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 1041.

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 1 et seq. 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 567 et seq.

ALR. — Continuance of criminal case because of illness of accused, 66 A.L.R.2d 232.

17-8-22. Consideration of motion for continuance by court generally; allowance of counter-showing to motion.

All applications for continuances are addressed to the sound legal discretion of the court and, if not expressly provided for, shall be granted or refused as the ends of justice may require. In all cases the presiding judges may, in their discretion, admit a counter-showing to a motion for a continuance and, after a hearing, may decide whether the motion shall prevail.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3460; Code 1868, § 3480; Ga. L. 1871-72, p. 49, § 1; Ga. L. 1872, p. 41, § 1; Code 1873, § 3531; Code 1882, § 3531; Civil Code 1895, § 5138; Penal Code 1895, § 966; Civil Code 1910, § 5724; Penal Code 1910, § 992; Code 1933, § 81-1419.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-167.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of criminal law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 129 (1986).

For comment on Cannady v. State, 190 Ga. 227, 9 S.E.2d 241 (1940), see 3 Ga. B.J. 55 (1940).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Application
Practice and Procedure
Appellate Review

General Consideration

Discretion of court. — Motions for continuance generally lie within the discretion of the trial judge. Hulett v. State, 150 Ga. App. 367, 258 S.E.2d 48 (1979); Cole v. Jordan, 158 Ga. App. 200, 279 S.E.2d 497 (1981).

Grant or denial of a continuance to a criminal defendant is in the sound discretion of the court, especially when the defendant is in jail. Gann v. State, 166 Ga. App. 172, 303 S.E.2d 510 (1983); Davis v. State, 190 Ga. App. 178, 378 S.E.2d 519 (1989).

Motion for continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and the Court of Appeals will not interfere unless it is clearly shown that the court abused the court's discretion. Gignilliat v. State, 196 Ga. App. 773, 397 S.E.2d 52 (1990).

Judge must weigh facts and circumstances of each case. — Trial judge, in the exercise of the judge's discretion to grant or refuse a continuance, has to consider the facts and circumstances of each case to determine what the ends of justice require. Foster v. State, 213 Ga. 601, 100 S.E.2d 426 (1957), cert. denied, 355 U.S. 967, 78 S. Ct. 559, 2 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1958).

Movant must show some legal ground for a continuance. James v.

State, 158 Ga. 524, 123 S.E. 880 (1924).

Failure to make continuance. — If no motion for continuance is made, and no testimony under oath as to the necessity of a continuance is offered, a new trial will not be granted for failure to grant a continuance. Beavers v. State, 132 Ga. App. 94, 207 S.E.2d 550 (1974).

Objection to jurors as grounds for continuance. — It is not a ground for continuance that some of the jurors impaneled to try a second case against the defendant were present at a part of the first trial. This point should have been made by a challenge to the polls. Crider v. State, 98 Ga. App. 164, 105 S.E.2d 506 (1958).

This section applies when there have been prior continuances of the case. Nail v. State, 142 Ga. 595, 83 S.E. 226 (1914); Paulk v. State, 148 Ga. 304, 96 S.E. 417 (1918).

Defendant's inaction with respect to retained counsel. — Trial court's refusal to continue trial was not an abuse of discretion when it was justified by the defendant's inaction with respect to counsel, since at arraignment and subsequently, the defendant insisted on retained counsel but none ever appeared and the defendant never showed the defendant had made arrangements for counsel. Vincent v. State, 210 Ga. App. 6, 435 S.E.2d 222 (1993), aff'd, 264 Ga. 234, 442 S.E.2d 748 (1994).

Continuance to retain private counsel. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the second defendant's motion for a continuance to hire counsel as the trial began ten months after the indictment and seven weeks after the defendant requested appointed counsel, yet the first day of trial was the first time the defendant expressed an intention to retain private counsel. Partlow v. State, 346 Ga. App. 473, 816 S.E.2d 474 (2018).

Cited in Malone v. State, 49 Ga. 210 (1873); Johnson v. State, 65 Ga. 94 (1880); Kimberly v. State, 4 Ga. App. 852, 62 S.E. 571 (1908); Johnson v. State, 16 Ga. App. 287, 85 S.E. 204 (1915); Smith v. State, 21 Ga. App. 237, 94 S.E. 265 (1917); Parks v. State, 21 Ga. App. 506, 94 S.E. 628 (1917); Fordham v. State, 148 Ga. 758, 98 S.E. 267 (1919); Kelley v. State, 151 Ga. 551, 107 S.E. 488 (1921); Boatright v. State, 27 Ga. App. 292, 108 S.E. 130 (1921); Sims v. State, 177 Ga. 266, 170 S.E. 58 (1933); Walker v. State, 52 Ga. App. 108, 182 S.E. 524 (1935); Roth v. State, 70 Ga. App. 93, 27 S.E.2d 473 (1943); Bentley v. State, 70 Ga. App. 494, 28 S.E.2d 658 (1944); Cochran v. State, 212 Ga. 245, 91 S.E.2d 601 (1956); Jones v. State, 214 Ga. 828, 108 S.E.2d 327 (1959); Jones v. State, 101 Ga. App. 851, 115 S.E.2d 576 (1960); Britten v. State, 221 Ga. 97, 143 S.E.2d 176 (1965); Neal v. State, 119 Ga. App. 218, 166 S.E.2d 740 (1969); Terrell v. State, 136 Ga. App. 645, 222 S.E.2d 641 (1975); Shaw v. State, 239 Ga. 690, 238 S.E.2d 434 (1977); Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694 (1977); Campbell v. State, 240 Ga. 352, 240 S.E.2d 828 (1977); Finney v. State, 242 Ga. 582, 250 S.E.2d 388 (1978); Godfrey v. State, 243 Ga. 302, 253 S.E.2d 710 (1979); Lakes v. State, 244 Ga. 217, 259 S.E.2d 469 (1979); McEachin v. State, 245 Ga. 606, 266 S.E.2d 210 (1980); Park v. State, 154 Ga. App. 348, 268 S.E.2d 401 (1980); Graham v. State, 171 Ga. App. 242, 319 S.E.2d 484 (1984); O'Neal v. State, 254 Ga. 1, 325 S.E.2d 759 (1985); Heaton v. State, 175 Ga. App. 735, 334 S.E.2d 334 (1985); Brock v. State, 177 Ga. App. 430, 339 S.E.2d 403 (1986); Green v. State, 178 Ga. App. 203, 342 S.E.2d 386 (1986); Appling v. State, 256 Ga. 36, 343 S.E.2d 684 (1986); McGuire v. State, 185 Ga. App. 233, 363 S.E.2d 850 (1987); Turner v. State, 258 Ga. 97, 365 S.E.2d 822 (1988); Johnson v. State, 185 Ga. App. 475, 364 S.E.2d 609 (1988); Rhodes v. State, 200 Ga. App. 193, 407 S.E.2d 442 (1991); Roberts v. State, 208 Ga. App. 64, 430 S.E.2d 175 (1993); Stocks v. State, 224 Ga. App. 433, 481 S.E.2d 230 (1997); McTaggart v. State, 225 Ga. App. 359, 483 S.E.2d 898 (1997); Haselrigs v. State, 225 Ga. App. 873, 485 S.E.2d 555 (1997); Minor v. State, 232 Ga. App. 246, 501 S.E.2d 576 (1998); Mays v. State, 238 Ga. App. 507, 519 S.E.2d 290 (1999); Johnson v. State, 271 Ga. 375, 519 S.E.2d 221 (1999); Roberts v. State, 272 Ga. 822, 537 S.E.2d 86 (2000); Roberts v. State, 272 Ga. 822, 537 S.E.2d 86 (2000); Choat v. State, 246 Ga. App. 475, 540 S.E.2d 289 (2000); Lucas v. State, 274 Ga. 640, 555

General Consideration (Cont'd)

S.E.2d 440 (2001); Blackshear v. State, 285 Ga. 619, 680 S.E.2d 850 (2009); Smith v. State, 290 Ga. 428, 721 S.E.2d 892 (2012); Danenberg v. State, 291 Ga. 439, 729 S.E.2d 315 (2012).

Application

Continuance based on witness' absence. — Section applies to a continuance based on absence of witnesses. Woolfolk v. State, 85 Ga. 69, 11 S.E. 814 (1890); McCain v. State, 23 Ga. App. 320, 98 S.E. 191 (1919).

Continuance based on counsel's illness. — This section applies to a continuance based on the illness of counsel. Siegel v. State, 79 Ga. App. 410, 53 S.E.2d 686, aff'd on other grounds, 206 Ga. 252, 56 S.E.2d 512 (1949).

When counsel personally makes a motion for continuance on account of counsel's own illness, the court may take into consideration counsel's physical appearance and all circumstances which may appear regarding the court's judgment as to the physical condition of such attorney, and when the motion is overruled, the Court of Appeals will not reverse the judgment of the lower court unless it clearly appears that the court abused the court's discretion. Siegel v. State, 79 Ga. App. 410, 53 S.E.2d 686, aff'd on other grounds, 206 Ga. 252, 56 S.E.2d 512 (1949).

Defendant's voluntary decision to substitute new counsel. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a continuance sought on the ground that the defendant's new counsel had insufficient time to prepare when the short time period arose from the defendant's voluntary decision to substitute new counsel. Cunningham v. State, 244 Ga. App. 231, 535 S.E.2d 262 (2000).

Continuance for recently hired counsel. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion for a continuance made by recently hired cocounsel minutes before jury selection, particularly given that counsel was assisted at trial by an attorney who had been involved in the case for several months. Burrowes v. State, 296 Ga. App. 629, 675 S.E.2d 518 (2009), overruled on other grounds by McClure v. State, 306 Ga. 856, 834 S.E.2d 96 (2019).

Continuance to obtain presence of absent witness. — It is not an abuse of discretion to refuse to grant a continuance upon the ground of the absence of a witness, if it appears that the absent witness was not subpoenaed, and that the applicant by exercise of due diligence, could have had the witness subpoenaed. Clark v. State, 52 Ga. App. 61, 182 S.E. 195 (1935).

Continuance requested by the defendant in order to obtain the presence at trial of a material witness is properly denied if the defendant has not been diligent in attempting to procure the attendance of the absent witness. Burney v. State, 244 Ga. 33, 257 S.E.2d 543, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 970, 100 S. Ct. 463, 62 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1979).

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance of the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial so that the defendant could produce an alibi witness to testify at that hearing because counsel did not properly serve a subpoena on the alibi witness as email was not a proper means of serving a subpoena, and the defendant made no assertion that the defendant attempted to subpoena the alibi witness as statutorily required. Smith v. State, 308 Ga. 81, 839 S.E.2d 630 (2020).

One hour continuance for state's witness. — In a prosecution for driving under the influence, when at least one of two absent law enforcement witnesses for the state had been issued a subpoena, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting a one-hour postponement due to the absence of the witness. Minicucci v. State, 214 Ga. App. 468, 448 S.E.2d 34 (1994).

Court properly denied a continuance based on the absence of witnesses when it appeared that the defendant did not exercise due diligence in securing the presence of the witnesses. Halthon-Howard v. State, 234 Ga. App. 229, 506 S.E.2d 415 (1998).

In a child molestation case, the trial court properly denied the defendant a continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-22 based on the absence of the defendant's mother overseas; the defendant did not comply with several of the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25, including the materiality requirement, and other witnesses testified that the witnesses saw no improper contact between the defendant and the teenagers involved. Krirat v. State, 286 Ga. App. 650, 649 S.E.2d 786 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1788, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 745 (Ga. 2007).

Continuance to review witness' statements. — That the state had not produced copies of its witnesses' written statements to police, which defense counsel discovered shortly before voir dire, did not oblige the trial court to grant the defendant a continunace, as: (1) the state did not withhold the evidence; (2) the case was recessed so counsel could examine the statements; and (3) the defendant did not show what the defendant would have accomplished if the defendant had been provided more time. Burrowes v. State, 296 Ga. App. 629, 675 S.E.2d 518 (2009), overruled on other grounds by McClure v. State, 306 Ga. 856, 834 S.E.2d 96 (2019).

Continuance request for absent physician denied. — When the defendant's attorney was unable to show the actual existence, much less the identity, of the doctor sought as a witness and was unable to show whether the doctor was within the jurisdiction of the court, and the trial court tried to accommodate the defendant by offering to take a recess at some point in the proceeding so that the attorney could contact another source for any information regarding the other doctor, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the motion for continuance. Payne v. State, 207 Ga. App. 312, 428 S.E.2d 103 (1993), overruled on other grounds, Sims v. State, 266 Ga. 418, 467 S.E.2d 576 (1996).

Witness residing beyond jurisdiction of court. — It is not error to refuse to continue a case in order to procure the testimony of a witness who resides beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Smith v. State, 193 Ga. App. 208, 387 S.E.2d 419 (1989).

Continuance to interview witnesses. — Even though counsel learned of a supplemental list of additional witnesses only the day before trial, denial of a continuance was not an abuse of discretion because the trial court gave counsel the opportunity to interview the witnesses prior to trial. Downs v. State, 240 Ga. App. 740, 524 S.E.2d 786 (1999).

Continuance to obtain expert witness. — Defendant contended that a continuance should have been granted for the defendant to obtain an expert witness; however the defendant failed to show that the defendant could not have obtained an expert to examine the photographs at an earlier date. Strickland v. State, 212 Ga. App. 170, 441 S.E.2d 494 (1994).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's request for a continuance on the ground that an expert witness was not available, and the defendant needed to find another witness because the record did not demand a finding that the defendant exercised diligence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-20 in light of the fact that trial counsel was appointed some months before the trial; the defendant made no showing as to the expert's identity, no proffer of the expected testimony, and no showing of how that testimony would benefit the defendant. Sevostiyanova v. State, 313 Ga. App. 729, 722 S.E.2d 333, cert. denied, No. S12C0968, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 612 (Ga. 2012).

Continuance in child molestation cases. — In a prosecution for child molestation, when the defendant failed to identify a theory under which a prior act of molestation of the victim would be admissible, the court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant a continuance. Gilstrap v. State, 215 Ga. App. 180, 450 S.E.2d 436 (1994).

Late notice of a scientific report. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion for a continuance based on the time remaining before presentation of the state's case and measures taken to permit the defense to prepare for the state's anticipated scientific evidence. Pace v. State, 271 Ga. 829, 524 S.E.2d 490 (1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 890, 121 S. Ct. 101, 148 L. Ed. 2d 60 (2000).

Continuance for expert to test evidence denied. — In the defendant's trial for malice murder and other crimes for stabbing the defendant's domestic partner, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance to allow testing of evidence because the state timely complied with discovery, the DA had an open file policy, counsel had filed a speedy trial request, and the defendant did not show diligence. Phoenix v. State, 304 Ga. 785, 822 S.E.2d 195 (2018).

Application (Cont'd)

Continuance to review officer's personnel file not permitted. — With regard to a defendant's trial for obstruction of a police officer and other related crimes, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a continuance to review the personnel file of the officer involved after defense counsel announced ready as, in response, the trial court reviewed the officer's personnel file in camera and determined that the file did not contain any evidence relevant to the defendant's defense. Whatley v. State, 296 Ga. App. 72, 673 S.E.2d 510 (2009).

Insufficient time for preparation of counsel. — Motion for a continuance predicated on the basis that counsel has not had sufficient time to prepare for trial addresses itself to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and a ruling denying such a motion will not be interfered with unless the judge has abused the judge's discretion in denying the motion. Cantrell v. State, 154 Ga. App. 725, 270 S.E.2d 12 (1980); Snow v. State, 178 Ga. App. 842, 344 S.E.2d 762 (1986).

Motion for continuance for additional time to adequately prepare a defense addresses itself to the discretion of the trial court and the exercise of that discretion will not be disturbed on appeal unless that discretion has been clearly abused. Babb v. State, 157 Ga. App. 757, 278 S.E.2d 495 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Motes v. State, 161 Ga. App. 173, 288 S.E.2d 256 (1982).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance after defense counsel learned that a plea offer would not be accepted; defense counsel claimed that counsel had not had insufficient time to investigate and to prepare the defense, but counsel did not specifically state what else counsel would have done to prepare for trial, other than to set up a trial notebook, which the trial court gave counsel time to do when the court denied the continuance. Jones v. State, 285 Ga. App. 866, 648 S.E.2d 183 (2007).

As the charges against the defendant had been pending for more than two years before trial; defense counsel had early access to both the list of state's witnesses and the autopsy report when it was completed more than ten months prior to trial; and hospital and emergency medical technician reports not contained in the state's file were provided to defense counsel when they were requested, the defendant failed to demonstrate any harm from the denial of a motion for continuance to give counsel more time to examine those reports. Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 394, 677 S.E.2d 71 (2009).

Defendant showed no harm resulting from the trial court's denial of the defendant's motions for a continuance on the ground that the defendant had insufficient time to prepare for trial because the defendant did not identify any additional witnesses or evidence in mitigation that the defendant could have presented had the defendant been granted a continuance; the trial court authorized additional time and funds to enable defense counsel to obtain the assistance of a third attorney, at least three investigators, and a secretary and/or a paralegal devoted to the defendant's case. Loyd v. State, 288 Ga. 481, 705 S.E.2d 616, cert. dismissed, 565 U.S. 971, 132 S. Ct. 474, 181 L. Ed. 2d 309 (U.S. 2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance because the record did not indicate that the state played a role in delaying the production of medical records; the defendant's expert witness testified that the expert had reviewed all of the medical records that the expert had been given, including those produced in preparing for the trial, and while the defendant asserted that a continuance would have afforded trial counsel more time to work with the expert witness to thoroughly prepare cross-examinations of the state's witnesses, the defendant made no showing that trial counsel's cross-examinations were somehow inadequate, nor did the defendant point to any additional challenges or defenses that could have been presented on the defendant's behalf. Eskew v. State, 309 Ga. App. 44, 709 S.E.2d 893 (2011).

Lack of preparedness by counsel. — For case when lack of preparedness did not justify continuance, see Trammell v. State, 183 Ga. 711, 189 S.E. 529 (1937).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-22 in denying the defendant's motion for continuance based on counsel's lack of preparation because, for approximately two months leading up to trial, the defendant did not respond to the defendant's trial counsel's efforts to communicate with the defendant because the defendant wanted other counsel. Priester v. State, 350 Ga. App. 200, 828 S.E.2d 439 (2019).

Sudden withdrawal of counsel. — Neither sudden withdrawal of retained counsel nor lack of preparation of new counsel is ipso facto a ground for continuance. Horton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 407, 208 S.E.2d 186 (1974).

Counsel with scheduling conflict. — Defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel was not violated when the trial court denied the defendant's request for a continuance to allow the defendant to be represented by a lawyer who was scheduled to try another case at the same time as the defendant was represented by an experienced capital defender, familiar with the case, and two other experienced lawyers. McCullough v. State, 304 Ga. 290, 818 S.E.2d 520 (2018).

Time to permit appointed counsel to prepare for trial. — If counsel is appointed by the state to defend the accused, a continuance should be granted to permit preparation for trial. Harris v. State, 119 Ga. 114, 45 S.E. 973 (1903); Cummings v. State, 151 Ga. 593, 107 S.E. 771 (1921).

Counsel unprepared because counsel had been handling other cases. — Trial judge does not abuse the judge's discretion in refusing a continuance when counsel has been employed for two weeks and is unprepared because counsel had been handling other cases. Corbin v. State, 212 Ga. 231, 91 S.E.2d 764, cert. denied, 351 U.S. 987, 76 S. Ct. 1057, 100 L. Ed. 1501 (1956).

Physical beating of counsel. — When a deputy sheriff threatens and beats an attorney representing a defendant and the attorney moves for postponement, and states that due to the beating the attorney is unable to represent the client on that day, the ends of justice require that the motion be granted. Smith v. State, 239 Ga. 477, 238 S.E.2d 116 (1977).

Review of police radio transmissions as justification for continuance. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance of the trial, given that trial counsel had several days to review copies of police radio transmissions before trial, but did not do so, characterizing the transmissions only as a "lead," and hence such did not present a compelling reason for a continuance. Hartley v. State, 283 Ga. App. 388, 641 S.E.2d 607 (2007).

Continuance to obtain transcript denied. — Although the defendant stated that obtaining the trial transcript from the defendant's prior counsel was necessary for an adequate and effective review of the sentencing issues involved, the defendant did not contend or show that the defendant was harmed at the resentencing hearing by the denial of a continuance and not having access to the transcript, and there could be no reversible error when no harm was shown. Levin v. State, 334 Ga. App. 71, 778 S.E.2d 238 (2015).

Practice and Procedure

Continuance because the state had not complied with the misdemeanor discovery statute was properly denied since defendant could not show harm. Christian v. State, 244 Ga. App. 713, 536 S.E.2d 600 (2000).

Party must show record of motion in order to complain of motion's denial. — In order for a party successfully to complain of a ruling which the party contends to have been a denial of a continuance, the party must be able to show a formal and proper motion in the record as the basis of the asserted error. This rule is technically construed. Horton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 407, 208 S.E.2d 186 (1974).

Practice and Procedure (Cont'd)

Motion to obtain access to papers in possession of attorney hired by prosecutrix. — When the defense complains of the overruling of an "omnibus motion" which requested access to unidentified papers allegedly in the possession of an attorney hired by the prosecutrix, and the solicitor (now district attorney) states in the solicitor's place that the solicitor does not want or accept assistance from that attorney, does not know what, if anything, the attorney has in the attorney's file, and makes no use of any papers which that attorney may have, any error in overruling the motion is under these circumstances harmless, and no cause is shown requiring the grant of a continuance. Lancette v. State, 151 Ga. App. 740, 261 S.E.2d 405 (1979).

Possibility of finding evidence of defendant's insanity as grounds for continuance. — Trial judge does not abuse the judge's discretion in refusing to grant a continuance when the only reason offered by counsel is counsel's information and belief that counsel might be able to find evidence to show the defendant insane and no showing is made that the defendant was possibly insane. Harris v. State, 211 Ga. 327, 85 S.E.2d 770 (1955).

Continuance to allow state to obtain mental evaluation and IQ test of defendant proper. — Trial court's grant of an eight-day continuance to the state in a trial for murder and related crimes was proper because the defense counsel retained a psychologist to test and evaluate the defendant with regard to mental retardation, and the continuance was to permit the state to retain the state's own expert to evaluate the defendant's mental state and to administer an IQ test. Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 896, 126 S. Ct. 229, 163 L. Ed. 2d 214 (2005).

Quashing of indictment and issuance of new indictment as grounds for continuance. — When the defendant on the morning of the trial announced ready as to an indictment, and where, during the morning, this indictment was quashed and another returned identical in all respects with the first, except that certain facts were described in technical rather than their colloquial terminology, it is not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny a continuance on the ground that sufficient time has not been granted counsel to examine the new indictment and prepare a defense thereunder. Guinn v. State, 91 Ga. App. 869, 87 S.E.2d 367 (1955).

Cross-examination of defendant on motion. — It is not reversible error to permit the defendant to be cross-examined on the defendant's motion for a continuance. Bell v. State, 36 Ga. App. 111, 135 S.E. 521 (1926).

Change by state in date of alleged commission of crime. — If the state in the indictment changes the date that the alleged offense was committed, thereby destroying the defendant's alibi defense, the defendant is entitled to a continuance affording the defendant sufficient time to prepare a defense to meet the new date. Geckles v. State, 177 Ga. App. 70, 338 S.E.2d 473 (1985).

No continuance required due to absence of counsel when second chair was present. — In the defendant's murder trial, there was no violation of the defendant's right to counsel when the trial court proceeded with trial in the absence of the defendant's lead counsel, who had failed to appear, because the defendant's second chair counsel was in court and representing the defendant, and the defendant did not allege any specific errors in the second chair counsel's representation. Wainwright v. State, 305 Ga. 63, 823 S.E.2d 749 (2019).

Amount of time necessary to prepare case. — There is no fixed rule as to the number of days that should, of right, be allowed counsel for the defendant after counsel's employment or appointment in a criminal case to prepare the case for trial, but the trial judge, in the exercise of the judge's discretion to grant or refuse a continuance, has to consider the facts and circumstances of each case to determine what the ends of justice require. Babb v. State, 157 Ga. App. 757, 278 S.E.2d 495 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Motes v. State, 161 Ga. App. 173, 288 S.E.2d 257 (1982).

Trial court properly denies continuance when party shows lack of diligence. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying continuance of a summary judgment hearing when fault lay in the appellants' lack of diligence in obtaining evidence to oppose the motions, and appellants had done essentially no discovery prior to the hearing. Cole v. Jordan, 158 Ga. App. 200, 279 S.E.2d 497 (1981).

Motion for continuance denied. — Defendant's motion for continuance was properly denied since the defendant presented no evidence regarding the automobile accident or the resulting medical treatment at the time defendant made the motion for continuance. Smalls v. State, 242 Ga. App. 39, 528 S.E.2d 560 (2000).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance to obtain experts because the defendant did not provide details sufficient for the court to assess the need for the witnesses and the delay. Manning v. State, 273 Ga. 744, 545 S.E.2d 914 (2001).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's request for a continuance; pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-22, applications for continuances were addressed to the sound legal discretion of the court, and the defendant failed to show a compelling reason why more time to prepare for trial should have been granted as the trial court granted additional time to prepare for the cross-examination of one witness and additional time to interview supplemental witnesses listed by the state. Gilbert v. State, 259 Ga. App. 371, 577 S.E.2d 35 (2003).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance because, after the defendant's first request for a continuance was denied, the defendant had 13 days to subpoena witnesses or to reconstruct a transcript from the pre-arrest warrant hearing; further, the second application for a continuance was based on speculation about a witness's testimony. Kuykendoll v. State, 278 Ga. App. 369, 629 S.E.2d 32 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motions for continuance. The out-of-state witnesses whose attendance the defendant sought to secure ultimately appeared and testified at trial, and the defendant did not show any reason for the defendant's failure to prepare the witnesses during the lengthy period of time in which the case remained pending, over a year. French v. State, 288 Ga. App. 775, 655 S.E.2d 224 (2007).

Trial court properly denied a defendant a continuance after the defense learned that a witness would testify for the state: because the witness had been named in the indictment, the defendant had notice that the witness might be called by the state; moreover, defense counsel interviewed the witness, thoroughly cross-examined the witness, and impeached the witness. Gassett v. State, 289 Ga. App. 792, 658 S.E.2d 366 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court denied the defendant's motion for a continuance because the state did not call the witness whose identity was not made known to trial counsel until the day before trial, and the defendant was given the opportunity to interview the witness before the trial commenced. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 706, 715 S.E.2d 85 (2011).

Defendant failed to show prejudice as a result of the denial of a motion for a continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-22 as there was no showing that the defense would have benefitted in any way by further questioning of an officer about what the officer did with a particular shirt or the whereabouts of the shirt at the time of trial; accordingly, it was not shown to have been a material piece of evidence that was missing. Williams v. State, 317 Ga. App. 248, 730 S.E.2d 726 (2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a continuance because the defendant failed to present any evidence or testimony at the motion for new trial hearing implicating a different perpetrator nor specifically identified what evidence or witnesses the defendant would have put forth in defense if counsel had been given more time to prepare as speculation and conjecture were not enough. Calhoun v. State, 327 Ga. App. 683, 761 S.E.2d 91 (2014).

Defendant's request for a continuance on the day of trial after the defendant fired a fourth attorney was properly denied because the defendant was offered time to review the victim's medical records, which the discharged attorney had handed to the defendant at the beginning of the proceeding, and the defendant did not explain how more time would have helped; although the defendant argued for a motion for continuance to obtain witnesses, the defendant did not make the required proffer of what the witnesses would testify about or who the witnesses were; and, although the defendant argued for a continuance based on the defendant's mental illness, the defendant pointed to no record evidence supporting the assertion that the defendant was mentally ill. Lewis v. State, 330 Ga. App. 650, 768 S.E.2d 821 (2015).

Practice and Procedure (Cont'd)

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant a continuance because the defendant's attorneys went to jail so that the defendant could listen to the recordings but the defendant not only refused to do so but fired the attorneys and told the attorneys to leave. In addition, counsel testified that counsel had reviewed the recordings and were prepared to address the recordings. Sullins v. State, 350 Ga. App. 83, 828 S.E.2d 142 (2019).

Suicide of witness. — It was not error to deny a motion for continuance in order to allow defense counsel an opportunity to get other witnesses after a potential witness committed suicide since defense counsel failed to show the names of any witnesses who might be obtained and whether or not the witnesses would be subject to subpoena. Wilcoxen v. State, 162 Ga. App. 800, 292 S.E.2d 905 (1982).

Errors in issuing subpoena. — When a witness was under a subpoena that did not specify a date for trial, but obligated the witness to be ready to testify at any time in the indefinite future, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excusing the witness from the requirements of the subpoena and denying the defendant's motion for a continuance to secure the witness's attendance. Clark v. State, 225 Ga. App. 851, 485 S.E.2d 543 (1997).

Appellate Review

Abuse of discretion generally. — Continuances being for the determination of the trial judge in the exercise of the judge's discretion will not be controlled unless manifestly abused. Eberhart v. State, 47 Ga. 598 (1873); Smith v. State, 7 Ga. App. 252, 66 S.E. 556 (1909), later appeal, 7 Ga. App. 802, 68 S.E. 334 (1910); Tucker v. State, 133 Ga. 470, 66 S.E. 250 (1909); Hightower v. State, 9 Ga. App. 236, 70 S.E. 1022 (1911); Tyree v. State, 74 Ga. App. 229, 39 S.E.2d 441 (1946); Manners v. State, 77 Ga. App. 843, 50 S.E.2d 158 (1948); Powell v. State, 85 Ga. App. 208, 68 S.E.2d 177 (1951).

Refusal of a motion to continue will not be reversed unless it is manifest that there has been an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial judge. Anderson v. State, 190 Ga. 455, 9 S.E.2d 642 (1940); McLendon v. State, 205 Ga. 55, 52 S.E.2d 294 (1949); Blackston v. State, 209 Ga. 160, 71 S.E.2d 221 (1952); Butts v. State, 211 Ga. 16, 83 S.E.2d 610 (1954); Harris v. State, 211 Ga. 327, 85 S.E.2d 770 (1955); Anderson v. State, 222 Ga. 561, 150 S.E.2d 638 (1966); McLendon v. State, 123 Ga. App. 290, 180 S.E.2d 567 (1971); Marshall v. State, 239 Ga. 101, 236 S.E.2d 58 (1977); Kelly v. State, 241 Ga. 190, 243 S.E.2d 857 (1978); Callahan v. State, 148 Ga. App. 555, 251 S.E.2d 790 (1978); Felts v. State, 244 Ga. 503, 260 S.E.2d 887 (1979); Howard v. Harn, 163 Ga. App. 771, 295 S.E.2d 349 (1982).

All applications for continuances are addressed to the trial judge's sound discretion, which will not be controlled except for flagrant abuse. Terhune v. State, 117 Ga. App. 59, 159 S.E.2d 291 (1967).

Motions for a continuance are addressed to the discretion of the trial judge and the judge's discretion will not be controlled unless grossly abused. Atkins v. State, 228 Ga. 578, 187 S.E.2d 132 (1972).

Motion for continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court and the refusal to grant a continuance will not be disturbed unless there is a clear abuse of discretion. Young v. State, 237 Ga. 852, 230 S.E.2d 287 (1976), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1123, 106 S. Ct. 1991, 90 L. Ed. 2d 672 (1986).

Granting of a motion for continuance is within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and the Court of Appeals will not interfere unless it is clearly shown that the judge has abused the judge's discretion. Hammonds v. State, 157 Ga. App. 393, 277 S.E.2d 762 (1981).

Grant or denial of a continuance is within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of an abuse of discretion. Wilson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 174, 279 S.E.2d 345 (1981); Hammock v. State, 201 Ga. App. 614, 411 S.E.2d 743, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 903, 411 S.E.2d 743 (1991).

Trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion in denying yet another defense motion for a continuance because the trial court noted that the case had been on the trial docket since August 2016 and the defendant had more than a month to retain any expert that the defense deemed necessary for the defense in the case and otherwise prepare the case for trial. Keller v. State, 308 Ga. 492, 842 S.E.2d 22 (2020).

Appellate courts reluctant to find error in denial because of interests which must be balanced. — Counterbalancing the court's duty to ensure that the defendant is not brought to trial with unnecessary haste and with possible prejudice to the defendant's defense is the obligation to prevent the defendants from trifling with the operation of the trial courts in an attempt to obtain delay or some other perceived advantage. For this reason, the appellate courts will find the denial of requests for continuance to be error only with great reluctance. Williams v. State, 144 Ga. App. 410, 241 S.E.2d 261 (1977).

Review of trial judge's ruling when there is no conflict in the evidence. — Although the discretion of the trial judge will not be controlled unless manifestly abused, when there is no conflict in the evidence, and only legal rules as declared by the laws and the principles of justice stated by the Bill of Rights of the federal and state Constitutions are to be applied, an erroneous application of such rules and principles will be reviewed and corrected. Edwards v. State, 204 Ga. 384, 50 S.E.2d 10 (1948).

Review of denial of continuance based on unpreparedness and inability to use a witness. — Court of Appeals will not interfere with the discretion of the trial judge in refusing to grant a continuance on a motion based generally on two grounds: inadequate time for counsel to prepare for trial; and the inability to use a witness present at the scene of the crime who was accused of participating. Mack v. State, 125 Ga. App. 639, 188 S.E.2d 828 (1972).

Denial of motion upheld. — Trial court did not err in failing to grant a motion for continuance because, several hours prior to the call of the case for trial, defense counsel was served by the state with a supplemental list of witnesses, one of whom, during the trial, defense counsel objected to, when defense counsel had been allowed the opportunity to interview the witness. Saylors v. State, 251 Ga. 735, 309 S.E.2d 796 (1983).

Trial court did not err in denying a request for continuance. See Harrison v. State, 251 Ga. 837, 310 S.E.2d 506 (1984).

Trial court did not err in denying appellant's motion for continuance when appellant was arrested and tried within eight days because denial of a continuance merely because of shortness of time will not reflect an abuse of discretion, and appellant did not show that appellant was prevented from obtaining and producing any witnesses or evidence, nor that the case was complicated and required more time in preparation, or that further delay would have gained the appellant any palpable advantage. Tucker v. State, 172 Ga. App. 86, 321 S.E.2d 817 (1984).

When the basis for a requested continuance was counsel's claim that counsel had insufficient time to show the defendant was either not competent to stand trial or to appreciate the criminal nature of the defendant's alleged acts, but counsel offered only counsel's belief that further investigation would yield supporting evidence, based upon information that the defendant had in the past received drug/psychological counseling in three different cities, there was an insufficient showing of a necessity for a continuance. Lucas v. State, 174 Ga. App. 580, 330 S.E.2d 792 (1985).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

When there is no indication that the continuance would have benefited the defendant, it cannot be said to be necessary. Johnson v. State, 255 Ga. 703, 342 S.E.2d 312 (1986); Martin v. State, 268 Ga. 682, 492 S.E.2d 225 (1997).

When the record did not appear to include the purportedly illegible documents produced and the defendant did not show how those documents would have assisted the defendant in the preparation of the defendant's case and the record does not show that the documents were subject to disclosure under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-210 [repealed] or O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 [repealed], that the documents were provided by the state, or that the state delayed the documents' production in any way; there was no showing of an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court in denying a motion for continuance on this ground. Strickland v. State, 212 Ga. App. 170, 441 S.E.2d 494 (1994).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for trafficking in cocaine, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance, or in the alternative, for a mistrial, which the defendant requested as a remedy for the state's failure to disclose an officer who took the drugs to the crime lab and whose testimony and the admission of a new crime lab report was not provided to the defendant because the officer's name was not previously provided on the state's witness list, in violation of discovery rules. The trial court found that the state apparently did not know about the officer's involvement in the case prior to trial, as the issue was raised during cross-examination of another officer, and the defendant presented no evidence of bad faith, therefore, it was within the trial court's discretion to allow defense counsel the opportunity to talk to the officer before the officer testified as a remedy for the discovery violation as opposed to granting a new trial or a mistrial. Scott v. State, 298 Ga. App. 376, 680 S.E.2d 482 (2009).

Trial court did not deprive the defendant of the defendant's constitutional right to testify because the defendant consulted with the defendant's lawyer and the defendant fully understood the benefits and consequences of testifying; after engaging the defendant in a colloquy about the defendant's right, the trial court gave the defendant a full opportunity to do so, and the defendant voluntarily chose not to testify at that time; and the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant a continuance to the defendant until the next morning as the defendant did not explain to the trial court why a continuance was necessary, and the trial court reasonably could have believed that any delay would have been fruitless. Terrell v. State, 304 Ga. 183, 815 S.E.2d 66 (2018).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the appellant's motion for a continuance based on the state untimely serving a portion of a witness's custodial interview three days prior to trial because the appellant's contention that proper cross-examination questioning was prevented was unsupported by the evidence and the appellant did not present the testimony of any potential witnesses or offer any other evidence to show that any prejudice resulted from the denial of the motion. Easley v. State, 352 Ga. App. 1, 833 S.E.2d 591 (2019).

State's failure to comply with discovery obligations did not necessitate a continuance since the state provided the newly discovered evidence to defendant as soon as practicable, the defendant was given time to interview the witnesses before the witnesses testified, and there was no showing of bad faith on the part of the state of prejudice to the defense. Browner v. State, 265 Ga. App. 788, 595 S.E.2d 610 (2004).

It was not an abuse of discretion to deny the defendant's motion for a continuance as the defendant had twice stated that the defendant was ready for trial and, in lieu of a continuance of the entire trial, the trial court allowed the attorneys to pick a jury and then continue the case until the next morning. Walker v. State, 268 Ga. App. 669, 602 S.E.2d 351 (2004).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 5.

ALR. — Refusal of continuance in criminal trial, asked for on account of occurrences during trial, as abuse of discretion, 5 A.L.R. 914.

Physical condition or conduct of party, his family, friends, or witnesses during trial, tending to arouse sympathy of jury, as ground for continuance or mistrial, 131 A.L.R. 323.

Admissions to prevent continuance sought to secure testimony of absent witness in criminal case, 9 A.L.R.3d 1180.

Withdrawal, discharge, or substitution of counsel in criminal case as ground for continuance, 73 A.L.R.3d 725.

17-8-23. Absence of party as grounds for granting continuance.

If either party is providentially prevented from attending the trial of any case and the counsel of the absent party will state in his place that he cannot go safely to trial without the presence of the absent party, the case shall be continued, provided his continuances are not exhausted.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3453; Code 1868, § 3473; Code 1873, § 3524; Code 1882, § 3524; Civil Code 1895, § 5131; Civil Code 1910, § 5717; Code 1933, § 81-1412.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-154.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Inability of counsel to move for continuance because counsel does not know reason for client's absence. — If counsel, because counsel does not know the reason for the client's absence, is unable to make the requisite formal and proper motion for continuance, the trial judge may assume that the defendant has voluntarily been absent from the trial, thereby waiving the defendant's confrontation rights. Smith v. State, 139 Ga. App. 515, 228 S.E.2d 705 (1976).

Voluntary absence of accused. — When an accused is present at the beginning of the trial, but thereafter voluntarily is absent from the proceeding, the defendant waives the defendant's right to be present at the remainder of the trial. Stell v. State, 210 Ga. App. 662, 436 S.E.2d 806 (1993).

Surety should be allowed to prove that principal is absent because of providential cause. Russell v. State, 45 Ga. 9 (1872).

Court may deny continuance when defendant in poor physical condition. — When the defendant is unable to withstand the rigors of trial because of the defendant's physical condition and it appears that the defendant will not be in better condition at the next trial term, the trial court may properly deny the continuance and proceed with the trial; while it may not fairly be said that the defendant bears any culpability for the illness, neither may it be said that the state has in any way prevented the defendant from appearing and defending oneself. Dasher v. State, 157 Ga. App. 664, 278 S.E.2d 465 (1981).

Cited in Mell v. State, 69 Ga. App. 302, 25 S.E.2d 142 (1943); Hammond v. State, 303 Ga. App. 176, 692 S.E.2d 760 (2010).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 40, 50.

ALR. — Continuance of criminal case because of illness of accused, 66 A.L.R.2d 232.

Sufficiency of showing defendant's "voluntary absence" from trial for purposes of state criminal procedure rules or statutes authorizing continuation of trial notwithstanding such absence, 19 A.L.R.6th 697.

17-8-24. Absence or illness of counsel as grounds for granting continuance.

The illness or absence, from providential cause, of counsel where there is but one, or of the leading counsel where there are more than one, shall be a sufficient ground for continuance, provided that the party making the application will swear that he cannot go safely to trial without the services of the absent counsel, that he expects his services at the next term, and that the application is not made for delay only.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3454; Code 1868, § 3474; Code 1873, § 3525; Code 1882, § 3525; Civil Code 1895, § 5132; Penal Code 1895, § 964; Civil Code 1910, § 5718; Penal Code 1910, § 990; Code 1933, § 81-1413.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-155.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discretion of court. — Granting or refusing a continuance is a matter within the discretion of the trial court, and unless abused, such discretion will not be controlled. Scott v. State, 151 Ga. App. 840, 262 S.E.2d 198 (1979).

Motion for continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and a denial will not be disturbed in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion. Blair v. State, 166 Ga. App. 434, 304 S.E.2d 535 (1983).

Defendant's duty as regards employment of counsel. — It is the defendant's duty to employ counsel to aid in the preparation of a defense in advance of the trial of the case. Scott v. State, 151 Ga. App. 840, 262 S.E.2d 198 (1979).

Strict compliance. — Former Civil Code 1910, § 5717 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-23) must be strictly complied with, especially if counsel other than absent counsel is procured. Curry v. State, 17 Ga. App. 377, 87 S.E. 685 (1915); New v. State, 26 Ga. App. 5, 105 S.E. 50, cert. denied, 26 Ga. App. 801 (1921); Caswell v. State, 27 Ga. App. 78, 107 S.E. 562, cert. denied, 27 Ga. App. 835 (1921).

Strict compliance is required to justify a continuance. Wallis v. State, 137 Ga. App. 457, 224 S.E.2d 91 (1976); Rogers v. State, 167 Ga. App. 322, 306 S.E.2d 393 (1983).

If attorney is neither sole attorney nor lead counsel, O.C.G.A. § 17-8-24 is inapplicable. Putman v. State, 251 Ga. 605, 308 S.E.2d 145 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 954, 104 S. Ct. 2161, 80 L. Ed. 2d 546 (1984).

Cocounsel not covered by section. — While O.C.G.A. § 17-8-24 provides as a ground for a continuance the illness or absence of a party's sole or lead counsel, the statute does not extend to cocounsel. Vining v. State, 195 Ga. App. 816, 395 S.E.2d 17 (1990).

Motion must show the services of absent counsel are expected at the next term. McLendon v. State, 123 Ga. App. 290, 180 S.E.2d 567 (1971).

Verdict not set aside when affidavit filed after conviction. Childs v. State, 18 Ga. App. 782, 90 S.E. 723 (1916).

Sworn statement that continuance is not for delay. — Showing for a continuance on the ground of the absence and illness of leading counsel is not complete without a statement on oath that the application is not made for delay only. Roth v. State, 70 Ga. App. 93, 27 S.E.2d 473 (1943).

There is an absolute requirement that the application must show on oath that the motion is not made for delay. McLendon v. State, 123 Ga. App. 290, 180 S.E.2d 567 (1971).

Absence of counsel. — Continuance based on absence of counsel is not favored. Allen v. State, 10 Ga. 85 (1851); Curry v. State, 17 Ga. App. 377, 87 S.E. 685 (1915); Wallis v. State, 137 Ga. App. 457, 224 S.E.2d 91 (1976); Blair v. State, 166 Ga. App. 434, 304 S.E.2d 535 (1983).

Mere absence alone is not sufficient. Giles v. State, 66 Ga. 344 (1881); Wilson v. State, 6 Ga. App. 16, 64 S.E. 112 (1909).

Absence of counsel is not a favored excuse for not proceeding to trial and excuses of this sort should be discountenanced. Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979).

What constitutes illness. — Illness of counsel contemplated by law is such a physical condition resulting from sickness, ailment, malady, or disease as would prevent counsel from properly attending to counsel's duties as such. Rawlins v. State, 124 Ga. 31, 52 S.E. 1 (1905), aff'd, 201 U.S. 638, 26 S. Ct. 560, 50 L. Ed. 899 (1906); McKenzie v. State, 72 Ga. App. 208, 33 S.E.2d 539 (1945).

Authority to decide whether illness qualifies for continuance. — Counsel is not, under all circumstances, the judge of whether a counsel was merely indisposed, or whether counsel's illness is such as is contemplated in this section for the court is the tribunal vested with the authority to decide from the facts and circumstances of the case as to whether the illness was a legal illness. McKenzie v. State, 72 Ga. App. 208, 33 S.E.2d 539 (1945).

Counsel weary but able to perform to usual ability. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a continuance where the only contention was that the leading counsel was weary but it appeared that he conducted the case with his usual ability. Holland v. State, 9 Ga. App. 831, 72 S.E. 290 (1911).

If counsel is ill when employed, a continuance because of such illness will not be granted. Scott v. State, 151 Ga. App. 840, 262 S.E.2d 198 (1979).

Temporary postponement rather than continuance when illness not expected to be lengthy. — If counsel is ill on the day of trial, counsel is required to seek a temporary postponement, and not a continuance for the term, unless a showing is made that counsel will be ill for a lengthy period. McLendon v. State, 123 Ga. App. 290, 180 S.E.2d 567 (1971).

Withdrawal of counsel or lack of preparation of new counsel. — Neither sudden withdrawal of retained counsel nor lack of preparation of new counsel is ipso facto a ground for continuance. The conduct of the party is obviously relevant and is a proper consideration for the judge in the exercise of the judge's discretion. The reason for this is to prevent a party from using discharge and employment of counsel as a dilatory tactic. Huckaby v. State, 127 Ga. App. 439, 194 S.E.2d 119 (1972).

Absence of counsel through no fault of defendant. — If the defendant has retained counsel who does not appear when the case is called and the defendant is free from fault in the absence, it is an abuse of the trial judge's discretion to refuse a motion for continuance. Wallis v. State, 137 Ga. App. 457, 224 S.E.2d 91 (1976).

Absence of counsel through honest mistake. — Continuance should be granted when the absence of counsel is due to an honest and almost justifiable mistake as to time of holding court. Delk v. State, 100 Ga. 61, 27 S.E. 152 (1896); Johnson v. State, 1 Ga. App. 729, 57 S.E. 1056 (1907).

Action against counsel who is absent through negligence. — When the facts warrant it, appropriate action should be taken against counsel who is absent through negligence. Wallis v. State, 137 Ga. App. 457, 224 S.E.2d 91 (1976).

Attorney's right to appear pro hac vice in criminal prosecution. — An out-of-state lawyer has no property interest cognizable under U.S. Const., amend. 14, which requires automatic recognition of a right to appear pro hac vice in a criminal prosecution. Whitaker v. State, 246 Ga. 163, 269 S.E.2d 436 (1980).

Absence based upon attendance at trial of case pending in another court. — Postponement of the trial of a case on account of the absence of counsel without leave for the purpose of engaging in the trial of a case in another court in another state is in the discretion of the court, but a postponement for such cause is not favored. Keith v. State, 87 Ga. App. 308, 73 S.E.2d 595 (1952).

If defendant and another individual were jointly indicted, both employed the same counsel and on the call of the case elected to sever, and if the employed counsel associated with the local counsel and tried one case with the assistance of such counsel, and leading counsel, at the conclusion of the case, requests a continuance on the ground that it is necessary for counsel to appear in a United States district court the next morning, although associate counsel would be present in the court, it is entirely within the discretion of the court whether to grant the continuance, on terms or otherwise. Keith v. State, 87 Ga. App. 308, 73 S.E.2d 595 (1952).

If absence of counsel is based upon attendance at the trial of a case pending in another court, this furnishes no ground for continuance, especially if competent counsel other than the absent counsel is present in court, and it is not shown that the defendant would be injured by the absence of defendant's leading counsel. Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979).

As to counsel attending cases in Supreme Court or Court of Appeals, see Austin v. State, 160 Ga. 509, 128 S.E. 791 (1925).

Absence of counsel after expiration of leave of absence. — Continuance will not be granted for the absence of counsel after counsel's leave of absence has expired. Robinson v. State, 82 Ga. 535, 9 S.E. 528 (1889).

If it does not appear that the absent counsel had ever been employed or been known before the case, it is an insufficient showing for a continuance. Wise v. State, 34 Ga. 348 (1866).

If competent counsel other than the absent counsel is secured, no continuance will be granted. Curry v. State, 17 Ga. App. 377, 87 S.E. 685 (1915).

This section requires a continuance when a sufficient showing is made. Chivers v. State, 5 Ga. App. 654, 63 S.E. 703 (1909).

Refusal of continuance not error when O.C.G.A. § 17-8-24 not complied with. — If the movant does not comply with the requirements of this section the refusal to grant a continuance is not error. Joiner v. State, 30 Ga. App. 342, 118 S.E. 222 (1923).

If movant complies with this section refusal to grant motion for continuance is error. Thomas v. State, 92 Ga. 1, 18 S.E. 44 (1893).

If none of the statutory requirements necessary for the granting of a continuance were put forth by cocounsel when the case was called, and there has been no showing that the defendant was injured by the absence of the defendant's lead counsel, there was no merit in the complaint that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for continuance because of the absence of counsel and that the defendant had been denied the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel and the defendant's Fifth Amendment right to due process as guaranteed by the state and federal Constitutions. Blair v. State, 166 Ga. App. 434, 304 S.E.2d 535 (1983).

Trial court did not abuse discretion in denying motion for continuance on grounds of attorney's ill health. Kirk v. State, 168 Ga. App. 226, 308 S.E.2d 592 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 133, 311 S.E.2d 821 (1984).

Cited in Bagwell v. State, 56 Ga. 406 (1876); Robinson v. State, 82 Ga. 535, 9 S.E. 528 (1889); Burnett v. State, 87 Ga. 622, 13 S.E. 552 (1891); O'Neal v. State, 29 Ga. App. 51, 113 S.E. 43 (1922); Rogers v. State, 30 Ga. App. 636, 118 S.E. 757 (1923); Austin v. State, 160 Ga. 509, 128 S.E. 791 (1925); Evans v. State, 167 Ga. 261, 145 S.E. 512 (1928); Sams v. State, 162 Ga. App. 118, 290 S.E.2d 321 (1982); King v. State, 238 Ga. App. 575, 519

S.E.2d 500 (1999); King v. State, 242 Ga. App. 642, 530 S.E.2d 744 (2000); Turman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 570, 613 S.E.2d 126 (2005).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 50.

ALR. — Right to continuance because counsel is in attendance at another court, 112 A.L.R. 593.

Sufficiency of showing defendant's "voluntary absence" from trial for purposes of Criminal Procedure Rule 43, authorizing continuance of trial notwithstanding such absence, 141 A.L.R. Fed 569.

17-8-25. Absence of witness as grounds for granting continuance.

In all applications for continuances upon the ground of the absence of a witness, it shall be shown to the court that the witness is absent; that he has been subpoenaed; that he does not reside more than 100 miles from the place of trial by the nearest practical route; that his testimony is material; that the witness is not absent by the permission, directly or indirectly, of the applicant; that the applicant expects he will be able to procure the testimony of the witness at the next term of the court; that the application is not made for the purpose of delay but to enable the applicant to procure the testimony of the absent witness; and the application must state the facts expected to be proved by the absent witness.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3451; Code 1868, § 3471; Code 1873, § 3522; Code 1882, § 3522; Civil Code 1895, § 5129; Penal Code 1895, § 962; Civil Code 1910, § 5715; Penal Code 1910, § 987; Code 1933, § 81-1410; Ga. L. 1959, p. 342, § 1.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-160.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Evidence
Practice and Procedure
Appellate Review

General Consideration

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 not applicable to sentencing hearing. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 is not applicable to the scheduling of the post-verdict nonjury sentencing hearing; rather, the scheduling of this hearing rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. Scott v. State, 216 Ga. App. 692, 455 S.E.2d 609 (1995).

This section imposes requirements that must accompany an application for a continuance. Oliver v. State, 146 Ga. App. 798, 247 S.E.2d 487 (1978).

Former Code 1933, § 81-1410 especially applicable in civil cases. — Former Code 1933, § 81-1410 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 9-10-160 and 17-8-25), which states as one of the requirements for an application for continuance on the ground of absence of a material witness that it must be shown the witness has been subpoenaed, applies especially to civil cases. Waters v. State, 85 Ga. App. 79, 68 S.E.2d 233 (1951).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Requirements of this section are absolute, and failure to comply therewith results in the court's refusal to consider the absence of the witness. McLendon v. State, 123 Ga. App. 290, 180 S.E.2d 567 (1971); Eze v. State, 195 Ga. App. 503, 393 S.E.2d 758 (1990); Knox v. State, 227 Ga. App. 447, 489 S.E.2d 582 (1997).

Each of the statutory requirements must be met before an appellate court may review a trial judge's discretion in denying a motion for continuance based upon the absence of a witness. Brown v. State, 169 Ga. App. 520, 313 S.E.2d 777 (1984); Curry v. State, 177 Ga. App. 609, 340 S.E.2d 250 (1986); Dorsey v. State, 203 Ga. App. 397, 416 S.E.2d 879 (1992); Caver v. State, 215 Ga. App. 711, 452 S.E.2d 515 (1994); Redd v. State, 222 Ga. App. 595, 474 S.E.2d 651 (1996); Choat v. State, 246 Ga. App. 475, 540 S.E.2d 289 (2000), recons. denied, overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Continuances in criminal cases are not governed by the strict rules of civil cases and the motion should be granted whenever the principles of justice appear to demand a postponement. Keller v. State, 128 Ga. App. 129, 195 S.E.2d 767 (1973).

Discretion of court. — In civil and criminal cases alike, there is some discretion upon the part of the trial court, and the reviewing court is limited to the decision merely of whether the decision as made constitutes an abuse of discretion. Keller v. State, 128 Ga. App. 129, 195 S.E.2d 767 (1973).

Absence of material witness overseas. — In a child molestation case, the trial court properly denied the defendant a continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-22 based on the absence of the defendant's mother overseas; the defendant did not comply with several of the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25, including the materiality requirement, and other witnesses testified that the witnesses saw no improper contact between the defendant and the teenagers involved. Krirat v. State, 286 Ga. App. 650, 649 S.E.2d 786 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1788, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 745 (Ga. 2007).

Defendant received constitutionally ineffective assistance of counsel because counsel was deficient in failing to subpoena a defense witness because the defendant was not able to have the trial continued if the defense witness did not appear; the defense witness's testimony would have called into question the credibility of the state's witness as the defense witness told defense counsel that the defense witness saw the state's witness flashing a revolver while looking for the victim to collect on a debt two or three days before the shooting; and defense counsel's deficient performance prejudiced the defendant as the lynchpin of the state's case against the defendant was the credibility of the state's witness. Fisher v. State, 299 Ga. 478, 788 S.E.2d 757 (2016).

Denial of second continuance held proper. — In light of the facts that a defendant had seven months since being incarcerated to establish an alibi defense, that the defendant had previously been granted a continuance for the same reason, and that the defendant had two months from the time of that continuance to identify an alibi witness, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's second motion for a continuance. Matthews v. State, 285 Ga. App. 859, 648 S.E.2d 160 (2007).

If the subpoena appears to be valid, the subpoena is sufficient. Horton v. State, 112 Ga. 27, 37 S.E. 100 (1900).

Denial of motion for failure to make required allegations. — When the defendant establishes that the witness is absent without permission and has been subpoenaed, but fails to establish that the testimony is material and that the defendant would be able to procure that witness for the next term of court and also fails to state the facts expected to be proved by such witness and that the motion is not made for delay, there is no error in denial of the application for continuance. Oliver v. State, 146 Ga. App. 798, 247 S.E.2d 487 (1978).

Denial of the defendant's motion for continuance based upon an absent witness was proper because the defendant failed to show that the witness was subpoenaed, and that the witness resided within 100 miles of the place of trial. Edwards v. State, 224 Ga. App. 332, 480 S.E.2d 246 (1997).

Subpoena insufficient when not alleged not to be for delay. — Showing for a continuance upon the ground of the absence of a witness is insufficient if it omits to state that the application is not made for the purpose of delay. Newsome v. State, 61 Ga. 481 (1878); Buckner v. State, 33 Ga. App. 559, 127 S.E. 154 (1925); Sutton v. State, 70 Ga. App. 499, 28 S.E.2d 663 (1944).

Even if showing is complete in other respects the application must show that the application was not made for purposes of delay. Cobb v. State, 110 Ga. 314, 35 S.E. 178 (1900); Long v. State, 25 Ga. App. 22, 102 S.E. 359, cert. denied, 25 Ga. App. 840 (1920).

Defendant need not testify as to defendant's intention, if it is apparent from the evidence adduced in behalf of the defendant's motion that it is not the defendant's purpose to delay the case but only to procure the attendance of witnesses. Brooks v. State, 3 Ga. App. 458, 60 S.E. 211 (1908).

Not sufficient that subpoena has been sued out for the witness. — It must appear that the witness has been subpoenaed and it is not sufficient that a subpoena has been sued out for the witness. Edwards v. State, 69 Ga. 737 (1882).

Not sufficient that interrogatories exist. Cogswell v. State, 49 Ga. 103 (1873); Kidd v. State, 101 Ga. 528, 28 S.E. 990 (1897); Walker v. State, 118 Ga. 34, 44 S.E. 850 (1903).

Mere showing of absence of subpoenaed material witness insufficient. — Showing that witness was absent, that the witness had been subpoenaed, and that the witness's testimony was material fell short of the requirements in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 for grant of a continuance. Tomlin v. State, 170 Ga. App. 123, 316 S.E.2d 570 (1984).

Refusal to grant continuance based on absence of victim of assault not error. — Trial court did not err in refusing to grant the defendant a continuance based on the absence of the victim because the defendant made no specific showing that the victim's testimony was material, and only speculated that the victim may not have wanted to prosecute the case. Anthony v. State, 276 Ga. App. 107, 622 S.E.2d 450 (2005).

Delay in subpoena of witnesses and failure to allege their expected testimony. — When a defendant, out on bond, knows that a case of the state against the defendant is to be tried during a coming term of court and waits until the day before the trial of the case to subpoena witnesses, and upon a motion made by the defendant for a continuance because of the absence of witnesses makes no showing as to the expected testimony of the witnesses, the trial court does not err in refusing to grant a continuance until the witnesses can be brought in. Harris v. State, 118 Ga. App. 769, 165 S.E.2d 462 (1968).

Delay in subpoena of witnesses. — When the defendant's motion for continuance is based upon the absence of a material witness for whom a subpoena was not issued by the defendant until the morning the trial was to begin and who has not been served therewith at the time the motion was made, there is no error in overruling the motion. Eady v. State, 129 Ga. App. 656, 200 S.E.2d 767 (1973).

Failure to subpoena witnesses. — When error is assigned on grounds of the refusal of the court to grant a continuance because of the absence of defense witnesses, and upon the hearing of the motion it appears that neither witness was under subpoena, the movant has failed to meet an essential requirement of this section, and the Court of Appeals cannot hold that the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the motion. McNabb v. State, 69 Ga. App. 885, 27 S.E.2d 246 (1943).

If the trial court granted the accused at least one previous continuance to secure the same witness, and the accused offered no evidence that the witness was properly subpoenaed, the court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion for continuance. Brandon v. State, 236 Ga. App. 203, 511 S.E.2d 573 (1999).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 were not satisfied when the defendant failed, during a hearing on a motion for a new trial, to call the absent witness who had been claimed as the basis for an application for a continuance. Jackson Gore Inn v. Town of Ludlow, 228 A.3d 643, 2020 Vt. LEXIS 15 (2020).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's request for a continuance due to the absence of a witness as the defendant failed to subpoena the witness. Stevens v. State, 261 Ga. App. 73, 581 S.E.2d 685 (2003).

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance of the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial so that the defendant could produce an alibi witness to testify at that hearing because counsel did not properly serve a subpoena on the alibi witness as email was not a proper means of serving a subpoena, and the defendant made no assertion that the defendant attempted to subpoena the alibi witness as statutorily required. Smith v. State, 308 Ga. 81, 839 S.E.2d 630 (2020).

Witness that had not been subpoenaed. — Trial counsel was deficient on the ground that the defendant's counsel's motion for continuance did not comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 because the witness in question had not been subpoenaed and, thus, counsel could not comply with the statute; the defendant did not show that the trial court's denial of the motion for continuance was reversible error and did not demonstrate ineffective assistance of counsel. Presley v. State, 307 Ga. App. 528, 705 S.E.2d 870 (2011).

Failure to show witness was subpoenaed in the denial of the defendant's motion for continuance, when the defendant failed to show that the witness was subpoenaed, that the witness's testimony would be material, or that appellant knew any facts expected to be proved by the witness. Dorsey v. State, 203 Ga. App. 397, 416 S.E.2d 879 (1992).

Continuance may be refused if witness is inaccessible for next term. Howard v. State, 7 Ga. App. 61, 65 S.E. 1076 (1909); Boyd v. State, 17 Ga. App. 162, 86 S.E. 411 (1915); Luttrell v. State, 176 Ga. App. 508, 336 S.E.2d 369 (1985).

When moving party fails to show that an absent witness' testimony could be expected to be procured at the next term of court, there is no abuse of discretion in refusing to grant a continuance at trial nor any error in denying the movant's motion for a new trial on this ground. Ledford v. State, 173 Ga. App. 474, 326 S.E.2d 834 (1985).

Exceptions to rule that witness not be absent by movant's permission. — An exception to the rule that witness must not be absent by permission of movant exists if the prosecuting solicitor (now district attorney) told the movant that presence of witnesses was not required. Polite v. State, 78 Ga. 347 (1886).

Failure of officer to serve subpoena on witness. — An exception to the requirement that a witness be served is found in former Penal Code 1895, § 961 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-33), which does not require service of a subpoena when a proper officer fails to serve witness within the jurisdiction of the court. Paulk v. State, 5 Ga. App. 567, 63 S.E. 659 (1909), later appeal, 8 Ga. App. 704, 70 S.E. 50 (1911); Hobbs v. State, 8 Ga. App. 53, 68 S.E. 515 (1910).

Failure to serve subpoena on deputy. — Trial court did not err in granting the state's motion for continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-33(a) because, while a subpoena was issued for an absent witness, a former deputy, the sheriff's office failed to serve the subpoena because the former deputy was subpoenaed to appear on the date in a separate case, however, the other case had settled and the former deputy was absent from court. Dowd v. State, 280 Ga. App. 563, 634 S.E.2d 509 (2006).

Continuance denied despite inability to contact state medical examiner. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance on the ground that the defendant had not been able to contact the state medical examiner who conducted the autopsy on the victim. At the time the motion was argued, the defendant knew that the state would not be calling the examiner; moreover, as there was no dispute as to the victim's cause of death, stabbing, the examiner's testimony would not have been material to the defense. Hudson v. State, 284 Ga. 595, 669 S.E.2d 94 (2008).

Cited in Turner v. State, 70 Ga. 765 (1883); Moseley v. State, 74 Ga. 404 (1884); Parker v. State, 74 Ga. 836 (1885); Pyburn v. State, 84 Ga. 193, 10 S.E. 733 (1890); Kennedy v. State, 101 Ga. 559, 28 S.E. 979 (1897); Paulk v. State, 5 Ga. App. 567, 63 S.E. 659 (1909); Hobbs v. State, 8 Ga. App. 53, 68 S.E. 515 (1910); Solomon v. State, 10 Ga. App. 469, 73 S.E. 623 (1912); Dickens v. State, 137 Ga. 523, 73 S.E. 826 (1912); Tolbert v. State, 12 Ga. App. 685, 78 S.E. 131 (1913); Williams v. State, 13 Ga. App. 179, 78 S.E. 1012 (1913); Burnsed v. State, 14 Ga. App. 832, 82 S.E. 595 (1914); Terry v. State, 15 Ga. App. 108, 82 S.E. 635 (1914); Johnson v. State, 16 Ga. App. 287, 85 S.E. 204 (1915); Amerson v. State, 18 Ga. App. 176, 88 S.E. 998 (1916); Fudge v. State, 18 Ga. App. 312, 89 S.E. 374 (1916); Watts v. State, 20 Ga. App. 182, 92 S.E. 966 (1917); James v. State, 23 Ga. App. 534, 98 S.E. 737 (1919); Danzley v. State, 25 Ga. App. 170, 102 S.E. 915 (1920); Williams v. State, 25 Ga. App. 380, 103 S.E. 685 (1920); Teems v. State, 34 Ga. App. 594, 130 S.E. 216 (1925); Evans v. State, 167 Ga. 261, 145 S.E. 512 (1928); Smith v. State, 170 Ga. 234, 152 S.E. 482 (1930); Clarke v. State, 41 Ga. App. 556, 153 S.E. 616 (1930); Wells v. State, 43 Ga. App. 347, 158 S.E. 641 (1931); Whitehead v. State, 43 Ga. App. 401, 158 S.E. 917 (1931); Reese v. State, 44 Ga. App. 251, 161 S.E. 156 (1931); Walker v. State, 52 Ga. App. 108, 182 S.E. 524 (1935); Anderson v. State, 190 Ga. 455, 9 S.E.2d 642 (1940); Orr v. State, 63 Ga. App. 352, 11 S.E.2d 102 (1940); Holley v. State, 191 Ga. 804, 14 S.E.2d 103 (1941); Battey v. State, 65 Ga. App. 748, 16 S.E.2d 441 (1941); Morris v. State, 66 Ga. App. 37, 16 S.E.2d 908 (1941); Woodward v. State, 197 Ga. 60, 28 S.E.2d 480 (1943); Brown v. State, 71 Ga. App. 522, 31 S.E.2d 85 (1944); Nobles v. State, 71 Ga. App. 802, 32 S.E.2d 545 (1944); Hall v. State, 202 Ga. App. 42, 42 S.E.2d 134 (1947); Nelson v. State, 84 Ga. App. 596, 66 S.E.2d 751 (1951); Griffin v. State, 85 Ga. App. 602, 69 S.E.2d 665 (1952); Lyons v. State, 94 Ga. App. 570, 95 S.E.2d 478 (1956); Whitehead v. State, 96 Ga. App. 382, 100 S.E.2d 139 (1957); Scoggins v. State, 98 Ga. App. 360, 106 S.E.2d 39 (1958); Johnson v. State, 215 Ga. 839, 114 S.E.2d 35 (1960); Beasley v. State, 115 Ga. App. 827, 156 S.E.2d 128 (1967); Gravely v. State, 127 Ga. App. 206, 192 S.E.2d 912 (1972); Jones v. State, 232 Ga. 771, 208 S.E.2d 825 (1974); Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 111, 217 S.E.2d 417 (1975); Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 584, 218 S.E.2d 297 (1975); Wilkerson v. State, 139 Ga. App. 725, 229 S.E.2d 529 (1976); Harrison v. State, 140 Ga. App. 296, 231 S.E.2d 809 (1976); Wilcox v. State, 238 Ga. 431, 233 S.E.2d 154 (1977); Holland v. State, 141 Ga. App. 422, 233 S.E.2d 497 (1977); Heard v. State, 141 Ga. App. 666, 234 S.E.2d 83 (1977); Gamarra v. State, 142 Ga. App. 196, 235 S.E.2d 652 (1977); Shaw v. State, 239 Ga. 690, 238 S.E.2d 434 (1977); Chandler v. State, 143 Ga. App. 608, 239 S.E.2d 158 (1977); Fouts v. State, 240 Ga. 39, 239 S.E.2d 366 (1977); Reaves v. State, 146 Ga. App. 409, 246 S.E.2d 427 (1978); Weathers v. State, 147 Ga. App. 64, 248 S.E.2d 21 (1978); Davis v. State, 153 Ga. App. 433, 265 S.E.2d 351 (1980); Gilmore v. State, 154 Ga. App. 429, 268 S.E.2d 693 (1980); Smith v. State, 154 Ga. App. 541, 268 S.E.2d 768 (1980); Gibson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 501, 280 S.E.2d 900 (1981); Wingfield v. State, 159 Ga. App. 69, 282 S.E.2d 713 (1981); Hornsby v. State, 159 Ga. App. 672, 284 S.E.2d 630 (1981); Baxter v. State, 159 Ga. App. 632, 284 S.E.2d 649 (1981); Hester v. State, 159 Ga. App. 642, 284 S.E.2d 659 (1981); Farrell v. State, 160 Ga. App. 321, 287 S.E.2d 318 (1981); Whatley v. State, 162 Ga. App. 106, 290 S.E.2d 316 (1982); Bryant v. State, 164 Ga. App. 543, 298 S.E.2d 272 (1982); Wilkerson v. Turner, 693 F.2d 121 (11th Cir. 1982); Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640 (1983); Brunetti v. State, 176 Ga. App. 184, 335 S.E.2d 414 (1985); Brock v. State, 177 Ga. App. 430, 339 S.E.2d 403 (1986); Hullender v. State, 256 Ga. 86, 344 S.E.2d 207 (1986); Neff v. State, 178 Ga. App. 777, 344 S.E.2d 740 (1986); Moore v. State, 179 Ga. App. 488, 347 S.E.2d 318 (1986); Rhinehart v. State, 181 Ga. App. 507, 352 S.E.2d 823 (1987); Thompkins v. State, 257 Ga. 113, 356

General Consideration (Cont'd)

S.E.2d 207 (1987); McGuire v. State, 185 Ga. App. 233, 363 S.E.2d 850 (1987); Johnson v. State, 185 Ga. App. 475, 364 S.E.2d 609 (1988); Cook v. State, 185 Ga. App. 585, 364 S.E.2d 912 (1988); White v. State, 187 Ga. App. 301, 370 S.E.2d 50 (1988); Medley v. State, 194 Ga. App. 154, 390 S.E.2d 75 (1990); Mills v. State, 198 Ga. App. 527, 402 S.E.2d 123 (1991); Swint v. State, 199 Ga. App. 515, 405 S.E.2d 333 (1991); Pitts v. State, 202 Ga. App. 634, 415 S.E.2d 58 (1992); Riggins v. State, 206 Ga. App. 239, 424 S.E.2d 879 (1992); Bell v. State, 208 Ga. App. 337, 430 S.E.2d 777 (1993); Griggs v. State, 208 Ga. App. 768, 432 S.E.2d 591 (1993); Gay v. State, 220 Ga. App. 78, 467 S.E.2d 383 (1996); Adefenwa v. State, 221 Ga. App. 429, 471 S.E.2d 900 (1996); Pickens v. State, 225 Ga. App. 792, 484 S.E.2d 731 (1997); Hunter v. State, 237 Ga. App. 803, 517 S.E.2d 534 (1999); Bacon v. State, 239 Ga. App. 874, 521 S.E.2d 695 (1999); Couch v. State, 256 Ga. App. 822, 570 S.E.2d 57 (2002); Theophile v. State, 295 Ga. App. 517, 672 S.E.2d 479 (2009); Miller v. State, 351 Ga. App. 757, 833 S.E.2d 142 (2019).

Evidence

Demonstrating reasonable expectation that witness appear. — Defendant who complied with all of the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 except one and demonstrated that the defendant expected the witness to be in court the next day, because officers were to get the witness, should have received a continuance. Miller v. State, 208 Ga. App. 20, 430 S.E.2d 159 (1993).

It was not incumbent upon defense counsel to state with certitude just when the witness would be available to testify. It was enough that defense counsel demonstrated that defense counsel reasonably expected that the witness's presence could be obtained without undue delay. Miller v. State, 208 Ga. App. 20, 430 S.E.2d 159 (1993).

Facts to which the absent witness would testify must appear in the showing for a continuance. The judge is entitled to this information in order that the judge can decide whether the evidence of the absent witness is material and admissible and not blindly accept the statement of defendant's counsel that the evidence of the witness was material and admissible. Mell v. State, 69 Ga. App. 302, 25 S.E.2d 142 (1943).

Fugitive witness. — Witness who failed to appear for the witness's own trial was a fugitive. Accordingly, the codefendant could not have shown that the codefendant expected to be able to procure the witness's testimony at the next term. Roberts v. State, 208 Ga. App. 64, 430 S.E.2d 175 (1993).

Defendant's failure to establish whereabouts of a witness. — When the defendant is unable to establish by any evidence that the defendant would ever be able to obtain the whereabouts of a witness, a trial judge does not abuse the judge's discretion in denying a motion for continuance. Lee v. State, 154 Ga. App. 562, 269 S.E.2d 65 (1980).

Requirement that movant allege how movant expects to procure witness' attendance. — On the hearing of a motion for a continuance, based upon the absence of a material witness for the defense, when the court is authorized to find that the witness is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, that the witness's absence is not temporary, and that the court is powerless to force the witness to attend, although the movant states that the movant expects to have the witness present at the next term of the court, if possible, in these circumstances the motion should go further and state the means whereby the movant expects to procure the witness's attendance, as that the witness has promised to attend, or that the movant has some other ground for the movant's expectation that the witness will attend. Wright v. State, 71 Ga. App. 346, 30 S.E.2d 839 (1944).

Evidence must be material, and not indefinite, or irrelevant. Griffin v. State, 26 Ga. 493 (1858); Wiggins v. State, 84 Ga. 488, 10 S.E. 1089 (1890).

Witness's testimony must not relate to evidence not specifically denied. Teal v. State, 17 Ga. App. 324, 86 S.E. 739 (1915).

Witness's testimony must not be cumulative of testimony of other witnesses who are present. Long v. State, 38 Ga. 491 (1868); Anderson v. State, 72 Ga. 98 (1883); Jones v. State, 125 Ga. 307, 54 S.E. 122 (1906); Blount v. State, 18 Ga. App. 204, 89 S.E. 78 (1916).

Failure to grant a continuance for testimony which is merely cumulative is not reversible error. Gallimore v. State, 166 Ga. App. 601, 305 S.E.2d 164 (1983).

If the missing testimony is cumulative and would not contradict the testimony of the state's witness as to any controlling point, it is not error to refuse a continuance. Grimes v. State, 168 Ga. App. 372, 308 S.E.2d 863 (1983).

Since the defendants presented no fewer than four witnesses who testified that the witnesses had heard the victim state that the victim did not know who had robbed the victim, the defendants' motion for continuance to obtain the presence of an absent witness who would have testified to the same effect or could have been impeached if the witness denied hearing such a statement was properly denied. Daniel v. State, 180 Ga. App. 179, 348 S.E.2d 720 (1986).

Defendant is not entitled to a continuance to obtain the presence of an absent witness when the expected testimony is merely impeaching and cumulative of other testimony in the case. Stafford v. State, 187 Ga. App. 401, 370 S.E.2d 646 (1988).

Practice and Procedure

Absence of sole witness for defense. — Trial court abused the court's discretion by denying the defendant's request for a continuance pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 based on the absence of a subpoenaed witness who was the sole witness for the defense since defendant's counsel stated that after a mistrial had been declared in the first trial, "the witness was excused," since it could not be inferred from the brief statement made by counsel that when the witness was excused, the subpoena's effectiveness was necessarily terminated completely. Teat v. State, 181 Ga. App. 735, 353 S.E.2d 535 (1987).

Absence of witness for state. — It was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to grant a continuance to the state based on the absence of a police officer witness, who was not under subpoena but had been served with a notice, because the officer was prevented from testifying because the officer was placed on administrative leave. Hicks v. State, 221 Ga. App. 735, 472 S.E.2d 474 (1996).

Trial court did not err by excusing the jury after an ex parte conference with the state about a problem with the state's witnesses, because the jury had not been sworn, so no jeopardy attached, the state had shown that absent witnesses were material, the trial resumed one month later, and the defendant was not surprised by the witnesses at trial. Hoke v. State, 326 Ga. App. 71, 755 S.E.2d 876 (2014).

If the missing witness' testimony is solely impeaching and the judgment complained of is authorized by evidence other than the testimony sought to be impeached, it is not an abuse of discretion to refuse the continuance. Grimes v. State, 168 Ga. App. 372, 308 S.E.2d 863 (1983).

When the defendant failed to show that the desired witnesses' testimony could be procured by the next term of court, or what the substance of the witnesses' testimony would be, and because the missing witnesses' testimony was solely impeaching of a similar transaction rather than the offense charged, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying defendant's motion for a continuance; furthermore, the trial court fashioned an alternative procedure that made a report of any contested and offending statements available to defendant while limiting the state's ability to challenge it. Joiner v. State, 265 Ga. App. 395, 593 S.E.2d 936 (2004).

Materiality of testimony. — In order to obtain a continuance for the execution of a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum, the defendant does not have to state facts expected to be proved by an absent witness at trial when the witness' testimony would be material and the witness' whereabouts had only been discovered immediately prior to trial. Jackson v. State, 184 Ga. App. 133, 360 S.E.2d 907 (1987).

Motion properly denied when witness' availability unknown. — When in response to a question from the court as to when a witness injured in an accident would be ready to testify, the defendant's counsel replied, "I don't know", the court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a continuance. Nation v. State, 180 Ga. App. 460, 349 S.E.2d 479 (1986).

Practice and Procedure (Cont'd)

Errors in issuing subpoenas. — When a witness was under a subpoena that did not specify a date for trial, but obligated the witness to be ready to testify at any time in the indefinite future, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excusing the witness from the requirements of the subpoena and denying the defendant's motion for a continuance to secure the witness's attendance. Clark v. State, 225 Ga. App. 851, 485 S.E.2d 543 (1997).

Continuance should have been granted to secure witness's presence. — In a prosecution for driving under the influence, the trial court erred in refusing the defendant's request for a continuance because of the absence of a subpoenaed witness since the witness was the only person who could testify as to the truth of an officer's testimony that the witness told the officer the defendant drove the truck. Arnold v. State, 228 Ga. App. 137, 491 S.E.2d 205 (1997).

Grounds for continuance not met. — When the eight showings listed in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 for applications for continuance on the ground that a witness is absent were not met, the appellate court was unable to review the trial court's exercise of discretion on a motion for continuance. Garland v. State, 242 Ga. App. 19, 528 S.E.2d 550 (2000).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a continuance pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 of a pre-trial hearing on the defendant's motion in limine, seeking to exclude showup identification evidence of the victim and the victim's girlfriend, as their testimony was not material for the purposes of the pre-trial hearing; the eyewitnesses' trial testimony did not require a conclusion that the showup occurred during conditions causing a substantial likelihood of misidentification. Miller v. State, 266 Ga. App. 378, 597 S.E.2d 475 (2004).

At the time of the defendant's trial, the defendant's potential witnesses' appeals were pending and their counsel informed the defendant that, if called as witnesses, the witnesses would assert the witnesses' privilege against self-incrimination. Therefore, the defendant could not satisfy the requirement of showing that the witnesses would be available at the next term of court and, thus, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25. Pope v. State, 266 Ga. App. 658, 598 S.E.2d 48 (2004).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion for a continuance to allow the defendant to further investigate the possibility of an alibi defense because the defendant had made no attempt to show that there was an alibi or how additional time might be of benefit. Holloway v. State, 278 Ga. App. 709, 629 S.E.2d 447 (2006).

There was no abuse of discretion in a trial court's denial of a defendant's continuance motion under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 due to the defendant's inability to locate a homeless man who was a witness to a vehicle accident that formed the basis for the criminal charges against the defendant as the trial court provided the defendant with additional time to attempt to locate the witness, upon the defendant's failure to find the witness the trial court allowed the witness's prior testimony to be read into the record, and upon the location of the witness during the jury's deliberation, the same testimony was proffered from the live witness; further, the defendant had never subpoenaed the witness to appear at trial. Potts v. State, 296 Ga. App. 242, 674 S.E.2d 109 (2009).

Defendant did not meet the requirements for a continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 due to the absence of the defendant's mother because the defendant did not subpoena the defendant's mother. Daniels v. State, 321 Ga. App. 748, 743 S.E.2d 440 (2013).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's request for a continuance based on a witness's absence as there was no evidence a subpoena for the witness existed, counsel conceded that counsel released the witness from the subpoena after the first day of trial, the defendant failed to establish the witness's place of residence or availability by the next term, and the defendant failed to provide the trial court with the facts the defendant expected the witness to prove. Janasik v. State, 323 Ga. App. 545, 746 S.E.2d 208 (2013).

Admission by state of facts expected to be proved by absent witnesses. — When several of the requirements for the motion are absent and when the facts expected to be proved by the witnesses were admitted by the state, the trial judge was clearly right to overrule the motion for a continuance as to this ground. Golden v. State, 76 Ga. App. 851, 47 S.E.2d 513 (1948).

Admissions of defendant, in judicio, of facts inconsistent with those to which the absent witness would testify remove the ground for continuance because the witness's testimony would no longer be material. Fryer v. State, 138 Ga. App. 124, 225 S.E.2d 437 (1976).

It must appear that there are no other witnesses present by whom the same fact could be proved. Hill v. State, 91 Ga. 153, 16 S.E. 976 (1893).

Indefinite, inadmissible, and useless evidence. — When it appears that the evidence would be indefinite, inadmissible, and useless, the court will not grant the continuance. Richter v. State, 4 Ga. App. 274, 61 S.E. 147 (1908).

Motion based on right to benefit of counsel. — If a motion for continuance is based on the defendant's right to benefit of counsel, and cannot be construed as an application for continuance based on the absence of a material witness, the showing required by this section does not apply. Edwards v. State, 204 Ga. 384, 50 S.E.2d 10 (1948).

Testimony at former trial may be shown in counter-showing. Johnson v. State, 65 Ga. 94 (1880).

It may not be shown that the facts to which the witness would testify are not true. Brown v. State, 65 Ga. 332 (1880); Williams v. State, 69 Ga. 11 (1882).

Continuance to secure attendance of medical examiner. — No abuse of discretion resulted from the grant of a continuance to the state based on the absence of the medical examiner, who was a material witness, because the defendant failed to show a show a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-33. Moreover, in granting the prosecutor's motion for a continuance, the trial court noted that the court would do the same for a defendant in similar circumstances. Parker v. State, 282 Ga. 897, 655 S.E.2d 582 (2008).

Appellate Review

No interference with court's discretion unless abused. — Determination of the trial judge in the exercise of the judge's discretion will not be controlled unless manifestly abused. Tyree v. State, 74 Ga. App. 229, 39 S.E.2d 441 (1946).

Motion to continue is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and the appellate court will not interfere unless it is clearly shown that the judge has abused the judge's discretion. Fryer v. State, 138 Ga. App. 124, 225 S.E.2d 437 (1976); Harris v. State, 142 Ga. App. 37, 234 S.E.2d 798 (1977); Alderman v. State, 241 Ga. 496, 246 S.E.2d 642, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1978).

Discretion abused when motion denied despite showing of all prerequisites. — When a criminal defendant moves for a continuance based on a witness' absence, the trial court's discretion is not abused unless the defendant showed the court all of the prerequisites of this section. Watts v. State, 142 Ga. App. 857, 237 S.E.2d 231 (1977).

Motion denial is error. — If the motion complies with all of the requirements of this section, and there is no counter-showing by the state, it is error to refuse to grant the continuance. Frost v. State, 91 Ga. App. 618, 86 S.E.2d 646 (1955).

No appellate review of denial of motion when requirements of section not met. — If defendant's showing for continuance did not meet the requirements of this section, court's overruling of the defendant's motion for continuance was not error. Johnson v. State, 67 Ga. App. 294, 19 S.E.2d 922 (1942).

When it is clearly apparent that some of the requirements of this section have not been met, an appellate court will not review the trial judge's discretion in denying a motion for continuation based on this ground. Smith v. State, 120 Ga. App. 448, 170 S.E.2d 832 (1969).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

Statutory requirements which must be met before appellate courts may review the trial judge's discretion in denying a motion for continuance due to the absence of a witness are enumerated in this section. Grant v. State, 147 Ga. App. 517, 249 S.E.2d 328 (1978).

Each of the requirements set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 must be met before an appellate court may review the exercise of the trial court's discretion in denying a motion for continuance based upon the absence of a witness. Garrett v. State, 202 Ga. App. 463, 414 S.E.2d 693 (1992).

Each of the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25 must be met before an appellate court may review a trial judge's discretion in denying a motion for continuance based upon an absent witness; these statutory requirements exist regardless of whether the state's conduct contributed to the release of witnesses. Vaughan v. State, 210 Ga. App. 381, 436 S.E.2d 19 (1993).

In a murder trial, because the defendant failed to produce evidence regarding what the state's witness would have testified to if the witness had been called back during the defense case, no error was shown. Morris v. State, 303 Ga. 192, 811 S.E.2d 321 (2018).

Denial of motion not abuse of discretion. — When a motion for continuance does not comply with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25, no abuse of the court's discretion in refusing to continue the case because of the absence of witnesses is shown. Corbin v. State, 212 Ga. 231, 91 S.E.2d 764, cert. denied, 351 U.S. 987, 76 S. Ct. 1057, 100 L. Ed. 1501 (1956); Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585 (1975); Atwater v. State, 233 Ga. App. 339, 503 S.E.2d 919 (1998).

If the moving party fails to make a proper showing of the requirements set forth in this section, the denial of a continuance motion cannot be said to be an abuse of discretion. Keller v. State, 128 Ga. App. 129, 195 S.E.2d 767 (1973); Harris v. State, 142 Ga. App. 37, 234 S.E.2d 798 (1977); Alderman v. State, 241 Ga. 496, 246 S.E.2d 642 (1978); Apgar v. State, 159 Ga. App. 752, 285 S.E.2d 89 (1981).

Denial of a motion for continuance is not an abuse of discretion when the state has stipulated as to the testimony of absent witnesses even though the truthfulness thereof is not conceded. Keller v. State, 128 Ga. App. 129, 195 S.E.2d 767 (1973).

Defendant was not entitled to a continuance after the state gave notice of the state's intent to present evidence that the crimes occurred in 1996, instead of 1995, because the dates in the indictment were not a material element of the crimes with which the defendant was charged and the defendant was not alleging an alibi defense; thus, the appeals court found that the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion seeking a continuance. Heath v. State, 269 Ga. App. 872, 605 S.E.2d 427 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's request for a continuance to secure the transporting officer's testimony because the defendant failed to meet several of the requirements delineated in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25, including showing that the transporting officer resided within 100 miles of the place of trial and that the defendant could procure the officer's testimony at the next term of court. Lafavor v. State, 334 Ga. App. 125, 778 S.E.2d 377 (2015).

Grant of continuance proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion as a matter of law in granting a continuance in the absence of a witness subpoena; further, a trial court had the authority to grant a continuance under the court's general power to serve the principles of justice. Carraway v. State, 263 Ga. App. 151, 587 S.E.2d 152 (2003).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by allowing a continuance in order to allow the state to procure the attendance of a material witness with regard to a defendant's trial for trafficking marijuana and the fact that the continuance was granted ex parte did not change that result nor give the state an advantage over the defendant. Mora v. State, 292 Ga. App. 860, 666 S.E.2d 412 (2008).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 59.

ALR. — Right to continuance to procure witness to alibi, 41 A.L.R. 1530.

Right of accused to continuance because of absence of witness who is fugitive from justice, 42 A.L.R.2d 1229.

Admissions to prevent continuance sought to secure testimony of absent witness in criminal case, 9 A.L.R.3d 1180.

17-8-26. Party or party's attorney in attendance at General Assembly as grounds for granting continuance.

(a) A member of the General Assembly who is a party to or the attorney for a party to a case; any member of the Office of Legislative Counsel, including the legislative counsel and persons provided for under subsection (d) of Code Section 28-4-3, appearing on behalf of the General Assembly in a case; or any member of the staff of the Lieutenant Governor, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, or the chairperson of the Judiciary Committee or Special Judiciary Committee of the Senate or of the Judiciary Committee or Judiciary, Non-civil Committee of the House of Representatives who is the lead counsel for a party to a case pending in any trial or appellate court or before any administrative agency of this state shall be granted a continuance and stay of the case. The continuance and stay shall apply to all aspects of the case, including, but not limited to, the filing and serving of an answer to a complaint, the making of any discovery or motion, or of any response to any subpoena, discovery, or motion, and appearance at any hearing, trial, or argument. Unless a shorter length of time is requested by the member, the continuance and stay shall last for the seven days prior to the regular or extraordinary session of the General Assembly; the length of any regular or extraordinary session of the General Assembly; during the first three weeks following any recess or adjournment, including an adjournment sine die of any regular or extraordinary session; and the entirety of any day during the calendar year on which a legislative committee for which the member serves or is staff holds a scheduled meeting. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, rule of court, or administrative rule or regulation, and to the extent permitted by the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of Georgia, the time for doing any act in the case which is delayed by the continuance or stay provided by this Code section shall be automatically extended by the same length of time as the continuance or stay covered.

(b)(1) For such other times not provided for in subsection (a) of this Code section, a member of the General Assembly who is a party to a case or the lead counsel for a party to a case may request a continuance and stay for such other times as the member of the General Assembly certifies to the court that his or her presence elsewhere is required by his or her duties with the General Assembly. The certification by the member of the General Assembly shall be in writing and shall state with particularity the nature of the General Assembly duties that require the continuance or stay. Opposing counsel, any person who is alleged in the case by the state to be a victim, or the court on its own motion shall have ten days from receipt of the request for a continuance or stay to object to the request by stating with particularity the grounds upon which it is determined that such stay or continuance will cause significant harm to the rights of a party or would otherwise be detrimental to the interest of justice. The court upon receipt of the objection, or on its own motion, shall consider the following in determining whether to grant or deny the continuance or stay:

(A) The length of time that the case has been pending;

(B) The length of delay that such stay or continuance will cause in the resolution of the case;

(C) The nature of the General Assembly duties that require the continuance or stay; and

(D) Such other factors that the court determines to be relevant in determining the harm to the rights of the parties or the interest of justice in the granting or denial of the request for a continuance or stay.

(2) Absent a ruling by the court denying the continuance or stay certified by the member under paragraph (1) of this subsection, such continuance or stay shall be considered granted as a matter of law.

History. — Ga. L. 1905, p. 93, § 1; Civil Code 1910, § 5711; Code 1933, § 81-1402; Ga. L. 1977, p. 760, § 1; Ga. L. 1983, p. 675, § 1; Ga. L. 1996, p. 112, § 2; Ga. L. 2002, p. 403, § 2; Ga. L. 2006, p. 752, § 3/SB 503; Ga. L. 2019, p. 777, § 3/HB 502.

The 2019 amendment, effective May 7, 2019, substituted the present provisions of this Code section for the former provisions, which read: "(a) A member of the General Assembly who is a party to or the attorney for a party to a case which is pending in any trial or appellate court or before any administrative agency of this state shall be granted a continuance and stay of the case. The continuance and stay shall apply to all aspects of the case, including, but not limited to, the filing and serving of an answer to a complaint, the making of any discovery or motion, or of any response to any subpoena, discovery, or motion, and appearance at any hearing, pretrial appearance, arraignment, plea or motion calendar, trial, or argument. When a case, motion, hearing, or argument is called and is subject to a continuance or stay under this Code section due to the party's attorney's membership in the General Assembly, the party shall not be required to be present at the call of the case, motion, hearing, or argument. Unless a shorter length of time is requested by the member, the continuance and stay shall last the length of any regular or extraordinary session of the General Assembly and during the first three weeks following any recess or adjournment, including an adjournment sine die of any regular or extraordinary session. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, rule of court, or administrative rule or regulation, and to the extent permitted by the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of Georgia, the time for doing any act in the case which is delayed by the continuance or stay provided by this Code section shall be automatically extended by the same length of time as the continuance or stay covered.

"(b) A continuance and stay shall also be granted for such other times as the member of the General Assembly or staff member certifies to the court that his or her presence elsewhere is required by his or her duties with the General Assembly." See Editor's note for applicability.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-150.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2019, a period was substituted for a comma at the end of the third sentence of subsection (a).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2019, p. 777, § 5/HB 502, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall apply to all civil and criminal cases, including, but not limited to, any case currently initiated within any court in this state."

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 43, 52.

ALR. — Counsel's absence because of attendance on Legislature, as ground for continuance, 49 A.L.R.2d 1073.

17-8-27. Attorney General in attendance at General Assembly as grounds for granting continuance.

When any case pending in the courts of this state in which the Attorney General is of counsel is scheduled to be called for any reason during sessions of the General Assembly or during a period of 15 days preceding or following sessions of the General Assembly, on motion of the Attorney General or an assistant attorney general, it shall be a good ground for continuance that the Attorney General and his staff are occupied in aid of the business of the General Assembly.

History. — Ga. L. 1956, p. 700, § 1; Ga. L. 2019, p. 777, § 4/HB 502.

The 2019 amendment, effective May 7, 2019, substituted "reason" for "purpose" near the middle of this Code section. See Editor's note for applicability.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-156.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2019, p. 777, § 5/HB 502, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall apply to all civil and criminal cases, including, but not limited to, any case currently initiated within any court in this state."

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 52.

17-8-28. Witness in attendance at General Assembly as grounds for granting continuance.

(a) Any person summoned to serve as a witness in a criminal case shall be excused by the judge from attendance at the court by reason of his attendance as a legislator at the General Assembly.

(b) In all criminal cases, it shall be the duty of the presiding judge, on motion of either the state or the defendant, to continue the case when it appears that a material witness is absent from the court by reason of his attendance at the General Assembly.

History. — Ga. L. 1905, p. 93, § 3; Civil Code 1910, § 5712; Penal Code 1910, § 988; Code 1933, §§ 27-2003, 81-1407.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-159.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 59.
ALR. — Right to continuance to procure witness to alibi, 41 A.L.R. 1530.

17-8-29. Party or party's counsel in attendance at meeting of Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia as grounds for granting continuance.

Should any member of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia or any member of the State Board of Education be engaged at the time of any meeting of the board as counsel or party in any case pending in the courts of this state and should the case be called for trial during the regular session of the board, the member's absence from attending the session shall be good ground for a postponement or continuance of the case until the session of the board has ended.

History. — Ga. L. 1931, p. 7, § 56; Code 1933, § 81-1404; Ga. L. 1985, p. 1406, § 2; Ga. L. 1997, p. 143, § 17.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-151.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 43, 52.

17-8-30. Party or party's counsel in attendance at meeting of Board of Human Services or Board of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities as grounds for granting continuance.

Should any member of the Board of Human Services or the Board of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities be engaged at the time of any meeting of the board as counsel or party in any case pending in the courts of this state and should the case be called for trial during the regular session of the board, the absence of the member to attend the session shall be good ground for a postponement or a continuance of the case until the session of the board has ended.

History. — Ga. L. 1933, p. 7, § 1; Code 1933, § 81-1405; Ga. L. 2009, p. 453, § 2-3/HB 228; Ga. L. 2010, p. 286, § 13/SB 244.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-152.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 43, 52.

17-8-31. Party, leading attorney, or material witness in attendance on active duty as member of National Guard or component of armed forces of the United States as grounds for granting continuance; setting bail in certain cases.

(a) It shall be the duty of any judge of the courts of this state to continue any case in the court on or without motion when any party thereto or his or her leading attorney is absent from court when the case is reached by reason of his or her attendance on active duty as a member of the National Guard or a reserve or active component of the armed forces of the United States. The case may proceed if the party, in the absence of his or her leading attorney, or the leading attorney, in the absence of the party, announces ready for trial on the call of the case. If counsel is absent, it shall be necessary for his or her client to make oath that he or she cannot safely go to trial without the absent attorney and, if a party is absent, his or her counsel shall state in his or her place that he or she cannot safely go to trial without the client.

(b) It shall be the duty of any judge of the courts of this state to continue any case in the court upon a showing by the state or the defendant that a material and necessary witness is unavailable by reason of being on active duty as a member of the National Guard or as a member of a reserve or active component of the armed forces of the United States.

(c) In cases in which a demand for speedy trial has been filed in accordance with Code Section 17-7-170 or 17-7-171, the court shall grant the continuance if the party moving for a continuance pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section establishes by testimony, affidavits, or other evidence that:

(1) The witness is material and necessary;

(2) The witness is located outside the territorial limits of the state;

(3) The party has submitted a request to the proper military authorities for the testimony of the witness in accordance with Section 301 of Title 5 of the United States Code and federal regulations or directives issued by the armed forces pursuant thereto; and

(4) The witness will not be available within the time limits prescribed by Code Section 17-7-170 or 17-7-171.

This continuance shall toll the running of the demand for speedy trial and shall continue the trial until the witness is released from active duty or the military makes the witness available to testify. If the witness only becomes available to testify within the last two weeks of the term of court in which the case must be tried, the case may be tried at the next succeeding term of court.

(d) In any case in which the court grants the state a continuance pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section, the defendant shall have bail set upon application to the court, except in those cases punishable by death or imprisonment for life without parole. In any case in which the defendant is accused of committing a serious violent felony, as defined by subsection (a) of Code Section 17-10-6.1, the court shall consider but shall not be required to set bail.

History. — Ga. L. 1925, p. 149, § 1; Code 1933, § 81-1406; Ga. L. 2003, p. 154, § 4; Ga. L. 2004, p. 631, § 17; Ga. L. 2006, p. 893, § 5/HB 1421.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-153.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170. — While the trial court was authorized to conclude that the "lead officer" in the prosecution against the defendant was a material and necessary witness who was unavailable for 14 months while the defendant's case was pending, and thus a continuance during that period was proper under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-31, despite the fact that no explanation was given for the remainder of the delay, given that the defendant failed to prove any of the other Barker v. Wingo factors in determining whether a speedy trial violation occurred, the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on speedy trial grounds was properly denied. Bell v. State, 287 Ga. App. 300, 651 S.E.2d 218 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0031, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 811 (Ga. 2007).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 43, 52.

ALR. — Appealability of order granting or refusing stay or continuance under Federal Civil Relief Act because of litigant's military service, 34 A.L.R.2d 1149.

Effect of war on litigation pending at the time of its outbreak, 137 A.L.R. 1335; 147 A.L.R. 1298; 148 A.L.R. 1384; 149 A.L.R. 1451; 149 A.L.R. 1452; 150 A.L.R. 1417; 150 A.L.R. 1418; 151 A.L.R. 1453; 152 A.L.R. 1450; 154 A.L.R. 1447.

Validity and construction of war legislation in nature of moratory statute, 147 A.L.R. 1311; 148 A.L.R. 1388; 149 A.L.R. 1457; 150 A.L.R. 1400; 150 A.L.R. 1420; 151 A.L.R. 1456; 152 A.L.R. 1452; 153 A.L.R. 1422; 154 A.L.R. 1448; 155 A.L.R. 1452; 156 A.L.R. 1450; 157 A.L.R. 1450; 158 A.L.R. 1450.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Acts, 147 A.L.R. 1366; 148 A.L.R. 1395; 149 A.L.R. 1463; 150 A.L.R. 1428; 151 A.L.R. 1460; 152 A.L.R. 1457; 153 A.L.R. 1429; 154 A.L.R. 1455; 155 A.L.R. 1456; 156 A.L.R. 1455; 157 A.L.R. 1454; 158 A.L.R. 1456; 35 A.L.R. Fed. 649.

17-8-32. Effect of admission by opposing party of facts to be proved upon allowance of continuance.

No continuance shall be allowed in any court on account of the absence of a witness or for the purpose of procuring testimony when the opposite party is willing to admit, and does not contest the truth of, the facts expected to be proved; and the court shall order such admission to be reduced to writing.

History. — Ga. L. 1853-54, p. 52, § 1; Code 1863, § 3452; Code 1868, § 3472; Code 1873, § 3523; Code 1882, § 3523; Civil Code 1895, § 5130; Penal Code 1895, § 963; Civil Code 1910, § 5716; Penal Code 1910, § 989; Code 1933, § 81-1411.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-161.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Denying continuance when prosecuting officer admits facts to which witness would testify. — If the prosecuting officer admits the truth of facts to which it is claimed absent witnesses would testify, it is not error to overrule a motion for a continuance based on the absence of such witnesses. May v. State, 185 Ga. 335, 195 S.E. 196 (1938).

Notes of trial judge may show admission. Morgan v. State, 120 Ga. 499, 48 S.E. 238 (1904).

Cited in Pannell v. State, 29 Ga. 681 (1859); Delk v. State, 99 Ga. 667, 26 S.E. 752 (1896); Watson v. State, 118 Ga. 66, 44 S.E. 803 (1903); Reese v. State, 44 Ga. App. 251, 161 S.E. 156 (1931).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 67, 69.

ALR. — Admissions to prevent continuance sought to secure testimony of absent witness in criminal case, 9 A.L.R.3d 1180.

17-8-33. Granting of continuances where indictment found or accusation made; continuance where material witness unavailable; continuances required by principles of justice; granting of continuance where postponement possible to later date in term.

(a) Every person against whom a true bill of indictment is found or an accusation is made shall be tried at the term of the court at which the indictment is found or the accusation is made unless the absence of a material witness or the principles of justice should require a continuance of the case, in which case the court shall allow a continuance until the next term of the court. The court shall have power to allow the continuance of criminal cases from term to term, as often as the principles of justice may require, upon sufficient cause shown under oath.

(b) No continuance shall be granted over the objection of the adverse party in any court which has a continuous session for 30 days or more where the cause for the continuance can be obviated by a postponement to a later day during the term. Whenever a motion and a proper showing for a continuance is made by either party, the presiding judge, at any time, shall set the case down for a later day during the same term if it shall be practicable thereby to avoid a continuance of the case until the next term.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 835; Code 1863, § 4533; Code 1868, § 4553; Code 1873, § 4647; Code 1882, § 4647; Ga. L. 1893, p. 56, § 1; Penal Code 1895, § 961; Penal Code 1910, § 986; Code 1933, § 27-2002.

Law reviews. — For comment on Cannady v. State, 190 Ga. 227, 9 S.E.2d 241 (1940), see 3 Ga. B.J. 55 (1940).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Witnesses
Preparation for Trial
Practice and Procedure
Appellate Review

General Consideration

Continuances in criminal cases are not governed by the same rule as in civil cases. Hobbs v. State, 8 Ga. App. 53, 68 S.E. 515 (1910).

For continuance as waiver of demand for trial, see Campbell v. State, 6 Ga. App. 539, 65 S.E. 307 (1909).

Formal and proper motion in the record must be shown. — Continuance not granted in absence of proper motion. Boggus v. State, 34 Ga. 275 (1866); Ray v. State, 91 Ga. 87, 16 S.E. 311 (1892); Pressley v. State, 132 Ga. 64, 63 S.E. 784 (1909).

In order for a party successfully to complain of a ruling which the party contends to have been a denial of a continuance, the party must be able to show a formal and proper motion in the record as the basis of the asserted error, and this rule is technically construed. Horton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 407, 208 S.E.2d 186 (1974).

Motion is addressed to court's sound discretion. — Motion for continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Pulliam v. State, 236 Ga. 460, 224 S.E.2d 8, cert. denied, 428 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 3225, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1219 (1976); Bunge v. State, 149 Ga. App. 712, 256 S.E.2d 23 (1979).

Motions for a continuance predicated on the basis that counsel had insufficient time to prepare for trial address themselves to the sound discretion of the trial court, and the trial court's ruling will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. Nave v. State, 171 Ga. App. 165, 318 S.E.2d 753 (1984).

It was not error to grant a continuance ex parte, particularly when the court held a full hearing on the motion the following morning. The grant or denial of a motion for continuance is within the sole discretion of the trial judge, and absent a showing that such discretion was abused, it will not be controlled. Campbell v. State, 181 Ga. App. 790, 354 S.E.2d 10 (1987).

Grant or denial of a continuance is within the court's discretion. Plemons v. State, 155 Ga. App. 447, 270 S.E.2d 836 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Barnes v. State, 157 Ga. App. 582, 277 S.E.2d 916 (1981).

Grant or denial of a continuance to a criminal defendant is in the sound discretion of the court, especially when the defendant is in jail. Gann v. State, 166 Ga. App. 172, 303 S.E.2d 510 (1983).

Circumstances are to be considered. — Every application for a continuance should be heard and determined according to the application's circumstances. Roberts v. Moore, 27 Ga. 411 (1859); Frain v. State, 40 Ga. 529 (1869).

Sufficiency of time for preparation depends on facts and circumstances. — Whether or not a reversal is to be adjudged because counsel was not allowed sufficient time to prepare the case for trial is to be determined by the particular facts and circumstances of each case. Carnes v. State, 115 Ga. App. 387, 154 S.E.2d 781, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 928, 88 S. Ct. 287, 19 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1967).

Question of whether speedy trial denied depends on facts and circumstances. — Whether a defendant has been denied a speedy trial is not merely a matter of time, but depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Newman v. State, 121 Ga. App. 692, 175 S.E.2d 144 (1970).

Distinction in treatment of motions made at term in which indictment found and at subsequent terms. — Motions for continuance, made at the term at which the indictment is found, while addressed to the discretion of the court, stand upon a different footing from such motions made at a subsequent term. In such cases, the discretion of the court should be liberally exercised in favor of a fair trial, no less than that the trial should be speedy, and every facility should be afforded a defendant for presenting a defense as fully as the defendant might be able to do, were the case tried at a subsequent term. Reasonable opportunity for the defendant to prepare a defense should not be sacrificed in the interest of speed. Waters v. State, 62 Ga. App. 720, 9 S.E.2d 716 (1940).

Motion not made nor testimony offered as to motion's necessity. — When no motion for continuance is made, nor is testimony offered under oath as to the motion's necessity, a new trial will not be granted for the failure to grant a continuance. Beavers v. State, 132 Ga. App. 94, 207 S.E.2d 550 (1974).

Oath of sufficient cause needed for continuance. — Request for continuance must be supported by a showing on oath of sufficient cause that the principles of justice require a continuance of the case. Taylor v. City of Griffin, 113 Ga. App. 589, 149 S.E.2d 177 (1966), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 1016, 87 S. Ct. 733, 17 L. Ed. 2d 552 (1967).

Good reason given for continuance. — If a good reason is shown as to why the party is not prepared to go to trial, a continuance should be granted. Parker v. State, 81 Ga. 332, 6 S.E. 600 (1888).

If no reason given for granting continuance, denial will not be reversed. — When it does not appear that any reason was stated to the trial court why the court should not then proceed with the trial of the case, the judgment of the trial court in denying a requested continuance will not be reversed. Taylor v. City of Griffin, 113 Ga. App. 589, 149 S.E.2d 177 (1966), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 1016, 87 S. Ct. 733, 17 L. Ed. 2d 552 (1967).

Amendments alone do not entitle opposite party to a continuance. Myrick v. State, 13 Ga. 190 (1853).

No continuance for something easily anticipated. — Continuance should not be granted for something that might reasonably have been anticipated. King v. State, 21 Ga. 220 (1857).

Prejudicial acts or statements of presiding judge. — That an act or statement of the presiding judge may be prejudicial to a defendant about to be placed on trial is not a legal ground of a motion for a continuance. Smith v. State, 7 Ga. App. 252, 66 S.E. 556 (1909).

Cited in Whitley v. State, 38 Ga. 50 (1868); Harvey v. State, 67 Ga. 639 (1881); Blackman v. State, 76 Ga. 288 (1886); Barrow v. State, 121 Ga. 187, 48 S.E. 950 (1904); Brooks v. State, 3 Ga. App. 458, 60 S.E. 211 (1908); Howell v. State, 5 Ga. App. 186, 62 S.E. 1000 (1908); Haines v. State, 8 Ga. App. 627, 70 S.E. 84 (1911); Trammell v. State, 183 Ga. 711, 189 S.E. 529 (1937); Holley v. State, 191 Ga. 804, 14 S.E.2d 103 (1941); Williams v. State, 192 Ga. 247, 15 S.E.2d 219 (1941); Woodward v. State, 197 Ga. 60, 28 S.E.2d 480 (1943); Akridge v. State, 85 Ga. App. 117, 68 S.E.2d 168 (1951); Waters v. State, 85 Ga. App. 79, 68 S.E.2d 233 (1951); Cartee v. State, 85 Ga. App. 532, 69 S.E.2d 827 (1952); Johnson v. State, 215 Ga. 839, 114 S.E.2d 35 (1960); Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 413, 148 S.E.2d 192 (1966); Butler v. State, 126 Ga. App. 22, 189 S.E.2d 870 (1972); State v. King, 137 Ga. App. 26, 222 S.E.2d 859 (1975); Gaines v. State, 142 Ga. App. 181, 235 S.E.2d 640 (1977); Lewis v. State, 239 Ga. 732, 238 S.E.2d 892 (1977); Garner v. State, 159 Ga. App. 244, 282 S.E.2d 909 (1981); Wiley v. State, 250 Ga. 343, 296 S.E.2d 714 (1982); Hampton v. State, 250 Ga. 805, 301 S.E.2d 274 (1983); Blair v. State, 166 Ga. App. 434, 304 S.E.2d 535 (1983); Mora v. State, 292 Ga. App. 860, 666 S.E.2d 412 (2008).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Witnesses

Facts to which the absent witness would have testified must appear. — Judge is entitled to this information in order that the judge can decide whether the evidence of the absent witness is material and admissible and not blindly accept the statement of the defendant's counsel that the evidence of the witness was material and admissible. Mell v. State, 69 Ga. App. 302, 25 S.E.2d 142 (1943).

Defendant should state how defendant expects to procure attendance of absent witness. — On the hearing of a motion for a continuance based upon the absence of a material witness for the defense, if the court is authorized to find that the witness was beyond the jurisdiction of the court, that the witness's absence was not temporary, and that the court was powerless to force the witness to attend, although the movant did state that the movant expected to have the witness present at the next term of the court, if possible, in these circumstances the motion should have gone further and stated the means whereby the movant expected to procure the witness's attendance, as that the witness had promised to attend, or that the movant had some other ground for the movant's expectation that the witness would attend. Wright v. State, 71 Ga. App. 346, 30 S.E.2d 839 (1944).

Testimony by another as to matters to which absent witness was to testify. — There is no abuse of discretion in overruling a motion for continuance because of the absence of witnesses to prove the good character of the accused since it was shown that there was at least one other witness who was present at the trial by whom the defendant could establish character. Stevens v. State, 49 Ga. App. 248, 174 S.E. 718 (1934).

Denial of a continuance on account of absence of a witness is not reversible error if another witness testifies to the facts to which the absent witness was expected to testify. Johnson v. State, 72 Ga. App. 534, 34 S.E.2d 555 (1945).

If witness makes an unexpected statement which defendant knows is false, the party surprised should move for a continuance. Sanders v. State, 7 Ga. App. 603, 67 S.E. 696 (1910).

Defendant testifying that the defendant does not need absent witness' testimony. — Court does not abuse the court's discretion in refusing a continuance to the defendant on the ground of the absence of a witness if the defendant testifies that the defendant does not need such testimony, and it does not appear where and when the witness can be located. Mims v. State, 188 Ga. 702, 4 S.E.2d 831 (1939).

Illness of a relative, not a necessary party to the case, is not ground for continuance. Williams v. State, 180 Ga. 595, 180 S.E. 101 (1935).

Failure of district attorney's office to produce witness. — When the district attorney's office assumes the onus of producing a witness and fails to do so, it in effect testifies to the court that the witness' appearance would hurt rather than help the defendant's case. Cox v. State, 147 Ga. App. 743, 250 S.E.2d 193 (1978).

Absence of witness for state. — It was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to grant a continuance to the state based on the absence of a police officer witness, who was not under subpoena but had been served with a notice since the officer was prevented from testifying because the officer was placed on administrative leave. Hicks v. State, 221 Ga. App. 735, 472 S.E.2d 474 (1996).

Trial court did not err in granting the state's motion for continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-33(a) because, while a subpoena was issued for an absent witness, a former deputy, the sheriff's office failed to serve the subpoena, because the former deputy was subpoenaed to appear on the date in a separate case, however, the other case had settled and the former deputy was absent from court. Dowd v. State, 280 Ga. App. 563, 634 S.E.2d 509 (2006).

Continuance to secure attendance of medical examiner. — No abuse of discretion resulted from the grant of a continuance to the state based on the absence of the medical examiner, who was a material witness, because the defendant failed to show a show a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-33. Moreover, in granting the prosecutor's motion for a continuance, the trial court noted that the court would do the same for a defendant in similar circumstances. Parker v. State, 282 Ga. 897, 655 S.E.2d 582 (2008).

Burden is on the state to show the absence of a witness was harmless. The mere statement of opposing counsel to this effect is insufficient. Cox v. State, 147 Ga. App. 743, 250 S.E.2d 193 (1978).

Delay in subpoenaing witness as grounds for denial of motion. — If the defendant's motion for continuance is based upon the absence of a material witness for whom a subpoena was not issued by the defendant until the morning the trial was to begin and who had not been served therewith at the time the motion was made, there is no error in overruling the motion. Eady v. State, 129 Ga. App. 656, 200 S.E.2d 767 (1973).

Preparation for Trial

Reasonable time should be allowed for the accused to prepare for trial. Battles v. State, 9 Ga. App. 192, 70 S.E. 973 (1911).

Need for time to prepare case as grounds for continuance. — It is not ground for reversal of a judgment denying a new trial in a criminal case that the judge refused to grant a continuance, when sole counsel for the defendant accused of murder had been engaged in the trial of the same case during the two preceding days, which trial had resulted in a mistrial, and had done a great amount of work, and did not feel that counsel could safely go to trial in a case of such gravity and importance. The motion for continuance not having met the requirements of any rule permitting continuances, it is necessarily a question presented to the discretion of the judge, and the trial court's discretion in granting or refusing continuances will not be disturbed, unless manifestly, flagrantly, and clearly abused. Hyde v. State, 196 Ga. 475, 26 S.E.2d 744 (1943).

Time to be allowed counsel to prepare for trial is in the sound discretion of the trial judge, and the judge's discretion will not be interfered with by the court unless abused. Kell v. State, 188 Ga. 670, 4 S.E.2d 596 (1939); Bunge v. State, 149 Ga. App. 712, 256 S.E.2d 23 (1979).

Lack of opportunity for defendant to confer with lawyers. — When no unusual or intricate matters of fact or law appear, it is no abuse of discretion on the part of the trial judge to overrule a motion to continue based on lack of opportunity of the defendant to confer with the defendant's lawyers. Williams v. State, 180 Ga. 595, 180 S.E. 101 (1935).

Fault in nonrepresentation of defendant as affecting right to continuance. — If the fault in nonrepresentation lies with the defendant, the defendant is not entitled to a continuance, but if there is uncertainty as to whether the fault of nonrepresentation lies with the defendant a continuance should be granted. In re Brookins, 153 Ga. App. 82, 264 S.E.2d 560 (1980).

Withdrawal of counsel or lack of preparation of new counsel. — Neither sudden withdrawal of retained counsel nor lack of preparation of new counsel is ipso facto a ground for continuance. Horton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 407, 208 S.E.2d 186 (1974).

Delay in obtaining counsel as grounds for denying motion. — Court does not abuse the court's discretion in overruling a motion for continuance when the accused is under bond, and the case is specially set at a time satisfactory with counsel who represented the accused at the commitment hearing, the accused being advised of the date, having made no request of the court to appoint counsel for the accused, and having waited until the night preceding the date fixed for the trial to procure counsel, as it is the accused's own fault if the accused's counsel did not have sufficient time to prepare a defense. Townsend v. State, 78 Ga. App. 385, 50 S.E.2d 801 (1948).

Preparation for Trial (Cont'd)

Appointment of counsel shortly before trial as grounds for continuance. — If an accused is forced to trial immediately after counsel appointed for defense, a continuance should be allowed. Jones v. State, 65 Ga. 506 (1880); McArver v. State, 114 Ga. 514, 40 S.E. 779 (1902).

When counsel is appointed to defend the accused on the charge of murder, slightly less than 24 hours before the case is called for trial, the court does not abuse the court's discretion in overruling a motion then made for a continuance on the ground that the defendant's counsel had not had sufficient time within which to prepare for trial. Cannady v. State, 190 Ga. 227, 9 S.E.2d 241 (1940), commented on in 3 Ga. B.J. 55 (1940).

Appointment of defense counsel eight days prior to trial. — Defendant was not prejudiced by the appointment of counsel eight days prior to trial and denial of continuances, when on the day set for trial defense counsel requested a continuance, stating that counsel had not had an opportunity to talk with all the witnesses, but the trial court denied this motion, stating that counsel would be given an opportunity to interview witnesses prior to their testimony, since no showing was made that any prospective witness not interviewed by the defense would have been beneficial to the defendant. Newberry v. State, 250 Ga. 819, 301 S.E.2d 282 (1983).

Misunderstanding by counsel. — When there is a misunderstanding on the part of counsel, a continuance will not be allowed unless it is entirely honest and justifiable. Long v. State, 38 Ga. 491 (1868).

Short continuance upheld. — Although public defender was unable to prepare for the case due to the public defender office's extremely heavy workload, because counsel had been assigned the case approximately eight months earlier and appellant had been arraigned more than three months earlier, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting counsel just under a week to complete the preparations. Roberts v. State, 208 Ga. App. 64, 430 S.E.2d 175 (1993).

Practice and Procedure

Physical inability of accused to stand trial as grounds for continuance. — When a motion for a continuance is made on the ground that the accused is physically unable to stand the strain of a trial, and the accused is present in court, the presiding judge may consider the condition of the accused as it appears to the judge, as well as the testimony adduced on the motion. In such a case the good sense, sound judgment, and humanity of the trial judge must be relied on as safeguards against injustice. Warren v. State, 53 Ga. App. 221, 185 S.E. 385 (1936).

Defendant as juror. — That defendant is a juror for the week during which the defendant's case is called for trial is not ground for a continuance. Johnson v. State, 83 Ga. 553, 10 S.E. 207 (1889).

Same jurors appearing at both trials for jointly indicted defendants. — When accused is jointly indicted with another, the fact that some of the jurors constituting the panel upon the former had at the same term served on the trial of the latter is no ground for a continuance. Humphries v. State, 100 Ga. 260, 28 S.E. 25 (1897).

Use of same witnesses and evidence. — It is not grounds for a continuance that one of those accused is tried for the same offense as the other and the case involved the same evidence and the same witnesses. Sutton v. State, 18 Ga. App. 28, 88 S.E. 744 (1916); Sutton v. State, 18 Ga. App. 162, 88 S.E. 1005 (1916).

Length of postponement. — Postponement to a later day in term is subject to the sound discretion of the judge. Lyles v. State, 130 Ga. 294, 60 S.E. 578 (1908).

Circumstances which would be sufficient to cause postponement of trial for 60 days must be extraordinary and unusual.

Howard v. State, 60 Ga. App. 229, 4 S.E.2d 418 (1939).

Popular excitement alone is not sufficient to postpone the trial of a case, except under extraordinary circumstances. Howard v. State, 60 Ga. App. 229, 4 S.E.2d 418 (1939).

Public prejudice insufficient. — In view of provisions for obtaining impartial jurors, public prejudice alone is not sufficient for a continuance. Fogarty v. State, 80 Ga. 450, 5 S.E. 782 (1888); Charlon v. State, 106 Ga. 400, 32 S.E. 347 (1899).

Continuance will not be granted simply on the assertion of the accused that the accused is unable to have a fair trial because of public excitement. Taylor v. State, 135 Ga. 622, 70 S.E. 237 (1911).

Newspaper publicity not in itself grounds for postponement. — Fact that the newspapers of a community have dwelt upon a crime situation that was being investigated by the grand jury will not of itself cause a postponement of a case reached in its regular course. Howard v. State, 60 Ga. App. 229, 4 S.E.2d 418 (1939).

Right to demand trial is in keeping with policy. — In keeping with the policy of former Code 1933, § 27-2002 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-33), it is provided by former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170) that an accused person may demand such trial. Harris v. State, 84 Ga. App. 1, 65 S.E.2d 267 (1951).

Mere statements of defendant to counsel and repeated to the court in a motion for continuance are, at most, in the nature of hearsay and have no probative value. The court is not required to consider on the motion for a continuance any conclusion drawn by counsel from such statements made by the defendant to counsel and argued to the court. Townsend v. State, 78 Ga. App. 385, 50 S.E.2d 801 (1948).

Appellate Review

Abuse of discretion generally. — Discretion of the trial court in refusing to grant a continuance will not be interfered with unless such discretion is abused. Dorsey v. State, 236 Ga. 591, 225 S.E.2d 418 (1976); Marshall v. State, 143 Ga. App. 731, 240 S.E.2d 176 (1977).

Motion for continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court and the refusal to grant a continuance will not be disturbed unless there is a clear abuse of discretion. Young v. State, 237 Ga. 852, 230 S.E.2d 287 (1976), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1123, 106 S. Ct. 1991, 90 L. Ed. 2d 672 (1986).

Broad discretion given to the presiding judge in granting or refusing to continue trials is not to be disturbed unless manifestly abused. Cannady v. State, 190 Ga. 227, 9 S.E.2d 241 (1940), commented on in 3 Ga. B.J. 55 (1940); Carnes v. State, 115 Ga. App. 387, 154 S.E.2d 781, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 928, 88 S. Ct. 287, 19 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1967).

Grant of motions for continuance is within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and an appellate court will not interfere unless it is clearly shown that the trial judge abused the judge's discretion. Terry v. State, 160 Ga. App. 433, 287 S.E.2d 360 (1981).

Counsel's opinion that defendant incapable of continuing. — If the defendant's counsel offered only counsel's opinion that the defendant was incapable of continuing with the trial, there was an insufficient showing of a necessity for a continuance. Nash v. State, 179 Ga. App. 702, 347 S.E.2d 651 (1986).

Jury bias. — After a defendant contended that the defendant failed to conduct a proper voir dire because the defendant was afraid of irritating prospective jurors because of aggressive questioning the panel received during voir dire prior to the defendant's brother's trial for the same offense, there was no error to deny a motion for continuance without showing actual evidence of jury bias or prejudice. Kelley v. State, 168 Ga. App. 911, 311 S.E.2d 180 (1983).

No material injury to accused. — Discretion not abused if no material injury results to accused. Hardy v. State, 117 Ga. 40, 43 S.E. 434 (1903); Teal v. State, 119 Ga. 102, 45 S.E. 964 (1903).

Failure to prepare demurrer and plea. — Discretion is not abused by refusal to continue to later hour in day in order to allow counsel to prepare demurrer and plea when there is no reason why such plea was not prepared. Oglesby v.

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

State, 121 Ga. 602, 49 S.E. 706 (1905).

If harm not demonstrated, enumerations of error are meritless. — Refusal of continuance is not cause for a new trial if the defendant is not injured by the ruling. Cox v. State, 147 Ga. App. 743, 250 S.E.2d 193 (1978).

If the defendant has failed to demonstrate any such harm by either the court's failure to grant a continuance or the court's issuance of the order and the court's rescinding thereof, the defendant's enumerations of error are without merit. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

Supreme Court will prevent the precipitation of a case if a continuance was necessary. Maddox v. State, 32 Ga. 581, 79 Am. Dec. 307 (1861).

Only when record shows identifiable prejudice is reversal authorized on appeal. — It is only when the record reveals to the appellate courts facts or circumstances showing as a matter of law identifiable prejudice to the accused, such as when the events have moved so swiftly that constitutional guaranties are overridden, that the reviewing courts are authorized to reverse the trial court's refusal to grant an extension. Carnes v. State, 115 Ga. App. 387, 154 S.E.2d 781, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 928, 88 S. Ct. 287, 19 L. Ed. 2d 279 (1967).

Review of denial of motion based on inadequate preparation time or inability to use witness. — Court of Appeals will not interfere with the discretion of the trial judge in refusing to grant a continuance on a motion based generally on two grounds: inadequate time for counsel to prepare for trial; and the inability to use a witness present at the scene of the crime who was accused of participating. Mack v. State, 125 Ga. App. 639, 188 S.E.2d 828 (1972).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 280, 281, 286, 287.

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 1 et seq. 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, §§ 346 et seq., 567 et seq.

ALR. — Hostile sentiment or prejudice as ground for continuance of criminal trial, 39 A.L.R.2d 1314.

Right of accused to continuance because of absence of witness who is fugitive from justice, 42 A.L.R.2d 1229.

Amendment of indictment or information with respect to name or capacity of person alleged to have been victim of crime as ground for continuance, 85 A.L.R.2d 1204.

Withdrawal, discharge, or substitution of counsel in criminal case as ground for continuance, 73 A.L.R.3d 725.

Illness or incapacity of judge, prosecuting officer, or prosecution witness as justifying delay in bringing accused speedily to trial — state cases, 78 A.L.R.3d 297.

Application of speedy trial statute to dismissal or other termination of prior indictment or information and bringing of new indictment or information, 39 A.L.R.4th 899.

17-8-34. Granting of continuances in cases returned by appellate court for trial.

When a case is sent back for trial to a superior, state, or city court by the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals, the case shall be in order for trial; and, if the continuances of either party are exhausted, the trial court may grant one continuance to the party, as the ends of justice may require.

History. — Ga. L. 1851-52, p. 214, § 6; Code 1863, § 3456; Code 1868, § 3476; Code 1873, § 3527; Code 1882, § 3527; Civil Code 1895, § 5134; Civil Code 1910, § 5720; Code 1933, § 81-1415.

Cross references. — Trial of cases returned for new trial by appellate courts generally, § 5-5-49. Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-162.

17-8-35. Effect of continuance by defendant upon trial of codefendants.

The continuance of a case by one of several defendants indicted jointly shall not operate as a continuance as to the other defendants objecting thereto.

History. — Ga. L. 1858, p. 99, § 2; Code 1863, § 4575; Code 1868, § 4596; Code 1873, § 4693; Code 1882, § 4693; Penal Code 1895, § 967; Penal Code 1910, § 993; Code 1933, § 27-2004.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Adams v. State, 129 Ga. App. 839, 201 S.E.2d 649 (1973).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 280, 281.
C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 1 et seq. 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 567 et seq.

17-8-36. Entry of date of continuance upon docket of court; announcement of continuance in open court.

The judges of the superior, state, and city courts shall, upon the continuance of any case, enter the date of the continuance upon their dockets opposite the case and in open court make public announcement of the continuance.

History. — Ga. L. 1895, p. 41, § 1; Civil Code 1895, § 5140; Penal Code 1895, § 968; Civil Code 1910, § 5726; Penal Code 1910, § 994; Code 1933, § 81-1421; Ga. L. 1983, p. 884, § 3-20.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-169.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 116 et seq.

17-8-37. Duration of continuance.

When a court grants a continuance of a pending case for whatever cause, the continuance shall extend until the next term of court only.

History. — Laws 1799, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 486; Code 1863, § 3448; Code 1868, § 3468; Code 1873, § 3519; Code 1882, § 3519; Civil Code 1895, § 5126; Civil Code 1910, § 5710; Code 1933, § 81-1401.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-164.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Whitehead v. State, 43 Ga. App. 401, 158 S.E. 917 (1931).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, § 115.

ALR. — Effect of war on litigation pending at the time of its outbreak, 154 A.L.R. 1447.

Amendment of pleading with respect to parties or their capacity as ground for continuance, 67 A.L.R.2d 477.

Admissions to prevent continuance sought to secure testimony of absent witness in criminal case, 9 A.L.R.3d 1180.

17-8-38. Case not reached at trial term continued.

A case not reached at the trial term stands over as continued.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3455; Code 1868, § 3475; Code 1873, § 3526; Code 1882, § 3526; Civil Code 1895, § 5133; Civil Code 1910, § 5719; Code 1933, § 81-1414.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-165.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Continuances, §§ 11, 12, 17.

ARTICLE 3

CONDUCT OF PROCEEDINGS

Cross references. — Testimony by defendant in criminal case generally, § 24-5-506. Husband and wife as witnesses for and against each other, § 24-5-503.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Admissibility, in criminal case, of results of residue detection test to determine whether accused or victim handled or fired gun, 1 A.L.R.4th 1072.

Admissibility, weight, and sufficiency of blood-grouping tests in criminal cases, 2 A.L.R.4th 500.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to preserve confidentiality of undercover witness, 54 A.L.R.4th 1156.

17-8-50. Courts in which trials of inmates escaping from correctional institutions to take place; admissibility of records pertaining to former trials of such inmates; testimony of other inmates.

The trial of inmates escaping from a state or county correctional institution shall take place in the superior court of the county in which the escape occurs, and inmates so escaping shall remain in the correctional institution after their apprehension and shall be treated as are other inmates until the trial takes place. At the trial, the copies of the records transmitted to the superintendent or warden of the state or county correctional institution, relative to the former trials of such inmates, shall be produced and filed of record in the superior court; and any other inmate not included in the same indictment shall be a competent witness.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 837; Code 1863, § 4545; Code 1868, § 4565; Code 1873, § 4659; Code 1882, § 4659; Penal Code 1895, § 318; Penal Code 1910, § 323; Code 1933, § 26-4511; Code 1933, § 26-9902, enacted by Ga. L. 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Cross references. — Escape generally, § 16-10-52.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Procuring state's compliance with section when noncompliance alleged. — If the defendant contends the defendant was entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal based on the state's alleged violation of the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-50 because, prior to the trial on an escape charge, the defendant was sentenced to serve 14 days in confinement by the prison disciplinary committee and then transferred from the facility from which the defendant escaped to another correctional institution, and the state failed to produce the records of the defendant's former conviction at trial, the defendant should have filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus or a petition for a writ of mandamus in order to procure the state's compliance with § 17-8-50. Lofton v. State, 190 Ga. App. 408, 379 S.E.2d 13 (1989).

Administrative punishment. — This section did not limit the imposition of administrative punishment for escape. Horne v. Hopper, 238 Ga. 140, 231 S.E.2d 735 (1977).

Right to return to same institution upon capture. — Prior to November 1, 1982, a county correctional institute was not a "penitentiary" because it was not "exclusively" for the confinement of felony prisoners, as required by former Code 1933, § 102-103. As a result, former Code 1933, § 26-9902 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-50), which dealt with the trial of prisoners escaping from the "penitentiary," was inapplicable to a prisoner escaping from a county correctional institute. Accordingly, such a prisoner had no right, if one in fact existed under the inapplicable statute, to be returned to and to remain in the county correctional institute after the prisoner's apprehension. Mullins v. State, 167 Ga. App. 670, 307 S.E.2d 61 (1983).

Cited in McKenzey v. State, 140 Ga. App. 402, 231 S.E.2d 149 (1976).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 27A Am. Jur. 2d, Escape, § 1 et seq.

C.J.S. — 30A C.J.S., Escape and Related Offenses; Rescue, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — What justifies escape or attempt to escape, or assistance in that regard, 70 A.L.R.2d 1430.

Duress, necessity, or conditions of confinement as justification for escape from prison, 69 A.L.R.3d 678.

Admissibility of evidence that defendant escaped or attempted to escape while being detained for offense in addition to that or those presently being prosecuted, 3 A.L.R.4th 1085.

Propriety of jury instruction regarding credibility of witness who has been convicted of a crime, 9 A.L.R.4th 897.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of witness testifying while in prison attire, 16 A.L.R.4th 1356.

Duress, necessity, or conditions of confinement as justification for escape from prison, 54 A.L.R.5th 141.

17-8-51. Admissibility of testimony of inmates in trials for crime of mutiny.

At the trial of an inmate of a penal institution for the crime of mutiny, any other inmate not included in the same indictment shall be a competent witness, and the infamy of his character and of the crime of which he has been convicted shall be exceptions to his credit only.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 840; Code 1863, § 4563; Code 1868, § 4583; Code 1873, § 4677; Code 1882, § 4677; Penal Code 1895, § 331; Penal Code 1910, § 336; Code 1933, § 26-4803; Code 1933, § 26-9903, enacted by Ga. L. 1968, p. 1249, § 1.

Cross references. — Mutiny generally, § 16-10-54.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Bussey v. State, 202 Ga. App. 483, 414 S.E.2d 710 (1992).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Propriety of jury instruction regarding credibility of witness who has been convicted of a crime, 9 A.L.R.4th 897.

17-8-52. Oath to be administered to witnesses.

(a) The following oath shall be administered to witnesses in criminal cases:

> "Do you solemnly swear or affirm that the evidence you shall give to the court and jury in the matter now pending before the court shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth? So help you God."

(b) Any oath given that substantially complies with the language in this Code section shall subject the witness to the provisions of Code Section 16-10-70.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 836; Code 1863, § 4537; Code 1868, § 4557; Code 1873, § 4651; Code 1882, § 4651; Penal Code 1895, § 980; Penal Code 1910, § 1006; Code 1933, § 38-1702; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1499, § 2.

Cross references. — Perjury and related offenses, § 16-10-70 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

District attorney may administer the oath under court direction. Thomas v. State, 67 Ga. 460 (1881).

Materially different oath cannot be basis for perjury prosecution. — When it is affirmatively shown that the oath administered to a witness was materially different in both form and substance than the prescribed statutory oath, the administered oath was not a lawful one and cannot properly be the basis for a perjury prosecution. Kirkland v. State, 140 Ga. App. 197, 230 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

Oath not materially different. — Oath given to arresting officer indicating the defendant's name, the crimes charged, and the fact that the testimony was being given in a trial and not a grand jury proceeding was not materially different in both form and substance from the prescribed statutory oath and was proper. Elam v. State, 211 Ga. App. 739, 440 S.E.2d 511 (1994).

Oath materially different but not harmful. — Trial court erred in permitting an undercover agent to testify after being administered an oath that did not substantially comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-52; but the error was not sufficiently harmful to warrant reversal. Lee v. State, 223 Ga. App. 438, 477 S.E.2d 872 (1996).

Oath administered is presumed to be lawful. — When there is evidence that an oath was administered to a witness, it will be presumed in the absence of proof to the contrary that the lawful or statutory oath was administered. Kirkland v. State, 140 Ga. App. 197, 230 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

Failure to make timely objection to oath. — When the defendant fails to make a timely objection to the state's failure to administer the oath to witnesses in the precise terms set forth in this section, waiting instead until the state rests the state's case, the defendant waives the objection and cannot complain on appeal. Joseph v. State, 149 Ga. App. 296, 254 S.E.2d 383 (1979); Montes v. State, 262 Ga. 473, 421 S.E.2d 710 (1992).

Omission of oath not ground for new trial. — See Smith v. State, 81 Ga. 479, 8 S.E. 187 (1888); Rhodes v. State, 122 Ga. 568, 50 S.E. 361 (1905).

Cited in Hilson v. State, 204 Ga. App. 200, 418 S.E.2d 784 (1992).

17-8-53. Exclusion of public from courtroom when evidence vulgar or obscene.

During a trial in a court of any case in which the evidence is vulgar and obscene or relates to the improper acts of the sexes, and tends to debauch the morals of the young, the presiding judge shall have the right in his discretion and on his own motion, or on motion of a party or his attorney, to hear and try the case after clearing the courtroom of all or any portion of the audience.

History. — Ga. L. 1890-91, p. 111, § 1; Ga. L. 1895, p. 49, § 1; Civil Code 1895, § 5296; Civil Code 1910, § 5885; Code 1933, § 81-1006.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-3. Exclusion of public from hearings involving determination of delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness of minors, § 15-11-700.

Law reviews. — For review of 1996 legislation relating to filming or videotaping in the courtroom, see 13 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 83 (1996).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discretion of judge in allowing public in courtroom. — Every person accused of a crime is entitled to a public trial. The presiding judge, in the exercise of sound discretion, may, without violating this right, exclude from the courtroom during the trial, for any sufficient special reason, such portion of the spectators as fall within the class to which this section applied. Tilton v. State, 5 Ga. App. 59, 62 S.E. 651 (1908).

Under neither the Constitution nor the laws of Georgia is it ever reversible error for a trial judge, in the judge's discretion, to allow the public to occupy seats in the courtroom as long as the public's conduct is orderly, peaceful, and does not tend to obstruct justice. Lancaster v. State, 168 Ga. 470, 148 S.E. 139 (1929), overruled on other grounds, Curtis v. State, 236 Ga. 362, 223 S.E.2d 721 (1976).

That matters are "ordinarily indecent to be mentioned" was not sufficient. — When the judge, without further reason than that the testimony will relate to matters ordinarily indecent to be mentioned, orders, over the objection of the defendant, that the courtroom be cleared of everyone not connected with the case, the judge abused the judge's discretion and violated the defendant's right to a public trial as guaranteed by this section. Prejudice to the defendant is conclusively to be presumed from such an order, and a new trial necessarily results. Tilton v. State, 5 Ga. App. 59, 62 S.E. 651 (1908).

Partial closure of courtroom proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by partially closing the courtroom during the victims' testimonies because the trial court limited the closure by allowing the defendant, the attorneys for the defense and the state, immediate families or guardians of the victims, immediate families or guardians of the defendant, the attorneys' employees, officers of the court, sheriff's deputies, and any members of the press to remain in the courtroom, which was acceptable pursuant to the Sixth Amendment. Pate v. State, 315 Ga. App. 205, 726 S.E.2d 691 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C1308, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 1027 (Ga. 2012), appeal dismissed, 2020 U.S. App. LEXIS 3372 (11th Cir. Ga. 2020).

Aggravated sodomy and incest. — In prosecution for aggravated sodomy and incest, there was no abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court in excluding juvenile spectators from the courtroom and no violation of appellant's right to a public trial. Parker v. State, 162 Ga. App. 271, 290 S.E.2d 518 (1982).

Trial "public" when news media present. — Georgia courts have given little credence to contentions that a hearing was not "public" when, in the interest of fair administration of justice, the trial court has cleared a part of the spectators from the courtroom but has allowed representatives of the news media to remain. R.W. Page Corp. v. Lumpkin, 249 Ga. 576, 292 S.E.2d 815 (1982).

Right of access of news media representatives is no greater and no less than any other member of the general public. R.W. Page Corp. v. Lumpkin, 249 Ga. 576, 292 S.E.2d 815 (1982).

Closure of courtroom must be supported by specific findings. — Although the trial court cursorily mentioned protecting the minor victim's privacy, the trial court's findings must be specific enough that a reviewing court can determine whether the closure order was properly entered and the trial court's conclusory statement that the court had considered the alternatives to closure and found the alternatives to be insufficient under the circumstances of the case was not specific enough to enable the court to determine that the closure order was entered properly. Spikes v. State, 353 Ga. App. 454, 838 S.E.2d 121 (2020).

Cited in Moore v. State, 151 Ga. 648, 108 S.E. 47 (1921); Henderson v. State, 207 Ga. 206, 60 S.E.2d 345 (1950); Babb v. State, 157 Ga. App. 757, 278 S.E.2d 495 (1981); Sears v. State, 182 Ga. App. 480, 356 S.E.2d 72 (1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 88 C.J.S. (Rev), Trial, §§ 110, 113 et seq.

ALR. — Exclusion of public during criminal trial, 156 A.L.R. 265; 48 A.L.R. 1436.

Validity and construction of constitution or statute authorizing exclusion of public in sex offense cases, 39 A.L.R.3d 852.

Restricting public access to judicial records of state courts, 84 A.L.R.3d 598.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to preserve confidentiality of undercover witness, 54 A.L.R.4th 1156.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial by conducting trial or part thereof at other than regular place or time, 70 A.L.R.4th 632.

Standing of media representatives or organizations to seek review of, or to intervene to oppose, order closing criminal proceedings to public, 74 A.L.R.4th 476.

17-8-54. Persons in courtroom when person under age of 16 testifies concerning sexual offense.

In the trial of any criminal case, when any person under the age of 16 is testifying concerning any sexual offense, the court shall clear the courtroom of all persons except parties to the cause and their immediate families or guardians, attorneys and their secretaries, officers of the court, victim assistance coordinators, victims' advocates, and such other victim assistance personnel as provided for by Code Section 15-18-14.2, jurors, newspaper reporters or broadcasters, and court reporters.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-8-54, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1; Ga. L. 2013, p. 891, § 1/HB 480.

Editor's notes. — Former Code Section 17-8-54, which related to writing out and reading of the charge to the jury, was redesignated as Code Section 17-8-56 by Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of section. — Court properly refused to clear courtroom of unnecessary persons when the defendant accused a courtroom observer of coaching the witness; the purpose of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-8-54 and 17-8-55 is to protect the interest of the child witness and the record showed the witness' testimony was not influenced by any spectator. Martin v. State, 205 Ga. App. 591, 422 S.E.2d 876, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 422 S.E.2d 876 (1992).

Closure of courtroom must be supported by specific findings. — Although the trial court cursorily mentioned protecting the minor victim's privacy, the trial court's findings must be specific enough that a reviewing court can determine whether the closure order was properly entered and the trial court's conclusory statement that the court had considered the alternatives to closure and found the alternatives to be insufficient under the circumstances of the case was not specific enough to enable the court to determine that the closure order was entered properly. Spikes v. State, 353 Ga. App. 454, 838 S.E.2d 121 (2020).

Allowing child victim's psychologist to remain in court not error. — With regard to a defendant's trial and conviction on various child sexual abuse charges, the trial court did not violate

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54 as a result of clearing the courtroom of all spectators, with the exception of the victim's psychologist, who remained in the courtroom during the testimony, when the child testified, as there was no evidence in the record that the psychologist improperly influenced the testimony of the victim and, consequently, the defendant failed to assert a valid basis for reversal. Further, the purpose of § 17-8-54 is to protect the interest of the child witness, not the defendant; thus, a failure to follow the statute did not violate the defendant's rights. Driggers v. State, 295 Ga. App. 711, 673 S.E.2d 95 (2009).

Allowing child advocate to sit with child. — Trial court did not err in allowing a victim's advocate to accompany the victim to the witness stand and sit by the victim in front of the jury while the victim testified because the trial court carefully observed the advocate's presence and demeanor during the victim's testimony and saw no inappropriate or prejudicial conduct or behavior. Ford v. State, 322 Ga. App. 31, 743 S.E.2d 442 (2013).

Prejudice not shown. — Defendant failed to demonstrate how the clearing of two of defendant's relatives from the courtroom when "everybody was made to leave the courtroom who was not an officer" prejudiced the defendant's cause or resulted in a different outcome at trial. Turner v. State, 245 Ga. App. 294, 536 S.E.2d 814 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Miller v. State, 285 Ga. 285, 676 S.E.2d 173 (2009).

Defendant failed to show that the trial court violated the defendant's right to a public trial after the court cleared the courtroom of nonessential personnel when the youngest victim, who was four years old, testified because the defendant did not identify any specific people or category of people that were wrongly evicted. Clark v. State, 309 Ga. App. 749, 711 S.E.2d 339 (2011).

Failure to object. — When the defendant was charged with, inter alia, child molestation, and the trial court, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54, excluded certain individuals from the courtroom when the victims testified, including members of the defendant's immediate family, the defendant waived the defendant's appellate argument that this was, in effect, a total closure of the courtroom because the defendant did not object when the defendant's family members were excluded. Hunt v. State, 268 Ga. App. 568, 602 S.E.2d 312 (2004).

Because the defendant failed to object to the exclusion of the defendant's parents from the courtroom, and the failure did not amount to plain error, the appeals court rejected the defendant's contentions on appeal that O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54 was violated as was the defendant's right to public trial; moreover, the appeals court declined to extend the plain error doctrine to the instant facts. Delgado v. State, 287 Ga. App. 273, 651 S.E.2d 201 (2007).

Defendant waived any challenge to the trial court's exclusion of the defendant's family during the victim's testimony by failing to object. Waiver aside, the challenge lacked merit, as the defendant could not show the alleged error harmed the defendant. Davis v. State, 323 Ga. App. 266, 746 S.E.2d 890 (2013).

Closed proceedings proper. — Trial court did not violate the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to a public trial by closing the child molestation proceedings for the child victim's testimony; O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54 permitted partial closure of the court room when a person under the age of 16 testified about a sex offense; the victim, age seven, was testifying about a sex offense, and § 17-8-54 did not violate the Sixth Amendment. Goldstein v. State, 283 Ga. App. 1, 640 S.E.2d 599 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0623, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 338 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by partially closing the courtroom during the victims' testimonies because the trial court limited the closure by allowing the defendant, the attorneys for the defense and the state, immediate families or guardians of the victims, immediate families or guardians of the defendant, the attorneys' employees, officers of the court, sheriff's deputies, and any members of the press to remain in the courtroom, which was acceptable pursuant to the Sixth Amendment. Pate v. State, 315 Ga. App. 205, 726 S.E.2d 691 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C1308, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 1027 (Ga. 2012), appeal dismissed, 2020 U.S. App. LEXIS 3372 (11th Cir. Ga. 2020).

Trial court properly cleared the courtroom while the two minor victims testified at the defendant's trial for child molestation as O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54 authorized the trial court to clear the courtroom and, to the extent the trial court improperly required persons excepted from § 17-8-54 to leave as well, the defendant waived appellate review by not objecting. Tolbert v. State, 321 Ga. App. 637, 742 S.E.2d 152 (2013).

Waiver of constitutionality argument. — By failing to challenge the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54 until after the child victim testified, the defendant waived the right to argue on appeal that the statute violated the defendant's constitutional right to a public trial. Craven v. State, 292 Ga. App. 592, 664 S.E.2d 921 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1939, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 935 (Ga. 2008).

Harmless error. — Although the trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54 in removing the defendant's immediate family from the courtroom while the victim testified, the error was harmless. Other evidence, including testimony by the victim's family members, a pediatrician, a child protective services worker, a nurse, and a psychotherapist, supported the conviction. Craven v. State, 292 Ga. App. 592, 664 S.E.2d 921 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1939, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 935 (Ga. 2008).

Cited in Donaldson v. State, 255 Ga. App. 451, 565 S.E.2d 486 (2002).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Determination of request for exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to preserve safety, confidentiality, or well-being of witness who is not undercover police officer — issues of proof, consideration of alternatives, and scope of closure, 32 A.L.R.6th 171.

Basis for exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to preserve safety, confidentiality, or well-being of witness who is not undercover police officer, 33 A.L.R.6th 1.

17-8-55. Testimony of child less than 17 years old outside physical presence of accused.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "child" means an individual who is under 17 years of age.

(b) This Code section shall apply to all proceedings when a child is a witness to or an alleged victim of a violation of Code Section 16-5-1, 16-5-20, 16-5-23, 16-5-23.1, 16-5-40, 16-5-70, 16-5-90, 16-5-95, 16-6-1, 16-6-2, 16-6-3, 16-6-4, 16-6-5, 16-6-5.1, 16-6-11, 16-6-22, 16-6-22.1, 16-6-22.2, 16-8-41, or 16-15-4.

(c) The court, upon the motion of the prosecuting attorney or the parent, legal guardian, or custodian of a child, or on its own motion, shall hold an evidentiary hearing to determine whether a child shall testify outside the physical presence of the accused. Such motion shall be filed, or requested by the court, at least ten days prior to trial unless the court shortens such time period for good cause, as it deems just under the circumstances.

(d) The court may order a child to testify outside the physical presence of the accused, provided that the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that such child is likely to suffer serious psychological or emotional distress or trauma which impairs such child's ability to communicate as a result of testifying in the presence of the accused. In determining whether a preponderance of the evidence has been shown, the court may consider any one or more of the following circumstances:

(1) The manner of the commission of the offense being particularly heinous or characterized by aggravating circumstances;

(2) The child's age or susceptibility to psychological or emotional distress or trauma on account of a physical or mental condition which existed before the alleged commission of the offense;

(3) At the time of the alleged offense, the accused was:

(A) The parent, guardian, legal custodian, or other person responsible for the custody or care of the child at the relevant time; or

(B) A person who maintains or maintained an ongoing personal relationship with such child's parent, guardian, legal custodian, or other person responsible for the custody or care of the child at the relevant time and the relationship involved the person living in or frequent and repeated presence in the same household or premises as the child;

(4) The alleged offense was part of an ongoing course of conduct committed by the accused against the child over an extended period of time;

(5) A deadly weapon or dangerous instrument was used during the commission of the alleged offense;

(6) The accused has inflicted serious physical injury upon the child;

(7) A threat, express or implied, of physical violence to the child or a third person if the child were to report the incident to any person or communicate information to or cooperate with a court, grand jury, prosecutor, police officer, or law enforcement office concerning the incident has been made by or on behalf of the accused;

(8) A threat, express or implied, of the incarceration of a parent, relative, or guardian of the child, the removal of the child from the family, or the dissolution of the family of the child if the child were to report the incident to any person or communicate information to or cooperate with a court, grand jury, prosecutor, police officer, or law enforcement office concerning the incident has been made by or on behalf of the accused;

(9) A witness other than the child has received a threat of physical violence directed at such witness or to a third person by or on behalf of the accused, and the child is aware of such threat;

(10) The accused, at the time of the inquiry:

(A) Is living in the same household with the child;

(B) Has ready access to the child; or

(C) Is providing substantial financial support for the child; or

(11) According to expert testimony, the child would be particularly susceptible to psychological or emotional distress or trauma if required to testify in open court in the physical presence of the accused.

(e) A court order allowing or not allowing a child to testify outside the physical presence of the accused shall state the findings of fact and conclusions of law that support the court's determination. An order allowing the use of such testimony shall:

(1) State the method by which such child shall testify;

(2) List any individual or category of individuals allowed to be in the presence of such child during such testimony, including the individuals the court finds contribute to the welfare and well-being of the child during his or her testimony;

(3) State any special conditions necessary to facilitate the cross-examination of such child;

(4) State any condition or limitation upon the participation of individuals in the child's presence during such child's testimony;

(5) Provide that the accused shall not be permitted to be in the physical presence of a child during his or her testimony if the accused is pro se;

(6) Provide that if counsel for the accused or the accused is precluded from being physically present during the child's testimony, then the prosecuting attorney shall likewise be precluded from being physically present; and

(7) State any other condition necessary for taking or presenting such testimony.

(f) The method used for allowing a child to testify outside the physical presence of the accused shall allow the judge, jury, and accused to observe the demeanor of the child as if he or she were testifying in the courtroom. When such testimony occurs it shall be transmitted to the courtroom by any device or combination of devices capable of projecting a live visual and oral transmission, including, but not limited to, a two-way closed circuit television broadcast, an Internet broadcast, or other simultaneous electronic means. The court shall ensure that:

(1) The transmitting equipment is capable of making an accurate transmission and is operated by a competent operator;

(2) The transmission is in color and the child is visible at all times;

(3) Every voice on the transmission is audible and identified;

(4) The courtroom is equipped with monitors which permit the jury, the accused, and others present in the courtroom to see and hear the transmission; and

(5) The image and voice of the child, as well as the image of all other persons other than the operator present in the testimonial room, are transmitted live.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-8-55, enacted by Ga. L. 2014, p. 205, § 1/HB 804; Ga. L. 2019, p. 74, § 2-6/SB 158.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, deleted "16-6-14," following "16-6-11," in subsection (b). See Editor's note for applicability.

Editor's notes. — Former Code Section 17-8-55, relating to judge's expression of opinion as to matters proved or guilt of accused, was redesignated as Code Section 17-8-57 by Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1.

Ga. L. 2014, p. 205, § 1/HB 804, effective July 1, 2014, repealed former Code Section 17-8-55, pertaining to testimony of child ten years old or younger by closed circuit television, and enacted the present Code section. The former Code section was based on Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1; Ga. L. 1990, p. 8, § 17; Ga. L. 1991, p. 1377, § 1.

Ga. L. 2019, p. 74, § 1-1/SB 158, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Anti-Human Trafficking Protective Response Act.'"

Ga. L. 2019, p. 74, § 3-1/SB 158, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2019, and shall apply to offenses which occur on or after that date. Any offense occurring before July 1, 2019, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense, and any resulting conviction shall be considered a prior conviction for the purpose of imposing a sentence that provides for a different penalty for a subsequent conviction."

Law reviews. — For article on the 2014 enactment of this Code section, see 31 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 75 (2014). For article on the 2019 amendment of this Code section, see 36 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 63 (2019).

For comment, "Child Sexual Abuse: A New Decade for the Protection of Our Children?," see 39 Emory L.J. 581 (1990).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Waiver of confrontation clause claim. — Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV by failing to object when the trial court allowed a partition to be placed between the defendant and the children, allegedly in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV, when the children testified in the molestation case; the defendant waived the confrontation claim since the defendant arranged for the partition in order to head off the state's request for testimony via closed-circuit television pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-55, and defense counsel's failure to object, therefore, could not be challenged because this fell into the realm of strategy. Zepp v. State, 276 Ga. App. 466, 623 S.E.2d 569 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Cited in Kuptz v. State, 179 Ga. App. 150, 345 S.E.2d 670 (1986); Martin v. State, 205 Ga. App. 591, 422 S.E.2d 876 (1992).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Closed-circuit television witness examination, 61 A.L.R.4th 1155.

Determination of request for exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to preserve safety, confidentiality, or well-being of witness who is not undercover police officer — issues of proof, consideration of alternatives, and scope of closure, 32 A.L.R.6th 171.

Basis for exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to preserve safety, confidentiality, or well-being of witness who is not undercover police officer, 33 A.L.R.6th 1.

Am. Jur. 2d. — 81 Am. Jur. 2d, Witnesses, § 198 et seq.

17-8-56. Writing out and reading of charge to jury; filing of charge; furnishing of copies of charge.

(a) The judges of the superior, state, and city courts shall, when the counsel for either party requests it before argument begins, write out their charges and read them to the jury; and it shall be error to give any other or additional charge than that so written and read.

(b) The charge so written out and read shall be filed with the clerk of the court in which it was given and shall be accessible to all persons interested in it. The clerk shall give certified copies of the charge to any person applying therefor, upon payment of the usual fee.

(c) This Code section shall not apply when there is an official stenographer or reporter of the court in attendance thereon who takes down in shorthand and writes out the full charge of the trial judge in the case upon the direction of court.

History. — Ga. L. 1860, p. 42, §§ 1, 2; Code 1863, §§ 240, 241; Code 1868, §§ 234, 235; Code 1873, §§ 244, 245; Ga. L. 1877, p. 13, § 1; Ga. L. 1878-79, p. 150, § 1; Code 1882, §§ 244, 245; Civil Code 1895, §§ 4318, 4319; Penal Code 1895, §§ 1030, 1031; Ga. L. 1897, p. 41, § 1; Civil Code 1910, §§ 4847, 4848; Penal Code 1910, §§ 1056, 1057; Code 1933, §§ 81-1102, 81-1103; Ga. L. 1943, p. 262, § 1; Ga. L. 1983, p. 884, § 3-21; Code 1981, § 17-8-56, as redesignated by Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-5.

Editor's notes. — Former Code Section 17-8-54 was redesignated as this Code section by Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Practice and Procedure
Appellate Review

General Consideration

Purpose of reducing charge to writing and reading charge to jury. — Principal object in requiring the charge to be reduced to writing and read as written to the jury, and then filed with the clerk of the court, is to prevent disputes between the judge and counsel as to what was the charge. Moyers v. State, 61 Ga. App. 324, 6 S.E.2d 438 (1939).

Provisions of this section are mandatory. Strickland v. State, 6 Ga. App. 536, 65 S.E. 300 (1909); Walker v. State, 10 Ga. App. 85, 72 S.E. 531 (1911); Brindle v. State, 17 Ga. App. 741, 88 S.E. 460 (1916); Roberts v. State, 59 Ga. App. 115, 200 S.E. 474 (1938).

Refusal to comply with statute is ground for reversal. Strickland v. State, 6 Ga. App. 536, 65 S.E. 300 (1909); Walker v. State, 10 Ga. App. 85, 72 S.E. 531 (1911); Brindle v. State, 17 Ga. App. 741, 88 S.E. 460 (1916).

Effect of § 15-14-3. — Former Code 1882, §§ 244, 245 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-56) was not repealed by former Code 1933, § 24-3102 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-14-3) providing for the appointment of an official court reporter. Bowden v. Achor, 95 Ga. 243, 22 S.E. 254 (1895); Brindle v. State, 17 Ga. App. 741, 88 S.E. 460 (1916).

Judge must charge all law on the subject that is material and applicable. — When a judge undertakes to charge the law on any subject the judge must charge all of the law which is material and applicable to the case. Clinton v. State, 41 Ga. App. 661, 154 S.E. 377 (1930).

Reading of Code section as charge. — It is sufficient compliance if the judge reads the section verbatim from the Code itself, noting accurately in the judge's charge the section so read. Walton v. State, 17 Ga. App. 375, 86 S.E. 1072 (1915).

Sufficiency of notation when Code section read as charge. — Notation as to the Code section read must be accurate. Walker v. State, 8 Ga. App. 214, 68 S.E. 873 (1910); Hays v. State, 10 Ga. App. 823, 74 S.E. 314 (1912), later appeal, 14 Ga. App. 604, 81 S.E. 914 (1914); Whitaker v. State, 11 Ga. App. 208, 75 S.E. 258 (1912).

When the notations made in a written charge leave in doubt what statute was read to the jury, a new trial will be granted if the evidence does not demand the verdict. Walker v. State, 8 Ga. App. 214, 68 S.E. 873 (1910); Hays v. State, 10 Ga. App. 823, 74 S.E. 314 (1912), later appeal, 14 Ga. App. 604, 81 S.E. 914 (1914).

Charge as to lesser included crimes. — Written application must be made to the trial judge at or before the close of the evidence, requesting a charge on lesser crimes that are included in those set forth in the indictment or accusation, and the trial judge's failure to do so, without a written request, is not error. Cross v. State, 150 Ga. App. 206, 257 S.E.2d 330 (1979).

Cited in Homer v. State, 6 Ga. App. 667, 65 S.E. 701 (1909); Walton v. State, 33 Ga. App. 48, 125 S.E. 511 (1924); Smith v. State, 65 Ga. App. 66, 15 S.E.2d 272 (1941); White v. State, 151 Ga. App. 559, 260 S.E.2d 554 (1979).

Practice and Procedure

Use of recess to write out charges. — Judge should take a recess, if necessary, to secure time to write out the judge's charges. Homer v. State, 6 Ga. App. 667, 65 S.E. 701 (1909).

Additional instruction when instructions have not been reduced to writing on request of counsel. — When the trial court, without the request of counsel for the defendant or for the state, wrote out the court's instructions to the jury, and, without reading such instructions to the jury, announced to the jury that such was the court's written charge, and had the bailiff hand the charge to a juror, who took the charge with the juror to the jury room and, just as the jury was in the act of retiring to consider the jury's verdict, the trial court gave an additional charge, such an action was not error as contravening that portion of this section which prohibits the giving of additional charges to the jury when the trial court has, on request of counsel, reduced the court's charge to writing. Woodard v. State, 91 Ga. App. 374, 85 S.E.2d 723 (1955).

Additional charge given upon request of the jury. — If the prisoner's counsel requests the court to give the court's charge to the jury in writing, and after complying with the request, the court gives orally additional charges, it is cause for a new trial, although the additional charges are given upon a request of the jury for further instruction. Jones v. State, 63 Ga. 456 (1879); Willis v. State, 89 Ga. 188, 15 S.E. 32 (1892).

When the jury returns and asks for additional instruction which the court gives, in part from the original written charge and in part outside thereof, and refiles the original charge and reduces the part of the recharge given outside of the original charge to writing and then reads the charge to the jury, and files the charge with the clerk, the court has not committed reversible error. Moyers v. State, 61 Ga. App. 324, 6 S.E.2d 438 (1939).

As to what is not an additional charge, see Dowling v. State, 7 Ga. App. 613, 67 S.E. 697 (1910).

Delay in filing charges is not necessarily reversible error. — Under this section failure to immediately file the written charge is not error. The only requirement of this section is that when requested, the charge be written out and read by the judge as written, and filed with the clerk so as to be accessible to all persons interested in the charge. Sherwood v. State, 33 Ga. App. 49, 125 S.E. 512 (1924).

When it appears that the charge has been duly filed in the clerk's office, the fact that the charge was retained by the trial court for some time prior thereto is not necessarily error requiring reversal. Fitzgerald v. State, 82 Ga. App. 521, 61 S.E.2d 666 (1950).

Failure to file instructions not given on request of a party. — When the trial judge, without the request of counsel for either the defendant or the state, writes out an instruction to the jury, and does not have the charge filed with the clerk of the court, such inaction constitutes no violation of the provisions of this section as this section requires the trial court to file only those charges to the jury which have been reduced to writing upon the timely request of counsel for one of the parties. Woodard v. State, 91 Ga. App. 374, 85 S.E.2d 723 (1955).

Failure to show on appeal that requested charge not substantially covered by charge given. — If error is assigned upon a refusal of the trial judge to give certain requested instructions to the jury, and it is not shown that the request was not substantially covered by the charge given by the court, and the entire charge is not brought up, the court on appeal is unable to determine whether such refusal was erroneous or not. Perdue v. State, 17 Ga. App. 299, 86 S.E. 661 (1915).

Part of charge may be inapplicable. — It is not usually cause for new trial that entire Code section is given even though part of the charge may be inapplicable under the facts in evidence. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982).

Charge need not be given in exact language of request. — Charge is to be considered as a whole, and when the charge covers the subject matter of the request, it is not error although not in the exact language of the request. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982).

Consideration of entire charge. — Charge of the court must always be considered as a whole in determining whether a particular portion thereof amounts to harmful or reversible error; and, when the charge as a whole substantially presents issues in such a way as is not likely to confuse the jury even though a portion of the charge may not be as clear and precise as could be desired, an appellate court will not reverse a verdict authorized by the evidence. Ideal Pool Corp. v. Champion, 157 Ga. App. 380, 277 S.E.2d 753 (1981).

Language used in charge. — In absence of request, court's failure to define meaning of terms used in charge is not ordinarily ground for reversal. Parker v. State, 157 Ga. App. 521, 278 S.E.2d 99 (1981).

Language which is appropriate when contained in opinion by reviewing court may be improper when embodied in jury charge. Lofton v. State, 157 Ga. App. 447, 278 S.E.2d 94 (1981).

Practice and Procedure (Cont'd)

Charge in a justification defense. — Jury instruction that "where the defense of justification is offered, it is the duty of the jury to consider it along with all the testimony in this case, and if the evidence, taken as a whole, raises reasonable doubt in the mind of the jury of the defendant's guilt, then you should acquit him" did not shift the burden of proof in the defendant's case; however, this charge should not be given in the future. Though not burden-shifting, the charge could have the possibility of being confusing in a close case. Preston v. State, 282 Ga. 210, 647 S.E.2d 260 (2007).

Essential elements of crime must be charged. — When certain legal offenses (i.e., felony, murder) constitute elements of the crime charged (i.e., criminal solicitation), even in the absence of a request to so charge, the trial court errs in failing to provide the jury with the legal definitions of the elemental crimes. The court will not presume, in the absence of a proper instruction from the court, that a jury is cognizant of the legal definition of an underlying offense and will apply the appropriate legal standard in deciding the case. Essuon v. State, 286 Ga. App. 869, 650 S.E.2d 409 (2007).

Slip of the tongue in giving charge not reversible error. — Mere verbal inaccuracy in a charge, which results from a palpable slip of the tongue, and clearly could not have misled or confused the jury, is not reversible error. Gober v. State, 247 Ga. 652, 278 S.E.2d 386 (1981).

Transcribing of charge by court reporter obviates section's requirements. — When trial court failed to file with court clerk the court's written charge as read to the jury, but had an official court reporter take down the full charge, transcribe the charge, and include the charge as part of the trial transcript, the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-56 that the charge be filed with the clerk of the court was obviated. Simmons v. State, 172 Ga. App. 695, 324 S.E.2d 546 (1984).

Appellate Review

In order to preserve the issue of proper jury instruction for appeal, the defendant must object to a charge or state that the defendant reserves the objections. Robinson v. State, 176 Ga. App. 18, 335 S.E.2d 303 (1985).

Charge in terms of "the law presumes" not automatically reversible error. — While the Supreme Court has expressly disapproved of criminal jury instruction cast in terms of "the law presumes" the use of such terminology does not automatically lead to reversal; rather, the entire charge must be examined to determine whether a reasonable juror could interpret the charge as (1) creating a conclusive presumption or (2) burden shifting. Wells v. State, 247 Ga. 792, 279 S.E.2d 213 (1981).

Refusal to charge on issue not raised by evidence. — If evidence at trial does not raise the issue, the trial court does not err in refusing to charge on voluntary manslaughter. Larkin v. State, 247 Ga. 586, 278 S.E.2d 365 (1981).

Charge permissible as to inference to be drawn from acts of defendant. — Trial court's charge that the jury could infer that the acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are the products of a person's will and that the jury could infer that a person of sound mind and discretion intends the natural and probable consequences of a person's acts, but that whether or not the jury made any such inference was a matter solely within the jury's discretion, was not impermissibly burden shifting since such instruction not only told the jury what the law presumed but also informed the jury that the jury had a choice. Duke v. State, 158 Ga. App. 71, 279 S.E.2d 476 (1981).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 89 C.J.S. (Rev), Trial, §§ 573, 574, 727 et seq.

ALR. — Duty of court in criminal case, in absence of request, to charge with respect to circumstantial evidence, 15 A.L.R. 1049.

Failure of instruction on reasonable doubt to include phrase "lack of evidence" or equivalent as reversible error, 67 A.L.R. 1372.

Propriety of instruction in criminal case as to the importance of enforcement of law, or duty of jury in that regard, 124 A.L.R. 1133.

Propriety and effect, in criminal case, of use of alias of accused in instructions to jury, 87 A.L.R.2d 1217.

Propriety of specific jury instructions as to credibility of accomplices, 4 A.L.R.3d 351.

Prejudicial effect of statement or instruction of court as to possibility of parole or pardon, 12 A.L.R.3d 832.

Propriety of reference, in instruction in criminal case, to jurors' duty to God, 39 A.L.R.3d 1445.

Modern status of law regarding cure of error, in instruction as to one offense, by conviction of higher or lesser offense, 15 A.L.R.4th 118.

17-8-57. Expression or intimation of opinion by judge as to matters proved or guilt of accused.

(a)(1) It is error for any judge, during any phase of any criminal case, to express or intimate to the jury the judge's opinion as to whether a fact at issue has or has not been proved or as to the guilt of the accused.

(2) Any party who alleges a violation of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall make a timely objection and inform the court of the specific objection and the grounds for such objection, outside of the jury's hearing and presence. After such objection has been made, and if it is sustained, it shall be the duty of the court to give a curative instruction to the jury or declare a mistrial, if appropriate.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, failure to make a timely objection to an alleged violation of paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section shall preclude appellate review, unless such violation constitutes plain error which affects substantive rights of the parties. Plain error may be considered on appeal even when a timely objection informing the court of the specific objection was not made, so long as such error affects substantive rights of the parties.

(c) Should any judge express an opinion as to the guilt of the accused, the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals or the trial court in a motion for a new trial shall grant a new trial.

History. — Laws 1850, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 462; Code 1863, § 3172; Code 1868, § 3183; Code 1873, § 3248; Code 1882, § 3248; Civil Code 1895, § 4334; Penal Code 1895, § 1032; Civil Code 1910, § 4863; Penal Code 1910, § 1058; Code 1933, § 81-1104; Code 1981, § 17-8-55; Code 1981, § 17-8-57, as redesignated by Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1; Ga. L. 2015, p. 1050, § 1/SB 99.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-7.

Editor's notes. — Former Code Section 17-8-55 was redesignated as this Code section by Ga. L. 1985, p. 1190, § 1.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of criminal law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 129 (1986). For article, "Criminal Law," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 209 (2001). For article, "Evidence," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 281 (2001). For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (2005). For annual survey of criminal law, see 58 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2006). For annual survey of law on criminal law, see 62 Mercer L. Rev. 87 (2010). For article on the 2015 amendment of this Code section, see 32 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 91 (2015). For annual survey of criminal law, see 67 Mercer L. Rev. 31 (2015).

For comment on Sanders v. State, 66 Ga. App. 128, 17 S.E.2d 251 (1941), see 4 Ga. B.J. 51 (1942). For comment on Brock v. State, 91 Ga. App. 141, 85 S.E.2d 177 (1954), holding that a statement by the trial judge designating a witness as an accomplice is a violation by the trial court of the inhibition against an expression by the trial judge as to what has been proved, see 17 Ga. B.J. 501 (1955).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Inquiries by the Judge
Rulings by the Judge
Jury Charges and Curative Instructions
Necessity for Objection or Motion

General Consideration

Purpose. — Reason for this section prohibiting the judge from intimating the judge's opinion as to what has been proved is to keep the jury from being influenced, not to keep the judge from making up the judge's own mind. Morton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 329, 208 S.E.2d 134 (1974).

Purpose of the legal inhibition against the expression or intimation of opinion by the judge is to protect a defendant in the defendant's weakness, as well as in the defendant's strength, and to preserve inviolate the priceless right of trial by jury. Crawford v. State, 139 Ga. App. 347, 228 S.E.2d 371 (1976).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 is limited to remarks made before the jury. See Dukes v. State, 186 Ga. App. 773, 369 S.E.2d 257 (1988); In re S.U., 232 Ga. App. 798, 503 S.E.2d 66 (1998); Miller v. State, 243 Ga. App. 764, 533 S.E.2d 787 (2000).

When the specific comments of the judge complained of by the defendant were made outside the presence of the jury, there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Smith v. State, 236 Ga. App. 122, 511 S.E.2d 223 (1999).

Trial court did not err in allowing the state a recess to review a point of law and by offering to allow a recess for the state to subpoena a missing file as the scope of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 is confined to matters occurring before the jury; here, outside of the presence of the jury, the trial court impartially offered both sides opportunities to present their evidence in a manner that would best give legally admissible, efficient, and comprehensible testimony to the jury. Ingram v. State, 286 Ga. App. 662, 650 S.E.2d 743 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Trial judge's comments about venue and an open-container charge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the comments were made outside the jury's presence, the case was reopened without any reference to the judge's opinion, and the questions were then presented to the jury. Thus, there was no indication that the judge's comments in any way influenced, or even could have influenced, the jury. Davenport v. State, 308 Ga. App. 140, 706 S.E.2d 757 (2011).

Appellant's plea counsel's failure to object to comments made by the trial judge during the plea hearing, comments which the appellant argued violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, was not ineffective assistance; such an objection would have been meritless because § 17-8-57 only applied if a jury was present. Rhodes v. State, 296 Ga. 418, 768 S.E.2d 445 (2015), overruled on other grounds by Collier v. State, 834 S.E.2d 769, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 708 (Ga. 2019).

Trial court's comments on the evidence did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because it was made outside the presence of the jury. Powell v. State, 352 Ga. App. 14, 833 S.E.2d 602 (2019).

Comments four years after verdict. — Judge's comment on the latent fingerprint cards, four years after the verdict, was not an opinion on guilt in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Moore v. State, 293 Ga. 676, 748 S.E.2d 419 (2013).

When § 17-8-57 violated. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 is only violated when the court's charge assumes certain things as facts and intimates to the jury what the judge believes the evidence to be. Mullinax v. State, 255 Ga. 442, 339 S.E.2d 704 (1986); Williams v. State, 257 Ga. 788, 364 S.E.2d 569 (1988); Stephens v. State, 185 Ga. App. 825, 366 S.E.2d 211 (1988), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020); Turner v. State, 259 Ga. 873, 388 S.E.2d 857 (1990); Fletcher v. State, 197 Ga. App. 112, 397 S.E.2d 605 (1990); Blackmon v. State, 197 Ga. App. 133, 397 S.E.2d 728 (1990).

When a habeas court found the trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 and that appellate counsel was ineffective for failing to raise the issue on appeal, it was error for the habeas court to order that the defendant was entitled to a new appeal as: (1) this violated the rule that a criminal defendant was not entitled to a second appeal; (2) wasted judicial resources as an appeal required the appellate court to engage in the same analysis the habeas court had just performed; and (3) created the possibility, realized in this case, that an appellate court would be presented with a matter outside of the court's jurisdiction, as appeals of decisions of a habeas court were the sole province of the Georgia Supreme Court. Milliken v. Stewart, 276 Ga. 712, 583 S.E.2d 30 (2003).

On appeal from an aggravated assault conviction, because the trial judge improperly commented on the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by telling the jury that the parties agreed that there was no gun involved in the incident, the comment amounted to reversible error entitling the defendant to a new trial. Brimidge v. State, 287 Ga. App. 23, 651 S.E.2d 344 (2007).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 is violated only when a court's charge assumes certain things as facts and intimates to the jury what the judge believes the evidence to be. Hargett v. State, 285 Ga. 82, 674 S.E.2d 261 (2009), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Violation of either the letter or spirit of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 constitutes reversible error. Stinson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 533, 260 S.E.2d 407 (1979).

It is error to violate even the spirit of this section. A violation thereof is a mandatory cause for a new trial. Crawford v. State, 139 Ga. App. 347, 228 S.E.2d 371 (1976).

No violation of the statute. — Defendant's conviction was affirmed because the trial court's questioning the conviction did not cross the line and violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, but rather was interposed for the purposes of developing the truth in the case and of clarifying the witnesses' testimony. Littlejohn v. State, 320 Ga. App. 197, 739 S.E.2d 682 (2013).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court announced to a panel of the jury venire during preliminary instructions that the indicted offense of malice murder occurred in the subject county as the court was merely explaining what was alleged in the indictment against the defendant, not what had been proven. Lindsey v. State, 295 Ga. 343, 760 S.E.2d 170 (2014).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to the court's ruling that the court's finding of criminal contempt could not be used to impeach the second victim's testimony because allowing the jury to be informed that the court had found the second victim to have testified falsely would have directly violated the principle that it was error for a judge in any criminal case to express or intimate the judge's opinion as to what had or had not been proved or as to the guilt of the accused. Green v. State, 299 Ga. 337, 788 S.E.2d 380 (2016).

Trial court's comment to potential jurors that the defendant was charged with the murder of the defendant's wife did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 as the judge was explaining the nature of the case to help jurors determine if the jurors had been exposed to extensive media coverage.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Smart v. State, 299 Ga. 414, 788 S.E.2d 442 (2016).

Trial court did not commit plain error or violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court reminded a victim during direct examination that the victim was "in the room" when a co-defendant uttered a threat as the trial court's restatement of what the victim had testified to and its immediately following question were designed not to express an improper opinion as to what had or had not been proved, but to elucidate the issues before the jury. Carter v. State, 343 Ga. App. 853, 805 S.E.2d 924 (2017), cert. denied, No. S18C0568, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 519 (Ga. 2018).

Defendant failed to show that any of the trial court's comments violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the defendant's statement that it was taking a recess to provide the state an opportunity to talk with the witness was an exercise of the court's discretion to control the trial proceedings and not an expression of the court's opinion of the witness's credibility, the overall import of the trial court's statements about an officer's testimony was to explain to counsel why counsel had exhausted a particular line of question and why the court was directing counsel to move on to a different topic, and the judge's comments were meant to clarify the prior testimony of the sergeant. Thompson v. State, 349 Ga. App. 1, 825 S.E.2d 413 (2019).

Defendant was not entitled to a new trial because the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 as the trial court's statement was a permissible clarification of a procedure that did not address the credibility of witnesses or any fact at issue in the trial and the defendant could not establish plain error. Elrod v. State, 354 Ga. App. 177, 840 S.E.2d 658 (2020).

Instruction on alternative defenses. — When the defendant also pursued the alternative defense that the defendant did not cause the gun to fire, the jury charge as given did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because it would not have been error for the trial court to directly tell the jury that the defendant admitted the shooting for purposes of the defenses of justification and accident. McLean v. State, 297 Ga. 81, 772 S.E.2d 685 (2015).

Rule inapplicable. — Trial court's admission of testimony from a victim of a prior aggravated assault and armed robbery was not subject to plain error review as the instant prosecution was not a death penalty case or action in which the trial judge expressed or intimated the judge's opinion as to the guilt of the accused or as to what had or had not been proved in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 514, 640 S.E.2d 280 (2007).

Prejudicial character of remarks. — It is the prejudicial character of the remarks which constitutes the error. Morton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 329, 208 S.E.2d 134 (1974).

Fact must be material for this section to apply. Jones v. State, 65 Ga. 621 (1880).

Failure to identify comment with particularity. — Defendants failed to show a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, when the defendants failed to identify the challenged comment with any particularity. Gorman v. State, 318 Ga. App. 535, 734 S.E.2d 263 (2012).

When expression of opinion as to what has been proved is error. — It is error for the trial court to give an opinion as to what has been proved if the opinion goes to the essential question of guilt or innocence or if, although undisputed, it may be the subject of contrary inferences, and it is error to instruct the jury that there is no contention to the contrary even as to uncontradicted evidence when the defendant, by the defendant's plea of not guilty, has placed every material fact in issue. McFarland v. State, 109 Ga. App. 688, 137 S.E.2d 308 (1964).

Court of appeals did not err by finding that the trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by expressing an opinion as to whether venue had been proven because following the prosecutor's attempt to elicit testimony from a salesperson as to the salesperson's store's location, the trial court asked the state if venue was established and commented that there had been some confusion since a salesperson had worked at one store and was working in another one, and that the court just wanted to make sure; the comment "I just wanted to make sure," following the trial court's questioning of the salesperson, constituted an expression of opinion that venue had in fact been proven, and the plain language of § 17-8-57 provided for reversal of the entire case, not a portion thereof. State v. Anderson, 287 Ga. 159, 695 S.E.2d 26 (2010).

Comment on where crime occurred not improper. — It was not an impermissible statement by the trial court that the crime actually happened in a specific county or that the state properly indicted the defendant therein. Mitchell v. State, 337 Ga. App. 841, 789 S.E.2d 797 (2016), cert. denied, No. S17C0012, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 211 (Ga. 2017).

Although it was unusual and unnecessary for the trial court to explain an accomplice's plea deal to the potential jurors, the explanations were not a comment on the defendant's guilt, nor were the explanations comments on whether a fact had or had not been proved. The court summarized the terms of the accomplice's plea deal, the court did not tell the jury that the accomplice's testimony would be truthful, but rather stated accurately that the state's sentencing recommendation would depend on whether the accomplice's testimony was truthful in the state's opinion. Barboza v. State, No. S20A0404, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 470 (June 29, 2020).

Presumption of injury from erroneous opinion of proof or guilt. — Law conclusively presumes injury from the error of expressing an opinion as to proof or guilt, and the mandatory provisions of this section require reversal of the judgment of the trial court on proper assignment of error. Allen v. State, 194 Ga. 178, 21 S.E.2d 73, answer conformed to, 67 Ga. App. 607, 21 S.E.2d 280 (1942), overruled on other grounds, Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139 (1943).

Expression of opinion as to an uncontested and undisputed fact is not cause for reversal. Dixon v. State, 196 Ga. App. 15, 395 S.E.2d 577 (1990).

Trial court judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by questioning the defendant about a prior guilty plea that the defendant entered as the questioning involved matters that were not disputed; there was similarly no violation by the judge's questioning of the defendant's roommate as to why the defendant signed an affidavit indicating that cocaine found in their apartment belonged to the roommate, as the questioning only served to assist the defendant, and counsel's failure to object thereto indicated a lack of prejudice to the defendant. Branscomb v. State, 272 Ga. App. 700, 613 S.E.2d 222 (2005).

Trial court's statement to the jury in the defendant's felony murder and cruelty to children trial regarding the child victim's teething did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 since the fact of the child's teething was undisputed; defendant testified that the defendant was told that the child was teething, and another witness testified that they were using medication to alleviate the child's teething discomfort. Sauerwein v. State, 280 Ga. 438, 629 S.E.2d 235 (2006).

Fact that an item seized from the defendant's person was cocaine was not contradicted at trial, and the defendant personally referred to the substance as cocaine. Therefore, the trial court's comment that Exhibit 1 "is the cocaine" as the court collected the evidence was not an improper comment on the evidence contrary to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and any error was cured by an instruction to the jury that whether or not the substance was cocaine was for the jury to determine. Nelson v. State, 305 Ga. App. 65, 699 S.E.2d 66 (2010).

Expression of opinion on issue of fact is not harmless. — Provisions of this section are mandatory, and a charge which discloses the court's opinion on an issue of fact cannot be treated as harmless. Mitchell v. State, 89 Ga. App. 80, 78 S.E.2d 563 (1953).

Trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, requiring a reversal of the defendant's convictions, even though defense counsel did not object to the trial court's comments because a violation of § 17-8-57 was always "plain error." Murphy v. State, 290 Ga. 459, 722 S.E.2d 51 (2012).

Defendant was entitled to a new trial because by stating to the jury venire that the crime happened in Taylor County, Georgia, the trial court judge expressed or intimated the court's opinion as to a disputed issue of fact and thus violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Sales v. State, 296 Ga. 538, 769 S.E.2d 374 (2015).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

An expression of opinion by the court with regard to what had or had not been proved cannot be deemed harmless. Crawford v. State, 139 Ga. App. 347, 228 S.E.2d 371 (1976).

Terms of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 are mandatory. — This section forbids a trial judge to express or intimate the judge's opinion as to what has or has not been proved, and declares that should the judge violate this section, the reversal of the case is mandatory. Demonia v. State, 69 Ga. App. 862, 27 S.E.2d 101 (1943).

There can be no finding of harmless error if a trial court violates O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; thus, the law is well-established that instructions given to a jury by a trial court cannot cure a violation of § 17-8-57 and the Georgia Supreme Court disapproves any case law language intimating the contrary. Patel v. State, 282 Ga. 412, 651 S.E.2d 55 (2007).

Absolute guarantee of new trial. — Section gives to one accused of crime the absolute guarantee of a new trial in the event the accused is deprived of a fair and impartial trial because of error under that section committed by the judge before whom the accused is convicted. Allen v. State, 194 Ga. 178, 21 S.E.2d 73, answer conformed to, 67 Ga. App. 607, 21 S.E.2d 280 (1942), overruled on other grounds, Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139 (1943).

If O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 is violated, even in clear case of guilt, new trial must be granted. — Even in a clear case of guilt, an appellate court has no other alternative, and the court desires no other, than to grant a new trial when the court comes to the conclusion that the right of the defendant to have the fact of the defendant's guilt or innocence determined exclusively by the jury has been in the slightest degree infringed by judicial intimation or expression. Cook v. State, 40 Ga. App. 125, 149 S.E. 79 (1929).

Regardless of correctness of verdict. — When a defendant has been deprived of a fair and impartial trial, the grant of a new trial is imperative, without reference to the correctness of the verdict. Cook v. State, 40 Ga. App. 125, 149 S.E. 79 (1929).

Expression of opinion on facts renders the grant of a new trial imperative, without reference to the correctness of the verdict. Golden v. State, 45 Ga. App. 501, 165 S.E. 299 (1932).

Disregard of this section on the part of a trial judge renders the grant of a new trial imperative, without reference to the correctness of the verdict. Allen v. State, 194 Ga. 178, 21 S.E.2d 73, answer conformed to, 67 Ga. App. 607, 21 S.E.2d 280 (1942), overruled on other grounds, Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139 (1943).

Remedy when jurors are prejudiced by remarks by officers of the court. — If the defendant is of the opinion that any remarks made by officers of the court might prejudice the jurors, the defendant's remedy is to purge the jury on the trial of the case. Robinson v. State, 86 Ga. App. 375, 71 S.E.2d 677 (1952).

Comments on scheduling and procedure. — Judge's comments at the outset of the trial that the judge would keep breaks as brief as possible and that, if the jury had not begun deliberations by Friday, it was possible the jury would have to return the following week were not intended to hurry the trial to a conclusion and did not indicate an opinion that the defendant was guilty. Johnson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 722, 475 S.E.2d 918 (1996).

Comments on venue. — Trial court's statement to the venire that the crime took place in Muscogee County expressed or intimated the court's opinion as to a disputed issue of fact at trial in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and entitled the defendant to a new trial. Rouse v. State, 296 Ga. 213, 765 S.E.2d 879 (2014).

Comments regarding pretrial procedure. — Although the trial court's comments to the jury venire three weeks prior to their service may have come close to commenting on the defendant's guilt or innocence, the comments were made to explain the procedure leading up to the jurors' service and, thus, did not necessitate a new trial. Hicks v. State, 326 Ga. App. 46, 755 S.E.2d 855 (2014).

Colloquy regarding expanding the indictment due to additional evidence. — Trial judge's explanation to a defendant's counsel that based on the counsel's questioning of an investigator regarding the defendant's statement to the investigator that the defendant lived in Florida, the judge was going to expand the indictment to include falsifying or concealing a material fact, which was one possible violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-10-20, when the defendant had only been charged with making a false statement, did not constitute an improper remark under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because it was a colloquy with counsel regarding possible jury charges and did not express an opinion on what had or had not been proved. Adams v. State, 312 Ga. App. 570, 718 S.E.2d 899 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0500, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 263 (Ga. 2012).

Comments about control and preventing a disturbance. — Court found no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because: (1) the trial court's comment, made in an effort to keep the proceedings under control and to prevent a disturbance, warning the defendant outside the presence of the jury that the defendant would be removed from the courtroom if the defendant could not stay under control, was not improper; and (2) the remaining comments were limited to a clarification of procedures and did not address the credibility of witnesses or any fact at issue in the trial, and thus, did not constitute a basis for reversal. Linson v. State, 287 Ga. 881, 700 S.E.2d 394 (2010).

Trial judge's comment, after excusing for cause a jury panel member who was a sworn police officer, that the judge had no discretion in the matter because of a prior appellate ruling, and that the judge disagreed with that ruling, did not constitute a statement of opinion either as to proof or as to guilt, and thus did not impermissibly bolster any witness's credibility. Najmaister v. State, 196 Ga. App. 345, 396 S.E.2d 71 (1990).

Judge's comments about defendant's desire to question all jurors. — When the record shows that the defendant's election to question all the jurors on the panel before starting to strike a jury prompted the trial court to comment to the jury, "Do not let it prejudice your minds against the defendant in any way whatsoever," nothing in the record showed that the defendant was in any way prejudiced by this remark. Davis v. State, 204 Ga. App. 657, 420 S.E.2d 349 (1992).

Court's statements regarding defendant's choice to proceed pro se were not improper. — None of the trial court's statements to the jury was an improper comment on the evidence because the record showed that the trial court explained to the jury that the defendant chose not to be present during jury selection, that the trial would proceed in the defendant's absence, that the defendant would have an opportunity to participate if the defendant changed the defendant's mind, that the defendant had been offered an attorney, and that the trial court had advised the defendant to accept the offer but the defendant had chosen self representation. Caldwell v. State, 273 Ga. App. 135, 614 S.E.2d 246 (2005).

Indirect reference to appellate process did not violate rule. — Trial judge's statement that the judge would "get reversed probably" if the judge failed to read the jury charge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57(a)(1) because the statement did not suggest the judge believed the defendant would be found guilty and appeal but merely stressed the importance of the jury charge. DeLoach v. State, 308 Ga. 283, 840 S.E.2d 396 (2020).

Trial court's inadvertent statements that the allegations in the indictment were facts, that the indictment was evidence, that the jurors had to base the jurors' decision on what the attorneys said, and that the jurors were to report any evidence the jurors heard outside the courtroom did not constitute comments on the evidence. Atkins v. State, 253 Ga. App. 169, 558 S.E.2d 755 (2002).

Trial court's joking comment. — As the record showed that the trial court's joking comment was directed at a juror, and not the defendant, and defense counsel did not object to the statement, there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Abernathy v. State, 278 Ga. App. 574, 630 S.E.2d 421 (2006).

Trial court's rebuke of counsel. — No abuse of discretion resulted from the trial court's refusal to declare a mistrial after the court advised defense counsel to refrain from inappropriately interrupting the testimony of the medical examiner; moreover, the defendant failed to show by the record that the court's purportedly damaging rebuke constituted an expression of opinion on the case, especially when the court reminded the jury of the court's previous instruction not to consider any actions, comments, or opinions of the court in reaching a verdict. Buttram v. State, 280 Ga. 595, 631 S.E.2d 642 (2006).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Trial court's use of word "honey". — Trial court judge's use of the word "honey" to refer to an eight-year-old child victim while the victim was testifying was not an opinion of the victim's credibility and did not seriously affect the fairness, integrity, and public reputation of the judicial proceedings. Moore v. State, 319 Ga. App. 766, 738 S.E.2d 348 (2013).

Distinction between evidence and proof. — There is a difference between evidence and proof: evidence tends to establish or disprove an alleged matter of fact in issue; proof is the effect of evidence, while evidence is merely the means of making proof. A fact is not proved unless it is established. Jackson v. State, 177 Ga. 264, 170 S.E. 26 (1933).

Statement that there is no dispute about a fact in evidence does not express an opinion. McCloud v. State, 166 Ga. 436, 143 S.E. 558 (1928).

If there is no conflict in the evidence on a certain point the trial court may take the fact to have been admitted or proved as the case may be. McFarland v. State, 109 Ga. App. 688, 137 S.E.2d 308 (1964).

Trial court did not err under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by referring to the composition of exhibits which contained cocaine and ecstasy because there was never any dispute at trial as to the composition of the exhibits. Foster v. State, 314 Ga. App. 642, 725 S.E.2d 777 (2012).

Court intimating opinion upon uncontested fact. — That the trial court intimates an opinion upon an uncontested and undisputed fact is not cause for a new trial as being in violation of this section. Abbott v. State, 91 Ga. App. 380, 85 S.E.2d 615 (1955).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 inapplicable to facts conceded by both parties. — This section refers to the expression or intimation of an opinion touching some fact at issue involved in the case, and not to something that is conceded by both parties. Thomas v. State, 27 Ga. App. 38, 107 S.E. 418 (1921).

Assumption that fact is true when only one possible inference from evidence. — While the trial court may not under this section express an opinion as to what has been proved in the case, when only one inference is possible from the evidence it is not improper for the court to assume the fact to be true. Green v. State, 129 Ga. App. 27, 198 S.E.2d 343 (1973); Lyle v. State, 131 Ga. App. 8, 205 S.E.2d 126 (1974).

Stating an admitted fact does not constitute an expression or intimation of opinion. Swain v. State, 162 Ga. 777, 135 S.E. 187 (1926).

Comments by the court not plain error. — Since the fact that the victim's home was burglarized was not an issue in the case because the defendant put forth an alibi defense readily agreeing that the home had been burglarized, the court's comment about the home being "burglarized" did not constitute plain error. Archie v. State, 248 Ga. App. 56, 545 S.E.2d 179 (2001).

Defendant's claim that the trial court's comments on the credibility of the co-defendant failed as any error did not amount to plain error because the defendant failed to establish that the error affected the defendant's substantial rights given the strong evidence of guilt against the defendant, including the defendant's admission to being present for the shooting and admission to a fellow gang member that the defendant shot the victim. Harris v. State, 302 Ga. 832, 809 S.E.2d 723 (2018).

Instruction to counsel to keep closing argument relevant not improper. — In a defendant's trial for aggravated assault and other charges arising out of a road rage incident, the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by interrupting defense counsel's closing argument to request that counsel not stray into matters that were not relevant; the instruction that the arguments raised by defense counsel were not relevant was neither an expression of opinion nor a comment on the evidence. Adams v. State, 282 Ga. App. 819, 640 S.E.2d 329 (2006).

To assume state's evidence is the truth violates law. — To assume in a criminal case that the testimony for the state is the truth, though such testimony is not contradicted by evidence for the defendant, and to charge the jury that such testimony is the truth and that there is no contention to the contrary, is violative of this section and demands a new trial. Golden v. State, 45 Ga. App. 501, 165 S.E. 299 (1932).

Assumption by court that a crime has been committed. — If there is nothing in the evidence or in the defendant's statement to dispute the fact that the alleged crime was committed, and the defendant's defense rests solely upon the contention that the defendant did not participate in the offense, the court does not violate this section in assuming that a crime has been committed. Pruitt v. State, 36 Ga. App. 736, 138 S.E. 251 (1927).

Assumption that facts have been admitted, when plea of not guilty entered. — Plea of not guilty, by one accused of crime, is an express contention on the accused's part antagonistic to every fact necessary to be proved by the state in order to establish the accused's guilt. Unless the accused admits one or more of the facts which it devolves upon the state to prove, such facts must be established by evidence. To assume that an important fact in the case on trial has been admitted, and to so instruct the jury when no such admission has been made, is error requiring a new trial. Duke v. State, 43 Ga. App. 428, 158 S.E. 919 (1931).

Stressing the contentions of one party at the expense of an adversary may amount to such an intimation of opinion as to demand the grant of a new trial. Screven v. State, 169 Ga. 384, 150 S.E. 558 (1929).

Discussion of case between judge and counsel. — Question put by the judge in a colloquy between the judge and counsel on a question of the admissibility of certain evidence is not error. Davis v. State, 72 Ga. App. 631, 34 S.E.2d 672 (1945).

It is not reversible error for the judge, in discussing with counsel the admissibility of testimony, the propriety of a nonsuit, the direction of a verdict, or similar matters in the progress of the trial, or in explaining the judge's rulings upon questions of this nature, to refer to the evidence or to the statements of witnesses, provided the judge does not go out of the line of legitimate discussion upon the point presented, or use such language as to indicate apparent or actual judicial approval or disparagement of any witness or of any part of the testimony. Miller v. State, 122 Ga. App. 553, 177 S.E.2d 838 (1970); Jones v. State, 159 Ga. App. 634, 284 S.E.2d 651 (1981).

Inhibition against an expression or intimation of opinion by the trial judge as to the facts of the case does not extend to colloquies between the judge and counsel as to the admissibility of certain evidence, especially if the judge is ruling upon a point made by counsel for the accused. Bradley v. State, 137 Ga. App. 670, 224 S.E.2d 778, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 918, 97 S. Ct. 310, 50 L. Ed. 2d 284 (1976); Fletcher v. State, 157 Ga. App. 707, 278 S.E.2d 444 (1981); Troutman v. State, 178 Ga. App. 314, 342 S.E.2d 785 (1986).

Trial court's reference to a witness's testimony during colloquy with counsel respecting an evidentiary ruling was not an impermissible expression of opinion. Mooney v. State, 221 Ga. App. 420, 471 S.E.2d 904 (1996).

Trial court simply admonishing defense counsel for questioning a witness about what the witness was asked in the witness's plea did not rise to the level of an expression or intimation of opinion by the judge as to matters proved or as to the guilt of the accused. Wooten v. State, 240 Ga. App. 725, 524 S.E.2d 776 (1999).

Discussion of evidence with counsel. — Statutory inhibition against an expression or intimation of opinion by the trial court as to the facts of the case does not generally extend to colloquies between the judge and counsel regarding the admissibility of evidence. Havard v. State, 175 Ga. App. 798, 334 S.E.2d 381 (1985); Smith v. State, 189 Ga. App. 27, 375 S.E.2d 69 (1988); Whitt v. State, 215 Ga. App. 704, 452 S.E.2d 125 (1994); Aman v. State, 223 Ga. App. 309, 477 S.E.2d 431 (1996); Williams v. State, 244 Ga. App. 692, 536 S.E.2d 572 (2000).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Mere colloquies between counsel and the trial court regarding evidentiary issues do not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Bryant v. State, 268 Ga. 664, 492 S.E.2d 868 (1997); Loveless v. State, 245 Ga. App. 555, 538 S.E.2d 464 (2000).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 in explaining the basis for an evidentiary ruling outside the presence of the jury. Singleton v. State, 240 Ga. App. 240, 522 S.E.2d 734 (1999).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by qualifying an expert witness in the presence of the jury since the court later charged the jurors that it was the jury's function to determine the credibility or believability of the witnesses and that the court had not intended, by any ruling or comment made during the progress of the trial, to express any opinion upon the credibility of the witnesses. Davitt v. State, 257 Ga. App. 384, 571 S.E.2d 427 (2002).

Explanation of evidence. — Trial court's explanation of certain evidence given at trial as being an example of direct testimony or evidence did not amount to an improper comment by the trial court or an intimation of the court's opinion as to the defendant's guilt. Ridgeway v. State, 174 Ga. App. 663, 330 S.E.2d 916 (1985).

If the jury asked a question regarding specific evidence, it was proper for the trial court to instruct the jury that the jury must remember the evidence. Nealy v. State, 230 Ga. App. 747, 498 S.E.2d 119 (1998).

Comment on defendant's testimony. — Trial court's statement to the jury that the defendant "is about to testify as to I believe some bases for his change in testimony which you may have observed yesterday," followed with an instruction that the testimony should be considered solely for the purpose of explaining the change did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Nealy v. State, 239 Ga. App. 651, 522 S.E.2d 34 (1999).

Comment intimating court's opinion on credibility of witness. — Defendant was entitled to a new trial because the trial court erred in asking a witness whether the witness was lying or being truthful, intimating the court's opinion regarding the credibility of the witness's testimony. Williams v. State, 329 Ga. App. 706, 766 S.E.2d 474 (2014).

Comment's on witness's expertise. — Trial court's statement that a witness was an expert and was a frequent witness did not amount to plain error because the defendant failed to show a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, much less an obvious error, as the comment indicated nothing about the defendant's guilt and did not likely affect the outcome of the trial. Hightower v. State, 304 Ga. 755, 822 S.E.2d 273 (2018).

Expression of opinion about witness's credibility. — Trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by expressing the court's opinion about the credibility of a neighbor, who testified for the state at the defendant's trial, because the trial court's question and comment about the neighbor's testimony intimated the court's opinion that the testimony was believable since the neighbor was an independent witness, unrelated to any of the parties involved in the case; any reasonable juror, having heard the trial court's comments, could construe the comments as an expression of opinion on the neighbor's credibility, and the trial court's purported curative instruction did not eradicate the court's inappropriate comments. Callaham v. State, 305 Ga. App. 626, 700 S.E.2d 624 (2010).

Trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, requiring a reversal of the defendant's convictions because: (1) the jury could have interpreted the court calling a witness a "good detective" as expressing a favorable opinion of the witness's abilities and thus bolstering the witness's credibility; and (2) it was impossible to say the jurors were not influenced to some extent. Murphy v. State, 290 Ga. 459, 722 S.E.2d 51 (2012).

Trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, requiring a reversal of the defendant's convictions because: (1) the jury could have construed the court's comments on an officer's use of a written document and the officer's "best efforts" as expressing an opinion that the officer's recollection of the defendant's statement was reliable or credible; and (2) it was impossible to say the jurors were not influenced to some extent. Murphy v. State, 290 Ga. 459, 722 S.E.2d 51 (2012).

Trial court's admonition to defense counsel and instructions to the jury to disregard defense counsel's challenge to an officer's credibility clearly intimated the court's opinion that the officer's testimony was believable and violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and the purported curative instruction did not eradicate the trial court's inappropriate comments. Wilson v. State, 325 Ga. App. 859, 755 S.E.2d 253 (2014).

Remarks not opinion. — Comment was clearly a preliminary reference to what the jury could expect to hear once the evidence began, and was not an unauthorized expression of an opinion by the trial court as to what actually had been proven in the case. Cammon v. State, 269 Ga. 470, 500 S.E.2d 329 (1998).

In defendant's shoplifting case, when the judge explained that the judge had directed a verdict on certain items because no evidence was presented that the items were stolen, the judge's explanation was not an expression of opinion on the remainder of the evidence in the case. Smith v. State, 275 Ga. App. 60, 619 S.E.2d 694 (2005).

Court of appeals erred by reversing the defendant's convictions for armed robbery because the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court did not express or intimate the court's opinion as to what had or had not been proved since the court's directive to prove venue was followed by a question as to whether venue had been proven; in order to violate § 17-8-57, the trial court's comments must pertain to a disputed issue of fact. State v. Gardner, 286 Ga. 633, 690 S.E.2d 164 (2010).

Trial court did not improperly express the court's opinion of the case in front of the jury in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because, although the trial judge told the prosecution that the prosecution needed another witness after venue was put into question, the only possible inference was that venue had not been proven. Furthermore, the trial court was within the court's discretion to limit the scope of the testimony of the following witness to the issue of venue as the prosecution had already rested the prosecutor's case; the trial court had discretion to propound the court's own questions to the witness; and the trial court never stated that the alleged crime took place in the county where the trial occurred and never expressed the court's opinion or commented on what had been proven. Smith v. State, 306 Ga. App. 693, 703 S.E.2d 329 (2010).

Trial court did not err when the court charged the jury by intimating the court's opinion as to the defendant's credibility, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, because, when the charge on impeachment was considered in context, no reasonable juror could have construed the charge as an expression of the trial court's own opinion that the defendant had been impeached or committed the alleged crimes. Moreover, the jury was instructed that the jury alone would decide whether the defendant was guilty of a crime. Pullen v. State, 315 Ga. App. 125, 726 S.E.2d 621 (2012).

Trial court did not intimate an opinion on any facts or any of the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the court's comments to the jury were limited to a clarification of procedures and did not address the credibility of witnesses or any fact at issue. Ingram v. State, 290 Ga. 500, 722 S.E.2d 714 (2012).

Judge's friendly exchange with the assistant district attorney and a witness did not amount to an impermissible comment on the witness's credibility. Griffin v. State, 331 Ga. App. 550, 769 S.E.2d 514 (2015).

Court's comment on the obvious confusion between the prosecutor and a witness regarding the insurer's decision to cover the loss as opposed to its consent to the fire was not an opinion about what had or had not been proven. Frey v. State, 338 Ga. App. 583, 790 S.E.2d 835 (2016).

Judge's commenting on the materiality of certain evidence, questioning defense counsel about the purpose of a cross-examination, and observing that the case was "sloppily run" did not harm the defendant's right to a fair trial. Boyd v. State, 267 Ga. 453, 479 S.E.2d 724 (1997).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Judge's comments regarding appellate process violated statute. — Trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by responding to the jury's request for "all of the evidence" that if the court gave the jury other items "it would be reversible error" and "we would have to try the case all over again"; these statements improperly referred to the availability of appellate review, intimating that the defendant was guilty and would need to appeal. Gibson v. State, 288 Ga. 617, 706 S.E.2d 412 (2011).

Remark assuming truth of controverted fact. — There was reversible error when the court's remark assuming the truth of a fact stated therein controverted a central theme of the defense. Sweat v. State, 173 Ga. App. 441, 326 S.E.2d 809 (1985).

Explanation as to delay of witness not expression of opinion. — Trial court's explanation to the jury that the delay of the witness was not willful and that the witness had been sent for but not arrested, thereby causing an early noon recess, did not constitute an expression of an opinion as to what had been proved or as to the guilt of the accused. Hendricks v. State, 157 Ga. App. 715, 278 S.E.2d 453 (1981).

When the trial court instructed the jury immediately after sending a witness out to listen to a tape recording of the witness's interview with the police, instructed the jury in the court's general charge that nothing the court said was to be construed as a comment on the evidence or the guilt or innocence of the defendant, and also instructed the jury that the purpose in postponing the examination of the witness was to control the progress of the trial and "make the orderly presentation of the case go a little bit faster," the instructions were proper and demonstrated that no comment made in the jury's presence was directed toward a material issue or relevant evidence in the case. Smith v. State, 236 Ga. App. 122, 511 S.E.2d 223 (1999).

Judge explaining ruling. — Remarks by judge assigning a reason for a ruling are neither an improper expression of opinion nor a comment on the evidence. McClain v. State, 267 Ga. 378, 477 S.E.2d 814 (1996), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1106, 118 S. Ct. 2485, 138 L. Ed. 2d 993 (1997).

There was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the comment was explanatory of the trial court's ruling on the objection to the admission of testimony. Cammon v. State, 269 Ga. 470, 500 S.E.2d 329 (1998).

Trial court did not improperly comment upon the evidence at trial because the court's statements were clearly intended to explain the court's ruling on the state's objection to defense counsel's closing argument. Williams v. State, 303 Ga. App. 222, 692 S.E.2d 820 (2010).

Trial court did not state an opinion on an expert's testimony in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the trial court exercised the court's judgment and discretion by stopping the testimony and explaining the court's evidentiary ruling to trial counsel. Ridley v. State, 290 Ga. 798, 725 S.E.2d 223 (2012).

Court limiting defendant's movement in courtroom. — Court could not conclude that a judge's brief explanation that the judge restricted the defendant's movement around the courtroom during trial amounted to a "continuing" or "constant" reminder that the defendant was detained at the time of trial; evidence that an accused was confined in jail for the offense at issue in a criminal trial did not place the defendant's character in evidence. Walker v. State, 259 Ga. App. 83, 576 S.E.2d 62 (2003).

Court's explanation to jury of purpose of Jackson-Denno hearing. — Trial court's explanation to the jury out of the presence of defense counsel regarding the purpose of a Jackson-Denno hearing did not constitute an expression of the court's opinion as to the the voluntariness of the defendant's statement. Harper v. State, 171 Ga. App. 57, 318 S.E.2d 787 (1984).

Ministerial comment. — Judge's comment to the jury that the case "should be very straightforward ... once we get the trial underway" was not an expression of opinion regarding facts. Bradford v. State, 221 Ga. App. 232, 471 S.E.2d 248 (1996).

Judge's comments regarding pro se defendant's behavior in the courtroom were not comments directed toward a material issue or relevant evidence in the case. Flantroy v. State, 231 Ga. App. 744, 501 S.E.2d 10 (1998).

Judge's explanation that defendant absent due to disruptive behavior. — Trial court's statement explaining the defendant's absence from the courtroom because of disruptive behavior did not constitute an expression or intimation of the court's opinion as to the guilt of the accused. Williams v. State, 183 Ga. App. 373, 358 S.E.2d 914 (1987).

Court directing defendant to testify from counsel's table. — Trial court does not err in directing the defendant to testify from defense counsel's table, if the trial court does not express an opinion as to what has or has not been proved or as to the guilt of the defendant, as the conduct of the trial, especially matters of courtroom security, are matters within the discretion of the trial court. Lee v. State, 166 Ga. App. 644, 305 S.E.2d 175 (1983).

Judge's comments about defendant's cross-examination techniques proper. — Judge's informing a defendant in the defendant's capacity as cocounsel in defendant's own defense that the defendant could not make speeches while ostensibly cross-examining a state's witness and that the defendant should limit the defendant's remarks to asking questions was not violative of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Powers v. State, 168 Ga. App. 642, 310 S.E.2d 260 (1983).

Although, in a criminal trial, a trial judge agreed with the prosecution that defense counsel's question mischaracterized a witness's plea bargain, the judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because: (1) the remark did not state or imply an opinion as to what had or had not been proved or as to a defendant's guilt; and (2) the remark merely exercised the judge's duty to manage the trial proceedings. White v. State, 315 Ga. App. 54, 726 S.E.2d 548 (2012).

Comment on demonstration by defense counsel. — Statements and questions by the court merely clarifying the nature of a demonstration by defense counsel and enunciating a correct statement of the law were not improper comments on the evidence. Rowe v. State, 266 Ga. 136, 464 S.E.2d 811 (1996).

Remark to jury about continuing deliberations. — Judge's statement to the jury "[a] lot of times when you sleep on it, things have a way of coming together" did not constitute an impermissible comment as to what had been proved or as to how the jury should find. Schwerdtfeger v. State, 167 Ga. App. 19, 305 S.E.2d 834 (1983).

Remarks as to introduction of evidence. — There was no error in a charge to the jury that "the state will introduce evidence in support of the charges contained in the indictment," since such statement did not predict that the state's evidence would establish the charges. Cook v. State, 255 Ga. 565, 340 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1986).

Statement by the court as to what a witness has testified has been construed to be an intimation or expression of opinion as to what has been proven. Golden v. State, 45 Ga. App. 501, 165 S.E. 299 (1932).

Judge may state recollection as to what has been testified. — It is permissible for the trial judge to state the judge's recollection of what has been testified when in doing this the judge does not intimate any opinion. Saffold v. State, 11 Ga. App. 329, 75 S.E. 338 (1912).

Stating what witness testified to, when testimony material and prejudicial to accused. — Statement by the court to the jury as to what a witness has testified, when such testimony is material and prejudicial to the accused, is reversible error. Edwards v. State, 4 Ga. App. 167, 60 S.E. 1033 (1908).

Remarks tending to compliment or disparage witness. — Trial judge should not, in the hearing of the jury, make any remark tending to compliment or disparage a witness. Cole v. State, 6 Ga. App. 798, 65 S.E. 839 (1909).

Comment thanking officer not improper. — While the trial court's casual colloquy with witnesses should have been minimized in front of the jury, the trial court's merely thanking a law enforcement witness, as a courtesy, for the officer's service as a witness did not rise to the level of improperly intimating an opinion about the testimony of the witness. Foster v. State, 314 Ga. App. 642, 725 S.E.2d 777 (2012).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Statements of judge's own knowledge tending to exculpate witness. — It is reversible error for the judge to state facts of the judge's own knowledge, or as of the judge's own knowledge, tending to exculpate the witness from an offense charged against the witness, or tending to show that there were mitigating circumstances connected with the offense. Cole v. State, 6 Ga. App. 798, 65 S.E. 839 (1909).

Remark as to manner of cross-examination. — Statement of judge that certain evidence might be admissible on the idea of impeachment cannot be construed as expressing the opinion of the judge that the witness in question had been impeached by the evidence, particularly if the charge of the court did not contain any instructions upon the subject of the impeachment of witnesses. Cole v. State, 63 Ga. App. 418, 11 S.E.2d 239 (1940).

Judge's remark in regard to the cross-examination by counsel for the defendant of an alleged accomplice of the defendant that, "you put him under a severe cross-examination," is not an expression of opinion by the trial judge as to the severity of the cross-examination of the witness for the state. Gravitt v. State, 220 Ga. 781, 141 S.E.2d 893 (1965).

Judge stating hypothesis. — It is not error for the trial judge to merely state an hypothesis if the judge does not intimate any opinion as to guilt or innocence of the accused, especially if the jury is properly instructed that nothing said or done by the judge should influence the verdict. Mays v. State, 237 Ga. 907, 230 S.E.2d 282 (1976).

Comment on irrelevant evidence. — Statement that certain evidence, which is entirely irrelevant, has no probative value is not a violation of this section. Tanner v. State, 163 Ga. 121, 135 S.E. 917 (1926).

Comments drawing attention to evidence. — Judge did not improperly comment on evidence by referring to evidence that was introduced. The reference was not telling the jury what the evidence proved, but instead was merely drawing the jury's attention to evidence which was relevant to the next charge to be given. Slaton v. State, 224 Ga. App. 422, 480 S.E.2d 872 (1997).

Repetitive instructions by the trial court on four occasions, after defining charged offenses and lesser included offenses, as to the form of the verdict should the jury find the defendant guilty of an offense did not constitute an improper expression or intimation of guilt. Reid v. State, 232 Ga. App. 313, 501 S.E.2d 842 (1998).

For comment by court on qualifications of expert witness, see Westbrook v. State, 242 Ga. 151, 249 S.E.2d 524 (1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1102, 99 S. Ct. 881, 59 L. Ed. 2d 63 (1979).

If a trial judge refers to a witness as the "victim," and the defendant makes no objection to such comments at trial, the defendant is estopped from raising this issue on appeal. Brown v. State, 150 Ga. App. 289, 257 S.E.2d 359 (1979).

Since the trial court did not impermissibly give an expression of an opinion concerning the evidence when the court used the word "victim," the defendant could not show deficient performance on the part of counsel for failing to object. Morris v. State, 280 Ga. 184, 625 S.E.2d 391 (2006).

References to witnesses as "young lady" or "little girls." — Trial court's references to the state's witnesses in open court as "young lady" or as "little girls" in bench conferences with the attorneys did not express or intimate the court's opinion as to the evidence or the guilt of the accused. Jennette v. State, 197 Ga. App. 580, 398 S.E.2d 734 (1990).

Allowing a child-victim to sit on the mother's lap during questioning did not amount to an intimation of the trial court's opinion as to what had been proven or the accused's guilt. Murchison v. State, 231 Ga. App. 769, 500 S.E.2d 651 (1998).

Reference by the court to "the confession testified about" by a witness does not express or intimate an opinion that any confession has been proved.

Jackson v. State, 177 Ga. 264, 170 S.E. 26 (1933).

If court remarks "he has answered that" in response to question posed to witness the court is not intimating or expressing an opinion as to what had been proved. Hamilton v. State, 91 Ga. App. 295, 85 S.E.2d 496 (1954).

Remarks as to whether counsel will connect up certain evidence later. — Rulings on admissibility of evidence, consisting of remarks by the court as to whether counsel would connect up certain evidence later, and statement that the court would rule on the admissibility later, do not express an opinion on the facts of the case. Pierce v. State, 212 Ga. 88, 90 S.E.2d 417 (1955).

Mere challenging by the court of question asked by the defendant of a witness for the state without challenging a like question asked by the state of the defendant cannot be taken as impliedly expressing an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused. Williams v. State, 186 Ga. 251, 197 S.E. 838 (1938).

Judge looking for quick verdict. — For inference from judge's remarks that the judge is looking for a quick verdict, see Dyson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 297, 270 S.E.2d 711 (1980).

References to witnesses or codefendants as accomplices. — If a witness is jointly indicted with the defendant on trial, and the witness and the accused are the only two alleged to be involved in the criminal transaction, and the court charges the jury that the witness, having been convicted, is an accomplice as a matter of law, this is an expression of an opinion by the trial judge upon a matter of fact as to what had been proved upon trial. Such an error renders the grant of a new trial imperative, without reference to the correctness of the verdict. Sellers v. State, 41 Ga. App. 572, 153 S.E. 782 (1930).

Statement that the codefendants "appear in this case as accomplices" is error, and a reversal for such error is mandatory. Mitchell v. State, 89 Ga. App. 80, 78 S.E.2d 563 (1953).

Judge allowing testimony, to hear "the truth about it." — If, in response to an objection of the defendant's counsel to a question propounded by the solicitor to a witness, the court allows the question stating "we want the truth about it," and it is contended that this statement is error because the court complimented the witness, and intimated and expressed an opinion in the presence of the jury that the witness would tell the truth, the remark deals with future testimony and not with facts which have been proved. Accordingly, it does not come within the inhibition of this section making it mandatory to reverse any case in which the court has expressed or intimated an opinion. Whether or not reversal would follow from the remark made would depend not only on whether it was error, but on whether the error was harmful to the movant. Hamilton v. State, 91 Ga. App. 299, 85 S.E.2d 557 (1954).

Judge's prejudicial remarks in hearing of the jurors. — When remark of the judge in answer to counsel is made in the hearing of the jurors and is prejudicial to the defendant, the defendant should either have moved to declare a mistrial or for postponement of the case that other jurors might be impaneled to try the defendant. Armstrong v. State, 181 Ga. 538, 183 S.E. 67 (1935).

Failure to remove jury before ruling on motion for directed verdict. — Although merely ruling on a point of law raised by the parties in a case does not constitute an expression of opinion of the trial court under this section, even though the judge must refer to testimony in order to make the judge's ruling intelligible, nevertheless, it is very possible that the jury, being laymen, might consider the fact that the court refused to direct a verdict for one of the parties as an implication that the judge was of the opinion that one party should not prevail. In such a case, it is not necessary for the movant to show that the court's error in refusing to grant the motion to remove the jury actually entered into and influenced the jury's verdict, but it is sufficient to show that the ruling would have been likely to produce that effect in order for it to constitute an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court. Poole v. State, 100 Ga. App. 380, 111 S.E.2d 265 (1959).

Court's statement to counsel as to guilt out of hearing of jury. — Court's statement to counsel for the defendant, not made before a jury, that the court believes that the defendant is guilty, cannot be made the basis for legal error when it is not contended that the court so acted as to communicate this belief to the jury during the trial. Morton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 329, 208 S.E.2d 134 (1974).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Direction that witness be arrested for perjury made in jury's presence. — As a general rule, directions by the court, in the presence of the jury, that a witness who has testified on behalf of the defendant, or a witness for the state who has refused to testify to matters prejudicial to the defendant, be arrested for perjury, constitutes reversible error in that the statement is a comment upon, or expression of opinion as to, the credibility of such witness, and as to the guilt of the defendant, expressly prohibited by this section. Benton v. State, 58 Ga. App. 633, 199 S.E. 561 (1938).

Arrest of evasive or unresponsive witnesses. — Distinction must be drawn between cases of this character and cases where the witness is ordered into custody because of persistent refusal to answer and evasion of questions propounded. The trial judge is given wide discretion in dealing with and controlling witnesses and in adjudging them in contempt, and as a general rule the judge's action in placing a refractory witness under arrest for refusal to respond to questions propounded does not amount to an expression or intimation of opinion prohibited by this section. Benton v. State, 58 Ga. App. 633, 199 S.E. 561 (1938).

Remarks made before trial. — This section relates only to statements made during the progress of the case or in the charge to the jury. It is not applicable to remarks made by the judge prior to the trial, though made in open court and in the presence of persons who afterwards served on the jury in the case. White v. State, 7 Ga. App. 20, 65 S.E. 1073 (1909).

Remedies when judge makes prejudicial remarks in jury's presence. — When remarks are made by the trial judge to counsel in a criminal case in the hearing of the jurors, which counsel contend were of such a character as to prejudice the minds of the jurors hearing the remarks against the cause of their client, counsel should either move for a postponement of the hearing in order that other jurors may be impaneled than those present when the remark is made, or, if the jurors have actually been selected and impaneled to try the particular case, a motion should be made to have a mistrial declared. Counsel, having failed to make such motion and having proceeded without objection with the trial, cannot after conviction raise the question as to the prejudicial nature of the remarks complained of in a motion for a new trial. Navarra v. State, 51 Ga. App. 321, 180 S.E. 375 (1935).

Objection or motion for mistrial required. — Question of whether O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 has been violated is not reached unless objection or motion for mistrial is made. Smith v. State, 158 Ga. App. 330, 280 S.E.2d 162 (1981); Davitt v. State, 232 Ga. App. 427, 502 S.E.2d 300 (1998); Zehner v. State, 241 Ga. App. 345, 525 S.E.2d 416 (1999).

Comment to keep clients under control due to laughing. — Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court warned trial counsel about keeping the clients under control based on the defendant's inappropriate behavior in laughing as the comment was not directed toward a material issue nor was it an intimation on the defendant's guilt or innocence during the defendant's trial for aggravated assault and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime. Wright v. State, 294 Ga. App. 20, 668 S.E.2d 505 (2008).

No violation by judge. — Trial court did not undermine the integrity of the process or improperly enhance the credibility of the witness by engaging in a brief, friendly exchange with the witness to which defendant posed no objection at the time. O'Hara v. State, 241 Ga. App. 855, 528 S.E.2d 296 (2000).

No error occurred regarding comments the trial court made during trial as the comments did not involve the trial court's expression of opinion about what had or had not been proven concerning the defendant's guilt. Mai v. State, 259 Ga. App. 471, 577 S.E.2d 288 (2003).

Trial court did not impermissibly comment on the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the judge merely directed that the witness be allowed to finish the witness's answer; the trial court did not assume any facts or intimate to the jury the judge's opinion of the evidence. Patterson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 630, 577 S.E.2d 850 (2003).

Defendant waived any error resulting from the trial court's violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by commenting on the length of the indictment as the defendant neither objected nor moved for a mistrial after the statement was made; further, the statement was not a violation of the statute as the statement was not a comment on the evidence or the guilt of the defendant, but only on the length of the indictment. Osterhout v. State, 266 Ga. App. 319, 596 S.E.2d 766 (2004).

Trial judge did not breach the limitations of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the judge made it clear to the jury that the judge would not address the facts of the case and did not express any opinion as to what had been proven at trial. Copeny v. State, 316 Ga. App. 347, 729 S.E.2d 487 (2012).

At defendant's trial for drug possession and sale, O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 was not violated when the trial judge commented on the sufficiency of the evidence because the purpose of § 17-8-57 is to prevent the jury from being influenced, and the jury was not present at the time of the remarks. Clowers v. State, 324 Ga. App. 264, 750 S.E.2d 169 (2013).

Comment by the trial judge that a crime was no less punishable if committed against a bad person than a good person was not reversible error as the jury was instructed not to construe any comment by the trial court as an expression of opinion upon the facts or evidence, credibility of witnesses, or guilt or innocence of the accused. Murray v. State, 295 Ga. 289, 759 S.E.2d 525 (2014).

Court's statement requiring that the medical examiner state that the autopsy photographs would assist the medical examiner's testimony did not express or intimate an opinion in alignment with the state. Allen v. State, 296 Ga. 785, 770 S.E.2d 824 (2015).

Because defense counsel in opening and closing remarks explained to the jury that the defendant fired the gun at the second victim in defense of another person, whom the defendant thought was in danger, two witnesses observed the defendant fire the gun at the second victim, and the defendant told police that the defendant fired the gun at the second victim, it was undisputed and never contradicted by any evidence that the defendant shot the second victim; thus, the trial court's instruction to the jury regarding identity as to the robbery count, in which the trial court stated that the defendant admitted to shooting and firing the weapon at the second victim, did not constitute an impermissible comment on the evidence. McNeal v. State, 302 Ga. 222, 805 S.E.2d 820 (2017).

Incident in which the trial judge gave an audible grunt, and tossed a pen down on the bench did not constitute a comment on the evidence because the second defendant had already left the witness stand when the incident took place; thus, the record did not support the second defendant's contention that the incident intimated to the jury that the second defendant's testimony was other than truthful and had to be taken by the jury as a derogatory remark on the second defendant's credibility. Daniels v. State, 302 Ga. 90, 805 S.E.2d 80 (2017), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Trial judge's comments during cross-examination of the victim, which arose during the colloquy between the trial court and defense counsel regarding the prosecution's objection to defense counsel's instruction to the victim not to assume, were the judge's explanations of the judge's reasons for rulings on evidentiary objections or concerned undisputed facts, so the comments did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Jenkins v. State, 354 Ga. App. 674, 839 S.E.2d 698 (2020).

Comment that child witness would not testify not violation. — Although a trial court stated that a child witness would not testify at trial because the child kept crying, because the child was present and available to testify at trial, the child's hearsay statements did not occur pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820); the judge's comment that the witness would not testify was not an improper comment on the evidence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Brock v. State, 270 Ga. App. 250, 605 S.E.2d 907 (2004).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Defendant's counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to comments or questions made by the trial court judge in the defendant's criminal proceeding as the statements did not constitute improper judicial comment under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; the judge's remarks included a correction of the attorney's misstatement in cross-examination of a police officer, a clarification of a language communication problem, and a clarification of a term of art. Owens v. State, 271 Ga. App. 365, 609 S.E.2d 670 (2005).

Trial court did not express an opinion in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, an inmate's rights to confrontation, or a fair and impartial jury when the court explained to those in the courtroom during jury deliberations that the court had received two notes from the jury describing a communication received by a juror that offered the juror a bribe in exchange for changing the juror's vote to not guilty; the trial court's comment did not suggest that the inmate had directed the bribery attempt because the court merely reviewed the jurors' notes and did not go beyond the notes, and it added nothing to that which the jurors already knew. Greer v. Thompson, 281 Ga. 419, 637 S.E.2d 698 (2006).

After a thorough review of the questioning by the trial court revealed that the court's efforts were directed toward keeping the judicial proceedings in compliance with evidentiary rules, no comment or question posed by the court reflected upon either the evidence or the defendant in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Meeker v. State, 282 Ga. App. 77, 637 S.E.2d 806 (2006).

Because the defendant failed to specifically cite to that part of the record relating to the trial judge's alleged improper comment on the cross-examination of a witness, and in the only instance where the appellate court could find anything close to a violation, such occurred after the verdict had already been rendered; thus, the defendant's claim that the trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 lacked any factual basis. Robinson v. State, 288 Ga. App. 219, 653 S.E.2d 810 (2007).

A 27-year-old rape victim was mentally retarded and had the mind of a ten-year-old. The trial court's solicitous attitude and comments to the victim did not constitute an expression of the court's opinion as to the defendant's guilt under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, nor did the comment bolster the victim's credibility. Kent v. State, 294 Ga. App. 134, 668 S.E.2d 442 (2008).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court told the jury that the defendant's absence from the second day of trial was unexplained and that it would proceed in the defendant's absence. The statements did not express an opinion about whether the evidence had proven a material issue, whether a witness was credible, or whether the defendant was guilty; moreover, the statements were appropriate as the statements were intended to explain the defendant's absence. Howard v. State, 298 Ga. App. 98, 679 S.E.2d 104 (2009).

Trial judge's comment to the jury while directing a verdict for a defendant on a count in the indictment that, "as the prosecutor explained in his opening statement, they were not going to bring a witness from Texas to testify as to that offense," did not improperly suggest to the jury that the trial judge believed the defendant to be guilty. Dixon v. State, 300 Ga. App. 183, 684 S.E.2d 679 (2009).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by commenting upon the intent and credibility of the state's witness in its curative instructions because the trial court's remarks did not express an opinion as to the credibility of the state's witness but were responsive to the defendant's objection to the witness's testimony and only served to explain the rationale for the trial court's decision to deny the defendant's motion for mistrial. Kohler v. State, 300 Ga. App. 692, 686 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

Effort to clarify testimony to ensure fair trial. — Trial judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by improperly commenting on the evidence because the trial judge's actions or remarks did not amount to an expression of opinion with regard to the defendant's guilt or innocence or to what had or had not been proven at trial in violation of § 17-8-57; the statute does not prohibit the trial judge from taking such measures as necessary to ensure the orderly administration of the trial, and the trial judge may even propound questions to a witness to clarify testimony when necessary in order to enforce the court's duty to ensure a fair trial. Moore v. State, 301 Ga. App. 220, 687 S.E.2d 259 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0544, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 333 (Ga. 2010), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Judge's comment about pro se defendant's opening statements. — During the defendant's opening statement, the defendant in a DUI case, proceeding pro se, stated that the field sobriety tests had an accuracy rating of only 65 percent. The judge's comment interrupting the defendant and stating that the defendant would not have evidence to substantiate the statement was not an inadmissible judicial comment under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the opening statement was supposed to give the jury an outline of the evidence to be presented. Steed v. State, 309 Ga. App. 546, 710 S.E.2d 696 (2011).

Trial court's comments to a prosecution witness did not improperly bolster that witness's credibility because although some of the trial court's comments seemed to suggest approval of the witness and should have been avoided to prevent even the slightest intimation of partiality, the remarks did not undermine the integrity of the process or improperly enhance the credibility of the witness or comment upon what was proved or the defendant's guilt. Holland v. State, 310 Ga. App. 623, 714 S.E.2d 126 (2011).

Trial court did not impermissibly comment on the evidence when the court granted a directed verdict on the count of the indictment charging the defendant with felony murder based on the underlying crime of fleeing and attempting to elude police because during the court's main charge to the jury, the trial court emphasized to the jury that the court had no opinion as to what had or had not been proved regarding the defendant's guilt; the trial court's statement regarding the existence of a scrivener's error in the indictment referred only to the incomplete count and did not contain an expression or intimation regarding the remaining counts of the indictment. Johnson v. State, 289 Ga. 650, 715 S.E.2d 99 (2011).

Isolated use of term "swearing" by judge. — Trial court's single, isolated use of the term "swearing" was not impermissible under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because, in the context of the testimony, the term referred to the sworn trial testimony, not the trial court's opinion with regard to the facts at issue. Foster v. State, 314 Ga. App. 642, 725 S.E.2d 777 (2012).

Trial court's statement that the state would introduce evidence in support of the charges contained in the indictment did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; judicial comments limited to a clarification of procedures and which do not address the credibility of witnesses or any fact at issue in the trial do not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Foster v. State, 290 Ga. 599, 723 S.E.2d 663 (2012).

Violation of section did not warrant trial. — Because the trial court did improperly comment on the defendant's credibility, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, but only directed the defendant to answer the questions being asked, and expressed no opinion as to the truthfulness of the defendant's testimony, whether responsive or not, those comments did not warrant a new trial. Anthony v. State, 282 Ga. App. 457, 638 S.E.2d 877 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that the trial judge made comments which unduly highlighted and overemphasized the testimony of the DNA expert, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, as the comments were clearly directed at one juror to encourage that juror to stay awake and pay attention to the presentation of the evidence. Carruth v. State, 286 Ga. App. 431, 649 S.E.2d 557 (2007).

Trial court's statement that a trial was "like a jigsaw puzzle" and that "all of the pieces" were "not there" was not an improper comment on the evidence or an impermissible shifting of the burden of proof; the trial court did not indicate that certain things should be considered as facts or intimate to the jury what the trial court thought the evidence showed, and furthermore the statement was immediately followed by a comprehensive charge on the state's burden of proof. Moore v. State, 286 Ga. App. 313, 649 S.E.2d 337 (2007).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Trial judge did not erroneously admonish the victim to tell the truth during a portion of the victim's testimony since: (1) the record showed that the victim was a reluctant witness; (2) the admonishment was made outside the presence of the jury; (3) the judge's comments were not improper and did not amount to the court leaving the court's position of impartiality during the trial or interfere with the factfinding process of the jury; and (4) it was clear from the record that the comments did not alter the victim's testimony as the victim's subsequent trial testimony was consistent with previously written statements to the police. Morales v. State, 286 Ga. App. 698, 649 S.E.2d 873 (2007).

Trial judge did not err in questioning the victim in the presence of the jury as the action did not imply, express, or intimate an opinion on the facts of the case or as the defendant's guilt, nor was the question argumentative; moreover, contrary to the defendant's argument, the question could not reasonably be construed as tending to discredit the victim or the victim's testimony, or as authorizing a reasonable inference by the jury that the trial court entertained an inference unfavorable to the defendant. Morales v. State, 286 Ga. App. 698, 649 S.E.2d 873 (2007).

Aggravated assault and aggravated battery convictions were upheld on appeal as: (1) sufficient evidence was presented for the jury to reject the defendant's self-defense claim; (2) two photographs were properly admitted as innocuous demonstrative aids to show the scene of the crime and the defendant's location; and (3) the trial court did not improperly give the court's opinion about the evidence, but merely attempted to clarify the state's position; furthermore, with respect to the latter, the jury was properly instructed that no ruling or comment by the court was intended to express an opinion on the facts of the case, the credibility of witnesses, the evidence, or the defendant's guilt or innocence. Whitaker v. State, 287 Ga. App. 465, 652 S.E.2d 568 (2007).

Because the defendant conceded that the specific comment made by the trial judge that the defendant complained of on appeal was not made in the presence of or to the jury, the defendant's argument on appeal presented no basis for reversal of the defendant's convictions for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, and fleeing or attempting to elude a police office McClendon v. State, 287 Ga. App. 238, 651 S.E.2d 165 (2007).

Trial court's admonishment, outside the presence of the jury, that the victim tell the truth, was certainly an appropriate exercise of discretion in controlling the trial and was not unfair or prejudicial to the defendant; moreover, contrary to the defendant's assertion, the comments were not improper and did not amount to the court leaving its position of impartiality during the trial. Morales v. State, 286 Ga. App. 698, 649 S.E.2d 873 (2007).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by expressing to two jurors an opinion that the defendant was guilty as the court merely sought to determine whether the two jurors should be excused from further service because of the jurors' relationship with the defendant's family and resolved the issue in the manner the defendant requested; moreover, the defendant's right to a public trial was not violated when the trial judge ordered the spectators out of the courtroom at this time as the judge was accommodating a request of one of the jurors for a more private setting. Berry v. State, 282 Ga. 376, 651 S.E.2d 1 (2007).

Defendant was not entitled to a mistrial based on the trial judge's alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because even if the judge's reference to the victim as such was erroneous, the judge's curative instruction corrected any misstatement and clearly did not intimate to the jury what the court believed the evidence to be. Warner v.

State, 287 Ga. App. 892, 652 S.E.2d 898 (2007).

When defense counsel attempted to impeach a witness about a statement in the witness's guilty plea that the witness was a first offender, the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by stating that the witness had not sought first offender status and that the witness's attorney had described the witness as a first offender in a form completed by the attorney; the comments were limited in scope to a clarification of the procedure utilized by the trial court in accepting a guilty plea, and the comments did not address the witness's credibility in general or any fact at issue. John v. State, 282 Ga. 792, 653 S.E.2d 435 (2007).

Trial court's references to the trial as a "murder case," an estimate of the time that would be required for the guilt/innocence phase, reference to the trial court and the parties collectively using the word "we," comments regarding the nature of cross-examination, and questions propounded by the trial court to a witness, were not improper under a plain error standard. Walker v. State, 282 Ga. 774, 653 S.E.2d 439 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 481, 172 L.Ed.2d 344 (2008), overruled on other grounds, No. S10P1859, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 267 (Ga. 2011).

Trial court's comment, in ruling on the admissibility of an item of evidence, on whether the item was identifiable without expert testimony as being a gun silencer was not improper; comments made in the course of ruling on objections are generally not the type of comments prohibited by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and the defendant had not requested that the objection be heard outside the jury's presence. Walker v. State, 282 Ga. 774, 653 S.E.2d 439 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 481, 172 L.Ed.2d 344 (2008), overruled on other grounds, No. S10P1859, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 267 (Ga. 2011).

While the trial court erred in expressly informing the jury, prior to the presentation of evidence, of the court's opinion of fact that fingerprint testimony was rarely presented at trial and that fingerprint evidence was very hard to get, the error did not necessitate reversal because the defendant could not show that the trial court's instruction affected the defendant's substantial rights given that the fingerprint evidence was not vital to placing the defendant at the scene of the crime. Quiller v. State, 338 Ga. App. 206, 789 S.E.2d 391 (2016).

No error if jury not misled or confused. — There is no reversible error when the court made a verbal error in a charge by substituting "is" for "if" and the error clearly could not have misled or confused the jury. Graham v. State, 242 Ga. App. 361, 529 S.E.2d 641 (2000).

Judge's reference to defendant as "criminal" defendant during voir dire did not place the defendant's character in issue and was not a comment on the defendant's guilt. Hodo v. State, 272 Ga. 272, 528 S.E.2d 250 (2000).

Judge's reference to identification. — Trial judge did not improperly comment on the evidence when the judge directed that the record would reflect that the victim and the witness had identified the defendant during their testimony because the jurors were present in the courtroom and able to determine for themselves whether someone in the courtroom matched the man identified by the victim and by the witness; and, in context, the trial judge's statement served to clarify the victim's and witness's words, as the words would later be transcribed, not to indicate to the jury whether the state had proved that the defendant was the man who visited the victim's home and, months later, broke in and attacked the victim. Crenshaw v. State, 341 Ga. App. 406, 801 S.E.2d 92 (2017).

Admonishment of pro-se defendant's comments. — When, during pro-se defendant's brief cross-examination of his ex-girlfriend, the trial court was forced to admonish him three times not to argue with her about their children, the comments were appropriate and intimated no opinion with regard to the case or the defendant's guilt or innocence. Brooks v. State, 243 Ga. App. 246, 532 S.E.2d 763 (2000).

Plain error doctrine not applicable. — Defendant's attempt to invoke the plain error doctrine with regard to the state's closing argument allegedly eliciting sympathy for the victim in violation of the prohibition against asking the jurors to place themselves in the same position of the victim was misplaced when the plain error doctrine applied only to capital cases and criminal cases in which a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 occurred, and neither category applied to the defendant's trial for armed robbery. Foster v. State, 267 Ga. App. 363, 599 S.E.2d 309 (2004).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Plain error doctrine had been limited to capital cases and to criminal cases in which the trial judge allegedly intimated an opinion of the defendant's guilt in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 and had no application to a defendant's claims that a child molestation victim's hearsay statements served to bolster the victim's credibility and lacked sufficient indicia of reliability. Brown v. State, 280 Ga. App. 884, 635 S.E.2d 240 (2006).

Plain error rule applies. — Plain error rule applies to death penalty cases and other criminal cases in which the trial court violates O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and thus any alleged violation of § 17-8-57 must be reviewed in accordance with the plain error rule; the Georgia Supreme Court disapproves Price v. State, 280 Ga. 193, 625 SE2d 397 (2006) and Raheem v. State, 275 Ga. 87, 560 SE2d 680 (2002), to the extent the analysis therein is inconsistent regarding review for plain error. Patel v. State, 282 Ga. 412, 651 S.E.2d 55 (2007).

Plain error doctrine not applicable. — Defendant was not entitled to a plain error review of a colloquy at trial, held outside the jury's presence, between the court and a witness called by the state who was reluctant to testify because the alleged error did not involve error in the sentencing phase of a trial resulting in the death penalty, in a trial judge's expression of opinion to the jury, or in the jury charge. Solomon v. State, 293 Ga. 605, 748 S.E.2d 865 (2013).

Judge's comment regarding venue was error. — Defendant was entitled to a new trial after a trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by stating, during defense counsel's opening, that venue in the defendant's prosecution under O.C.G.A. § 16-12-100.2 was proper in Fayette County; the language prohibiting judicial comments of that type was mandatory and neither the fact that the trial court might not have meant to express an opinion, nor the fact that the trial court gave curative instructions after making the comment, could excuse or cure the violation. Patel v. State, 282 Ga. 412, 651 S.E.2d 55 (2007).

It was reversible error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the trial court asked the prosecutor whether venue had been established and, after the prosecutor responded, stated, "I just wanted to make sure." In making these comments, the trial court improperly expressed the court's opinion as to what had been proven on a disputed issue of fact; the fact that the defendant did not object was immaterial because a violation of § 17-8-47 was plain error. Anderson v. State, 297 Ga. App. 733, 678 S.E.2d 498 (2009), aff'd, 287 Ga. 159, 695 S.E.2d 26 (Ga. 2010).

Comments by judge during defense counsel's closing argument did not constitute plain error. — Defendant was not entitled to a new trial because the trial judge's comments were limited in scope, were for the purpose of controlling the trial conduct and ensuring a fair trial, did not involve the issue of the defendant's guilt or innocence, and did not express an opinion on the evidence as to what was proved or not; comments by the trial judge during defense counsel's closing arguments were for the purpose of preventing misstatements to the jury concerning matters not in evidence and were not improper under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Mathis v. State, 276 Ga. App. 205, 622 S.E.2d 857 (2005).

Cited in Davis v. State, 91 Ga. 167, 17 S.E. 292 (1893); Suddeth v. State, 112 Ga. 407, 37 S.E. 747 (1900); Alexander v. State, 114 Ga. 266, 40 S.E. 231 (1901); Hodge v. State, 116 Ga. 929, 43 S.E. 370 (1903); Battise v. State, 124 Ga. 866, 53 S.E. 678 (1906); Southern Express Co. v. State, 1 Ga. App. 700, 58 S.E. 67 (1907); Johnson v. State, 2 Ga. App. 405, 58 S.E. 684 (1907); Darby v. State, 16 Ga. App. 171, 84 S.E. 724 (1915); Peyton v. State, 18 Ga. App. 691, 90 S.E. 359 (1916); Peek v. State, 155 Ga. 49, 116 S.E. 629 (1923); Thompson v. State, 160 Ga. 520, 128 S.E.

756 (1925); Spivey v. State, 38 Ga. App. 213, 143 S.E. 450 (1928); Bailey v. State, 167 Ga. 318, 145 S.E. 456 (1928); Norris v. State, 40 Ga. App. 232, 149 S.E. 158 (1929); Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. 814, 152 S.E. 76 (1930); Holleman v. State, 171 Ga. 200, 154 S.E. 906 (1930); Pope v. State, 171 Ga. 655, 156 S.E. 599 (1930); Smith v. State, 43 Ga. App. 213, 158 S.E. 447 (1931); Parker v. State, 174 Ga. 453, 162 S.E. 812 (1932); De Vere v. State, 45 Ga. App. 330, 164 S.E. 485 (1932); Belmont v. State, 175 Ga. 15, 165 S.E. 45 (1932); McKee v. State, 176 Ga. 717, 168 S.E. 862 (1933); McDow v. State, 176 Ga. 764, 168 S.E. 869 (1933); Fussell v. State, 48 Ga. App. 119, 172 S.E. 73 (1933); Kryder v. State, 57 Ga. App. 200, 194 S.E. 890 (1938); Morgan v. State, 59 Ga. App. 903, 2 S.E.2d 502 (1939); Corley v. State, 64 Ga. App. 841, 14 S.E.2d 121 (1941); Sanders v. State, 66 Ga. App. 128, 17 S.E.2d 251 (1941); Canady v. State, 68 Ga. App. 735, 23 S.E.2d 870 (1942); Elmore v. State, 70 Ga. App. 832, 29 S.E.2d 713 (1944); Pressley v. State, 201 Ga. 267, 39 S.E.2d 478 (1946); Williams v. State, 77 Ga. App. 51, 47 S.E.2d 782 (1948); Harris v. State, 207 Ga. 287, 61 S.E.2d 135 (1950); Robinson v. State, 207 Ga. 337, 61 S.E.2d 475 (1950); Osborne v. State, 209 Ga. 345, 72 S.E.2d 317 (1952); Frost v. State, 92 Ga. App. 614, 89 S.E.2d 524 (1955); Moultrie v. State, 93 Ga. App. 396, 92 S.E.2d 33 (1956); Scoggins v. State, 98 Ga. App. 360, 106 S.E.2d 39 (1958); Maddox v. State, 99 Ga. App. 438, 108 S.E.2d 758 (1959); Bedgood v. State, 100 Ga. App. 736, 112 S.E.2d 430 (1959); Williamson v. State, 217 Ga. 162, 121 S.E.2d 782 (1961); Parker v. State, 218 Ga. 654, 129 S.E.2d 850 (1963); Gaddis v. State, 107 Ga. App. 661, 131 S.E.2d 126 (1963); Gore v. State, 110 Ga. App. 344, 138 S.E.2d 471 (1964); Wheeler v. State, 220 Ga. 535, 140 S.E.2d 258 (1965); Seay v. State, 111 Ga. App. 22, 140 S.E.2d 283 (1965); Anthony v. State, 112 Ga. App. 444, 145 S.E.2d 657 (1965); Barnes v. State, 115 Ga. App. 431, 154 S.E.2d 878 (1967); Rowell v. State, 122 Ga. App. 568, 177 S.E.2d 812 (1970); Tutt v. State, 122 Ga. App. 673, 178 S.E.2d 339 (1970); Sheffield v. State, 124 Ga. App. 295, 183 S.E.2d 525 (1971); Ezzard v. State, 229 Ga. 465, 192 S.E.2d 374 (1972); Karavos v. State, 128 Ga. App. 268, 196 S.E.2d 355 (1973); White v. State, 230 Ga. 327, 196 S.E.2d 849 (1973); Knight v. State, 130 Ga. App. 551, 203 S.E.2d 911 (1974); Williams v. State, 232 Ga. 213, 205 S.E.2d 859 (1974); DeFreese v. State, 232 Ga. 739, 208 S.E.2d 832 (1974); Stone v. State, 132 Ga. App. 703, 209 S.E.2d 121 (1974); Davis v. State, 133 Ga. App. 452, 211 S.E.2d 406 (1974); Ross v. State, 135 Ga. App. 169, 217 S.E.2d 170 (1975); Evans v. State, 235 Ga. 396, 219 S.E.2d 725 (1975); Ray v. State, 235 Ga. 467, 219 S.E.2d 761 (1975); Hayes v. State, 136 Ga. App. 746, 222 S.E.2d 193 (1975); Moon v. State, 136 Ga. App. 905, 222 S.E.2d 635 (1975); Hughes v. State, 136 Ga. App. 927, 222 S.E.2d 645 (1975); McNeese v. State, 236 Ga. 26, 222 S.E.2d 318 (1976); Waters v. State, 237 Ga. 64, 226 S.E.2d 596 (1976); Campbell v. State, 237 Ga. 76, 226 S.E.2d 601 (1976); Copeland v. State, 139 Ga. App. 55, 227 S.E.2d 850 (1976); Powell v. State, 237 Ga. 490, 228 S.E.2d 875 (1976); Decker v. State, 139 Ga. App. 707, 229 S.E.2d 520 (1976); Bass v. State, 140 Ga. App. 788, 232 S.E.2d 98 (1976); Ansley v. State, 141 Ga. App. 314, 233 S.E.2d 272 (1977); Roberts v. State, 141 Ga. App. 550, 234 S.E.2d 138 (1977); Pitts v. State, 141 Ga. App. 845, 234 S.E.2d 682 (1977); Collins v. State, 143 Ga. App. 583, 239 S.E.2d 232 (1977); Hawes v. State, 240 Ga. 327, 240 S.E.2d 833 (1977); State v. Griffin, 240 Ga. 470, 241 S.E.2d 230 (1978); Clempson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 625, 241 S.E.2d 495 (1978); Aufderheide v. State, 144 Ga. App. 877, 242 S.E.2d 758 (1978); Foushi v. State, 144 Ga. App. 608, 244 S.E.2d 14 (1978); Perdue v. State, 147 Ga. App. 648, 249 S.E.2d 657 (1978); Thomas v. State, 242 Ga. 712, 251 S.E.2d 294 (1978); Patterson v. State, 149 Ga. App. 438, 254 S.E.2d 445 (1979); Boatright v. State, 150 Ga. App. 283, 257 S.E.2d 314 (1979); Schuh v. State, 150 Ga. App. 700, 258 S.E.2d 328 (1979); Boling v. State, 244 Ga. 825, 262 S.E.2d 123 (1979); Tucker v. State, 245 Ga. 68, 263 S.E.2d 109 (1980); Moret v. State, 246 Ga. 5, 268 S.E.2d 635 (1980); Chapman v. State, 154 Ga. App. 532, 268 S.E.2d 797 (1980); Bissell v. State, 157 Ga. App. 711, 278 S.E.2d 415 (1981); Brady v. State, 159 Ga. App. 389, 283 S.E.2d 617 (1981); Laney v. State, 159

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Ga. App. 609, 284 S.E.2d 114 (1981); Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982); Gibson v. State, 160 Ga. App. 615, 287 S.E.2d 595 (1981); Ferry v. State, 161 Ga. App. 795, 287 S.E.2d 732 (1982); Buford v. State, 162 Ga. App. 498, 291 S.E.2d 256 (1982); Suddeth v. State, 162 Ga. App. 460, 291 S.E.2d 430 (1982); Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77 (1982); McKenzie v. State, 162 Ga. App. 522, 292 S.E.2d 722 (1982); Williams v. State, 249 Ga. 822, 295 S.E.2d 293 (1982); Johnson v. State, 164 Ga. App. 7, 296 S.E.2d 202 (1982); Rivers v. State, 250 Ga. 288, 298 S.E.2d 10 (1982); Johnson v. State, 165 Ga. App. 773, 302 S.E.2d 626 (1983); Millwood v. State, 166 Ga. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 103 (1983); Bethea v. State, 251 Ga. 328, 304 S.E.2d 713 (1983); Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. App. 104, 311 S.E.2d 528 (1983); Magsby v. State, 169 Ga. App. 637, 314 S.E.2d 473 (1984); Kelley v. State, 169 Ga. App. 917, 315 S.E.2d 916 (1984); Davis v. State, 170 Ga. App. 126, 316 S.E.2d 573 (1984); In re Crane, 171 Ga. App. 31, 318 S.E.2d 709 (1984); McDonald v. State, 170 Ga. App. 884, 318 S.E.2d 749 (1984); Hufstetler v. State, 171 Ga. App. 106, 319 S.E.2d 869 (1984); Buffington v. State, 171 Ga. App. 919, 321 S.E.2d 418 (1984); 134 Baker St., Inc. v. State, 172 Ga. App. 738, 324 S.E.2d 575 (1984); Frankum v. State, 174 Ga. App. 660, 331 S.E.2d 52 (1985); Johnson v. State, 254 Ga. 591, 331 S.E.2d 578 (1985); Jackson v. State, 177 Ga. App. 863, 341 S.E.2d 324 (1986); Worth v. State, 179 Ga. App. 207, 346 S.E.2d 82 (1986); Dixon v. State, 179 Ga. App. 278, 346 S.E.2d 93 (1986); Price v. State, 179 Ga. App. 691, 347 S.E.2d 365 (1986); Smith v. Pierce, 179 Ga. App. 724, 347 S.E.2d 692 (1986); Williams v. State, 180 Ga. App. 854, 350 S.E.2d 837 (1986); Lobdell v. State, 256 Ga. 769, 353 S.E.2d 799 (1987); Russell v. State, 184 Ga. App. 657, 362 S.E.2d 392 (1987); House v. State, 184 Ga. App. 724, 362 S.E.2d 429 (1987); Wade v. State, 258 Ga. 324, 368 S.E.2d 482 (1988); Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742 (1988); Pless v. State, 187 Ga. App. 772, 371 S.E.2d 406 (1988); Johnson v. State, 258 Ga. 856, 376 S.E.2d 356 (1989); Barker v. State, 191 Ga. App. 451, 382 S.E.2d 115 (1989); Stephen v. State, 259 Ga. 820, 388 S.E.2d 519 (1990); Newton v. State, 259 Ga. 853, 388 S.E.2d 698 (1990); Mullen v. State, 197 Ga. App. 26, 397 S.E.2d 487 (1990); Kelly v. State, 197 Ga. App. 811, 399 S.E.2d 568 (1990); Lewallen v. State, 199 Ga. App. 798, 406 S.E.2d 255 (1991); Anderson v. State, 200 Ga. App. 29, 406 S.E.2d 791 (1991); Ledbetter v. State, 262 Ga. 370, 418 S.E.2d 57 (1992); Williams v. State, 208 Ga. App. 153, 430 S.E.2d 42 (1993); Jordan v. State, 220 Ga. App. 627, 470 S.E.2d 242 (1996); Carter v. State, 224 Ga. App. 445, 481 S.E.2d 238 (1997); Griffin v. State, 267 Ga. 586, 481 S.E.2d 223 (1997); Bryant v. State, 226 Ga. App. 135, 486 S.E.2d 374 (1997); Crews v. State, 226 Ga. App. 232, 486 S.E.2d 61 (1997); Lewandowski v. State, 267 Ga. 831, 483 S.E.2d 582 (1997); Parker v. State, 229 Ga. App. 217, 493 S.E.2d 558 (1997); Mullins v. State, 269 Ga. 157, 496 S.E.2d 252 (1998); Richards v. State, 232 Ga. App. 584, 502 S.E.2d 519 (1998); Scroggins v. State, 237 Ga. App. 122, 514 S.E.2d 252 (1999); Murphy v. State, 270 Ga. 72, 508 S.E.2d 399 (1998); Thomas v. State, 238 Ga. App. 42, 517 S.E.2d 585 (1999); Hudson v. State, 242 Ga. App. 218, 529 S.E.2d 218 (2000); Humphrey v. State, 249 Ga. App. 805, 549 S.E.2d 144 (2001); Mitchell v. State, 275 Ga. 42, 561 S.E.2d 803 (2002); Coggins v. State, 275 Ga. 479, 569 S.E.2d 505 (2002); Bates v. State, 275 Ga. 862, 572 S.E.2d 550 (2002); Anderson v. State, 264 Ga. App. 362, 590 S.E.2d 729 (2003); Reedman v. State, 265 Ga. App. 162, 593 S.E.2d 46 (2003); Cheek v. State, 265 Ga. App. 15, 593 S.E.2d 55 (2003); Smith v. State, 265 Ga. App. 236, 593 S.E.2d 695 (2004); Parker v. State, 276 Ga. 598, 581 S.E.2d 7 (2003); Appling v. State, 281 Ga. 590, 642 S.E.2d 37 (2007); Boyt v. State, 286 Ga. App. 460, 649 S.E.2d 589 (2007); Delgado v. State, 287 Ga. App. 273, 651 S.E.2d 201 (2007); Dasher v. Dasher, 283 Ga. 436, 658 S.E.2d 571 (2008); Connelly v. State, 295 Ga. App. 765, 673 S.E.2d 274 (2009); Tidwell v. State, 306 Ga. App. 307, 701 S.E.2d 920 (2010); Myers v. State, 311 Ga. App. 668, 716 S.E.2d 772 (2011); Martinez v. State, 325 Ga. App. 267, 750 S.E.2d 504 (2013); Anderson v. State, 350 Ga. App.

369, 829 S.E.2d 453 (2019); Collins v. State, 308 Ga. 515, 842 S.E.2d 275 (2020); Keller v. State, 308 Ga. 492, 842 S.E.2d 22 (2020).

Inquiries by the Judge

Judge has right to propound questions to develop the truth of the case. — Trial judge has the right to propound a question or a series of questions to any witness for the purpose of developing fully the truth of the case. The extent to which the examination conducted by the court shall go is a matter within the judge's discretion. Smith v. State, 52 Ga. App. 88, 182 S.E. 816 (1935); Beavers v. State, 132 Ga. App. 94, 207 S.E.2d 550 (1974); Thomas v. State, 240 Ga. 393, 242 S.E.2d 1 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978); Eubanks v. State, 240 Ga. 544, 242 S.E.2d 41 (1978); Calloway v. State, 199 Ga. App. 272, 404 S.E.2d 811 (1991), overruled on other grounds by State v. Burns, 829 S.E.2d 367, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 400 (Ga. 2019); Sanders v. State, 211 Ga. App. 859, 440 S.E.2d 745 (1994).

Because the defendant did not allege that the trial judge exhibited discriminatory behavior applicable to any of the prohibited categories in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 and because there was no jury in defendant's juvenile case, the trial judge did not violate Ga. Code Jud. Conduct Canon 3(B)(5) by asking a witness questions concerning the pry marks and the defendant's fingerprints on a window to fully develop the truth in the defendant's burglary case. In the Interest of J.D., 275 Ga. App. 147, 619 S.E.2d 818 (2005).

Trial judge was allowed to propound questions to a witness to develop the truth of the case, to clarify testimony, to comment on pertinent evidentiary rules, and to exercise the court's discretion when controlling the conduct of counsel or witnesses in order to enforce the court's duty to ensure a fair trial to both sides; a trial judge's questions, remarks, and directions during the defense examination of a witness did not amount to an expression of opinion with regard to the defendant's guilt or innocence or to what had or had not been proven. Dickens v. State, 280 Ga. 320, 627 S.E.2d 587 (2006).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by questioning a state's witness regarding a prior statement the witness gave to police and the statement's conflict with the witness's trial testimony, nor in repeating to the jury the state's contention as to what crime had been committed, nor in responding to jury questions without indicating what the trial court believed the evidence to be. Finley v. State, 286 Ga. 47, 685 S.E.2d 258 (2009).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by questioning an emergency room worker as to whether the worker had seen fresh or dried blood on the victim in a child cruelty case. Once the witness's testimony had been clarified on this relevant point, the trial court expressed no opinion as to what had been proved or the testimony's significance as to the defendant's guilt. Chambers v. State, 313 Ga. App. 39, 720 S.E.2d 358 (2011).

Provided the judge expresses no opinion as to what has been proved. — There is nothing per se erroneous in a trial judge propounding questions to witnesses on the stand. The only limitation on the judge's right in this connection is not to express or intimate any opinion as to what has or has not been proved. Parker v. State, 51 Ga. App. 295, 180 S.E. 390 (1935).

Trial court did not err by soliciting the jury for questions to ask the witnesses because the court followed the proper procedure for juror questions; the questions were then shared with counsel, who were given an opportunity to object before the court posed any questions the court found proper to the witness; the questions the court asked on behalf of the jury did not improperly intimate the court's opinion about the evidence or the defendant's guilt or innocence; the parties were allowed to ask follow-up questions to the witness; and the defendant did not identify in the defendant's brief a single jury question asked by the court that was improper, much less harmful. Hernandez v. State, 299 Ga. 796, 792 S.E.2d 373 (2016).

Trial judge may, in order to elicit the truth, propound to a witness a leading question, provided in so doing the judge does not violate the provisions of this section, forbidding the judge to express or intimate any opinion as to what has or has not been proved. Deese v. State, 137 Ga. App. 476, 224 S.E.2d 124 (1976).

Inquiries by the Judge (Cont'd)

Trial judge did not err in questioning the victim in the presence of the jury as the single question to the victim did not express or intimate an opinion as to proof or as to guilt, nor was the question argumentative; moreover, contrary to the defendant's argument, the question could not reasonably be construed as tending to discredit the victim or the victim's testimony or as authorizing a reasonable inference by the jury that the trial court entertained an inference unfavorable to the defendant. Morales v. State, 286 Ga. App. 698, 649 S.E.2d 873 (2007).

Trial judge's review and approval of the questions by the jurors and posing the questions in the manner that the judge believed to be most appropriate for developing the truth of the case and clarifying the witness' testimony consistent with the jurors' requests was proper as the trial court fulfilled the court's duty to ensure a fair trial for both sides and did not inappropriately intimate or express an opinion as to the matters proved at trial or the guilt or innocence of the accused. Benton v. State, 301 Ga. 100, 799 S.E.2d 743 (2017).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court judge's question to a witness because the trial court's question did not constitute plain error since the court's questioning of the neighbor was asked for the purpose of developing the truth of the case, and the court did not express or intimate an opinion as to proof or as to guilt, or bolster the credibility of the neighbor or victim. Bradley v. State, 342 Ga. App. 486, 804 S.E.2d 144 (2017).

Court's inquiry into sleeping arrangements. — Trial court's straightforward inquiries regarding sleeping arrangements and why young girls who were molested were required to sleep outside in a truck with the defendant were not an improper expression of the trial court's opinion of the case and did not constitute a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Jackson v. State, 251 Ga. App. 171, 554 S.E.2d 202 (2001).

Asking about expert's title. — Trial judge's questioning as to clarification of expert witness's title as a doctor, viewing the trial court's statement in the proper context, could not reasonably be construed as commenting upon the expert's credibility. Cox v. State, 306 Ga. 736, 832 S.E.2d 354 (2019).

Lengthy examination is generally permissible. — Lengthy examination by the court of a witness called by either party is not cause for a new trial, even though some of the questions propounded by the court were leading in character, unless the court, during the examination of the witness, expresses or intimates an opinion on the facts of the case, or as to what has or has not been proved, or the examination takes such course as to become argumentative in character. Smith v. State, 52 Ga. App. 88, 182 S.E. 816 (1935); Beavers v. State, 132 Ga. App. 94, 207 S.E.2d 550 (1974); Thomas v. State, 240 Ga. 393, 242 S.E.2d 1 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

Difficult for court to question without advocating. — Although the court has the right, even the duty, to question witnesses, and may even ask leading questions, the trial judge must not express or intimate the judge's opinion in any way, and it is difficult for the court to conduct extensive questioning of a witness without becoming an advocate. Stinson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 533, 260 S.E.2d 407 (1979).

Inquiry regarding admissibility of testimony and direction of questioning. — Trial court did not improperly comment on the evidence because the trial court's interruption of defense counsel to inquire regarding the admissibility of testimony or the direction which counsel was going with a particular line of questioning did not constitute an opinion as to the proof or the guilt of the accused; and the trial court gave two curative instructions to the jury, admonishing the jury that the court had no opinion about the proof in the case or about the guilt or innocence of the defendants. Holmes v. State, 301 Ga. 143, 800 S.E.2d 353 (2017).

Even if testimony elicited is detrimental to a party. — Court may properly propound questions to a witness on the stand with a view to elicit the truth of the case. If in such examination the court does not express or intimate an opinion as to the credibility of the witness, or as to what has or has not been proved, the mere fact that competent testimony of the witness so elicited may be detrimental to the interest of a party will not be cause for granting that party a new trial. Fraser v. State, 52 Ga. App. 92, 182 S.E. 418 (1935).

When examining witnesses, judge should avoid impressing jury. — Although the trial judge has the right to examine witnesses, the utmost caution should be used to avoid impressing the jury by the examination, and when in a criminal case it appears that there is a probability that the circumstances, or the form of the examination, has conveyed to the jury an intimation of the court's belief in the guilt of the accused, a new trial should be granted. Nobles v. State, 13 Ga. App. 710, 79 S.E. 861 (1913).

Trial court committed plain error when the trial court judge improperly bolstered the victims' credibility when the court asked a witness specific questions regarding the victims, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and the error was compounded when the trial court denied the defendant the right to cross-examine the witness, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-6-611), in an attempt to rebut the bolstering of the victims' credibility that was performed by the trial court. Craft v. State, 274 Ga. App. 410, 618 S.E.2d 104 (2005).

Question to witness as to whether witness realizes the witness is under oath. — When the solicitor general (now district attorney) stated to the court that the solicitor had been entrapped by the witness then on the stand, and requested and was granted leave to cross-examine the witness, the action of the judge in thereafter asking the witness during such examination, if the witness realized the witness was under oath, did not per se amount to an expression or intimation of opinion within the meaning of this section and when it appears that the examination continued, and the testimony of the witness was neither favorable nor unfavorable to the state or the accused, a new trial will not be granted. Benton v. State, 58 Ga. App. 633, 199 S.E. 561 (1938).

Questions as to witness's truthfulness improper. — Trial court's questions to a witness in a forged/unauthorized prescription case, which consisted of asking the witness whether the witness was lying or being truthful, clearly intimated the court's opinion regarding the credibility of the witness's testimony and were therefore patently improper under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, necessitating a new trial. Price v. State, 310 Ga. App. 132, 712 S.E.2d 135 (2011).

Court may inquire into how jury stands if unable to reach a verdict. — Trial court may, after the jury indicates that it is unable to agree on a verdict, inquire how the jury stands numerically. Muhammad v. State, 243 Ga. 404, 254 S.E.2d 356 (1979).

Remarks to jury upon learning how jury stands. — For a judge to ask the jurors how the jurors stand is of doubtful propriety, and when, in response to the query, the information is given that the jurors stand "11 to one," to state that "usually, where the jury stands 11 to one, the one juror comes to the 11," is presumptively hurtful although the judge adds to the statement that the question is one of individual conscience, as the 11 might be wrong and the one right. Unless the verdict is demanded by the evidence, the error disclosed by such suggestive colloquy requires the grant of a new trial. Ball v. State, 9 Ga. App. 162, 70 S.E. 888 (1911).

Inquiries by judge of counsel out of jury's presence. — Judge does not become an advocate for the state or in any way express or intimate an opinion to the jury that something has not been proven when the judge makes an inquiry of counsel out of the jury's presence, as what a judge can do directly the judge can do indirectly. The trial judge has the right to propound a question or a series of questions to any witness for the purpose of developing fully the truth of the case and the extent to which the examination conducted by the court shall go is a matter within the judge's discretion. Hall v. State, 151 Ga. App. 700, 261 S.E.2d 442 (1979).

Inquiries by the Judge (Cont'd)

Trial court's statement, "If the State needs a material witness warrant, they need to get it to me right now.... Get people out looking. Otherwise call the rest of your witnesses in early," did not violate the trial court's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by advising the prosecution how to proceed with the prosecution's case; the comments were made outside the presence of the jury. Carson v. State, 843 S.E.2d 421, No. S20A0288, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 348 (2020).

Inquiry to determine admissibility of evidence appropriate. — Question by the trial court to the witness regarding the effects of the reversal medication and defendant's resulting level of coherence was proper because it was not an expression of an opinion but a means to determine whether admission of the nurse's statement would be permitted. Shields v. State, 272 Ga. 32, 526 S.E.2d 845 (2000).

Discussion about witness's testimony concerning defendant's crying. — Denial of a defendant's motion for a new trial was proper as the trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object and to move for a mistrial on the basis of the trial court's comments during a discussion of whether and why the trial counsel should be allowed to continue a line of questioning of the defendant's housemate regarding the defendant's crying after the defendant's arrest; there was nothing to support the defendant's claim that the trial court improperly commented on the evidence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court discussed whether and why the court should allow the line of questioning to continue. Temples v. State, 280 Ga. App. 874, 635 S.E.2d 249 (2006).

Inquiry of witness for clarification. — When the trial court asked a witness a question to clarify the witness's testimony, the court did not make an improper comment on the testimony. Middlebrooks v. State, 255 Ga. App. 541, 566 S.E.2d 350 (2002).

Defendant's claim that the defendant's rights to due process under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and to effective assistance of counsel under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV were violated by the trial court's comments on the evidence allegedly in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 failed; three of the comments were permissible because the comments were merely reflecting grounds for sustaining objections, another comment was not erroneous because the witness was permitted to answer the question over the state's objection, the trial court's questioning of victims was permissible because the questions were attempts to clarify the children's testimony, and any error by the expert in bolstering the testimony of certain witnesses was a self-induced error. Zepp v. State, 276 Ga. App. 466, 623 S.E.2d 569 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Because the presiding judge's questions about how the defendant shot backwards and how many shots the defendant fired were interposed to clarify the defendant's testimony and to develop the truth in the defendant's case, the superior court erred in finding that the questions constituted a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and the defendant was not entitled to a new trial on that basis. State v. Nickerson, 324 Ga. App. 576, 749 S.E.2d 768 (2013).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court questioned a witness at trial about a prior statement to police because the question only asked for clarification of whom the witness was referring to when the witness used a plural pronoun and did not express or intimate an opinion regarding the credibility of the evidence being offered or the guilt of the accused. Alexander v. State, 294 Ga. 345, 751 S.E.2d 408 (2013).

Trial court did not improperly comment on the evidence during the defendant's cross-examination because the trial court attempted to clarify the defendant's testimony as to whether the defendant, an attorney, had a duty to correct a client's misstatement and, in so doing, did not express an opinion as to the defendant's guilt or credibility; and the trial court cautioned the jury explicitly that no ruling or comment which the trial court made during the trial was intended to express any opinion upon the facts of the case, upon the credibility of the witnesses, upon the evidence, or upon the guilt or innocence of the defendant. Sallee v. State, 329 Ga. App. 612, 765 S.E.2d 758 (2014), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 199, 193 L. Ed. 2d 128 (U.S. 2015).

Asking about time and date. — In asking a witness the time and date events occurred, the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; the court simply asked two clarifying questions and did not express an opinion on the evidence or comment on an issue of fact. Griffith v. State, 286 Ga. App. 859, 650 S.E.2d 413 (2007).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court questioned the victim's wife because the wife's testimony concerning prior statements in which she did not identify the defendant as the shooter of the victim was, at times, confusing and unclear, and the trial court's questions were posed for the purpose of clarifying her testimony and fully developing the truth of the case; questions posed merely for the purpose of clarifying certain testimony does not violate § 17-8-57. Callaham v. State, 305 Ga. App. 626, 700 S.E.2d 624 (2010).

Questions posed by a trial judge to a defendant's cousin, defendant's alibi witness, were aimed at clarifying the cousin's testimony and were not an expression or intimation regarding the evidence or the defendant's guilt, and were therefore not prohibited by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Sims v. State, 306 Ga. App. 68, 701 S.E.2d 534 (2010).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 did not prohibit a trial judge from taking such measures as necessary to ensure the orderly administration of a trial, and the court was permitted to propound questions to a witness to clarify testimony when necessary to enforce the court's duty to ensure a fair trial. Foster v. State, 314 Ga. App. 642, 725 S.E.2d 777 (2012).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by asking a prosecution witness if the witness told a judge before whom the witness pled guilty to robbery that the witness was forced to commit the crime because the question was intended to clarify the witness's testimony explaining why the witness pled guilty when the witness claimed the witness was threatened, and did not express or intimate an opinion as to the witness's credibility. Bush v. State, 317 Ga. App. 439, 731 S.E.2d 121 (2012).

Trial court can examine a witness. — Trial court's examination of a witness called by either side is not cause for a new trial unless the court, during the court's examination of the witness, expresses or intimates an opinion on the facts of the case or as to what has or has not been proved, or the questioning becomes argumentative. Shields v. State, 272 Ga. 32, 526 S.E.2d 845 (2000).

If nothing about the questions posed by the trial court constituted the expression or intimation of an opinion as to what was or was not proven regarding the guilt of the accused, and when, despite the defendant's complaint that the court interrupted defendant's re-cross examination and took the questioning from the defendant, the transcript showed that defense counsel was not prevented from continuing the examination of the witness and that the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Walker v. State, 267 Ga. App. 155, 598 S.E.2d 875 (2004).

Although bordering on adversarial, a trial court's questioning of a defendant did not seriously affect the fairness, integrity, and public reputation of the trial; therefore, reversal under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 was not required. Milner v. State, 270 Ga. App. 80, 606 S.E.2d 91 (2004).

When the judge in a criminal trial questioned witnesses called by both the defendant and the state about facts that could have been considered both beneficial and detrimental to each side's case, the judge's actions did not constitute statements of the judge's opinion, argumentative questioning by the judge, or extreme anxiety on the part of the judge to develop the truth as to facts which, if proved, would have been peculiarly beneficial to one of the parties in the case and correspondingly detrimental to the other, from which the jury could have inferred the court's opinion. Craft v. State, 309 Ga. App. 698, 710 S.E.2d 891 (2011).

Inquiries by the Judge (Cont'd)

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court merely asked a witness questions about the locations of events and did not refer to whether venue had been proven. Rawls v. State, 315 Ga. App. 891, 730 S.E.2d 1 (2012).

Questions propounded by the court must be objected to at the time, if at all. — When the trial court propounds certain questions to a witness, which examination, it is insisted, is conducted in such manner as to prejudice the rights of the plaintiff in error, such action by the court will not cause a reversal in the absence of any objection raised thereto at the time. Almond v. State, 128 Ga. App. 758, 197 S.E.2d 836 (1973).

Questions addressed to relevant issues. — When questions by the court to clarify the state's inquiry did not contain any expressions or intimations and were addressed to relevant issues so as to assist the jury in ascertaining the truth, this did not entitle the defendant to a mistrial. Parrish v. State, 182 Ga. App. 247, 355 S.E.2d 682 (1987).

Trial judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the questions the judge propounded to a witness did not contain any expressions or intimations of opinion and were addressed to relevant issues so as to assist the jury in ascertaining the truth. Mathis v. State, 194 Ga. App. 498, 391 S.E.2d 130 (1990); Eagle v. State, 264 Ga. 1, 440 S.E.2d 2 (1994); Denny v. State, 226 Ga. App. 432, 486 S.E.2d 417 (1997).

Judge's questions in a shoplifting trial regarding whether the department store was located in Coweta County and whether the value of the items taken had been stated were proper questions to develop the case. Tyner v. State, 313 Ga. App. 557, 722 S.E.2d 177 (2012).

Court addressing leading question to witness. — Trial court may address a leading question to a witness in order to elicit the truth or clarify an issue, provided that the judge does not violate the statutory prohibition set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 against expressions or intimations of opinion as to what has or has not been proved or as to the guilt of the accused. Cannon v. State, 179 Ga. App. 142, 345 S.E.2d 623 (1986).

Trial judge's inquiry of defense counsel about where defense counsel was going with a line of questioning about a pool party the victim attended out of which none of the charges against the defendant arose was not improper as the trial court did not comment on what the evidence did or did not show, or comment on the guilt of the defendant, and, thus, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial. Creed v. State, 255 Ga. App. 425, 565 S.E.2d 480 (2002).

Questions did not result in grave miscarriage of justice or affect fairness of proceeding. — At a defendant's trial for violating a county junk vehicle ordinance, a trial court's questions to a code inspector as to whether the vehicles were "junk vehicles" and whether the vehicles were properly licensed, and the court's question to the defendant as to whether the defendant had moved the vehicles so that the vehicles were no longer in the defendant's backyard or whether the defendant had merely moved the vehicles from one part of the defendant's backyard to another, were not so clearly erroneous as to result in a likelihood of a grave miscarriage of justice or seriously affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the judicial proceeding. Litman v. State, 304 Ga. App. 690, 697 S.E.2d 855 (2010).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when, during the witness's cross-examination, the court became concerned about how upset the witness was and stopped the proceedings to briefly question the witness about the witness's well-being and by informing the jury of the source of the witness's discomfort, the court did not express a favorable opinion on the witness's abilities, did not give an opinion of the witness, and did not intimate an opinion as to the believability of the testimony. Smith v. State, 297 Ga. 268, 773 S.E.2d 269 (2015).

Judge's interruption of cross-examination did not express improper opinion. — During a defendant's trial for charges arising out of a road rage incident, the trial court did not express an improper opinion in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by interrupting defense counsel's cross-examination to point out that the defendant was being tried on the charges because a grand jury had indicted the defendant on the charges: the comments did not amount to plain error because the comments demonstrated authorized attempts to control the conduct of the trial and to guide the defense attorney to ensure a fair trial and the orderly administration of justice, and the comments were limited in scope, did not involve the defendant's guilt or innocence, and did not express an opinion on what had or had not been proved. Adams v. State, 282 Ga. App. 819, 640 S.E.2d 329 (2006).

Judge's interruption of closing argument did not express opinion. — Trial judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by interrupting defense counsel's closing argument because the judge's comment was not an improper expression of the judge's opinion of the case; rather, it was an accurate statement of the law. The judge simply interjected to instruct the jury on the applicable law as charged in the indictment, but did not comment on the evidence or the guilt of the defendant. Klausen v. State, 294 Ga. App. 463, 669 S.E.2d 460 (2008).

Challenge to take polygraph test. — When, during trial, the judge in effect dared the appellant to take a polygraph test on the central issue of the appellant's guilt or innocence, it was inferable that the court did not believe the appellant, and such statement constituted a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Crane v. State, 164 Ga. App. 638, 298 S.E.2d 619 (1982).

Questions to defendant when jury absent. — There was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 with regard to the defendant's assertion that the defendant's right to a fair trial was prejudiced when a trial judge questioned the defendant in a "prosecutorial" manner, since the allegedly improper questions were asked at a time when the jury was not present in the courtroom. Jones v. State, 250 Ga. 498, 299 S.E.2d 549 (1983).

Court putting questions to forensic chemist. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in propounding questions to a forensic chemist when the court was trying to clarify an issue as to whether the defendant's blood sample had putrefied, and the court did not intimate or express an opinion as to what had or had not been proved, or as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. Thurman v. State, 172 Ga. App. 16, 321 S.E.2d 780 (1984).

Inquiry into qualifications of expert witness. — Defendant was not denied a fair trial by a colloquy that took place between the trial court and the State of Georgia's expert witness regarding the witness's qualifications, wherein the court referred to the witness as the "God Father" of the medical examiners in the witness's department of an investigative agency of the State of Georgia as the statement was not an impermissible comment on the witness's credibility. McKee v. State, 275 Ga. App. 646, 621 S.E.2d 611 (2005).

Comments on reliability of expert and one-on-one showups. — Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by making comments about the reliability of an expert witness and of one-on-one show-ups because when the trial court interrupted defense counsel to make inquiry concerning the admissibility of testimony or the direction that counsel was going with a particular line of questioning, the trial court's comments did not constitute an opinion as to the proof or the guilt of the accused; the trial court promptly gave curative instructions disclaiming any intent by any ruling or comment to express an opinion on the facts of the case, on the credibility of any witness, or on the guilt or innocence of either defendant, stating that the questions in the case had to be decided by the jury, and expressing the trial court's absence of any inclination in the case. Butler v. State, 290 Ga. 412, 721 S.E.2d 876 (2012).

Judge's comment that special agent was very thorough investigator. — Trial judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 after referring to a special agent as a very thorough investigator because the reference to the witness being a very thorough investigator was solely in the context of explaining the court's concern for the orderly and efficient presentation of testimony to ensure that the state would not require the witness to testify about everything learned during the investigation, and the court's comment was limited in scope, did not involve defendant's guilt or innocence, and did not express an opinion on what had or had not been proved. Smith v. State, 292 Ga. 588, 740 S.E.2d 129 (2013).

Inquiries by the Judge (Cont'd)

Judge's expression that detectives conduct was "quite all right". — Trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 in commenting to the jury that it was "quite all right" for detectives to provide false information to a suspect during a custodial interview to "test" the suspects; the trial court went beyond ruling that defense counsel's question was argumentative to gratuitously commenting on the propriety of the lead detective's technique. Haymer v. State, 323 Ga. App. 874, 747 S.E.2d 512 (2013).

Comment to a juror during voir dire. — In a child enticement case under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-5(a), a trial court's comment to a juror that the juror did not look the juror's age during voir dire did not constitute improper comments on the defendant's credibility under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 based on the defendant's claim that the defendant believed the child was older than the child said because the comment did not express an opinion as to what had or had not been proved. Adams v. State, 312 Ga. App. 570, 718 S.E.2d 899 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0500, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 263 (Ga. 2012).

In the defendant's murder trial, the trial court's question during voir dire, asking jurors to raise their hands if the jurors were impartial, and then, when no one raised a hand, the trial court rephrased the question, did not constitute an expression of opinion as to what had been proved as to the guilt of the accused in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. There was no plain error because the potential jurors freely expressed the jurors' biases in response to defense counsel's more specific questions. Mitchell v. State, 304 Ga. 56, 816 S.E.2d 9 (2018).

Questioning if juror had been contacted outside court room. — Defendant's conviction was affirmed because the trial court's comments to the juror whether the man who attempted to contact the juror at lunch was in the courtroom, and the directions for the bailiff to accompany the jurors to the parking deck and for the defendant's family members to remain in the courtroom did not "express or intimate" the trial court's opinion regarding the evidence or the defendant's guilt. Perkins v. State, 319 Ga. App. 651, 738 S.E.2d 106 (2013), overruled on other grounds, Worthen v. State, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 22 (Ga. 2019).

Comment in context of telling jurors not to do own investigation. — Trial judge's statement to the jury that "you now have a pretty good idea where things happened," was not an impermissible comment on the evidence requiring a new trial, but was made in the context of telling jurors not to do their own investigation. Graham v. State, 337 Ga. App. 193, 786 S.E.2d 857 (2016).

Expression of opinion as to an uncontested and undisputed fact concerning Intoxilyzer. — When the trial court made the court's comments regarding the history of the Intoxilyzer, defense counsel expressly agreed with the comments and then went on to clarify counsel's question about the history of the Intoxilyzer to the patrol officer. As such, the statement by the trial court concerning a fact that was uncontested or was not in dispute did not constitute a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Rolland v. State, 321 Ga. App. 661, 742 S.E.2d 482 (2013).

Judge's comment on similarity and probative value of evidence. — Trial court erred by commenting on the similarity and probative value of the similar transaction evidence, particularly since the defendant never conceded the similarity of the prior and present offenses and the trial court's statement that the other crime was similar and, therefore, probative of the defendant's guilt was damaging to the defendant's theory of defense, that the state's proof was insufficient and the state was using the defendant's prior guilty plea to improperly bolster the state's weak evidence. Huff v. State, 334 Ga. App. 254, 779 S.E.2d 29 (2015).

Rulings by the Judge

Ruling by the court on a point of law is not an expression of opinion. Jackson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 514, 268 S.E.2d 784 (1980).

When an informant pled the Fifth Amendment during the informant's testimony, and the state asked the trial court to tell the informant that the informant had use immunity, the trial court did not express or intimate the court's opinion as to what had or had not been proved so as to violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court stated, "You need to answer the question. What the DA says is true." Winn v. State, 345 Ga. App. 359, 813 S.E.2d 400 (2018).

Trial court's simple statement sustaining an objection did not in any way implicate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Leggon v. State, 249 Ga. App. 467, 549 S.E.2d 137 (2001).

Judge may give reasons for ruling. — Recognizing the rule that the expression of an opinion by the trial court prohibited by this section is reversible even though harmless, that rule does not apply when counsel makes a motion which invokes a ruling on the part of the trial court and which ruling necessarily is based on some opinion which the trial court holds relative to the evidence. Poole v. State, 100 Ga. App. 380, 111 S.E.2d 265 (1959).

Remarks of a judge assigning a reason for the judge's ruling are neither an expression of opinion nor a comment on the evidence. Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. 126, 269 S.E.2d 18 (1980); Goode v. State, 171 Ga. App. 901, 321 S.E.2d 410 (1984); Colsson v. State, 177 Ga. App. 840, 341 S.E.2d 318 (1986); Faulkner v. State, 186 Ga. App. 879, 368 S.E.2d 820 (1988); Adams v. State, 260 Ga. 298, 392 S.E.2d 866 (1990); Mitchell v. State, 200 Ga. App. 146, 407 S.E.2d 115 (1991); Crowe v. State, 265 Ga. 582, 458 S.E.2d 799 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1148, 116 S. Ct. 1021, 134 L. Ed. 2d 100 (1996); Young v. State, 269 Ga. 490, 500 S.E.2d 583 (1998); Johnson v. State, 234 Ga. App. 58, 506 S.E.2d 212 (1998); Gillman v. State, 239 Ga. App. 880, 522 S.E.2d 284 (1999); Dickerson v. State, 241 Ga. App. 593, 526 S.E.2d 443 (1999); Brown v. State, 246 Ga. App. 517, 541 S.E.2d 112 (2000); Pena v. State, 247 Ga. App. 211, 542 S.E.2d 630 (2000).

Remarks of a trial judge which inform the jury of the reason for a ruling excluding evidence generally constitute neither an expression of opinion nor a comment on the evidence within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Santone v. State, 187 Ga. App. 789, 371 S.E.2d 428 (1988); Wigley v. State, 194 Ga. App. 7, 389 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 913, (1989).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 is not violated by the remarks of the trial court when giving reasons for a ruling. Dixon v. State, 196 Ga. App. 15, 395 S.E.2d 577 (1990).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 under the plain error standard of review, based on defendant's failure to have objected or to have sought a mistrial during the trial, when comments were made by the judge during a motion in limine hearing which was held outside of the presence of the jury; further, the trial court's explanation for ruling on objections did not express opinions on what had or had not been proved and did not constitute an expression of opinion or amount to a comment on the evidence. Lockaby v. State, 265 Ga. App. 527, 594 S.E.2d 729 (2004).

Defense counsel cross-examined a witness, who admitted talking to another witness in the hallway; the trial court instructed the witness not to discuss the witness's testimony with anyone, and stated that as the conversation took place before any witnesses had been sworn, the rule of sequestration had not been violated. The trial court did not violate O.C.G.A § 17-8-57 by expressing an opinion on the witness's credibility; the trial court was giving the reasons for the court's ruling, which did not violate § 17-8-57. Rogers v. State, 294 Ga. App. 195, 670 S.E.2d 106 (2008).

Because O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 was not violated by the trial court's remarks when giving reasons for a ruling, any objection to that comment by the defendant's trial counsel would have been without merit. Artis v. State, 299 Ga. App. 287, 682 S.E.2d 375 (2009).

Appellate court rejected a DUI defendant's claim that the trial court erred in commenting on the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; the trial court merely gave the court's reasons for refusing the jury's request to rehear the officer's testimony regarding the officer's observation of the defendant prior to administering the breathalyzer test. The trial court did not give an expression or intimation regarding the court's opinion as to the matters proved or the defendant's guilt. Jacobson v. State, 306 Ga. App. 815, 703 S.E.2d 376 (2010), cert. denied, No. S11C0498, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 582 (Ga. 2011).

Rulings by the Judge (Cont'd)

Trial court did not express or intimate the court's opinion with regard to the defendant's guilt or make a statement with respect to what had been proven but was announcing the court's ruling on the admissibility of the evidence and the purposes for which the jury could consider the evidence. Person v. State, 340 Ga. App. 252, 797 S.E.2d 172 (2017), overruled on other grounds by Flowers v. State, 307 Ga. 618, 837 S.E.2d 824 (2020).

Trial court's comments, which provided a reason for an evidentiary ruling, did not amount to comments on the veracity of the witness or the defendant's guilt and, thus, were not in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Sessions v. State, 304 Ga. 343, 818 S.E.2d 615 (2018).

No violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 for post-verdict comment. — Trial court's comment on the legal effect of the verdicts that had already been returned obviously could have had no influence on the jury's determination as to the defendant's guilt or innocence. Baker v. State, 263 Ga. 79, 428 S.E.2d 340 (1993).

Reopening evidence to admit an unredacted statement after defendant's testimony not error. — In the defendant's joint kidnapping trial with the defendant's brother, the defendant's statement was admitted, redacted to remove references to the defendant's brother; after the defendant testified, the trial court's act of reopening the evidence to allow an unredacted statement into evidence did not constitute an expression of opinion by the trial court regarding the veracity of the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Hunsberger v. State, 348 Ga. App. 898, 825 S.E.2d 391 (2019).

On objections to testimony and evidence. — When an objection is made to evidence offered, the judge has a right, if the judge deems proper, to give the reasons for the judge's decision on the objections. Such reasons so given, if pertinent to the objections made, do not constitute an expression of opinion. Reed v. State, 163 Ga. 206, 135 S.E. 748 (1926).

Trial judge may, without violating the principles of this section, give the judge's reasons for a ruling on objections to testimony, though these reasons may state somewhat of the facts that have been shown in the case. Brown v. State, 40 Ga. App. 546, 150 S.E. 460 (1929); Wooten v. State, 47 Ga. App. 301, 170 S.E. 392 (1933).

Statements of the court in rulings on objections to testimony do not usually amount to expressions of opinion, nor are statements made during argument of such objections in colloquy between court and counsel. Tyler v. State, 91 Ga. App. 87, 84 S.E.2d 843 (1954).

Trial court's commenting on the nine-year-old victim's competency to testify in connection with defense counsel's "leading questions" objection was not an expression of opinion or a comment on the evidence. Norris v. State, 240 Ga. App. 231, 523 S.E.2d 80 (1999).

When the veracity of a witness is in issue, a prior consistent statement is admissible as substantive evidence, and it is well settled that remarks of a judge assigning a reason for the judge's ruling on the admissibility of evidence are neither an expression of opinion nor a comment on the evidence. Brown v. State, 242 Ga. App. 347, 529 S.E.2d 650 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Ellis v. State, 292 Ga. 276, 736 S.E.2d 412 (2013).

Although a defendant failed to object to certain judicial commentary, the remarks were not in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the defendant failed to show plain error since the comments were made by the trial judge when ruling on objections by the state, assigned reasons for the rulings, and neither expressed an opinion nor a comment regarding the evidence. Walker v. State, 308 Ga. App. 176,

707 S.E.2d 122 (2011).

On admitting or excluding evidence. — Generally, what the court says in stating to counsel the reason for denying a motion to exclude or rule out evidence is, if pertinent to the question raised by counsel, not error, although the reason given involves a statement as to certain testimony which is already in, or as to there being nothing in evidence showing that the circumstances are as counsel claim. Brown v. State, 40 Ga. App. 546, 150 S.E. 460 (1929).

Under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, a judge is allowed to state the judge's reasons for admission or exclusion of evidence, when the judge does not judicially approve any of the testimony or go out of the legitimate sphere of discussion. Forbes v. State, 51 Ga. App. 465, 180 S.E. 914 (1935).

Statement made by a judge in ruling on the admissibility of certain testimony, that a witness has testified to certain facts stated and that the evidence is admissible on the question thus raised by this evidence, is not an intimation or expression of opinion as to what has been proved, but is an explanation to counsel of the judge's ruling on the evidence. Garcia v. State, 52 Ga. App. 80, 182 S.E. 526 (1935).

Trial judge may state the judge's reasons for admitting or excluding evidence, if the reasons are pertinent to the evidence and the ruling made thereon, and such a statement will not violate the rule that the court should not intimate or express an opinion to the jury upon the facts of the case. Fraser v. State, 52 Ga. App. 92, 182 S.E. 418 (1935).

Judge has a right to state the judge's view of the law as to why testimony is admissible. Peters v. State, 72 Ga. App. 157, 33 S.E.2d 454 (1945).

Judge's statement: "as to the photograph, I don't know that I officially ruled on that, but I will allow that to be introduced as evidence" did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Hutson v. State, 216 Ga. App. 100, 453 S.E.2d 130 (1995).

Trial court did not make improper comments in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by ruling that exhibits reflecting the defendant's pretrial statements would be admitted and published though the defendant objected. Pertinent remarks made by a trial court in discussing the admissibility of evidence or explaining the court's rulings do not constitute prohibited expressions of opinion. Boyd v. State, 286 Ga. 166, 686 S.E.2d 109 (2009).

In discussing the admissibility question with counsel, the judge never expressed any opinion about the veracity of the evidence itself and during the colloquy, considered as a whole, it was clear that the trial court was leaving it up to the jury to decide what the evidence did or did not show. Pyatt v. State, 298 Ga. 742, 784 S.E.2d 759 (2016).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the trial court was not suggesting the court's opinion as to the appellant's presence at the crime scene or indeed as to where any particular person was, or even who the people were, rather, the court was explaining that the detective need not repeat what was learned from eyewitnesses to the crimes. Burney v. State, 299 Ga. 813, 792 S.E.2d 354 (2016).

On motion for continuance. — In ruling on a motion for a continuance, the trial judge may, in the statement of the judge's reasons, refer to the evidence without violating the provisions of this section. Cochran v. State, 136 Ga. App. 125, 220 S.E.2d 477 (1975).

Even if ruling may intimate facts shown. — Trial judge may give the judge's reasons for ruling on the admissibility of testimony, though these reasons may intimate somewhat of the facts that have been shown in the case. Brown v. State, 119 Ga. 572, 46 S.E. 833 (1904); Hall v. State, 7 Ga. App. 115, 66 S.E. 390 (1909).

Prejudice to accused in stating reasons for ruling. — If in giving reasons for ruling on admissibility the court makes a statement prejudicial to the accused, the accused must make a timely motion for a mistrial based upon the statement if the accused wishes to take advantage of the error. Waddell v. State, 29 Ga. App. 33, 113 S.E. 94 (1922).

Objection to opening statement. — Comments of the trial court, in response to an objection by the state's attorney during the opening statement of defense counsel, who commented that a former boyfriend of a state's witness was presently in prison, which the court refused to permit, stating ". . . what somebody's husband is doing . . . is far beyond what will be admissible . . .," did not constitute an improper expression or intimation of opinion. Mathis v. State, 171 Ga. App. 620, 320 S.E.2d 861 (1984).

Rulings by the Judge (Cont'd)

Objection to closing statement. — Trial court properly sustained the prosecution's objection to defense counsel's allegation in closing argument that police officers, in general, routinely shaded the officers' testimony and violated police rules as counsel was unable to show any evidence to support this allegation; the trial court did not, in so ruling, comment on the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Martinez v. State, 259 Ga. App. 402, 577 S.E.2d 82 (2003).

Reminder to counsel to confine comments to evidence. — Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by reminding defense counsel that counsel was supposed to confine counsel's arguments to facts in evidence after the prosecutor objected to defense counsel's argument that a codefendant testified to get a lighter sentence, and the appellate court rejected the defendant's argument that defendant was entitled to a new trial because the trial court violated § 17-8-57. Fernandez v. State, 263 Ga. App. 750, 589 S.E.2d 309 (2003).

Trial court's ruling on an objection did not clearly refer to the court's earlier ruling on the voluntariness of the defendant's statement so as to constitute a judicial comment that was plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57(b). Priester v. State, 350 Ga. App. 200, 828 S.E.2d 439 (2019).

Comments on ruling should not express opinion as to guilt. — Once the preliminary issue of voluntariness has been determined by the trial judge outside of the jury's presence, the ultimate question of the voluntary character of a statement and the statement's truthfulness is for the jury, and the jury is bound by the trial court's earlier determination on this issue. The trial judge's comments concerning the judge's prior ruling should not express an opinion as to the guilt of the accused. Spence v. State, 252 Ga. 338, 313 S.E.2d 475 (1984).

Trial court's statements regarding the location of the shooting did not improperly express the court's opinion about whether venue and the shooting had been proven and the defendant did not show plain error because the trial court framed the court's statement in terms of allegations and never mentioned the venue for the charge; and the defendant did not show that the court's statement orienting the prospective jurors to the case had any effect on the outcome of the defendant's trial as the state presented evidence that the victim was shot, including the surveillance recording showing the shooting and expert testimony from a medical examiner; and the prosecutor elicited undisputed testimony from several witnesses that the crimes occurred in Fulton County. Thompson v. State, 304 Ga. 146, 816 S.E.2d 646 (2018).

Comment as to "consistent" nature of testimony. — When, on cross-examination, a witness is asked the same question several times, to which an objection is raised and, to this objection, the trial court responds that the witness has "consistently testified a number of times," the trial court's comment does not relate to the overall credibility of the witness but is explanatory of the trial court's subsequent ruling that the question could be posed to the witness only once more. Saladine v. State, 169 Ga. App. 425, 313 S.E.2d 714 (1984).

Trial court's comments did not seriously affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the proceedings and were not reversible error when, in responses to objections, the trial court: (1) stated that a witness had answered consistently; (2) noted that an officer had testified that the defendant had consented to a search of the vehicle and that the officer conducted a pat-down search of the defendant to protect the officer during the vehicle search; (3) stated that the officer had not changed the officer's testimony; and (4) noted that the officer did not testify that the officer was trying to shoot the defendant, but that the officer was trying to keep the defendant from removing the officer's firearm from the firearm's holster; the trial court's statements were not likely to confuse or prejudice the jurors and the jury was explicitly instructed that none of the rulings or comments should be interpreted to express any opinion upon the facts, the credibility of witnesses, the evidence, or the defendant's guilt or innocence. Bolden v. State, 281 Ga. App. 258, 636 S.E.2d 29 (2006).

Judge's comments did not disparage credibility. — When the judge responded to the witness' statement by informing the witness that the judge had not made a deal with the defendant, the trial judge's comments were limited in their scope and did not in fact disparage the witness' credibility in general or the witness's credibility with regard to any fact at issue in the trial or with regard to the guilt or innocence of defendant, nor did they tend to leave the jury with the impression that the witness supporting defendant's story had lied under oath. Nance v. State, 204 Ga. App. 653, 420 S.E.2d 348 (1992).

Trial court did not display judicial bias against the defendant in certain rulings the court rendered and statements the court made during closing arguments since the ruling and statements all pertained to the jury's duty to determine the evidence based on arguments made by counsel. Seidenfaden v. State, 249 Ga. App. 314, 547 S.E.2d 578 (2001).

Judge's statement on what was and was not evidence. — Trial court did not improperly comment on the evidence during the state's opening statement because the trial court's statement that the prosecutor was talking about what was evidence and what was not evidence was not an improper expression of the trial court's opinion as the trial court did not express or intimate an opinion as to any issue of fact, as to the veracity of any witness, as to the weight of any evidence, or as to the guilt of any of the defendants; instead, the trial court merely explained the reason for the court's ruling. Anthony v. State, 303 Ga. 399, 811 S.E.2d 399 (2018).

Colloquies between judge and counsel as to admissibility of evidence allowable. — Inhibition against an expression or intimation of opinion by the trial judge as to the facts of the case does not extend to colloquies between the judge and counsel as to the admissibility of certain evidence, especially when the judge is ruling upon a point made by counsel for the accused. Pratt v. State, 167 Ga. App. 819, 307 S.E.2d 714 (1983); McGinnis v. State, 258 Ga. 673, 372 S.E.2d 804 (1988); McGarity v. State, 190 Ga. App. 139, 378 S.E.2d 179 (1989).

Rule which prohibits an expression or intimation of opinion by the trial court as to what has or has not been proved does not generally extend to colloquies between the judge and counsel regarding the admissibility of evidence. Kinsman v. State, 259 Ga. 89, 376 S.E.2d 845, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 874, 110 S. Ct. 210, 107 L. Ed. 2d 163 (1989); Kitchens v. State, 198 Ga. App. 284, 401 S.E.2d 552 (1991); Ivory v. State, 199 Ga. App. 283, 405 S.E.2d 90 (1991), cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 90 (1991).

At a trial in which after defense counsel asked the defendant if the defendant had received a bronze star, the trial court stated in front of the jury that if defense counsel asked that question the court would consider that the defendant put the defendant's character into evidence, there was not plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because that statement, and interruptions of defense counsel during voir dire, did not intimate an opinion as to the defendant's guilt. Bozzuto v. State, 276 Ga. App. 614, 624 S.E.2d 166 (2005); Edvalson v. State, 339 Ga. App. 348, 793 S.E.2d 545 (2016).

Trial judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by stating "I think it is admissible as a prior consistent," after the defendant objected to the prosecutor's attempt to admit a document because the statement was made in the context of a colloquy and did not amount to an expression of an opinion on the proof or the guilt of the accused. Ellis v. State, 292 Ga. 276, 736 S.E.2d 412 (2013).

Trial court's comments to counsel regarding the admissibility of evidence and the formation of counsel's questions did not constitute comments on disputed issues of fact contrary to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Scott v. State, 332 Ga. App. 559, 774 S.E.2d 137 (2015).

Rulings by the Judge (Cont'd)

Trial court was admonishing defense counsel to correct what the court believed to be a misleading question to the victim, which did not rise to the level of an expression or intimation of opinion by the judge and did not warrant a mistrial as the trial court did not express the court's belief that the defendant's sex with the victim was in fact without the victim's consent, but rather the court was preventing defense counsel from misrepresenting the victim's prior statement to the investigator. Durham v. State, 844 S.E.2d 499, No. A20A0356, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 328 (2020).

Judge's expression that defendant's character had not been placed in evidence not improper. — Judge's expression of opinion and in response to defense objection to testimony in the presence of the jury that the defendant's character had not been placed in evidence was not an expression of what had or had not been proved, nor was it an opinion as to the guilt of the accused. Smith v. State, 165 Ga. App. 669, 302 S.E.2d 414 (1983).

Comment on voluntariness of confession held reversible error. — Trial court's comment, in the presence of the jury, that the court was ruling that the defendant's incriminating statement "was freely and voluntarily made" was reversible error since the issue of voluntariness was one which ultimately had to be decided by the jury. Ray v. State, 181 Ga. App. 42, 351 S.E.2d 490 (1986).

When the defendant was convicted of malice murder and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime in connection with the death of the victim, a new trial was necessary because, when the state sought to introduce a recording of the second interview with the defendant, the trial court improperly commented on the evidence by stating that the court had already ruled that the defendant's statement was freely and voluntarily given. Freeman v. State, 295 Ga. 820, 764 S.E.2d 390 (2014).

Prejudicial comments regarding status of witness. — Trial court's comments, adding the influence of the court's personal opinion on the expert status of a witness and identifying the witness in common with the court as a state-paid employee, were prejudicial comments on the evidence during a competency trial. Jones v. State, 189 Ga. App. 232, 375 S.E.2d 648 (1988).

On expert witnesses. — In a prosecution for felony murder, the court did not violate the proscriptions of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court ruled that a medical examiner and micro-analyst were experts in their respective fields. Marshall v. State, 266 Ga. 304, 466 S.E.2d 567 (1996).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by stating, after hearing a pathologist recite the pathologist's qualifications and after the state tendered the pathologist as an expert, that "the court will receive him as an expert." Williams v. State, 239 Ga. App. 30, 521 S.E.2d 27 (1999).

Trial court's request simply clarified the basis for the witness' testimony by identifying the exhibits the witness was discussing and did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, which provides that it is error for a trial court in a criminal case to express or intimate the court's opinion as to what has or has not been proved or as to the guilt of the accused. Whitehead v. State, 258 Ga. App. 271, 574 S.E.2d 351 (2002).

Comment on codefendant's directed verdict. — Trial court's statement that the court was directing a verdict of not guilty for one codefendant based on insufficient evidence was not an improper comment suggesting sufficient evidence towards other defendants. Holmes v. State, 210 Ga. App. 118, 435 S.E.2d 492 (1993).

Comment on trial strategy. — Overall import of the judge's comment was an explanation of the ruling on the state's hearsay objection; while the judge's brief musing about defense counsel's strategy was unnecessary, and such comments should be avoided, the judge's comment in no way constituted the type of direct comment on the substance or weight of the evidence that had been held to violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Dailey v. State, 297 Ga. 442, 774 S.E.2d 672 (2015).

Lack of appellate jurisdiction for improper questioning by judge. — Because the defendant did not file either a cross-appeal to the state's appeal or a separate notice of appeal regarding the superior court's adverse rulings on the other alleged violations of the statute regarding the presiding judge's allegedly improper questioning of the defendant, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to consider the defendant's allegations of error arising from the superior court's adverse rulings. State v. Nickerson, 324 Ga. App. 576, 749 S.E.2d 768 (2013).

Error in determining jury issue as a matter of law. — Trial court erred in convicting the defendant of riot in a penal institution under O.C.G.A. § 16-10-56 because the question of whether a county jail qualified as a penal institution under O.C.G.A. § 16-10-56 was properly for the jury, and the trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 in determining the issue as a matter of law; whether the jail constituted a penal institution was an element of the offense, and the trial court's direction went beyond clarifying the law on a particular issue because the direction involved applying the law to the evidence to draw a conclusion on an element of the state's case. Paul v. State, 308 Ga. App. 275, 707 S.E.2d 171 (2011).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions

Expression or intimation of opinion in jury charge as to what has been proved. — It is error for the judge, in the judge's charge to the jury, to express or intimate an opinion as to what has or has not been proved, and it is the duty of the court to grant a new trial when such error is committed, whether, in the court's opinion, substantial justice has or has not been done by the verdict. This section, which is imperative and must be obeyed, denies to the Supreme Court discretion in this matter in sustaining a verdict rendered in accordance with the justice of the case. Cook v. State, 40 Ga. App. 125, 149 S.E. 79 (1929).

Because the trial court's charge to the jury regarding the defendant's inculpatory statement amounted to plain error in expressing an opinion as to what had been proven, thereby violating O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, a new trial was ordered on remand. Chumley v. State, 282 Ga. 855, 655 S.E.2d 813 (2008).

Technical violation when instructing on multiple violations not amounting to judge's opinion. — Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance by failing to object to an alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 in a trial court's final charge because: (1) the jury instructions given on accomplice testimony tracked the standard pattern jury instruction; (2) the complained-of language adequately instructed the jurors that each of the defendants had been charged with multiple counts and the jurors were to consider each count independently in assessing whether evidence corroborating the testimony of a single witness was required; and (3) assuming that the cited language, in isolation, could be viewed as a "technical violation," it was clear that the charge did not otherwise assume things as facts and intimate to the jury what the judge believed the evidence to be, so the court's additional instructions concerning accomplice testimony corrected any error. Garland v. State, 311 Ga. App. 7, 714 S.E.2d 707 (2011).

General comments to jury acceptable. — Trial court's instruction that "this is not a case in which you'll be sequestered or have to consider any issues in regard to sentencing in the event that it were to go that far" and "you are only concerned with the guilt or innocence of this accused. You're not to concern yourselves with punishment" did not constitute an expression of opinion. Smith v. State, 268 Ga. 42, 485 S.E.2d 189 (1997).

Trial court's instruction: "The evidence in this case was the witness was asked did you conspire with another person, weren't you the one behind all of this. The answer to that question was, no. And until evidence is produced to change your opinion about that, the evidence is no" was not an improper expression of opinion as to what had been proved because it restated only what the testimony was, absent the improper inferences, and there was no evidence to the contrary. Caldwell v. State, 247 Ga. App. 191, 542 S.E.2d 564 (2000).

Explanation of redacted defendant's video interview. — Trial court did not impermissibly comment on the evidence when the court explained to the jury that the co-defendant's video recorded interview with the police had been redacted so that it included only the relevant portions because the trial court did not express or suggest any opinion the court had regarding the defendant's guilt or innocence or about what had or had not been proved as the trial court's challenged comment was meant simply to explain to the jury that the reduced length and the discernable interruptions in the video the jury saw were due to the agreed-upon redactions to leave what was relevant to the case. Brown v. State, 302 Ga. 454, 807 S.E.2d 369 (2017).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 violated only when charge intimates opinion of judge as to evidence. — It is only when the charge of the court assumes certain things as facts, and is in such shape as to intimate to the jury what the judge believes the evidence to be, that the rule of this section is infringed. Mitchell v. State, 190 Ga. 571, 9 S.E.2d 892 (1940).

When the court intimated no opinion whatsoever, assured an elimination from jury consideration of the whole impermissibly introduced subject of the defendant's lack of bond, and not merely what might have prompted a judge to deny bond, and emphasized to the jury in the court's final charge that no comments or rulings of the court were intended to express an opinion upon the facts of the case, no incursion of the strict rule of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 transpired. Gutierrez v. State, 235 Ga. App. 878, 510 S.E.2d 570 (1998).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court instructed the jury on how to consider evidence of any custodial statements made by the defendant as the instruction, taken as a whole, did not assume facts or intimate an opinion relating to defendant's custodial statements. Milligan v. State, 307 Ga. App. 1, 703 S.E.2d 1 (2010).

Trial court's comments did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the comments amounted to no more than an explanation that clarified the trial court's charge applicable to an alco-sensor field test. The trial court's explanation was a correct statement of the law pertaining to alco-sensor test results and did not express or intimate an opinion regarding the evidence. Black v. State, 309 Ga. App. 880, 711 S.E.2d 428 (2011).

Trial court's instruction on a statement by a child describing sexual contact or physical abuse was erroneous as the jurors could have reasonably taken the instruction to be an expression or intimation of the trial court's opinion that the child's statements were reliable or true. Palmer v. State, 330 Ga. App. 870, 769 S.E.2d 600 (2015).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court charged the jury on intent given that the court explained to the jury that intent was only one of the elements of the crimes charged and that the jury could not find the defendant guilty of any crime unless the state proved every element beyond a reasonable doubt; thus, there was no likelihood that the jury considered the reference to "the defendants' intentions" as an indication of the trial court's beliefs about what the state had proven at trial. Scudder v. State, 298 Ga. 438, 782 S.E.2d 638 (2016).

Jury charge on an inference of the recent possession of stolen property was proper and was not an improper comment on the defendant's guilt by the trial judge in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the trial court's comments did not constitute a comment before the jury on a disputed issue of fact or intimate an opinion about the defendant's guilt, but merely instructed the jury on the permissible inference of possession. Cooper v. State, 342 Ga. App. 351, 801 S.E.2d 589 (2017), cert. denied, No. S17C2017, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 7 (Ga. 2018), cert. dismissed, No. S17C2022, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 10 (Ga. 2018), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 2039, 2018 U.S. LEXIS 3176, 201 L. Ed. 2d 288 (U.S. 2018).

Court's explanation for denying request of jury. — Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 in presenting the court's reasons for denying the juror's request to see the cell phone used to facilitate drug trafficking since the court's comment was limited to a clarification of procedures and did not address the credibility of witnesses or any fact at issue in the trial. Ferrell v. State, 312 Ga. App. 122, 717 S.E.2d 705 (2011).

Charge to the jury must be viewed as a whole and not taken as single instructions in artificial isolation. Moses v. State, 245 Ga. 180, 263 S.E.2d 916, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 849, 101 S. Ct. 138, 66 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Nagel v. State, 262 Ga. 888, 427 S.E.2d 490 (1993).

When passing on exception to part of charge, whole charge may be examined. — In passing upon the question of whether a particular part of a charge excepted to as expressing an opinion on the fact is fairly liable to such exception, the whole charge, written and in the record, may be considered. Driggers v. State, 51 Ga. App. 370, 180 S.E. 619 (1935); Mitchell v. State, 190 Ga. 571, 9 S.E.2d 892 (1940).

Expression not viewed as opinion when the point is stated still to be in issue. — To determine whether an expression in the charge of the court intimates the opinion of the trial judge as to what has or has not been proved, it is proper, in a doubtful case, to construe the expression in connection with the entire charge, and when the trial judge elsewhere in the judge's charge, in ample and unmistakable language, tells the jury that the particular matter about which it is claimed the judge has expressed an opinion as to its having been proved is an issue in the case, such expression will not be construed as an expression or intimation of opinion on the facts. Hanvey v. State, 68 Ga. 612 (1882); Moon v. State, 68 Ga. 687 (1882); Washington v. State, 24 Ga. App. 65, 100 S.E. 31 (1919).

Whole charge must be considered as to whether excerpt constitutes an opinion. — Whether or not an excerpt from a charge constitutes an expression of opinion must be determined from the charge as a whole. Tyler v. State, 91 Ga. App. 87, 84 S.E.2d 843 (1954).

Jury charge as a whole, and not isolated segments thereof, is to be looked to in determining whether or not the trial court fully and fairly covered the points contained in the refused instructions. Amerson v. State, 177 Ga. App. 97, 338 S.E.2d 528 (1985), overruled on other grounds, Watts v. State, 274 Ga. 373, 552 S.E.2d 823 (2001), overruled on other grounds, Watts v. State, 261 Ga. App. 230, 582 S.E.2d 186 (2003).

In order to determine whether a trial court has improperly expressed an opinion in the court's charge as to what has or has not been proved, the whole charge may be considered. Mullinax v. State, 255 Ga. 442, 339 S.E.2d 704 (1986).

Slip of the tongue as to a single word did not amount to a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when considered in light of the entire charge. Dukes v. State, 224 Ga. App. 305, 480 S.E.2d 340 (1997).

While it is error for a judge to express the judge's opinion as to the guilt of the accused, a mere verbal inaccuracy in a charge, which results from a palpable slip of the tongue, and clearly could not have misled or confused the jury, is not reversible error; when the trial court gave curative instructions following the court's slip of the tongue in giving the instructions, there was no error. Sutton v. State, 263 Ga. App. 188, 587 S.E.2d 379 (2003).

When a trial judge gave an extensive pattern charge on self-defense, and in one sentence of the charge, the judge stated that "for the use of force to be justified under the law, the accused must have acted, really acted under the influence of the fears of a reasonable person and not in the spirit of revenge," and when defense counsel conceded that the trial court's second mention of the word "acted" in one sentence of the jury charge stemmed from a mere slip of the tongue, and when, reviewing the charge as a whole, the sentence appeared not to have been an improper comment by the trial judge on the evidence, but rather a slip of the tongue as to a single word, and that the charge as a whole revealed that the trial judge gave sufficient context to the circumstances under which the jury could have found that the defendant acted in self-defense, no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 occurred. Robinson v. State, 267 Ga. App. 634, 600 S.E.2d 729 (2004).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for aggravated sodomy and kidnapping, the misreading of the word "in" instead of "and" when the indictment was read to the jury regarding the aggravated sodomy count did not constitute an improper comment on the evidence. Considering the charge as a whole, the appellate court was satisfied that the jury could not have been misled or confused by the trial court's minor slip of the tongue since the singular use of "in" instead of "and" constituted harmless error. Smith v. State, 294 Ga. App. 692, 670 S.E.2d 191 (2008).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

By charging the jury in the language of the indictment as to the physical acts of the defendant which amounted to the crimes charged, the court did not express an opinion as to the evidence. Weaver v. State, 137 Ga. App. 470, 224 S.E.2d 110 (1976).

Judge should carefully avoid invading the province of the jury. — Judge should refer to the evidence only so far as is necessary to present the leading issues in the cause, leaving the minor contentions of opposing counsel to the consideration of the jury under appropriate general intimation. It should contain no such summary of the evidence as might, to a jury, either seem to be an argument, or amount to the expression or intimation of an opinion thereon. Gallman v. State, 127 Ga. App. 849, 195 S.E.2d 187 (1973).

For instruction held to invade province of jury, see Johns v. State, 178 Ga. 676, 173 S.E. 917 (1934), overruled on other grounds, Corbin v. State, 211 Ga. 400, 86 S.E.2d 221 (1955).

Use of explanatory illustration in charging the jury. — When, in charging the jury, the court correctly states the law governing the case, but exception is taken to an illustration used by the court explanatory of a legal principle, this court will not narrowly scrutinize the illustration if satisfied that, whether right or wrong, the illustration was not calculated to mislead, and did not in fact mislead the jury. Hamilton v. State, 169 Ga. 613, 151 S.E. 17 (1929).

When a trial court correctly instructs the jury on the law but an exception is made to a hypothetical illustration offered by way of explanation, unless a showing is made that the illustration confused or misled the jury, the court of appeals will not narrowly scrutinize that illustration. Grimes v. State, 245 Ga. App. 277, 537 S.E.2d 720 (2000).

Repetition of instruction to correct omission not improper. — During a defendant's trial for charges arising out of a road rage incident, the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by repeating the jury instruction on self-defense twice; given that the charge was repeated solely for the purpose of correcting an unintended omission, and that the corrected charge was an accurate statement of law, the trial court's repetition of the instruction did not amount to an improper expression of opinion or a comment on the evidence. Adams v. State, 282 Ga. App. 819, 640 S.E.2d 329 (2006).

Answering hypothetical question from jury. — Trial court, by answering a hypothetical question from the jury by stating that it would not have been illegal for the victim to express a desire to drop the charges, was not impermissibly expressing an opinion on the defendant's guilt or on what facts had been proven during the trial. Simmons v. State, 251 Ga. App. 682, 555 S.E.2d 59 (2001).

Providing jury with illustrative examples of what verdict might be. — In a trial for murder, when the evidence involves the offense of voluntary manslaughter, it is not an expression of an opinion by the court as to what verdict the jury should return, to define voluntary manslaughter, give the jury the penalty, and to give several illustrations as to what their verdict could be as to the minimum and maximum term of years they might wish to impose, and the effect of such verdict in regard to serving the minimum and maximum of the years fixed by the verdict, when the court also gives a correct and proper charge as to murder and justifiable homicide, also involved under the evidence. Harrell v. State, 69 Ga. App. 482, 26 S.E.2d 151 (1943).

Charge that jury should acquit if the jury believes the defendant. — When the trial court charges the jury that if the jury believes the contentions of the defendant, it is the jury's duty to acquit, the court does not lead the jury to believe that the jury does not have to find proof of the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, when the trial judge further instructs the jury that if the jury believes beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the offense for which the defendant is charged, the jury would be authorized to find the defendant guilty. White v. State, 151 Ga. App. 559, 260 S.E.2d 554 (1979).

Classification of evidence as to weight or consideration. — It is reversible error for the trial judge in the judge's charge to classify the evidence as to the weight or consideration, or to intimate any opinion thereon. Watson v. State, 227 Ga. 698, 182 S.E.2d 446 (1971).

Charging point of law. — Trial court's instruction that it was not essential for the state to locate physical evidence of gunfire to establish the crime of aggravated assault was not an impermissible comment on the evidence; it simply charged a point of law. Willis v. State, 214 Ga. App. 479, 448 S.E.2d 223 (1994); Salahuddin v. State, 241 Ga. App. 168, 525 S.E.2d 422 (1999).

Because the court's instruction to the jury, made in overruling a defense objection during the cross-examination of a witness, was not an improper expression of the court's opinion of the case, but was an accurate statement of the law of implied consent, there was no violation. Hunt v. State, 247 Ga. App. 464, 542 S.E.2d 591 (2000).

Judge's reference in jury instructions to "the deadly weapon used by the defendant" was not an improper opinion that the gun used was a "deadly weapon" and that the defendant was the person who used the gun to kill the victim; rather, the statement was drawn verbatim from a case holding that it was not necessary for the state to admit into evidence the deadly weapon used by the defendant, and referred to "defendant" generically. Wells v. State, 295 Ga. 161, 758 S.E.2d 598 (2014).

Instruction to not base verdict on inferences or speculation. — Trial court's instruction that "you must not base your verdict on inferences or speculation or anything that is not supported by the evidence" was a correct statement of the law and was not plain error on the basis of a claim that such instruction interfered with the jury's function as sole arbiter of the credibility of witnesses. Caldwell v. State, 247 Ga. App. 191, 542 S.E.2d 564 (2000).

Charge stating contents of indictment. — There was no violation when the court merely stated the contents of the indictment and properly instructed that the court does not express an opinion as to whether the accused has been involved in any offenses. Jones v. State, 268 Ga. 12, 483 S.E.2d 871 (1997); Anderson v. State, 244 Ga. App. 643, 536 S.E.2d 540 (2000).

Charge that witnesses are presumed to be truthful. — Instruction that "when witnesses appear and testify they are presumed to speak the truth and are to be believed" does not erroneously shift the burden of proof to the defendant, requiring the defendant to produce evidence that would be sufficient to overcome such presumption, when the quote and context of the charge is relevant and actually beneficial to the defendant. Ivie v. State, 151 Ga. App. 496, 260 S.E.2d 543 (1979).

Charge regarding expert testimony. — In a prosecution for driving under the influence of alcohol, the trial court did not improperly comment on the evidence when the court charged the jury that "any statement during the course of this trial which would suggest that [the defense expert's] testing procedures or methods have been approved by the appellate courts of this state shall be disregarded by you," since, considered in context, the charge was in the nature of a curative instruction necessitated by the plaintiff's inappropriate attempt to bolster the credibility of the witness. Campbell v. State, 248 Ga. App. 162, 545 S.E.2d 6 (2001).

Court may presume police officer's information reliable. — Trial court's statement that information that a police officer receives from another is presumed to be reliable was not an improper comment on the evidence since the statement was offered to explain the correct proposition of law that officer A may act on information received from a reliable source, even if the reliable source spoke to officer B, who then communicated the information to officer A. Ellis v. State, 216 Ga. App. 232, 453 S.E.2d 810 (1995).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

Comment on weight and consideration to be given statements of the defendant. — In charging upon a statement made by one on trial for crime, it is erroneous to use language calculated to impress the jury that the jury ought to be cautious in giving credit to what the defendant said. Alexander v. State, 114 Ga. 266, 40 S.E. 231 (1901).

While under former Code 1933, § 81-1104 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57) a trial judge should not, in charging upon a statement made by one on trial for a criminal offense, use language calculated to impress the jury that the jury should be cautious in giving credit to what the accused says, or in any manner to use language which might disparage the statement of the accused, it was not error for the trial judge, in charging upon the statement of the accused under former Code 1933, §§ 38-415 and 38-416 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-506), to remind the jury of the circumstances which may impair the force of such statement, or which should enable the jury to give the accused's statement the weight to which the statement was entitled. Henderson v. State, 50 Ga. App. 16, 176 S.E. 811 (1934).

Charge that defendant contended defendant was not guilty. — Trial court's instructions informing the jury that the defendant contended to be not guilty of the crime charged in the indictment was not an expression of the court's opinion that the state's case was true when other parts of the instructions informed the jury that the defendant was clothed with a presumption of innocence that could be overcome only by proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, and that the defendant was not required to prove the defendant's innocence. Beam v. State, 265 Ga. 853, 463 S.E.2d 347 (1995).

Charge regarding character evidence. — Trial court did not commit plain error in the court's charge to the jury on good character evidence because the defendant used the idea that the defendant did not have a reputation for violence as a means of attempting to show the defendant's good character, and the trial court merely reflected that in the court's charge to the jury; and the jury was properly left to determine whether the defendant would have acted consistently with the defendant's purported character with respect to violence, which was to not act violently towards anyone, including the victim; further, giving that proper charge did not amount to the trial court commenting on the evidence. Jacobs v. State, 303 Ga. 245, 811 S.E.2d 372 (2018).

Charge that jury should convict if convinced beyond a reasonable doubt. — It is not error as an expression of opinion by the court to charge, in a criminal case, that if the jury were convinced of the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, it was the jury's duty to convict the defendant. Caraway v. State, 72 Ga. App. 504, 34 S.E.2d 303 (1945).

In a prosecution on multiple counts of public indecency, the trial court did not err in giving an instruction that it was for the jury to determine whether the evidence showed beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was "the perpetrator of the alleged crimes," because when read as a whole, the charge adequately instructed the jury on the jury's duty to consider each count separately. Callahan v. State, 249 Ga. App. 108, 547 S.E.2d 741 (2001).

Charge as to presumption that every act unlawful in itself is criminally intended. — It is not error for the court to charge the jury: "therefore the law presumes that every act which in itself is unlawful was criminally intended until the contrary is made to appear, but the question of intention rests finally with you," as such instruction does not constitute an expression of opinion by the trial judge that the defendant committed an unlawful act. Van Pelt v. State, 87 Ga. App. 103, 73 S.E.2d 115 (1952).

Charge that civil remedies were available. — In a prosecution for aggravated assault arising out of a melee involving the amount owed the defendants for construction work, the trial court correctly charged that civil remedies were available to resolve the controversy. Powell v. State, 228 Ga. App. 56, 491 S.E.2d 135 (1997).

Charge that state's evidence tends to establish guilt. — When the state's evidence is wholly circumstantial, a charge that the state has introduced evidence tending to establish the fact that the defendant is guilty of the charge is clearly, though inadvertently, an intimation of the court's opinion as to what has been proved in the case and constitutes reversible error. Rowland v. State, 71 Ga. App. 154, 30 S.E.2d 368 (1944).

Failure to give charge when evidence would support charge. — If there is evidence in the case from which the jury could find that the acts of the defendant were lawful, and the charge given eliminates this phase of the case from the consideration of the jury, the charge amounts to an expression of an opinion that the acts of the defendant are unlawful and constitutes error by the court. Patterson v. State, 181 Ga. 698, 184 S.E. 309 (1936).

Failure to adjust charge to the evidence. — Trial court erred by not adjusting a charge regarding statements by the defendant to private persons to omit the court's reference to the situation in which such a statement was made while the defendant was in custody because there was no evidence in the defendant's case to show that the defendant had made any such statements while in custody, but it was highly probable that the charge, although not properly adjusted to the evidence actually presented at trial, did not contribute to the jury's guilt/innocence phase or sentencing phase verdicts; the charge simply provided the law governing the admissibility of certain types of statements without implying that any such statements existed. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

"Apparent purpose" included in instruction. — In a prosecution for burglary, use of the phrase "apparent purpose" in an instruction stating "That the defendant did not accomplish his apparent purpose would not necessarily prevent a finding of guilt of the offense of burglary" was not an improper comment on the evidence. Batchelor v. State, 229 Ga. App. 563, 494 S.E.2d 357 (1997).

Use of "consistent" in curative instructions. — Trial court's use of "consistent" in the court's curative instructions following the defendant's motion for mistrial did not assume certain things as fact and did not intimate to the jury what the judge believed the evidence to be. Instead, the trial court, using a term to which the defense counsel did not object when the prosecutor informed the court of the extent of the prosecutor's expert's testimony, attempted to inform the jury of the limited nature of the expert testimony inaccurately summarized by the prosecutor in the prosecutor's opening statement. Jones v. State, 277 Ga. 36, 586 S.E.2d 224 (2003).

Charge given during evidentiary phase. — Trial court's correct instruction to the jury during the evidentiary phase of a criminal proceeding did not constitute an improper comment on the defendant's guilt, although it might have been the better practice for the court to give the instruction during the jury charge at the close of the evidence. Polizzotto v. State, 248 Ga. App. 814, 547 S.E.2d 390 (2001).

Omission of instruction on witness immunity not error. — During a defendant's trial for charges arising out of a road rage incident, the trial court's failure to give a jury instruction regarding immunity or leniency granted to witnesses did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 or the defendant's due process rights; although the trial court began to give the instruction and stopped after a few words, the failure to provide the entire charge was not error because there was no evidence that any witness who testified at trial had been granted immunity or leniency. Adams v. State, 282 Ga. App. 819, 640 S.E.2d 329 (2006).

Although the judge had two ex parte discussions with the prosecutor, no curative instruction was required because the court made no comments to the jury; however, the better practice would be to avoid all such ex parte conversations. Chambers v. State, 224 Ga. App. 245, 480 S.E.2d 288 (1997).

Slip of the tongue did not mislead jury. — Court's substitution of "the court" for "the State" amounted to a slip of the tongue that clearly could not have misled or confused the jury. Mitchell v. State, 242 Ga. App. 694, 531 S.E.2d 143 (2000).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

Referring to the deceased as the "victim" in the charge on aggravated assault did not amount to an improper expression of the accused's guilt under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Camphor v. State, 272 Ga. 408, 529 S.E.2d 121 (2000).

In the defendant's vehicular homicide trial, the trial court's use of the word "victim" in referring to the deceased did not amount to an improper comment on the guilt of the accused. Hartzler v. State, 332 Ga. App. 674, 774 S.E.2d 738 (2015).

Evidence of victim's struggling with defendant not sufficient. — In a prosecution for malice murder, evidence that the victim struggled with the defendant when the defendant announced the defendant's intent to kill the victim and brandished a gun was not evidence of provocation which justified the giving of a charge on voluntary manslaughter. Beam v. State, 265 Ga. 853, 463 S.E.2d 347 (1995).

Instruction as to matter on which no evidence introduced. — When the court charges the jury on the law of flight, and there is no evidence of flight on the part of the accused, the court has erred and a new trial should be granted. Griffin v. State, 47 Ga. App. 188, 170 S.E. 106 (1933).

Theory of culpability which is supported by testimony but not advanced at trial. — Trial court errs in charging a theory of criminal culpability supported by testimony but not advanced during the trial. Gallman v. State, 127 Ga. App. 849, 195 S.E.2d 187 (1973).

Statement by judge as to only grade of offense involved. — Charge "the only grade of manslaughter involved in this case and the only one I charge you upon is voluntary manslaughter," does not violate the rule against expression by the judge of an opinion on the proof or the guilt of the accused, when the judge has just charged the general laws on manslaughter, which have to do with both voluntary and involuntary manslaughter. McMullen v. State, 199 Ga. 521, 34 S.E.2d 892 (1945).

Judge's comment that judge would probably get reversed if charge not read. — Trial judge's statement that the judge would "get reversed probably" if the judge failed to read the jury charge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57(a)(1) because the statement was not made in connection with any evidence against the defendant or in a context that would have implied that the judge believed the defendant would be found guilty. The clear import of the judge's statement was that jury instructions are so important that the judge's failure to read the instruction would be a violation of the judge's duty. DeLoach v. State, 308 Ga. 283, 840 S.E.2d 396 (2020).

Failure to give lower charge is not expression of opinion. — When the evidence did not warrant the submission to the jury of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of a lawful act without due caution and circumspection, it cannot be said that the trial judge, by reason of having charged the higher grade of involuntary manslaughter and not the lower, intimated and expressed an opinion that the defendant was guilty of the higher grade. Swearingen v. State, 63 Ga. App. 605, 11 S.E.2d 423 (1940).

Charge that a crime has been committed when nothing would dispute this. — When there is nothing in the evidence or in the defendant's statement to dispute the fact that the alleged crime was committed and the defendant's defense rests solely upon the contention that the defendant did not participate in the offense, the court, in charging the jury, does not violate this section in assuming that a crime has been committed. Driggers v. State, 51 Ga. App. 370, 180 S.E. 619 (1935).

Reference in charge to facts established by the evidence. — When a fact is established by the disputed evidence, it is not error for the judge in the judge's charge to assume or intimate that the fact has been proved. Lastinger v. State, 58 Ga. App. 376, 198 S.E. 559 (1938).

Charge on circumstantial proof of weapon proper. — In a prosecution for armed robbery, the trial court was entitled to charge the jury that "a replica having the appearance of an offensive weapon means any reasonable belief on the part of the victim that an offensive weapon is present, which is obtained by the victim through the use of his senses." Smith v. State, 209 Ga. App. 540, 433 S.E.2d 694 (1993).

Error to assume or seem to assume that transaction was a crime. — In charging the jury in a criminal case, it is error for the court to assume or seem to assume that a transaction was a crime. Bell v. State, 47 Ga. App. 216, 169 S.E. 732 (1933).

Reference to acts charged as "crimes" is not erroneous expression of opinion or erroneous assumption. — Charge of the trial judge in a prosecution for subornation of perjury, wherein the judge refers to perjury and subornation of perjury as "crimes," is not erroneous as expressing or intimating an opinion that a crime has been committed, nor is it erroneous as assuming or seeming to assume that any transaction involved under the evidence is a crime. Taylor v. State, 59 Ga. App. 1, 200 S.E. 237 (1938).

Reference to "his crime" in charge as to recommendation of punishment. — Charge that if the jury should find the defendant guilty, the jury can, if the jury sees fit, recommend that the defendant be punished by imprisonment for life, "and, in that event, he would be sent to the penitentiary to serve the rest of his life for his crime," does not, when construed in context, violate the rule that the judge shall not express or intimate any opinion as to what has or has not been proved, or as to the guilt of the accused. McMullen v. State, 199 Ga. 521, 34 S.E.2d 892 (1945).

Reference to "all criminals" and not "all defendants". — In defendant's trial on charges of operating a motor vehicle after receiving notice that the defendant's license was revoked as an habitual violator, driving a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, and driving a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol while transporting a child under the age of 14 years, the trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by telling the jury that the state had the burden of proving guilt beyond a reasonable doubt for "all criminals who come into criminal court" and then correcting itself by telling the jury that the court meant to say "all defendants who come into criminal court." Floyd v. State, 263 Ga. App. 3, 587 S.E.2d 166 (2003).

Use of "the defendant" rather than "a defendant". — See Fowler v. State, 187 Ga. 406, 1 S.E.2d 18 (1939).

When the court uses the article "the" instead of the article "a" preceding the word "defendant" in charging the jury on admissions, the court does not express an opinion that the defendant has made an admission when the defendant had not. Nelson v. State, 187 Ga. 576, 1 S.E.2d 641 (1939).

Undue stress on state's contentions. — Motion for new trial complaining that the court erred in unduly stressing throughout the charge the contentions of the state, stating the contentions repeatedly, and in unduly stressing, by repetition all through the charge, under what circumstances the jury would be authorized to find the defendant guilty, all of which amounts to an expression of opinion on the part of the court, and is prejudicial to the defendant, affords no cause for new trial. Jillson v. State, 187 Ga. 119, 200 S.E. 707 (1938).

Summing up of state's case and arguments in charge to jury. — Charge should contain no such summary of the evidence as might to a jury either seem to be an argument or amount to the expression or intimation of an opinion thereon. It is therefore error for the presiding judge to repeat the substance of the testimony of the state's witnesses as detailed from the stand, and submit this with the argumentative deductions drawn therefrom by the state's counsel as the issues in the case. Rouse v. State, 2 Ga. App. 184, 58 S.E. 416 (1907).

Detailed recapitulation of testimony in charge to jury. — Judge should not in the judge's charge take up and recapitulate in detail the testimony of the witnesses as the testimony was delivered from the stand, in such a way as is calculated to leave the impression upon the minds of the jury that the testimony of such witnesses has established the fact contended for by one of the parties, or that such testimony is of a nature that it is entitled to more consideration than other testimony in the case. Ryan v. State, 46 Ga. App. 347, 167 S.E. 720 (1933).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

If the charge of the court is argumentative and so strongly stated the contentions of one of the parties as to weaken and disparage those of the opposite party, and thus is liable to impress the jury that the court is of the opinion that the defendant is guilty, a new trial should be granted. Ryan v. State, 46 Ga. App. 347, 167 S.E. 720 (1933).

Charge as to evidence of other similar offenses committed by defendant. — See Adams v. State, 55 Ga. App. 729, 191 S.E. 280 (1937).

Charge as to evidence of other similar transactions committed by defendant. — Trial court did not make an improper comment on the evidence while instructing the jury on similar transaction evidence because the statement notified the jury that the prosecutor was about to present certain evidence mentioned in an opening statement regarding other acts, but, it did not express or intimate the trial court's opinion as to whether any fact had been or had not been proved; and, before making the statement, the trial court told the jury that, by giving the instruction, the trial court in no way suggested to the jury that the defendant had or had not committed any other acts, nor whether such acts, if committed, proved anything. Ashley v. State, 340 Ga. App. 539, 798 S.E.2d 235 (2017).

Charge on impeachment. — Trial counsel was not effective for failing to object to an instruction regarding impeachment of a witness by proof of prior contradictory statements because the charge did not constitute an expression of opinion as to the guilt of the accused in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; the charge stated the law accurately and was mere surplusage that did not mislead the jury. Bellamy v. State, 312 Ga. App. 899, 720 S.E.2d 323 (2011).

Trial judge's charge to a jury on impeachment of a witness by a prior conviction did not amount to an improper comment on the evidence as the prior conviction was undisputed and the charge did not require the jury to disbelieve the defendant's testimony based on the prior conviction. Coleman v. State, 325 Ga. App. 700, 753 S.E.2d 449 (2014).

Witness answers are evidence, not questions. — Trial court's sua sponte instruction that the witness's answers, rather than the questions put to the witness, were evidence, was not error, after conflicting testimony about the author of the witness's report to the police. Hardwick v. State, 250 Ga. App. 390, 551 S.E.2d 789 (2001).

Instruction that jury should disregard remark made in jest. — See Edwards v. State, 55 Ga. App. 187, 189 S.E. 678 (1937).

Expression of opinion as to what has been proved. — An expression of opinion by the court with regard to what has or has not been proved cannot be eradicated by an instruction to the effect that anything the court said or did during trial was not intended to suggest which party should prevail. Brundage v. State, 143 Ga. App. 1, 237 S.E.2d 473 (1977).

Effort to eradicate effect of acknowledged erroneous expressions held insufficient. — See Crawford v. State, 139 Ga. App. 347, 228 S.E.2d 371 (1976).

Instruction as to what evidence has been ruled out as objectionable. — For the trial court to repeat objectionable evidence ruled out by the court in order to identify the evidence for the jury, in connection with the court's instructions to the jury to disregard the evidence, is not improper or prejudicial to the rights of the defendant. Tyler v. State, 91 Ga. App. 87, 84 S.E.2d 843 (1954).

Charge as to consideration of evidence which has been ruled out or excluded. — Failure to instruct the jury in the formal charge not to consider evidence which has been ruled out of the case in the absence of a timely request to do so is not error, nor is it error to instruct the jury not to consider excluded evidence. Such a charge is not an expression of opinion as to what has been proved on the trial of the case. Pritchard v. State, 225 Ga. 690, 171 S.E.2d 130 (1969).

Charge as to one defendant as implicating codefendants. — Charge: "I charge you as a matter of law that the codefendant, a witness for the state, is an accomplice so far as your consideration of his testimony is concerned," amounts to an expression of the trial court's opinion that the evidence demands a finding that the codefendant and some other person or persons have committed the offense charged, and is calculated to mislead the jury into believing that the court believes that the defendant is implicated. Middleton v. State, 72 Ga. App. 817, 35 S.E.2d 317 (1945).

In two defendants' joint trial for murder, the trial court's justification charge (requested by one defendant but not the other) did not constitute an improper comment on the evidence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by suggesting that the non-requesting defendant had been one of the shooters. Nalls v. State, 304 Ga. 168, 815 S.E.2d 38 (2018).

Instruction that witness who admits participation in crime is an accomplice. — To be accomplices of each other, both the defendant and the state's witness must have been involved in the criminal enterprise. One cannot be the accomplice of an innocent man. It therefore constitutes an expression of opinion by the court as to the guilt of the accused to instruct the jury that a witness who testified as to the defendant's guilt and admitted the witness's participation in the crime would be an accomplice of the accused. Millwood v. State, 102 Ga. App. 180, 115 S.E.2d 829 (1960).

Reference to a witness as an "accomplice." — Court's charge, "the state has offered the testimony of an accomplice," which declares the witness to be an accomplice instead of leaving it to the jury to decide from the evidence whether or not this had been proved, is a violation of the inhibition expressed in this section against an expression by the trial court as to what has been proved in the case. Brock v. State, 91 Ga. App. 141, 85 S.E.2d 177 (1954), commented on in 17 Ga. B.J. 501 (1955).

When the trial court simply charged the jury that a defendant cannot be convicted on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, but did not point to either of the codefendants as an accomplice, there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Isaac v. State, 269 Ga. 875, 505 S.E.2d 480 (1998).

Assumption or intimation in murder trial that accused assaulted the deceased. — In the trial of one accused of murder, it is reversible error for the court in charging the jury to assume or intimate that the accused had "assaulted" the deceased, since the evidence and the defendant's statement did not demand a finding that an assault had been made. Tyner v. State, 70 Ga. App. 56, 27 S.E.2d 351 (1943).

Instructions in murder case held not to shift burden of rebuttal to defendant. — See Felts v. State, 244 Ga. 503, 260 S.E.2d 887 (1979).

Charge that law presumes malice from use of deadly weapon. — See Kennedy v. State, 191 Ga. 22, 11 S.E.2d 179 (1940).

Charge as to malice. — In a prosecution for murder, a charge regarding malice did not improperly comment on the evidence and was permissible under the statute since the charge did not attempt to tell the jury what had been shown by the evidence but, instead, made clear that the jury was the ultimate arbiter of fact and specifically instructed that if the jury found that the defendant drew a deadly weapon and thereby escalated the argument, then the jury was entitled, but not obligated, to infer malice therefrom. Carter v. State, 269 Ga. 891, 506 S.E.2d 124 (1998).

Charges as to assault with intent to rape and lesser offense of assault and battery. — In prosecution for assault with intent to rape, charge to the jury on the lesser offense of assault and battery, which used the words "which was by the laying on of hands of the defendant upon her," does not involve an intimation or expression of opinion by the court considering the charge as a whole. Watkins v. State, 63 Ga. App. 282, 11 S.E.2d 62 (1940).

Instruction that "the evidence shows that there was a robbery and a robbery by force" is clearly the expression of an opinion by the trial judge as to what had been proved, even though the judge's purpose was to eliminate from the consideration of the jury the charges of robbery by intimidation and robbery by sudden snatching, which offenses were also charged in the indictment but not supported by the evidence. Coleman v. State, 211 Ga. 704, 88 S.E.2d 381 (1955).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

Instruction on killing and then committing robbery. — Trial court did not unlawfully comment on the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court instructed the jury that an armed robbery could be committed by killing the victim first and then taking the property because the challenged charge neither assumed certain things as facts nor intimated to the jury what the trial court believed the evidence to be; it appeared that the defendant was arguing that the trial court gave an incorrect statement of law but couched the defendant's enumeration using § 17-8-57 because the defendant failed to object to the charge at defendant's trial, but parties cannot circumvent the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58 with such a maneuver. Vergara v. State, 287 Ga. 194, 695 S.E.2d 215 (2010).

Charge on armed robbery not supported by any evidence. — Trial court's jury charge in an armed robbery trial suggested facts that were not supported by any evidence, specifically, that the assailant held the assailant's hand underneath the assailant's shirt during the robbery. The erroneous charge was an impermissible comment on the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 and constituted plain error, entitling the defendant to a new trial. Gonzalez v. State, 306 Ga. App. 887, 703 S.E.2d 433 (2010).

Charge as to conspiracy which refers to "the crime" and "the conspiracy". — When charge gives to the jury a correct statement of the law upon the responsibility of a conspirator for acts of coconspirators, it does not intimate an opinion that a crime has been committed, or that a conspiracy existed, because the charge refers to crime as "the crime" and to conspiracy as "the conspiracy." Claybourn v. State, 190 Ga. 861, 11 S.E.2d 23 (1940).

Court's comment on underlying felony. — State supreme court rejected the defendant's claim that a trial court improperly commented on the evidence, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, when the court told the jury that the offense of possession of cocaine with the intent to distribute was a felony while instructing the jury before the jury deliberated to determine if the defendant was guilty as charged of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Trigger v. State, 275 Ga. 512, 570 S.E.2d 323 (2002), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669 (2003).

Court's statement to jurors that jurors are deliberating a misdemeanor is error. — If the court charges the jury "that this case that you have heard and that you are deliberating now is a misdemeanor," the language is calculated to impress upon the jury that the court is of the opinion that the state has proved that the defendant committed a misdemeanor and is error in violation of this section. Hendricks v. State, 108 Ga. App. 259, 132 S.E.2d 845 (1963), overruled on other grounds, State v. Collins, 201 Ga. App. 500, 411 S.E.2d 546 (1991).

Curative instruction precluded finding of plain error. — Even if the judge made an improper comment during trial, there was no plain error because the judge gave a sufficient curative instruction. Franklin v. State, 351 Ga. App. 539, 831 S.E.2d 186 (2019), cert. denied, No. S19C1590, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 107 (Ga. 2020).

Charges as to defense of insanity. — Portion of charge on the defense of insanity, the burden of proof, and the consideration of the evidence of insanity in connection with other evidence in the event the burden of establishing insanity has not been carried by the accused, is not an expression of opinion by the judge. Bryant v. State, 197 Ga. 641, 30 S.E.2d 259 (1944).

Charge as to delusional insanity which uses expression "connected with the criminal act." — In prosecution for homicide, part of charge upon delusional insanity, wherein the court uses the expression, "connected with the criminal act," when considered with the charge as a whole, is not an expression of opinion that the homicide is a criminal act. Carroll v. State, 204 Ga. 510, 50 S.E.2d 330 (1948).

Charge that jury may recommend punishment if jury finds find verdict of guilty. — If the court has fully instructed the jury as to verdict forms applicable to both acquittal and conviction, it is not error, in connection with the latter form, to instruct that, "when" or "after" the jury finds such verdict of guilty, the jury may go further and recommend misdemeanor punishment. Tyler v. State, 91 Ga. App. 87, 84 S.E.2d 843 (1954).

Instruction that jury should not consider sentencing. — Statute was not violated since the trial court did not indicate that it thought some form of sentence was necessary for the defendant's actions; the court's instruction only informed the jury that the jury was not to be concerned with sentencing if sentencing became necessary. Moore v. State, 274 Ga. 229, 552 S.E.2d 832 (2001).

Charge as to aggravating circumstances and recommendation of death penalty. — There is no impermissible expression of opinion when the trial court instructs the jury that the defendant cannot be sentenced to death unless the jury finds at least one statutory aggravating circumstance to exist beyond a reasonable doubt and recommends that the death penalty be imposed. Finney v. State, 242 Ga. 582, 250 S.E.2d 388 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 916, 99 S. Ct. 2017, 60 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1979).

If the judge instructs the jury to write the jury's verdicts at the top of the indictments, because later the jury will have to write the sentencing feature at the bottom, such charge is error within the meaning of this section. Gaither v. State, 234 Ga. 465, 216 S.E.2d 324 (1975).

Charge as to when defendant will be eligible for parole. — In murder trial, charge on voluntary manslaughter which directed the jury that, if the jury should convict the defendant of this offense, the jury should fix the defendant's sentence within the minimum and maximum fixed by law, and that, upon serving the minimum sentence fixed by the jury under the rules of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, the accused will be eligible for parole, is not error on grounds that the charge intimated that the judge desired a verdict convicting the defendant of the offense of murder, and sought to take away from the board the power vested in the board by law. Thompson v. State, 204 Ga. 407, 50 S.E.2d 74 (1948).

Obvious slip of the tongue. — Trial judge's misstatement of defendant's not guilty plea as "the plea of guilty" in a jury charge was not reversible error because the judge immediately before referred to the plea as not guilty and the mistake was a palpable slip of the tongue. Edwards v. State, 169 Ga. App. 958, 315 S.E.2d 675 (1984).

Expression of opinion by court. — When the court charged the jury, in pertinent part: "Now, the state concedes and the court recognizes that there is no evidence in this case whatsoever that the defendant was ever in jail other than as a result of being arrested for the particular offenses involved in and named in this indictment. You will not consider his being in jail as referring to anything other than his being in jail as a result of an arrest made for the particular offenses listed in this indictment and you will not consider that evidence that the defendant has been in jail as in any way hurtful to the defendant in this case," the court's instruction was not an expression of opinion by the court, but was a statement of facts in evidence, namely, that the defendant was in jail for the offenses charged, and that there was no evidence whatsoever that the defendant was ever in jail for any other reason. Lee v. State, 186 Ga. App. 849, 368 S.E.2d 804 (1988).

When the defendant argued that certain portions of the trial court's instructions to the jury violated the statutory prohibition against expression or intimation by a judge of the judge's opinion as to what has or has not been proven or as to the guilt of the accused, and in responding to the jury's request for additional instruction, the trial judge attempted to distinguish circumstantial evidence from direct evidence and, by way of example, stated that the testimony of two eyewitnesses in the case was direct testimony, there was no error in the court's instruction to the jury since the direct testimony of the eyewitnesses was sufficient to establish defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Thornton v. State, 191 Ga. App. 801, 383 S.E.2d 181 (1989).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

Fact that the judge intimated the opinion that the lineup was non-suggestive was not cause for a new trial because the defendant never claimed that the lineup was suggestive. Brown v. State, 251 Ga. App. 343, 554 S.E.2d 321 (2001).

Trial court's failure to make a requested change to the pattern jury charge on mere presence did not result in an expression of the trial court's opinion as to what had been proved in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the trial court's charge did not vary materially from the pattern charge or make any implication about what the evidence in the case showed, but the instruction merely reflected an accurate statement of law; the trial court explicitly instructed the jury that no ruling or comment by the trial court was intended to express any opinion about the facts of the case or credibility of the witnesses or the guilt of the defendant. Arnold v. State, 305 Ga. App. 45, 699 S.E.2d 77 (2010).

Instructing jury on consequences of possible verdicts on issue of competency. — Court's action in instructing the jury at the close of the trial on the insanity plea regarding the consequences of the jury's possible verdicts on the issue of the defendant's competency to stand trial did not constitute an impermissible expression of opinion as to the appellant's guilt or innocence or as to what had or had not been proved so as to require reversal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Ross v. State, 173 Ga. App. 313, 325 S.E.2d 919 (1985).

Use of "ought to" in jury instruction. — There is no error in a judge instructing a jury that, if the jurybelieves beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the crime of which the defendant was accused, the jury "ought to" convict the defendant. Cothran v. State, 177 Ga. App. 58, 338 S.E.2d 513 (1985).

Instruction on justification proper as without commentary. — Trial court's jury instruction on justification was not erroneous for containing improper commentary because the statement in the charge neither intimated the trial court's opinion on what had or had not been proven nor intimated the trial court's opinion on the defendant's guilt or innocence. Hall v. State, 286 Ga. 358, 687 S.E.2d 819 (2010).

Court may explain to jurors that "auto-intoximeter" or similar device is considered accurate if properly operated and such explanation does not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Henson v. State, 168 Ga. App. 210, 308 S.E.2d 555 (1983).

Charge on the scientific efficacy of the horizontal gaze nystagmus test in a prosecution for driving under the influence was not an erroneous expression of the court's opinion in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Waits v. State, 232 Ga. App. 357, 501 S.E.2d 870 (1998).

Court advising jury that officer complied with notice provisions. — Court, in ruling upon the issue of whether or not the defendant's constitutional and statutory rights were given to the defendant prior to the defendant's statement, errs in advising the jury that the officer complied with the Constitution and the statute with reference to notices required by law or warnings required by law and, thus, expresses an opinion as to the evidence with reference to voluntariness, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Such a violation is a mandatory cause for a new trial. Dean v. State, 168 Ga. App. 172, 308 S.E.2d 434 (1983).

Charge that Miranda rights do not exist in driving under the influence cases. — Charge to the jury that "this so-called Miranda right does not exist in a case of driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs," was an incorrect statement of the law, but under the circumstances, the error was harmless. Stanfield v. State, 176 Ga. App. 424, 336 S.E.2d 337 (1985).

Instruction concerning inferences from flight not error. — When the court charged in terms of inferences allowed to be made by the jury, if it so chose, from the evidence of flight, the flight charge, either standing alone or taken in the context of the whole charge, could not have been taken by the jury as an expression or intimation of the court's opinion. Alexander v. State, 180 Ga. App. 640, 350 S.E.2d 284 (1986).

Charge on imperfection of photographs. — When the trial court charged the jury: "Jurors, in regard to the photographs that have been entered into the evidence in the case, I charge you that it is difficult and often impossible to obtain a photograph of a scene of an alleged occurrence with precise exactness prevailing," the charge did not instruct the jury to excuse or overlook any failure by the state to produce a photograph of a relevant piece of evidence for the case. The plain language of that part of the charge merely reminded the jury of what common sense under the circumstances would dictate, the statement related to photographs admitted in evidence and not to any omission or absence of photographs and the caveat related equally to the state's and defendant's evidence, as both relied on photographs, so that there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Laymac v. State, 181 Ga. App. 737, 353 S.E.2d 559 (1987).

Charge on presumption of intoxication. — Charge that "a legal presumption of intoxication exists if you find the chemical analysis shows defendant's breath, urine, or blood contained .11 percent of alcohol" did not improperly intimate any conclusion on the part of the trial court regarding what the evidence had shown with respect to the alcohol content of the defendant's blood at the time of the defendant's arrest. Freeman v. State, 183 Ga. App. 264, 358 S.E.2d 623, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 358 S.E.2d 623 (1987).

Charge on voluntary intoxication. — When the defendant takes exception to the judge's charge to the jury "that voluntary intoxication is not an excuse for any criminal act or omission," because no evidence was presented to the jury concerning the defendant's intoxication or consumption of alcohol, it was held that the extraneous instruction was harmless. Thurston v. State, 186 Ga. App. 881, 368 S.E.2d 822 (1988).

Trial court's charge on voluntary intoxication in a child molestation case was not an improper comment on the evidence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, given evidence from all three complainants that the defendant was drinking Wild Turkey bourbon and the victim's testimony that the victim believed the defendant was drunk. Bright v. State, 301 Ga. App. 204, 687 S.E.2d 208 (2009).

Trial court's charge to the jury on voluntary intoxication did not constitute an improper expression of opinion evidence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because there was circumstantial evidence to support the giving of the charge, namely, testimony that alcohol was served at the party and that the defendant went to the liquor store to make a purchase; one witness testified that although the witness did not see the defendant consume alcohol, the witness "knew" that the defendant had in fact done so. Reese v. State, 289 Ga. 446, 711 S.E.2d 717 (2011), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Trial court's use of the word "slayer" in an instruction did not constitute an opinion that the defendant acted with malice, when the term "slayer," fairly construed, did not refer to the defendant but back to the abstract word "person," thus instructing the jury as to what circumstances would, if this "person" had caused another's death, justify a finding of voluntary manslaughter. Mullinax v. State, 255 Ga. 442, 339 S.E.2d 704 (1986).

Accurate recharge on entrapment defense. — In responding to an inquiry from the jury, the judge's recharge fully and accurately informed the jury of the elements of the defense of entrapment and there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57. Jordan v. State, 211 Ga. App. 86, 438 S.E.2d 371 (1993).

Accurate statements of law are not improper instructions. — Trial court's accurate statements of the law involving the charges at issue, burglary and theft by receiving stolen property, did not involve improper comments on the evidence and, thus, the trial court did not improperly instruct the jury. Haney v. State, 261 Ga. App. 136, 581 S.E.2d 626 (2003).

Sequestration charge. — Sequestration charge given after the defendant's sister testified was not a comment on the sister's credibility nor a suggestion that the sister violated the sequestration rule; remarks made by the trial court as to the admissibility of evidence or explaining the court's rulings were not a comment or an opinion as to what had or had not been proven. Watson v. State, 278 Ga. 763, 604 S.E.2d 804 (2004), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Jury Charges and Curative Instructions (Cont'd)

Explanation of rule of sequestration. — Trial court judge did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by expressing an opinion in providing the explanation of the rule of sequestration because it was not a prohibited expression of opinion, was not a comment on the credibility of any of the witnesses, and was a neutral explanation of the rule of sequestration that did not favor either party. Booker v. State, 322 Ga. App. 257, 744 S.E.2d 429 (2013).

Instruction limiting jury's consideration of testimony. — Trial court's jury instructions did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 because the instructions limiting the evidence that the jury could consider from a detective's testimony did not express or intimate the trial court's opinion with regard to the defendant's guilt or innocence. Graves v. State, 322 Ga. App. 24, 743 S.E.2d 582 (2013).

Charge on statement made at scene of crime error. — Because whether a tire store where a victim was found was the scene of the victim's rape and murder was a contested fact, the trial court's instructions regarding a statement defendant made "at the scene of the crime" violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; however, under the plain error standard of § 17-8-57(b), which was applied retroactively as procedural, the error did not likely affect the outcome given the strong evidence of guilt. Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 122, 816 S.E.2d 656 (2018).

Necessity for Objection or Motion

Necessity for objection or motion for mistrial. — Prejudicial remarks of the judge in the presence and hearing of the jury are not cause for a new trial when there is no motion for a mistrial on account of the remarks. Williams v. State, 42 Ga. App. 225, 155 S.E. 511 (1930).

In order to take advantage of the conduct of the trial judge in propounding questions to witnesses as an expression or intimation of an opinion, it is necessary that counsel make a motion for mistrial or other valid objections. Parker v. State, 51 Ga. App. 295, 180 S.E. 390 (1935).

Prejudicial questions or statements purportedly in violation of this section are not reversible error in the absence of a motion for mistrial or other objection. Miller v. State, 122 Ga. App. 553, 177 S.E.2d 838 (1970); Nelson v. State, 136 Ga. App. 861, 222 S.E.2d 677 (1975).

Question of whether this section has been violated is not reached unless an objection or motion for mistrial is made. Driggers v. State, 244 Ga. 160, 259 S.E.2d 133 (1979); Turnbow v. State, 153 Ga. App. 479, 265 S.E.2d 832 (1980); Anglin v. State, 173 Ga. App. 648, 327 S.E.2d 776 (1985); Smith v. State, 173 Ga. App. 652, 327 S.E.2d 781 (1985); Coney v. State, 198 Ga. App. 272, 401 S.E.2d 304 (1991); Butts v. State, 198 Ga. App. 368, 401 S.E.2d 763 (1991), overruled on other grounds, Sims v. State, 266 Ga. 417, 467 S.E.2d 574 (1996); Cornelius v. State, 213 Ga. App. 766, 445 S.E.2d 800 (1994); Crowe v. State, 265 Ga. 582, 458 S.E.2d 799 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1148, 116 S. Ct. 1021, 134 L. Ed. 2d 100 (1996); Brown v. State, 221 Ga. App. 454, 471 S.E.2d 527 (1996); Pickren v. State, 272 Ga. 421, 530 S.E.2d 464 (2000); Conger v. State, 245 Ga. App. 399, 537 S.E.2d 798 (2000); Hudson v. State, 246 Ga. App. 335, 539 S.E.2d 860 (2000).

If the trial judge is alleged to have made a prejudicial remark or to have asked a prejudicial question during the course of trial in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, an objection or motion for mistrial must be made in order to preserve the issue for appeal. Thomas v. State, 158 Ga. App. 97, 279 S.E.2d 335 (1981); Lucas v. State, 197 Ga. App. 347, 398 S.E.2d 417 (1990); Gann v. State, 245 Ga. App. 448, 538 S.E.2d 97 (2000).

When on appeal the defendant argued that the trial judge violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 but the defendant made no motion for mistrial, that enumeration of error was without merit. Miller v. State, 180 Ga. App. 525, 349 S.E.2d 495 (1986).

When a criminal defendant did not object at trial to the manner in which the court conducted the court's competency examination of a five-year old child nor indicate how the defendant was harmed, and the defendant failed to object to the court's conduct during the child's testimony before the jury, review was precluded. Hunter v. State, 194 Ga. App. 711, 391 S.E.2d 695 (1990); Herrington v. State, 243 Ga. App. 265, 533 S.E.2d 133 (2000), appeal dismissed, 265 Ga. App. 454, 594 S.E.2d 682 (2004).

Although the trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by taking an active role in the defendant's criminal trial, arising from an incident wherein the defendant was observed in a drug transaction, any potential error arising from the court's conduct which involved the questioning of several witnesses was waived by the defendant's failure to have either objected or sought a mistrial. Collins v. State, 263 Ga. App. 601, 588 S.E.2d 799 (2003).

Defendant's conviction of trafficking in more than 200 grams of cocaine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(a) was affirmed because the defendant waived any issue as to the judge's violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by failing to object or move for a mistrial, but even if the defendant had objected, the transcript failed to show that the judge made an improper comment or gave the judge's opinion regarding the evidence. Castillo v. State, 263 Ga. App. 772, 589 S.E.2d 325 (2003).

Defendants' claimed violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 was not addressed on appeal as neither defendant objected to the court's alleged improper comments or moved for a mistrial. Graham v. State, 282 Ga. App. 576, 639 S.E.2d 384 (2006).

Trial court's statement during voir dire that the crimes allegedly took place near the intersection of Peachtree Road and Pharr Road in the Buckhead section of Atlanta was not objected to by the defendant, and therefore the defendant's claim that the statement improperly relieved the state of the state's obligation to establish venue, violating O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, was not preserved. Green v. State, 300 Ga. App. 688, 686 S.E.2d 271 (2009).

Reservation of right to object deemed adequate. — General reservation of the right to later object to a jury charge preserves for review an alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 which occurs during the charge, overruling Butts v. State, 198 Ga. App. 368, 401 S.E.2d 763 (1991); Payne v. State, 207 Ga. App. 312, 428 S.E.2d 103 (1993). Sims v. State, 266 Ga. 417, 467 S.E.2d 574 (1996).

Plain error exception. — While an argument not raised before the trial court is not generally considered by the appellate court for the first time, an exception exists for a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 which results in "plain error." Simmons v. State, 251 Ga. App. 682, 555 S.E.2d 59 (2001).

Defendant's alleged errors were not reviewed for plain error because the defendant failed to object at trial as the Georgia Supreme Court limited the application of the plain error doctrine to either capital cases or cases in which there was an alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, which prohibited a trial judge from intimating an opinion as to the guilt of an accused. Patten v. State, 275 Ga. App. 574, 621 S.E.2d 550 (2005).

Violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 will always constitute "plain error," meaning that the failure to object at trial will not waive the issue on appeal, and on appeal, the issue is simply whether there was such a violation, and, if so, the statutory language is mandatory, and a violation of § 17-8-57 requires a new trial; to the extent the "plain error rule" has been articulated otherwise in the context of an alleged violation of § 17-8-57, such cases are disapproved. State v. Gardner, 286 Ga. 633, 690 S.E.2d 164 (2010).

Murder defendant failed to object and failed to show plain error in a trial judge's comments in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57(a)(1); rather, the trial court intervened to prevent witnesses from giving improper testimony; questioned witnesses to clarify testimony; and cautioned counsel. Bamberg v. State, 308 Ga. 340, 839 S.E.2d 640 (2020).

Trial judge did not commit plain error when purportedly violating O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by commenting on the surveillance video evidence that was played for the jury because even if the commentary was error, the defendant ignored the context in which the comments were made as the comments did not pertain to the substance of the video; the comments pertained to the process the judge intended to use with respect to that piece of evidence. Roberts v. State, 305 Ga. 257, 824 S.E.2d 326 (2019).

Necessity for Objection or Motion (Cont'd)

Error may be asserted for first time in motion for new trial. — When a judge during the progress of the trial or in charge to the jury, expresses or intimates the judge's opinion as to what has or has not been proved, or as to the guilt of the accused, such error may be taken advantage of for the first time in a motion for new trial. Allen v. State, 67 Ga. App. 607, 21 S.E.2d 280 (1942).

It is not necessary that motion was made at time of error or that injury resulted. — It is not necessary for the aggrieved party to allege in the motion for new trial that any sort of motion was made at the time of the alleged error, or to allege injury resulting from such violation of the statute, since the law conclusively presumes injury on account of the error, and the mandatory provisions of this section require reversal of the judgment of the trial court on proper assignment of error. Allen v. State, 67 Ga. App. 607, 21 S.E.2d 280 (1942).

Failure to make timely objection or motion. — When the defendant fails to properly except by motion for mistrial to allegedly improper remarks of judge and solicitor general (now district attorney) during examination of witnesses, the allegedly improper remarks were insufficient to support a motion for new trial. Simmons v. State, 181 Ga. 761, 184 S.E. 291 (1936).

Failure of the aggrieved party to move for a mistrial, or to register a proper objection, because of prejudicial remarks of the judge in this connection, will preclude the party prejudiced thereby from complaining thereof after the verdict. Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139 (1943); Garrett v. State, 173 Ga. App. 292, 325 S.E.2d 911 (1985).

If the accused did not object to questions at the time the questions were propounded to witnesses by the trial judge and did not move for mistrial or to rule out the evidence that had been elicited as the result of the examination, the accused could not complain that the manner in which the judge conducted the examination was a prohibited expression of opinion upon the facts. Dyer v. State, 71 Ga. App. 41, 29 S.E.2d 922 (1944).

If no motion for mistrial is made, but error is complained of for the first time in an amended motion for new trial, asserting that the trial judge expressed an opinion as to what had been proved, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, such ground of motion for new trial is not meritorious. Shepherd v. State, 203 Ga. 635, 47 S.E.2d 860 (1948).

In the absence of any objection or motion for mistrial in the trial court, the appellant may not raise the issue of the trial judge's expression of opinion for the first time on appeal. Hill v. State, 237 Ga. 794, 229 S.E.2d 737 (1976).

If no motion for mistrial is made when the judge asks questions complained of, the enumeration must be rejected on appeal. Beddington v. State, 149 Ga. App. 386, 254 S.E.2d 504 (1979).

If the defendant contends the trial court committed reversible error while charging the jury in expressing the court's opinion that the defendant fled the scene of the crime, but there was no objection at trial or request for mistrial, the defendant is estopped from raising the issue on appeal. McDaniel v. State, 169 Ga. App. 254, 312 S.E.2d 363 (1983); Barber v. State, 176 Ga. App. 103, 335 S.E.2d 594 (1985).

Defendant waived the right to contend that the court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 since the defendant did not contemporaneously object or move for a mistrial on this ground. Walker v. State, 258 Ga. 443, 370 S.E.2d 149 (1988); Wilson v. State, 268 Ga. 527, 491 S.E.2d 47 (1997).

Defendant failed to preserve for appeal the defendant's claim that the trial court violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 by improperly commenting on the evidence as the defendant did not make an objection or a motion for a mistrial. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 178, 598 S.E.2d 898 (2004).

Appellate court refused to consider the defendant's claim that the trial judge violated O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the judge commented on evidence that was introduced during the defendant's trial on charges of armed robbery and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime because the defendant did not object to the comments or move for a mistrial. Garlington v. State, 268 Ga. App. 264, 601 S.E.2d 793 (2004).

In a first degree forgery prosecution, the trial court should not have instructed the jury that the jury was not bound to believe testimony as to facts incredible, impossible, or inherently improbable, but the defendant did not object; the defendant's failure to object, under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, waived the error given the strength of the evidence against the defendant and the trial court's charge in its entirety. Overton v. State, 277 Ga. App. 819, 627 S.E.2d 875 (2006).

Necessity for object waiver. — Because there was no contemporaneous objection, the right to urge a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 was waived. Cammon v. State, 269 Ga. 470, 500 S.E.2d 329 (1998).

Failure to object does not waive plain error. — Under the Georgia Supreme Court's decision in Paul v. State, 272 Ga. 845 (2000), the failure to object to an alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 in a criminal trial does not waive the right to assert error on appeal in the case of plain error. Patterson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 630, 577 S.E.2d 850 (2003).

Although the state argued that because the defendant failed to object to any of the first three comments of which the defendant complained, the defendant waived any error, a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 always constituted plain error, meaning that the failure to object at trial would not waive the issue on appeal. On appeal, the issue was simply whether there was such a violation; if so, it was well established that the statutory language was mandatory and that a violation of § 17-8-57 required a new trial. Linson v. State, 287 Ga. 881, 700 S.E.2d 394 (2010).

Appeal of error not raised in trial court. — Defendant in criminal case may appeal and enumerate error on erroneous charge or erroneous failure to charge without first raising issue in trial court. Arnold v. State, 157 Ga. App. 714, 278 S.E.2d 418 (1981).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 89 C.J.S. (Rev), Trial, § 610 et seq.

ALR. — Propriety of instructions as to the significance of evidence concerning the defendant's good character as an element bearing upon the question of reasonable doubt, 10 A.L.R. 8; 68 A.L.R. 1068.

Remark of judge during trial of criminal case as comment on weight of evidence, 10 A.L.R. 1116.

Right to and propriety of instruction as to credibility of defendant in criminal case as a witness, 85 A.L.R. 523.

Comments and conduct of judge calculated to coerce or influence jury to reach verdict in criminal case, 85 A.L.R. 1420.

Propriety and correctness of instructions regarding maxim "falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus," 90 A.L.R. 74.

Scope and application of rule which permits judge in criminal case to comment on weight or significance of evidence, 113 A.L.R. 1308.

Propriety and effect of instruction or requested instruction which either affirms or denies jury's right to draw unfavorable inference against a party because he invokes privilege against testimony of person offered as witness by the other party or because he fails to call such person as a witness, 131 A.L.R. 693.

Instructions disparaging defense of alibi, 146 A.L.R. 1377.

Comments in judge's charge to jury disparaging expert testimony, 156 A.L.R. 530.

Propriety and effect of court's indication to jury that court would suspend sentence, 8 A.L.R.2d 1001.

Remarks or acts of trial judge criticizing, rebuking, or punishing defense counsel in criminal case, as requiring new trial or reversal, 62 A.L.R.2d 166.

Right to withdraw motion for mistrial, 100 A.L.R.2d 375.

Propriety of specific jury instructions as to credibility of accomplices, 4 A.L.R.3d 351.

Prejudicial effect of statement of court that if jury makes mistake in convicting it can be corrected by other authorities, 5 A.L.R.3d 974.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of comment or instruction by court with respect to party's refusal to permit introduction of privileged testimony, 34 A.L.R.3d 775.

Prejudicial effect of trial judge's remarks, during criminal trial, disparaging accused, 34 A.L.R.3d 1313.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of instructions on credibility of alibi witnesses, 72 A.L.R.3d 617.

Instructions to jury: sympathy to accused as appropriate factor in jury consideration, 72 A.L.R.3d 842.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of trial court's inquiry as to numerical division of jury, 77 A.L.R.3d 769.

Double jeopardy as bar to retrial after grant of defendant's motion of mistrial, 98 A.L.R.3d 997.

Propriety of jury instruction regarding credibility of witness who has been convicted of a crime, 9 A.L.R.4th 897.

Modern status of law regarding cure of error, in instruction as to one offense, by conviction of higher or lesser offense, 15 A.L.R.4th 118.

Post-retirement out-of-court communications between jurors and trial judge as grounds for new trial or reversal in criminal case, 43 A.L.R.4th 410.

Disqualification from criminal proceedings of trial judge who earlier presided over disposition of case of coparticipant, 72 A.L.R.4th 651.

Gestures, facial expressions, or other nonverbal communication of trial judge in criminal case as ground for relief, 45 A.L.R.5th 531.

Disqualification or recusal of judge due to comments at Continuing Legal Education (CLE) seminar or other educational meetings, 49 A.L.R.6th 93.

Justification and correction of remarks or acts of state trial judge criticizing, rebuking, or punishing defense counsel in criminal case as otherwise requiring new trial or reversal, 54 A.L.R.6th 429.

What constitutes accused's consent to court's discharge of jury or to grant of motion for mistrial which will constitute waiver of former jeopardy plea — silence or failure to object or protest, 103 A.L.R.6th 137.

17-8-58. Objections to jury charges prior to the jury retiring to deliberate; failure to raise objections.

(a) Any party who objects to any portion of the charge to the jury or the failure to charge the jury shall inform the court of the specific objection and the grounds for such objection before the jury retires to deliberate. Such objections shall be done outside of the jury's hearing and presence.

(b) Failure to object in accordance with subsection (a) of this Code section shall preclude appellate review of such portion of the jury charge, unless such portion of the jury charge constitutes plain error which affects substantial rights of the parties. Such plain error may be considered on appeal even if it was not brought to the court's attention as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-8-58, enacted by Ga. L. 2007, p. 595, § 1/HB 197.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2007, p. 595, § 5/HB 197, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that this Code section shall apply to all trials which occur on or after July 1, 2007.

Law reviews. — For annual survey on criminal law, see 64 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2012).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Appellate Review

General Consideration

Failure to object to failure to define terms waives issue. — During the defendant's trial for aggravated stalking, aggravated assault, and making terroristic threats, the trial court did not err by failing to define "violent contact" in the court's charge to the jury because the defendant did not request that the term be defined for the jury, and the defendant did not object to the trial court's failure to define violent contact; because the defendant did not specifically object to the failure of the trial court to instruct the jury on the definition of violent contact at the conclusion of the jury charge, the defendant waived the right to urge error on appeal. Vaughn v. State, 301 Ga. App. 55, 686 S.E.2d 847 (2009), overruled on other grounds, State v. Kelly, 290 Ga. 29, 718 S.E.2d 232 (2011).

Defendant stating no objection waives issue. — Because a defendant specifically stated that the defendant had no objection to the jury charge after it was given, the defendant waived appellate review of the charge. In fact, as to three of the four charges challenged on appeal, the defendant requested the same charges, precluding review even if the charge given was plain error. Blankenship v. State, 301 Ga. App. 602, 688 S.E.2d 395 (2009).

Omission of an essential element of an offense. — Failure to charge that the physical harm required to prove battery had to be substantial omitted an essential element of the crime of battery and amounted to reversible error as the jury was obviously confused and never properly instructed. Shaw v. State, 340 Ga. App. 749, 798 S.E.2d 344 (2017).

Renewal of prior objections insufficient. — Under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), the defendant waived the defendant's right to urge error in the jury charge because following the court's charge to the jury, the trial court inquired whether there were any exceptions to the charge other than those previously stated, and the defendant's counsel renewed those objections, but at the charge conference, defense counsel did not object to the trial court's ruling that the court would not give the defendant's requested charges; as such, defense counsel's "renewal" of prior objections did not comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(a). Lacey v. State, 288 Ga. 341, 703 S.E.2d 617 (2010).

Objection from codefendant not sufficient for defendant. — Trial court did not err in instructing the jury that the jury's verdict could not be influenced by sympathy or prejudice because after the trial court charged the jury, the defendant's counsel affirmatively stated that counsel had no objection to the jury instructions as given, and although the codefendant's counsel timely and specifically objected to the instruction, the defendant's counsel did not join in the objection, nor did defense counsel raise the objection when given another opportunity to do so before the jury returned the jury's verdict; therefore, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), the defendant waived any objection to the instruction, and there was no reasonable probability that the jury's verdict would have been different if the trial court had not given the instruction at issue. Hughes v. State, 309 Ga. App. 150, 709 S.E.2d 900 (2011).

Failure to object to instruction on venue. — Because there was no objection made at trial as to the instruction on venue, appellate review was precluded in that no portion of the jury charge constituted plain error which affected substantial rights of the parties. Miller v. State, 289 Ga. 854, 717 S.E.2d 179 (2011).

Defendant failed to demonstrate plain error based on the trial court giving an incorrect money laundering charge as reviewing the jury instructions as a whole, the record clearly demonstrated that the trial court read the indictment to the jury and the jury had a copy of the indictment in the jury room, the trial court properly instructed the jury on the state's burden, defined the crimes alleged, instructed the jury on the essential elements, and reminded the jury that the burden of proof did not shift to the defendant. Carr v. State, 350 Ga. App. 461, 829 S.E.2d 641 (2019), cert. denied, No. S19C1422, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 15 (Ga. 2020).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Objection untimely. — Defendant's objection to a jury instruction was untimely because the objection was made after the jury resumed deliberations. Curry v. State, 291 Ga. 446, 729 S.E.2d 370 (2012).

Court's error in defining "offensive weapon." — Defendant failed to preserve for appellate review the defendant's contention that the trial court erred in using the "offensive weapon" definition of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(a) as armed robbery was not one of the charged offenses because the defendant did not object to the charge and expressly declined the trial court's offer to recharge the jury. The charge did not constitute plain error because the definition of "offensive weapon" applicable to armed robbery mirrored very closely the definition of aggravated assault set forth in O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(a)(2), and an "offensive weapon" under the armed robbery statute necessarily would fall within the category of weapons described in § 16-5-21(a)(2), and therefore the defendant could not show that the instruction affected the outcome of the proceedings. Jackson v. State, 316 Ga. App. 588, 730 S.E.2d 69 (2012).

Jury charge omitting explanation of "slight" movement. — In a kidnapping case, although the trial court's charge that omitted statutory language explaining "slight movement" was error, it was not plain error given that the evidence showed movement that was substantial, involving a number of miles. Deleon v. State, 344 Ga. App. 499, 811 S.E.2d 35 (2018).

No notification on court's decision on sexual battery instruction. — After the defendant was convicted of two counts of rape, the defendant could not show that the defendant was harmed when the trial court failed to notify trial counsel of the court's ruling on the sexual-battery charge before closing arguments, much less plain error, because the defendant could not be found guilty of rape or sexual battery if the jury believed the defense that the defendant had consensual sex with the victims and the victims fabricated the rape allegations; and an argument that the defendant was guilty of sexual battery instead of rape would have been in direct conflict with the defendant's own theory of defense. Seals v. State, 350 Ga. App. 787, 830 S.E.2d 315 (2019).

Only plain error review allowed. — Because the defendant failed to object to the trial court's instruction, the defendant's claim on appeal was subject only to plain error review under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58. Dukes v. State, 290 Ga. 486, 722 S.E.2d 701 (2012).

Instruction on self-defense not plain error. — Defendant's trial counsel failed to preserve objections to the trial court's recharge of the jury under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58. The trial court's instruction regarding self-defense as applicable to all counts was not plain error. Guajardo v. State, 290 Ga. 172, 718 S.E.2d 292 (2011).

No plain error in instruction on justification. — Because the trial court instructed the jury on the state's burden to disprove the affirmative defense beyond a reasonable doubt, the reasonable belief necessary to justify self-defense by use of force, including the use of deadly force, and when the jury had a duty to acquit based on justification, those instructions adequately covered justification, including self-defense, and the state's burden of proof, and the trial court's charge did not constitute plain error as it was not a clear or obvious error. Clark v. State, 306 Ga. 367, 829 S.E.2d 306 (2019), cert. denied, 2020 U.S. LEXIS 1059, 206 L. Ed. 2d 180 (U.S. 2020).

No plain error on charge of kidnapping. — Although the defendant argued that the trial court improperly charged the jury on the offense of kidnapping, no plain error existed as the defendant intentionally relinquished any claim of error related to the charge on kidnapping by inducing the alleged error because the defendant objected and specifically asked the trial court not to include that language in the charge that the defendant now argued was erroneously omitted. Ashley v. State, 340 Ga. App. 539, 798 S.E.2d 235 (2017).

Failure to charge the jury on necessity of corroboration of accomplice testimony. — Trial court committed plain error by not providing a jury charge on the necessity of corroboration of the accomplice's testimony because by failing to give the required accomplice corroboration charge and instead charging the jury that the testimony of a single witness, if believed, was generally sufficient to establish a fact, the trial court impermissibly empowered the jury to find the defendant guilty based solely on the accomplice's testimony; while there was sufficient corroborating evidence to support a verdict, that evidence was in no way overwhelming; the outcome of the trial court proceedings was likely affected by the error; and the error seriously affected the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the proceedings. Stanbury v. State, 299 Ga. 125, 786 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

Trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury that the testimony of an accomplice had to be corroborated because, pretermitting whether the failure to instruct the jury on corroboration was error, the defendant could not successfully demonstrate that it was plain error as evidence from multiple witnesses, including the defendant's witnesses and the defendant, corroborated the shooter's testimony. Huff v. State, 300 Ga. 807, 796 S.E.2d 688 (2017).

While the trial court's failure to give a corroborating accomplice instruction was clear error, it did not amount to plain error because the defendant failed to establish that omitting the instruction probably affected the outcome of the trial given that the jury would have had to reject evidence from two separate sources in order to find that the accomplice's testimony was not corroborated. Lyman v. State, 301 Ga. 312, 800 S.E.2d 333 (2017).

Trial court properly granted the defendant a new trial because the court plainly erred in failing to instruct the jury that accomplice testimony required corroboration as the trial court's instructions deviated from the rule that unequivocally required corroboration of accomplice testimony in felony cases; the trial court impermissibly empowered the jury to find the defendant guilty based solely on the accomplice's testimony; the outcome of the trial court proceedings was likely affected by the trial court's failure to provide that charge to the jury because virtually all of the incriminating evidence flowed from the accomplice; and the error seriously affected the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the judicial proceedings. State v. Johnson, 305 Ga. 237, 824 S.E.2d 317 (2019).

Failure to give accomplice corroboration jury instruction was not plain error because there was no evidence that three witnesses for the state were the defendant's accomplices in a gang robbery and murder; although there was evidence that the three were present near or at the time of the shooting, the accomplices were in a separate vehicle, and if the accomplices had committed the crimes, the defendant would have been completely innocent. Stripling v. State, 304 Ga. 131, 816 S.E.2d 663 (2018).

Failure to recharge on corroboration was not plain error. — Trial court's failure to recharge on corroboration was not plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b) or substantial error that was harmful as a matter of law under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-24(c) because in the court's instructions to the jury following closing argument, the trial court properly charged the jury that no person would be convicted of terroristic threats on the unsupported testimony of the party to whom the threat was made. Tidwell v. State, 312 Ga. App. 468, 718 S.E.2d 808 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0473, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 277 (Ga. 2012).

No plain error in failing to instruct on corroboration of confession. — Assuming without deciding that any of the defendant's out-of-court statements, or all of the statements collectively, amounted to a confession, the defendant could not satisfy the third prong of the plain error test as the trial court proceedings were not likely affected by the trial court's failure sua sponte to give the jury instruction on corroboration of a defendant's confession because there was ample corroborating evidence at trial, including the defendant's purported confession about the defendant's own behavior at the crime scene, evidence of the couple's discordant relationship, and the adult son's out-of-court statement that the defendant had previously threatened to kill the victim, the defendant's wife, over bills, and the forensic evidence. Clarke v. State, 308 Ga. 630, 842 S.E.2d 863 (2020).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Refusal to give instruction on mutual combat not error. — Trial court's refusal to give the defendant's requested jury instruction on mutual combat, O.C.G.A. § 16-3-21(b)(3), did not constitute plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b) because a charge on mutual combat was not adjusted to the evidence; there was no evidence of intent to engage in a mutual fight or combat by agreement. Carruth v. State, 290 Ga. 342, 721 S.E.2d 80 (2012).

Trial court did not commit plain error in denying the defendant's requested jury charge on mutual combat because there was no evidence that the first victim and the defendant mutually agreed to do anything but playfully shadowbox and wrestle each other; and, when the playful mood of the encounter changed, and, after the first victim landed a punch to the defendant's eye, there was no mutual agreement to continue fighting, playfully or otherwise; and the defendant maintained the defendant shot the first victim in self-defense and had no intent to kill the first victim. Russell v. State, 303 Ga. 478, 813 S.E.2d 380 (2018).

Jury instruction not plain error. — Defendant's conviction for aggravated sexual battery was reinstated because the jury instruction error did not constitute plain error as even if the jury had been instructed that the state had to prove lack of consent, no rational juror could have concluded, based on the record presented at trial, that the state failed to prove that element in the case since the victim was the defendant's four-year-old granddaughter. State v. Williams, 308 Ga. 228, 838 S.E.2d 764 (2020).

Failure to charge on transferred justification not error. — Trial court's failure to give jury charges on transferred justification and transferred intent did not amount to plain error because such omission did not affect the outcome of the proceedings when the instructions as a whole made it clear that the jury should acquit the defendant if the jury determined that the defendant was justified in firing the weapon, regardless of who the bullet struck. Allen v. State, 290 Ga. 743, 723 S.E.2d 684 (2012).

Failure to instruct on duty to retreat not error. — Trial court's failure to give an instruction on no duty to retreat did not constitute plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58; even assuming that the charge should have been given sua sponte by the trial court, the failure to give the charge did not amount to plain error since self-defense was not the defendant's sole defense. Alvelo v. State, 290 Ga. 609, 724 S.E.2d 377 (2012).

Failure to instruct on robbery by intimidation. — Trial court did not commit plain error in failing to charge the jury on robbery by intimidation as a lesser-included offense of armed robbery because the defendant denied committing any offense; and the evidence relied upon by the defendant did not show robbery by intimidation as there was no evidence that a robbery was committed without the use of a gun. Styles v. State, 329 Ga. App. 143, 764 S.E.2d 166 (2014).

Jury's return of not guilty verdicts on all 12 counts of possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony did not demonstrate that, had the jury been instructed on robbery by intimidation, it would have convicted the defendant of that lesser included offense, rather than of armed robbery; thus, the trial court did not commit plain error in failing to charge the jury on robbery by intimidation as a lesser-included offense of armed robbery. Styles v. State, 329 Ga. App. 143, 764 S.E.2d 166 (2014).

Instruction on unanimous verdict not error. — Trial court did not err by instructing the jury that the jury had to reach a unanimous verdict because viewing the charges as a whole, it appeared that the jury was adequately and properly instructed that any voluntary verdict that the jury reached had to be unanimous.

Dukes v. State, 290 Ga. 486, 722 S.E.2d 701 (2012).

Instruction on aggravated assault not error. — Trial court did not plainly err in the court's jury instruction on aggravated assault when the trial court's instructions included the definition of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(a)(2) and tracked the applicable definition of simple assault in O.C.G.A. § 16-5-20(a)(1). Scott v. State, 290 Ga. 883, 725 S.E.2d 305 (2012).

Failure to charge jury on simple assault. — Even if the trial court gave an incomplete charge on aggravated assault by failing to charge the jury on simple assault, the omission did not constitute plain error as the omission probably did not affect the outcome at trial because the defendant admitted to intentionally firing a gun in the victims' direction, which was conduct that constituted aggravated assault. Bashir v. State, 350 Ga. App. 852, 830 S.E.2d 353 (2019).

Instruction on voluntary manslaughter not error. — In the defendant's trial for malice murder and felony murder, the trial court's instruction on voluntary manslaughter did not require the jury to unanimously decide that the defendant was not guilty of malice murder or felony murder before considering voluntary manslaughter; therefore, the charge was correct. Morris v. State, 303 Ga. 192, 811 S.E.2d 321 (2018).

Failure to instruct on voluntary manslaughter not error. — Trial court did not commit plain error by failing to sua sponte charge the jury on voluntary manslaughter because the defendant testified adamantly that the defendant shot the victim in self-defense and there was no evidence that the defendant acted solely as the result of a sudden, violent, and irresistible passion resulting from serious provocation. Martin v. State, 306 Ga. 538, 832 S.E.2d 402 (2019).

Failure to instruct on retreat not error. — Trial court did not plainly err in refusing to give a defendant's requested jury instruction on the lack of a duty to retreat because justification was the sole defense and the issue of retreat was not raised by the evidence. White v. State, 291 Ga. 7, 727 S.E.2d 109 (2012).

Instruction on justification not plain error. — Defendant failed to show plain error in the jury charge on justification because the defendant could not demonstrate that the alleged error in the jury charge likely affected the outcome of the proceedings as the evidence was overwhelming that the defendant was the initial aggressor who attacked the unarmed victim with the metal bar and, thus, that the defendant did not act in self-defense and was guilty of aggravated assault. Tremblay v. State, 329 Ga. App. 139, 764 S.E.2d 163 (2014).

State had burden of disproving justification defense. — Trial court properly granted the appellee's motion for new trial on the ground that plain error was created by the trial court's failure to instruct the jury that the state had the burden of disproving the appellee's justification defense because evidence was presented to support the defense and the charge requested was a correct statement of the law. State v. Alvarez, 299 Ga. 213, 790 S.E.2d 66 (2016).

Instruction on weight of marijuana not error. — Even if the trial court erred in instructing the jury that knowledge of the weight of the marijuana possessed by the defendant was not required for a conviction of trafficking under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(c), because the issue was subject to reasonable dispute, it did not amount to plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b). Wilson v. State, 291 Ga. 458, 729 S.E.2d 364 (2012).

No plain error by giving jury charge on entire definition of trafficking. — Trial court did not commit plain error by charging the jury on the entire definition of trafficking as no evidence was introduced at trial suggesting that the defendant brought the cocaine at issue into the state, sold the cocaine, or that the defendant delivered the cocaine to anyone; rather, the evidence showed only that the defendant was in knowing possession of the cocaine for a brief period of time, thus, there was no reasonable possibility that the jury convicted the defendant of trafficking in a manner not charged in the indictment. Hernandez-Garcia v. State, 322 Ga. App. 455, 745 S.E.2d 706 (2013).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Instruction on chain of custody not error. — Defendant was not entitled to a new trial because the defendant did not object to the trial court's chain of custody charge, the charge was a correct statement of the legal standard, and defendant's counsel was present and conferred with the prosecuting counsel and the trial court prior to the trial court's response to the jury's questions. Coleman v. State, 317 Ga. App. 409, 731 S.E.2d 94 (2012).

Instruction on age of consent. — Defendant's convictions for sexual battery had to be reversed because the trial court's jury instruction that an underage victim was not legally capable of consenting to sexual conduct was on its face an accurate statement of the law, but that statement regarding consent to sexual conduct did not belong in the jury instruction regarding sexual battery since sexual battery as defined in O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22.1(b) did not necessarily involve sexual conduct. Watson v. State, 297 Ga. 718, 777 S.E.2d 677 (2015).

Jury charge erroneous for failing to limit charge to manner of touching alleged in indictment. — Defendant's conviction for sexual battery was reversed because both the trial court's charge and recharge on sexual battery were erroneous given the court's failure to limit the charge to the manner of touching alleged in the indictment. Henderson v. State, 333 Ga. App. 759, 777 S.E.2d 48 (2015).

Language used in charge requested by the defendant. — Jury charge was not plain error as to confession of one joint offender or conspirator made after the enterprise because although not identical language of the charge was given, the language which defendant now found objectionable essentially was the use of the word co-conspirator and was requested by the defendant. Guerrero-Moya v. State, 350 Ga. App. 233, 828 S.E.2d 629 (2019), cert. denied, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 913 (Ga. 2019).

Cited in Gresham v. State, 289 Ga. 103, 709 S.E.2d 780 (2011); Fairwell v. State, 311 Ga. App. 834, 717 S.E.2d 332 (2011); Tidwell v. State, 312 Ga. App. 468, 718 S.E.2d 808 (2011); Alvarez v. State, 312 Ga. App. 552, 718 S.E.2d 884 (2011); Bishop v. State, 314 Ga. App. 830, 726 S.E.2d 112 (2012); Morgan v. State, 290 Ga. 788, 725 S.E.2d 255 (2012); Stacey v. State, 292 Ga. 838, 741 S.E.2d 881 (2013); Mathis v. State, 293 Ga. 35, 743 S.E.2d 393 (2013); Ferguson v. State, 322 Ga. App. 565, 745 S.E.2d 784 (2013); Fleming v. State, 324 Ga. App. 481, 749 S.E.2d 54 (2013); Harris v. State, 324 Ga. App. 411, 750 S.E.2d 721 (2013); McBurrows v. State, 325 Ga. App. 303, 750 S.E.2d 436 (2013); Long v. State, 324 Ga. App. 882, 752 S.E.2d 54 (2013); Pitchford v. State, 294 Ga. 230, 751 S.E.2d 785 (2013); Gilliland v. State, 325 Ga. App. 854, 755 S.E.2d 249 (2014); Whiting v. State, 296 Ga. 429, 768 S.E.2d 448 (2015); Shockley v. State, 297 Ga. 661, 777 S.E.2d 245 (2015); Lafavor v. State, 334 Ga. App. 125, 778 S.E.2d 377 (2015); DuBose v. State, 299 Ga. 652, 791 S.E.2d 9 (2016); Bradley v. State, 342 Ga. App. 486, 804 S.E.2d 144 (2017); Blackwell v. State, 302 Ga. 820, 809 S.E.2d 727 (2018); Gonzalez v. State, 350 Ga. App. 297, 829 S.E.2d 385 (2019); Keller v. State, 308 Ga. 492, 842 S.E.2d 22 (2020).

Appellate Review

Time of judging error under plain error standard. — When conducting review of asserted plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), whether an error is clear or obvious is judged at the time of the appellate court's review. Lawrence v. State, 342 Ga. App. 396, 802 S.E.2d 859 (2017), cert. denied, No. S18C0094, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 322 (Ga. 2018).

Challenge to jury instruction waived. — Although the defendant argued that the trial court failed to instruct the jury with the definition of attempt in conjunction with the court's jury charge on hijacking a motor vehicle, the trial court provided the jury with a complete instruction on the elements of hijacking a motor vehicle and the defendant never requested a written charge on the definition of attempt and failed to specifically object to the trial court's failure to define attempt following completion of the jury charge. Accordingly, the defendant's failure to preserve the error constituted a waiver of the issue. Johnson v. State, 299 Ga. App. 706, 683 S.E.2d 659 (2009).

Trial court's failure to give the defendant's requested supplemental charges could not be considered such plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b) as to offset the defendant's failure to object because the trial court gave the jury separate instructions that it was an affirmative defense that a person abandoned the persons's efforts to commit the crime and that when a defense is raised by the evidence the burden is on the state to negate or disprove the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Mikell v. State, 286 Ga. 434, 689 S.E.2d 286, overruled on other grounds, Manley v. State, 287 Ga. 338, 698 S.E.2d 301 (2010).

Because the defendant failed to lodge a specific objection to a jury charge and to assert the grounds for defendant's objection, the defendant's claim that the trial court erred in instructing the jury was waived for purposes of appellate review; it was highly probable that the charge did not contribute to the verdict because there were identification witnesses who were acquainted with the defendant, and the trial court instructed the jury of the state's burden of proving the identity of the perpetrator beyond a reasonable doubt. Hicks v. State, 287 Ga. 260, 695 S.E.2d 195 (2010), overruled on other grounds by McClure v. State, 306 Ga. 856, 834 S.E.2d 96 (2019).

Trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury that the defendant had no duty to retreat because the defendant's failure to object to the charge as given before the jury retired to deliberate constituted a waiver of the issue on appeal under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(a); even if justification was the defendant's sole defense, the issue of retreat on the defendant's part was not raised by the evidence because the defendant was not questioned as to why the defendant did not leave the scene. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210 (2010).

Trial court did not unlawfully comment on the evidence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 when the court instructed the jury that an armed robbery could be committed by killing the victim first and then taking the property because the challenged charge neither assumed certain things as facts nor intimated to the jury what the trial court believed the evidence to be; it appeared that the defendant was arguing that the trial court gave an incorrect statement of law but couched the defendant's enumeration using § 17-8-57 because the defendant failed to object to the charge at the defendant's trial, but parties could not circumvent the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58 with such a maneuver. Vergara v. State, 287 Ga. 194, 695 S.E.2d 215 (2010).

Because there was no objection to a jury charge, any complaint with regard to the trial court's charge was waived. Leverette v. State, 303 Ga. App. 849, 696 S.E.2d 62 (2010).

Defendant's contentions that the trial court erred by failing to instruct the jury on Miranda and the defense of accident were waived for lack of a timely request or proper objection, and there was no plain error. Crawford v. State, 288 Ga. 425, 704 S.E.2d 772 (2011).

Because the defendant was tried after the effective date of the 2007 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58 and did not specifically object to an instruction regarding the prior difficulties the defendant had with the victim at the conclusion of the jury charge, the defendant waived the right to urge error on appeal. Jones v. State, 289 Ga. 145, 710 S.E.2d 127 (2011).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(a), the defendant waived the right to argue on appeal that the trial court erred in failing to instruct the jury on involuntary manslaughter and simple battery as lesser included offenses of felony murder because when the trial court asked if the defense had any exception to the jury instructions defense counsel replied "not as read"; the defendant did not assert that the failure to give the requested instructions constituted plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), and no plain error appeared because only a charge on the greater offense of aggravated battery was warranted since the victim was seriously disfigured. Cawthon v. State, 289 Ga. 507, 713 S.E.2d 388 (2011).

Because the defendant failed to object to the lack of a jury instruction on knowledge, the defendant waived that claim under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b); the defendant did not establish that the defendant's substantial rights were affected because the defendant did not show that the omission of the pattern jury charge the defendant requested resulted in a miscarriage of justice, and the trial court's charge contained substantially the same principles as the charge the defendant requested. White v. State, 312 Ga. App. 421, 718 S.E.2d 335 (2011).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

Defendant's claim that the trial court made two omissions in the court's jury instructions was not reviewed on appeal because the defendant made an objection that was unrelated to the omissions asserted on appeal and failed to reserve further objections even though the defendant was tried before the effective date of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58; the defendant failed to make any written request for the omitted instructions. Hill v. State, 290 Ga. 493, 722 S.E.2d 708 (2012).

Because, when the jury at the defendant's enticement of a child trial submitted a note asking "Does child molestation require sex?" the defendant's counsel suggested that the trial court tell the jury to refer back to the jury charge and indictment, which the trial court did; therefore,the defendant waived review of this issue on appeal. Wheeler v. State, 327 Ga. App. 313, 758 S.E.2d 840 (2014), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685 (Ga. 2018).

Failure to charge the jury on defense of accident waived. — In a vehicular homicide case, any error in the trial court's failure to charge the jury on the law of accident under O.C.G.A. § 16-2-2 was waived because the proposed charge was not in the record, and there was no evidence that it was the pattern charge, and the defendant failed to object after the charge was given as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(a). Rouen v. State, 312 Ga. App. 8, 717 S.E.2d 519 (2011).

Charge on truthfulness permitted. — Court of appeals could not consider the defendant's claims that the trial court's jury instructions were erroneous because the defendant requested two of the charges and made no objection to the remaining charge at any time during the trial; plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b) did not result from the trial court's reputation for truthfulness charge. Bellamy v. State, 312 Ga. App. 899, 720 S.E.2d 323 (2011).

Instruction on impeachment. — Because the jury charge on impeachment made plain that the jury was the sole judge of witness credibility, the charge provided no cause for reversal, much less any "plain error" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b); the charge stated that a witness "may be" impeached, not that he or she "is" impeached, by proof of drug convictions, and the trial court at no time suggested that the court found the defendant's testimony less than credible, nor did the court otherwise impermissibly comment on the evidence by simply recognizing that the defendant's prior drug convictions were the only ones offered for impeachment purposes. Collier v. State, 288 Ga. 756, 707 S.E.2d 102 (2011).

Instructions on multiple defendants. — Trial court did not commit reversible error in the court's recharge by failing to instruct the jury that a verdict for one defendant did not demand the same verdict for the codefendant or that the charge had to be considered as a whole and that the initial charge and the recharge had to be given equal weight because the jury had been given the instructions in writing, and the codefendant failed to show any indication that the jury was confused or left with an erroneous impression of the law; neither the defendant nor the codefendant specifically objected to the instruction before the jury retired to deliberate, nor did either the defendant nor the codefendant object to the recharge on any ground set forth in the appeal. Howard v. State, 288 Ga. 741, 707 S.E.2d 80 (2011).

Reserving objections to jury charge. — In a malice murder prosecution, defense counsel was not ineffective for not reserving objections to the trial court's jury charge generally as this procedure was not allowed under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58. Marshall v. State, 285 Ga. 351, 676 S.E.2d 201 (2009).

Instruction on intelligence of witnesses. — Trial court did not commit reversible error, much less "plain error" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), by instructing the jury that the jury could consider the intelligence of the witnesses to decide the witnesses' credibility because even assuming that the better practice was to omit intelligence as one of the factors in the credibility charge, its inclusion was not reversible error; because no reversible error occurred with respect to the jury instruction on credibility, the codefendant succeeded on the codefendant's alternative claim that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance in failing to object to that instruction. Howard v. State, 288 Ga. 741, 707 S.E.2d 80 (2011).

In a plain error review due to defendant's failure to object, the appellate court held that the trial court did not err when the court charged that the jury may consider the intelligence of a witness in assessing the witness's credibility because the Georgia Supreme Court has held that it is not reversible error to include intelligence as a factor in the jury charge on witness credibility. Gamble v. State, 291 Ga. 581, 731 S.E.2d 758 (2012).

Appellate review proper despite lack of objection. — Although a defendant's counsel failed to object to a jury instruction that permitted the jury to find the defendant guilty of terrorist threats if the defendant threatened any crime of violence, whereas the indictment charged that the defendant threatened to kill the victim, the appellate court was authorized to review the instructions for plain error, because the defendant alleged a due process violation. However, no error was found. Martin v. State, 303 Ga. App. 117, 692 S.E.2d 741 (2010).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), an error in a jury charge was considered on appeal notwithstanding the appellant's failure to object at trial because the charge constituted plain error which affected the appellant's substantial rights. Craft v. State, 309 Ga. App. 698, 710 S.E.2d 891 (2011).

Because the language of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58 refers to the jury "charge", the statute applies not only to instructions given orally to the jury, but necessarily must apply to any written instructions given to the jury, and preprinted verdict forms have been treated as a portion of the jury instructions; use of such a form is intended to assist the jury in arriving at a lawful verdict, and a party is necessarily obligated to raise any objection to such a form as set forth in § 17-8-58(a) and, accordingly, when objection is not made, error is reviewed as provided in § 17-8-58(b). Cheddersingh v. State, 290 Ga. 680, 724 S.E.2d 366 (2012).

Because the defendant voiced no objection to the jury charge as given other than to renew a request for a lesser included offense, absent plain error, the issue was precluded from appellate review pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b). Sanders v. State, 290 Ga. 637, 723 S.E.2d 436 (2012).

Defendant's claim that the trial court erred by failing to give the full pattern jury charge on leniency was only reviewed to determine whether the trial court's leniency charge constituted plain error because the defendant did not object to the charge as given, even though the defendant was required to do so under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(a). Kegler v. State, 317 Ga. App. 427, 731 S.E.2d 111 (2012).

No plain error found. — Defendant's claim that there was a fatal variance between the indictment and the jury charge failed because there was no plain error as it was unlikely that any error affected the outcome of the proceedings since the jury was properly instructed that the indictment and the plea formed the issues to be decided and was properly instructed as to the burden of proof. Moore v. State, 354 Ga. App. 145, 840 S.E.2d 519 (2020).

No error found in refusing access to dictionary. — Trial court properly denied the appellant's motion for a new trial because the appellant failed to prove that the trial court committed any error in the court's fashioning of a supplemental instruction to the jury regarding the definition of "entice" and, thus, the first prong of the test for plain error was not satisfied and it was in the trial court's discretion in declining the juror's request for access to a dictionary during deliberations. Weyer v. State, 333 Ga. App. 706, 776 S.E.2d 304 (2015).

No error found. — To the extent the defendant sought review under O.C.G.A.

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

§ 17-8-58(b), of the trial court's charge to the jury on the court's consideration of child molestation, attempted child molestation, and indecent exposure, there was no error because the trial court explained that the jury needed to consider all three offenses at the same time and properly explained how the jury would record the jury's verdict. Machado v. State, 300 Ga. App. 459, 685 S.E.2d 428 (2009).

Trial court's failure to define "intent to distribute" when charging on intent to distribute marijuana under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(j)(1) was not error; the term "distribute" possessed only the ordinary and common dictionary meaning and did not need to be specifically defined. The defendant failed to object to the charge without the definition, and the charge as given was not plain error excusing the failure to object under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b). Boring v. State, 303 Ga. App. 576, 694 S.E.2d 157 (2010).

Trial court did not commit plain error in instructing the jury that when operating a motor vehicle, every licensee had to display his or her license upon the demand of a law enforcement officer because there was no reasonable probability that the charge to the jury, when viewed as a whole, permitted the defendant's conviction under an erroneous theory; the trial court's charge enumerated for the jury the specific offenses with which the defendant was charged and instructed the jury to determine whether the defendant was guilty of those offenses, and it did not instruct the jury to determine whether the defendant was guilty of a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-5-29. Edwards v. State, 308 Ga. App. 569, 707 S.E.2d 917 (2011).

During the defendant's trial for malice murder, the trial court did not commit reversible error, much less any "plain error" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b) by giving the pattern jury charge on voluntary manslaughter involving mutual combat because the trial court gave separate and full instructions on voluntary manslaughter, malice murder, and justification, and the jury, hearing the challenged instruction in the context of the charge as a whole and the evidence presented at trial, was not likely to be confused by the trial court's slip of the tongue; the defendant failed to inform the trial court of the specific objection and the grounds for such objection before the jury retired to deliberate; thus, O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(a) thereby precluded appellate review of such portion of the jury charge. Dolphy v. State, 288 Ga. 705, 707 S.E.2d 56 (2011).

There was no reversible error, much less any "plain error" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), because the statement the trial court made to the jury could not be considered coercive since the statement did not imply in any way that a verdict was required; the trial court did not emphasize the expense of trying the case, and the court's statement did not amount to an instruction for the jury to consider that expense in the jury's deliberations. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 542, 712 S.E.2d 851 (2011).

Trial court's instruction to the jury on alternative ways that the state could prove the state's case after deliberations had started and after questions had been asked by the jury was not plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58 as the court had previously upheld such a charge as reflecting a correct statement of law, and when considered with the jury charges given as a whole and the evidence in the case, there was no indication that the charge improperly affected the outcome of the proceeding. Emerson v. State, 315 Ga. App. 105, 726 S.E.2d 600 (2012).

There was no plain error in the trial court's charge to the jury that no criminal liability would attach if the defendant killed a neighbor's dog in order to protect livestock because the trial court's charge on animal cruelty, as a whole, was consistent with the language of O.C.G.A. § 16-12-4, and the charge adequately explained to the jury that a person was not prohibited from killing an animal if necessary to protect his or her person or property or that of another. Futch v. State, 314 Ga. App. 294, 723 S.E.2d 714 (2012).

Defendant failed to establish plain error in the trial court's charge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58 because the trial court clearly instructed the jury that before the court was authorized to return a verdict of guilty of malice murder or felony murder, the court had to first determine whether mitigating circumstances would cause the offense to be reduced to voluntary manslaughter; the structure of the actual verdict form made it clear that as to each victim, the jury was required to consider malice murder, felony murder, and voluntary manslaughter simultaneously. Ortiz v. State, 291 Ga. 3, 727 S.E.2d 103 (2012).

Under a plain error of review due to defense counsel's failure to object to the jury instructions at the defendant's trial for felony murder, the trial court did not err in the court's presentation of the concepts of justification that serves as a defense to criminal charges, and passion resulting from provocation that could reduce murder to voluntary manslaughter as the court gave the pattern jury instructions and did not mislead the jury to have understood wrongly that limitations on and conditions precedent to the application of the law of justification were also applicable to voluntary manslaughter. Terry v. State, 291 Ga. 508, 731 S.E.2d 669 (2012).

Trial court did not commit plain error by giving a level of certainty charge by instructing the jury on the reliability of eyewitness identification because the victims gave descriptions of the robbers to the police immediately, identified the defendant from mug shot books, and did not repeatedly testify as to the victims' certainty. Russell v. State, 319 Ga. App. 472, 735 S.E.2d 797 (2012).

Trial court did not err by failing to charge the jury on unarmed robbery or theft by taking as lesser-included offenses to armed robbery in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt and the failure to give the lesser-included instructions neither created any reasonable likelihood that the state's burden of proving all essential elements of armed robbery was lessened, or that the charge as given likely affected the outcome of the proceedings. Boccia v. State, 335 Ga. App. 687, 782 S.E.2d 792 (2016).

Trial court did not commit plain error by charging the jury concerning the limited use of sexual assault extrinsic evidence admitted pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-4-413 because the charge was not erroneous as such evidence was admissible as relevant. Marlow v. State, 337 Ga. App. 1, 785 S.E.2d 583 (2016), overruled on other grounds by Quiller v. State, 338 Ga. App. 206, 789 S.E.2d 391 (2016).

Defendant's conviction for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute was upheld because the defendant's claimed jury charge error failed as it did not affect the outcome of the trial since the defendant willingly removed the shoes when requested and expressly denied having anything, yet 32 bags of cocaine were found in the sock the defendant was wearing, which did not support the conclusion that the defendant did not know or was mistaken about the substance of the drugs found. Bailey v. State, 341 Ga. App. 694, 801 S.E.2d 614 (2017).

Trial court did not commit plain error with regards to the charge on good character evidence as the charge was substantially identical to the suggested pattern jury instruction on good character evidence; the defendant pointed to no authority for the proposition that the pattern charge was inadequate; and the charge given in the case on good character evidence properly explained how character evidence ought to be considered by the jury. Williams v. State, 304 Ga. 455, 818 S.E.2d 653 (2018).

Although the offense of criminal damage to property was a felony, the trial court should not have mentioned criminal damage to property in connection with the charge on felony murder as the indictment did not charge the defendant with felony murder predicated on criminal damage to property; however, the defendant did not show plain error as the defendant did not show that the error in the jury charge likely affected the outcome of the proceedings because the jury found the defendant guilty of the aggravated assault upon the victim with a handgun, which was one of the predicate felonies included in the indictment, and it was highly likely that the jury based the jury's felony murder verdict on that predicate felony. Williams v. State, 304 Ga. 455, 818 S.E.2d 653 (2018).

Trial court did not plainly err by giving the jury the state's requested instruction on revenge for a prior wrong because the evidence presented in the case authorized the instruction as the appellant told the police during the second interview that the appellant was defending oneself when the appellant stabbed the victim once after the victim had indicated that the victim was going to get the appellant. Collins v. State, 308 Ga. 515, 842 S.E.2d 275 (2020).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

Trial court did not plainly err by instructing the jury on voluntary manslaughter as a lesser-included offense of felony murder because such instruction was applicable to both defendants as the state presented evidence that immediately following a fight, in which both defendants were involved and in which the victim cut the second defendant, both defendants fired handguns at the victim. Hamlette v. State, 353 Ga. App. 640, 839 S.E.2d 161 (2020).

Because the defendant pointed to no evidence that the witness knew that the defendant was planning on assaulting the victim, and the defendant failed to cite precedent requiring an accomplice-corroboration instruction under circumstances similar to those presented, the appellate court concluded that the trial court did not commit obvious error in failing to instruct the jury on the need for corroboration of accomplice testimony. Wilson v. State, 351 Ga. App. 794, 833 S.E.2d 175 (2019).

Plain error did not occur as a result of the trial court failing to instruct the jury regarding leniency that could have been granted to the defendant in exchange for the defendant's testimony because the defendant specifically testified that the defendant was not promised any leniency regarding the two pending criminal indictments and the detective testified that the defendant was not promised any leniency. Wilson v. State, 351 Ga. App. 794, 833 S.E.2d 175 (2019).

No plain error found. — Trial court did not commit plain error because the court clearly instructed the jury that the other acts evidence presented in the case was to be considered only for the purpose of determining the defendant's intent with respect to the crimes for which the defendant was being tried, and for no other purpose; the jury instructions were not obviously erroneous; and the evidence that the defendant committed the acts of which the defendant was convicted was substantial. Manning v. State, 303 Ga. 723, 814 S.E.2d 730 (2018).

Trial court did not commit plain error in instructing the jury on how to determine the defendant's guilt or innocence because the court read to the jury each charge listed in the indictment; the court instructed the jury on the elements of each crime charged; the court explained the verdict form to the jury, noted that the form contained six counts, and instructed the jury that as to each count the form provided a space for the jury to check either guilty or not guilty; and the manner in which the trial court instructed the jury was not confusing with respect to whether the jury was to make a determination of guilt on each individual count of the indictment. Manning v. State, 303 Ga. 723, 814 S.E.2d 730 (2018).

No plain error on simple assault. — Trial court did not commit reversible error, much less "plain error" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), by failing to inform the jury of the definition of simple assault because the defendant's defense was mistaken identity, and the undisputed evidence showed that the perpetrators intentionally fired the perpetrators' guns through a parking lot occupied by many pedestrians and in the direction of a vehicle; neither negligence nor reckless conduct was an issue and, thus, any error in the charge would not have affected the outcome of the case. Howard v. State, 288 Ga. 741, 707 S.E.2d 80 (2011).

No plain error in prior difficulties charge. — There was no reversible error, much less any "plain error" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b), in the trial court's decision to give a prior difficulties charge to the jury because evidence was presented regarding prior difficulties between the defendant and the victim; thus, the inclusion of a prior difficulties charge did not constitute an impermissible comment on the evidence. Jones v. State, 289 Ga. 145, 710 S.E.2d 127 (2011).

Although a jury was not explicitly instructed that the jury was required to find that a defendant was acting in a dangerous manner in order to convict the defendant of felony murder based on theft by receiving, the jury did in fact make such a finding when the jury found the defendant guilty of vehicular homicide by reckless driving because that offense, by definition, created a foreseeable risk of death. Because the proceedings were not affected, there was no plain error. State v. Kelly, 290 Ga. 29, 718 S.E.2d 232 (2011).

Although a defendant failed to object to a jury instruction that the defendant contended allowed the jury to consider an alternative way to convict the defendant for false imprisonment from the facts alleged in the indictment, the court could consider whether the giving of the instruction constituted plain error. Because the trial court gave limiting instructions that the jury was only to consider the crimes as charged in the indictment, the charge was not plain error. Schneider v. State, 312 Ga. App. 504, 718 S.E.2d 833 (2011).

No plain error in intent instruction. — In a defendant's trial for possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime, the trial court properly instructed the jury that there must have been a joint operation of an act or omission to act and intention, that intent was an essential element of any crime, and that there was no presumption that the defendant acted with criminal intent. Therefore, any omitted language regarding the defendant's knowledge did not contribute to the outcome of the trial. Morrell v. State, 313 Ga. App. 443, 721 S.E.2d 643 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0800, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 484 (Ga. 2012).

No plain error in proximate cause instruction. — Trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury on the law regarding proximate cause and its relationship to felony murder because the omission of additional language concerning proximate cause could not be considered a clear or obvious error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58; the jury was instructed that to find the defendant guilty of felony murder while in the commission of felony criminal attempt to possess cocaine, the jury had to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the felony was dangerous per se or, by the attendant circumstances in the case, created a foreseeable risk of death, and the jury was also instructed that for felony murder to be found, the jury had to find that, in the commission of the underlying felony, the defendant caused the death of another human being irrespective of malice. Sapp v. State, 290 Ga. 247, 719 S.E.2d 434 (2011).

No plain error in omission of duty to retreat. — Under a plain error analysis in the defendant's trial for murder, the trial court did not err when the court failed to charge the jury that one acting in defense of self has no duty to retreat because the jury charges given in the case fairly informed the jury as to the law of self-defense and the defendant failed to affirmatively show that the failure to charge on the duty to retreat probably affected the outcome of the trial. Shaw v. State, 292 Ga. 871, 742 S.E.2d 707 (2013).

Failure to charge the jury on accident did not amount to plain error because the evidence did not warrant such a charge; the only evidence of unintentional touching occurred in the context of typical family play wholly unrelated to the incidents for which the defendant was convicted. Haithcock v. State, 320 Ga. App. 886, 740 S.E.2d 806 (2013).

No plain error in instruction on prior consistent statements — Trial counsel's failure to object to a jury instruction on prior consistent statements did not amount to plain error because the instruction did not affect the outcome of the trial since such an instruction does not explicitly direct the jury to place any additional weight on prior consistent statements beyond that which the law already gives them. Gaither v. State, 321 Ga. App. 643, 742 S.E.2d 158 (2013).

No plain error in accident instruction. — Trial court did not commit reversible error by failing to instruct the jury on the defense of accident because, as to the count for child molestation by showing the first victim photos of nude persons and persons performing sexual acts, the defendant claimed that the defendant never committed such an act and, thus, could not claim it was an accident, and as to the other two counts, any error in failing to give such an instruction was not plain because the charge given fairly instructed the jury that the jury had a duty to acquit the defendant if the jury determined the state failed to prove the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Ogletree v. State, 322 Ga. App. 103, 744 S.E.2d 96 (2013).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

Trial court did not commit plain error as to the jury charge regarding malice murder and felony murder because the defendant failed to demonstrate that the alleged error in the jury charge likely affected the outcome of the proceedings since the defendant was not convicted of either malice murder or felony murder. Booker v. State, 322 Ga. App. 257, 744 S.E.2d 429 (2013).

No plain error in omission of accomplice corroboration instruction. — Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a charge on accomplice corroboration because the accomplice was not the only witness; thus, there was no plain error in failing to give the accomplice corroboration charge since the state relied on other evidence apart from the accomplice's testimony. Lane v. State, 324 Ga. App. 303, 750 S.E.2d 381 (2013).

No plain error in omission of voluntary manslaughter instruction. — In the defendant's trial for murder of another inmate, no evidence warranted instructions on voluntary manslaughter and mutual combat because the defendant testified the defendant acted in self-defense in the fight and did not intend to kill the victim, while eyewitnesses described the defendant as chasing the victim. Ruffin v. State, 296 Ga. 262, 765 S.E.2d 913 (2014).

Trial court's failure to charge on voluntary manslaughter was not plain error because there was no evidence that the other gang members had guns or shot at the appellant, and the only shell casings at the scene were found where appellant was seen firing a gun, plus, even if words were exchanged prior to the event, as a matter of law, angry statements alone ordinarily did not amount to serious provocation within the meaning of a voluntary manslaughter charge. Jones v. State, 296 Ga. 663, 769 S.E.2d 901 (2015), overruled in part by Veal v. State, 298 Ga. 691, 784 S.E.2d 403 (2016).

In a felony murder conviction, the trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury on the lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter because no plain error existed as the evidence showed that the defendant had substantial time to cool down after the defendant learned that the victim was not going to procure the cigarettes for the defendant and before the defendant intentionally sought out the victim because the fact that the defendant discussed the matter with a cellmate, procured the shank, and then later went in search of the victim was evidence that the defendant acted in a rational and calculated fashion rather than solely as a result of a sudden, violent, and irresistible passion. Barron v. State, 297 Ga. 706, 777 S.E.2d 435 (2015).

Response to jury question did not create plain error. — Defendant was not entitled to reversal under a plain error analysis because it was not highly probable that any error in the response to a question from the jury about the elements of felony obstruction of an officer affected the outcome of the proceedings. Carlson v. State, 329 Ga. App. 309, 764 S.E.2d 890 (2014).

In an indictment alleging that the defendant committed the offense of aggravated assault by making an assault upon one of the victims by pointing a deadly weapon at that victim, the jury charge improperly placed on the state the extra burden of showing that, in addition to assaulting with a deadly weapon, the defendant also assaulted with the intent to murder, rape, or rob; however, because the defendant was convicted of aggravated assault, the additional burden on the state could not be deemed to have likely affected the outcome, and did not constitute plain error. Staley v. State, 330 Ga. App. 501, 767 S.E.2d 507 (2014).

No plain error in response to jury question. — Defendant's failure to object to the trial court's response to a jury question meant that appellate review was only available if the response constituted plain error and since the initial charges to the jury were correct and the response told the jury they had received all applicable law, the trial court's failure to provide a more specific answer did not affect the defendant's substantial rights. Aikens v. State, 297 Ga. 229, 773 S.E.2d 229 (2015).

Instruction on affirmative defenses not error. — Giving of an instruction on affirmative defenses and requested by the defendant was not error, clear or obvious. Williams v. State, 297 Ga. 460, 773 S.E.2d 213 (2015).

Instruction on handgun not error. — In light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, any error in the trial court's instruction to the jury that a handgun was a deadly weapon as a matter of law did not seriously affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the proceedings. Howell v. State, 330 Ga. App. 668, 769 S.E.2d 98 (2015).

No error in instruction on use of audio-recorded statement. — Defendant could not demonstrate that any error in the charge relating to the use of the defendant's audio-recorded statement for impeachment purposes had any effect on the outcome at trial as the jury was authorized to consider the defendant's video-recorded, incriminating statements made at the sheriff's office, irrespective of whether the jury found that the prior audio-recorded statement made during the execution of the search warrant was obtained in violation of Miranda; and the jury had before the jury the defendant's initial incriminating statements made to the county investigator in the living room during the execution of the search warrant that were not included on the audio recording made by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation special agent. McCullough v. State, 330 Ga. App. 716, 769 S.E.2d 138 (2015), cert. denied, No. S15C0908, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 330 (Ga. 2015).

Instruction on sexual exploitation of children not plain error. — When the defendant was convicted of five counts of sexual exploitation of children, although it was error for the trial court to charge the jury on the law of deliberate ignorance, the error did not rise to the level of plain error because there was no evidence that the defendant was aware of a high probability of the existence of child pornography on the defendant's laptop and purposefully contrived to avoid learning of that fact to have a defense in the event of criminal prosecution as the conflicting evidence pointed either to the defendant having actual knowledge of the child pornography on the defendant's laptop or no knowledge at all. Furthermore, there was no plain error in the trial court's charge on the law of equal access based on the language in the charge regarding the defendant's knowledge as it would have been clear to the jury that to convict the defendant, the defendant had to knowingly possess the child pornography found on the defendant's laptop. McCullough v. State, 330 Ga. App. 716, 769 S.E.2d 138 (2015), cert. denied, No. S15C0908, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 330 (Ga. 2015).

Instruction on assault not plain error. — Although the trial court erred by instructing the jury on assault, the instruction did not likely affect the outcome of the proceedings nor did it seriously affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the judicial proceedings as the jury was provided with the indictment and the trial court correctly instructed the jury on the language of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-20(a)(2) for assault as charged in the accusation. Driskell v. State, 333 Ga. App. 886, 777 S.E.2d 717 (2015), cert. denied, No. S16C0191, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 115 (Ga. 2016).

Assuming that it was obviously erroneous for the trial court to fail to remind the jury about the "within arm's reach" element when the jury described the offense of unlawful possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, that failure did not constitute plain error as it had no effect on the outcome of the defendant's trial as that element was properly included in the indictment; the jury was instructed that the state had to prove every material allegation in the indictment beyond a reasonable doubt; whoever used a gun to shoot the victim actually had a firearm within arm's reach at the time of the shooting; and the only issue at trial was whether one of the defendants was the shooter and the others were parties to the crime. Anderson v. State, 299 Ga. 193, 787 S.E.2d 202 (2016).

No plain error in fingerprinting instruction. — Because the fingerprint evidence placed one of the defendant's cohorts at numerous burglary scenes and was relevant to show the progression of law enforcement's investigation into the murder and to show that the incident was not isolated, but rather was part of a larger conspiracy between the defendant and the defendant's two cohorts to commit burglaries in the surrounding community, the trial court was authorized to give the charge on fingerprint evidence, and there was no plain error in giving the charge. Myers v. State, 299 Ga. 409, 788 S.E.2d 451 (2016).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

No plain error in aggravated assault instruction. — Trial court did not commit plain error in instructing the jury on the elements of aggravated assault because the court gave the jury the pattern charge for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, and the defendant did not contend that the defendant was indicted for some other form of aggravated assault; and, even if the trial court had given an overbroad aggravated assault instruction, that defect was cured as the record indicated that the court provided the jury with a copy of the indictment for its deliberations and the court instructed the jury that the burden of proof rested on the state to prove every material allegation of the indictment and every essential element of the crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt. Herrington v. State, 300 Ga. 149, 794 S.E.2d 145 (2016).

Pretermitting whether the trial court erred in failing to instruct the jury sua sponte on the requirement that accomplice testimony be corroborated, there was no likelihood the testimony affected the outcome of the trial in light of the defendant's conversation with the victim while the victim was in jail regarding the defendant's operation. Ferguson v. State, 335 Ga. App. 862, 783 S.E.2d 380 (2016).

In a possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony case, although the trial court did not define aggravated assault as a felony, because the trial court's instructions regarding the possession charge focused the jury's attention on robbery without mentioning aggravated assault or identifying any offense other than robbery as a felony, the defendant did not show either clear error or that the complained of instruction affected the outcome of the proceedings; thus, the trial court did not commit plain error in instructing the jury. Demps v. State, 337 Ga. App. 657, 788 S.E.2d 525 (2016).

Following the defendant's conviction for felony murder stemming from the shooting death of a victim who was in the line of fire during an ongoing argument, the defendant's claim that the trial court committed plain error by instructing the jury on the commission of aggravated assault in a manner not charged in the indictment (putting the victim in fear) was rejected because there was no dispute that the victim died and no likelihood that the jury convicted based on the victim's apprehension of violent injury. Cato v. State, 304 Ga. 496, 820 S.E.2d 41 (2018).

No plain error in serious injury by vehicle instruction. — Jury instruction for serious injury by vehicle as given was not plain error because the charge that the defendant's counsel requested was substantially similar to the charge that the trial court gave; the trial court charged the jury that no person could be convicted of any crime unless and until each element of the crime as charged was proven beyond a reasonable doubt; and a conviction under the serious injury by vehicle statute as charged did not require a conviction under the driving under the influence statute. Fitzpatrick v. State, 339 Ga. App. 135, 793 S.E.2d 446 (2016).

No plain error in instruction on corroboration of confessions. — Failure to give a jury charge regarding the corroboration of confessions did not constitute plain error because the defendant's statements were admissions, not confessions, as the defendant did not confess to the murder or the arson; and, even if the defendant's statements to the witnesses were confessions, the defendant did not show that the error affected the outcome of the proceedings as there was ample corroborating evidence, including a witness's testimony that the defendant was alone with the victim shortly before the murder; testimony that a neighbor saw the defendant flee through the neighbor's yard, and the defendant's request on a recorded tape that two witnesses fabricate an alibi defense for the defendant for the time of the crime. English v. State, 300 Ga. 471, 796 S.E.2d 258 (2017).

No plain error in failing to instruct on coercion. — Trial court did not plainly err in failing to charge the jury that coercion was not a defense to murder because the defendant contended that the shooter acted independently and without the defendant's knowledge in attacking the victim while the defendant was attempting to recover the defendant's pickup truck from another individual, and a charge on coercion would have had no direct relevance to the defense. Huff v. State, 300 Ga. 807, 796 S.E.2d 688 (2017).

No plain error in omission of corroborating accomplice instruction. — While the trial court's failure to give a corroborating accomplice instruction was clear error, it did not amount to plain error because the defendant failed to establish that omitting the instruction probably affected the outcome of the trial given that there was not merely one alleged accomplice who affirmatively identified the defendant, but also eyewitness testimony identifying the defendant and witness testimony relating the defendant's admission of the murder. Lyman v. State, 301 Ga. 312, 800 S.E.2d 333 (2017).

Failure to correctly read standard charge not plain error. — When the trial court, in the court's oral charge to the jury, apparently forgot to read the final paragraph of the standard charge on malice murder which defined the concept of malice, the trial court's mistake in reading the jury charge did not constitute plain error as it did not affect the defendant's substantial rights in such a manner as to affect the outcome of the trial court proceedings as the jury, during deliberations, had the entire charge to consider as a written copy of charges was sent out with the jury and, in that written copy, the charge on malice murder was complete. Forte v. State, 302 Ga. 726, 808 S.E.2d 658 (2017).

When the defendant was charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, and the other charges of felony murder, feticide, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony were predicated on the aggravated assault charge, even if the trial court provided a charge on aggravated assault that included a method not charged in the indictment, any error in the court's instruction was cured because the trial court provided the jury with the indictment and instructed the jury that the state was required to prove every material allegation of the indictment and every essential element of the crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt; thus, the defendant could not establish reversible error, plain or otherwise. Simpson v. State, 302 Ga. 875, 808 S.E.2d 718 (2017).

Instruction on competence not error. — Trial court's instructions did not constitute plain error as the trial court gave all of the defendant's requested instructions with the exception of an instruction on the form of the verdict in the defendant's separate trial on the issue of mental competency, which was nearly identical to the charge given; the trial court charged the jury that the defendant could not be tried for criminal offenses while in a condition of mental incompetence or insanity; and the charge was not misleading or confusing, and was sufficient to inform the jury as to the question for the jury's determination and the factors comprising the legal test for competence to stand trial. Jones v. State, 303 Ga. 496, 813 S.E.2d 360 (2018).

Trial court's instruction on participation in criminal gang activity was a correct and complete statement of the law and did not constitute plain error because the instruction did not fail to limit the scope of the jury's inquiry to the specific predicate criminal acts alleged in the indictment; and the instruction listed the four elements of the offense. Dixon v. State, 843 S.E.2d 806, No. S20A0857, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 360 (2020).

No plain error in robbery instruction. — In an action for armed robbery, the trial court's failure to give an instruction to the jury on the lesser-included offense of robbery did not amount to plain error because the state presented sufficient evidence to support an armed robbery conviction and the defendant failed to argue during the charging conference that robbery as a lesser included offense was the defendant's sole defense. Powell v. State, 352 Ga. App. 14, 833 S.E.2d 602 (2019).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

No plain error in instruction on indictment. — Although an instruction that before considering other-act evidence to prove intent, the jury had to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the appellant committed acts alleged in an indictment was not an incorrect statement of law, current Georgia law did not require such instruction be given, so the appellant failed to show plain error. Jackson v. State, 306 Ga. 69, 829 S.E.2d 142 (2019).

No plain error in circumstantial error instruction. — Defendant did not establish plain error in the jury instruction on circumstantial evidence because the instructions the trial court gave adequately advised the jury that if the jury believed that the circumstantial evidence supported an alternative hypothesis, the jury should return a verdict of not guilty, and it was unlikely that the jury would have returned a different verdict had the trial court added the language of the circumstantial evidence statute to the instructions. Weaver v. State, 351 Ga. App. 167, 830 S.E.2d 618 (2019), cert. denied, No. S19C1502, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 113 (Ga. 2020).

No plain error in omission of sudden emergency instruction. — Since the defendant was convicted of felony murder and aggravated assault in connection with the shooting death of the victim, the defendant's brother-in-law, because the evidence showed that the defendant already possessed the pistol before the defendant was confronted with any situation that would require the defendant to act in self-defense, the trial court's refusal to give the defendant's requested instructions on sudden emergency did not constitute plain error as it was not a clear or obvious error. Clark v. State, 306 Ga. 367, 829 S.E.2d 306 (2019), cert. denied, 2020 U.S. LEXIS 1059, 206 L. Ed. 2d 180 (U.S. 2020).

No plain error found in failing to charge on accident defense. — In a child molestation case, the trial court did not plainly err in failing to sua sponte charge the jury on the defense of accident because accident was not the defendant's sole defense to the charge that the defendant molested the second victim by touching the second victim's vaginal area with the defendant's hand as the state presented evidence that the defendant molested the second victim in that manner on several occasions, and the defendant's accident defense addressed only one of those instances; and the defendant did not show that the trial court's failure to charge the jury on accident likely affected the outcome of the proceedings. Pinkston v. State, 353 Ga. App. 88, 834 S.E.2d 571 (2019).

No plain error found in failing to distinguish between statement, admission, and confession. — Trial court did not plainly err in failing to instruct the jury on the legal differences between a "statement," an "admission," and a "confession" because, after the trial court instructed the jury on how to evaluate the credibility of witnesses generally and how to determine whether it was authorized to consider any statement by the defendant, the court instructed the jury to apply the general rules for testing the believability of witnesses and for deciding what weight, if any, to give to all or any part of a statement. Martin v. State, 306 Ga. 538, 832 S.E.2d 402 (2019).

No plain error in jury instruction on statute of limitations. — Trial court's inaccurate jury instruction on the statute of limitation, which failed to tell the jury that the victim's 16th birthday was a potentially relevant date for statute of limitation purposes, did not constitute plain error requiring reversal despite counsel's failure to object because the defendant could not demonstrate that the inaccuracy in the trial court's statute of limitation charge impacted the jury's verdict as the state indicted the defendant within seven years of both the victim's 16th birthday and the victim's outcry to police. Leekomon v. State, 351 Ga. App. 836, 832 S.E.2d 437 (2019), cert. denied, No. S20C0283, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 412 (Ga. 2020).

No plain error in charge on rape and sexual battery. — Sequential charge on rape and sexual battery was not improper and did not constitute plain error as the evidence did not support a sexual-battery conviction; and there was no language in the challenged instruction on rape and sexual battery suggesting that the jury was required to reach a unanimous verdict as to rape before considering the lesser-included offense of sexual battery. Seals v. State, 350 Ga. App. 787, 830 S.E.2d 315 (2019).

Failure to instruct on involuntary manslaughter not plain error. — Trial court did not plainly err in failing to instruct the jury on involuntary manslaughter based on reckless conduct as a lesser included offense of the murder charges because the defendant's possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, the defendant's aggravated assault of the victims as part of the defendant's effort to regain the drugs, and the defendant's possession of the gun as a convicted felon were themselves felonies, and to support a jury charge on involuntary manslaughter, the unlawful act underlying the unintentional death of the victim had to be an act other than a felony. Hood v. State, 303 Ga. 420, 811 S.E.2d 392 (2018).

No plain error in instruction on deadly force. — Trial court did not commit plain error in charging the jury because the jury was charged that the defendant's use of deadly force in defense of property would be justified if reasonably believed to be necessary to prevent the commission of a forcible felony and that aggravated assault was a forcible felony; thus, the jury had sufficient direction in order to intelligently consider the defense-of-personal-property theory of justification based on the defendant's claim that the victim committed aggravated assault when the victim lunged at the individual holding the gun and attempted to wrestle the gun away from the other individual. Hood v. State, 303 Ga. 420, 811 S.E.2d 392 (2018).

No plain error in instruction on defense of habitation. — Trial court did not plainly err in the court's instruction to the jury on the defense of mistake of fact as the defendant did not show that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been different absent the alleged error because the jury was properly instructed as to the state's burden of proof on the defendant's actual defense of a habitation, which was intertwined with the defendant's mistake of fact defense, as the trial court fully instructed the jury on defense of a habitation, informed the jury that defense of a habitation was an affirmative defense, and instructed the jury that the state bore the burden of disproving affirmative defenses beyond a reasonable doubt. Winters v. State, 303 Ga. 127, 810 S.E.2d 496 (2018).

Trial court did not plainly err in instructing the jury on the defense of habitation form of justification where the habitation being defended was the victim's and not the defendant's because the court of appeals rejected the argument that the defense was for the use of a defendant, not a victim; further, the supreme court had not ruled on that issue. Beasley v. State, 305 Ga. 231, 824 S.E.2d 311 (2019).

No plain error in not giving voluntary manslaughter instruction. — Trial court did not plainly err as the trial court was not required to charge the jury on the lesser included offense of voluntary manslaughter after each count of felony murder because, in the defendant's case, there was no evidence of a sudden, violent, and irresistible passion resulting from serious provocation sufficient to excite such passion in a reasonable person. Dent v. State, 303 Ga. 110, 810 S.E.2d 527 (2018).

Alleged errors created no prejudice. — Although the jury was not specifically instructed on the defense of habitation, the jury was, in fact, instructed on self-defense as well as accident, and the jury rejected all of the appellant's conflicting stories and those defenses and in light of compelling evidence of the appellant's guilt, an alleged error did not likely affect the outcome of the trial court proceedings. State v. Newman, 305 Ga. 792, 827 S.E.2d 678 (2019).

Failure to instruct on mistake of fact not plain error. — Failure to give a mistake of fact jury charge did not amount to plain error because the defendant could not show that the trial court's failure to give the charge likely affected the outcome of the proceedings as the evidence established that the defendant fought with the victim, the defendant's father, prior to the victim's death, was holding the gun to the victim's head when the gun fired, fled the scene and failed to call for help after the shooting, admitted to numerous people that the defendant had shot the victim, lied to law enforcement on numerous occasions about the defendant's role in the victim's death, and wrote a letter to the district attorney taking full responsibility for the victim's death. Norris v. State, 843 S.E.2d 837, No. S20A0500, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 359 (2020).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

No plain error in sequestration charge. — Trial court did not commit plain error by failing, sua sponte, to give a jury charge on the rule of sequestration as the rule of sequestration did not apply to exclude the sheriff from the courtroom because it was within the discretion of the trial judge to permit a witness to remain in the courtroom to assist either the state or the accused; and the trial court properly allowed the sheriff to be exempted from the rule of sequestration based on the fact that the sheriff was listed as a witness for both the defense and the prosecution, and the security issues in the courtroom on the day of trial. Szorcsik v. State, 303 Ga. 737, 814 S.E.2d 708 (2018).

Omission of circumstantial evidence instruction not plain error. — Because the evidence of the defendant's participation in the first burglary was wholly circumstantial, the clear and longstanding precedent required the trial court to instruct the jury on proof by circumstantial evidence even though the defendant did not request such an instruction; however, the defendant did not meet the burden under the plain error test to show that the omission of the instruction likely affected the jury's verdict as the trial court's charge sufficiently informed the jury of the state's burden of excluding all other reasonable hypotheses except the defendant's guilt with respect to the first burglary, and the defendant never suggested that the defendant's brother committed the first burglary alone. Gadson v. State, 303 Ga. 871, 815 S.E.2d 828 (2018).

No plain error in impeachment instruction. — There was no plain error in the trial court's instructions on impeachment and prior statements and that the evidence included all of the testimony of the witnesses and any exhibits admitted during the trial as the instructions clearly directed the jury to consider as evidence all of the testimony presented in the case, including testimony regarding the witnesses' prior statements. Jackson v. State, No. S18A1598, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 142 (Mar. 4, 2019).

Instruction on circumstantial evidence omitted. — While the denial of the defendant's request that the instruction on circumstantial evidence include the state's burden to exclude reasonable hypotheses other than guilt was erroneous, the defendant's substantial rights were not affected, and it therefore did not amount to plain error because the state's case was not based primarily on circumstantial evidence as, in addition to testifying that the defendant held the second victim at gunpoint, the second victim testified about directly witnessing the defendant shoot the first victim, and the third victim testified that the defendant held the third victim at gunpoint in the bedroom and ordered the third victim to remain on the bed, and because the evidence of the defendant's guilt was strong. Jackson v. State, No. S18A1598, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 142 (Mar. 4, 2019).

No plain error when jury charges tailored to evidence. — In the defendant's trial for murder and other charges, even if defense counsel was deficient for failing to object to the jury charges regarding the defendant's good character and use of prior statements, the defendant failed to demonstrate that the defendant was prejudiced by that failure; the charges were pattern charges and were tailored to the evidence. Jackson v. State, 305 Ga. 614, 825 S.E.2d 188 (2019).

Jury charge regarding character evidence. — Plain error did not occur given that character instruction given by the trial court fully and adequately explained to the jury how the jury ought to consider the defendant's character trait of truthfulness; thus, the defendant failed to show that simply adding a reference to the defendants general character would have likely affected the outcome of the trial court proceedings. Montgomery v. State, 350 Ga. App. 244, 828 S.E.2d 620 (2019).

Omission of oral instruction on elements of sexual battery. — Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion for new trial as the jury charge, taken as a whole, adequately informed the jury of the charges and did not constitute plain error because, for purposes of plain-error analysis, the charge included both the oral and written instructions given to the jury; the defendant failed to show that the omission of any oral instructions on the elements of sexual battery likely affected the outcome of the proceedings; the indictment, including the elements of the sexual battery charge, was read to the jury; the jury was instructed that the jury had to find each element in the indictment beyond a reasonable doubt; and the indictment was sent into the jury room. State v. Crist, 341 Ga. App. 411, 801 S.E.2d 545 (2017).

Telling jury it had to reach verdict on each count. — Trial court's answer to a jury question did not amount to plain error because, even assuming the trial court clearly erred in telling the jury it had to reach a verdict on each count, the defendant could not show that the error probably affected the outcome given the strength of the evidence, including four eyewitnesses who knew the defendant well identifying the defendant as the shooter. Hampton v. State, 302 Ga. 166, 805 S.E.2d 902 (2017).

Instruction that it was not necessary to read indictment. — Trial court's instruction essentially telling the jury it was not necessary to read the indictment was particularly harmful given the sheer size and technical nature of the indictment; however, under plain error review, the trial court's charge did not affect the outcome of the proceedings because, upon review of the instructions as a whole, the trial court recited the charges against the defendant and properly instructed the jury on the presumption of innocence and proof beyond a reasonable doubt, that the state bore the burden to prove every material allegation of the indictment and every essential element of the crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt, and that the burden of proof never shifted to the defendant. Mathis v. State, 343 Ga. App. 206, 807 S.E.2d 4 (2017), cert. dismissed, No. S18C0491, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 316 (Ga. 2018).

Plain error doctrine not applicable. — Defendant was not entitled to plain error review of a colloquy at trial, held outside the jury's presence, between the court and a witness called by the state who was reluctant to testify, because the alleged error did not involve error in the sentencing phase of a trial resulting in the death penalty, in a trial judge's expression of opinion to the jury, or in the jury charge. Solomon v. State, 293 Ga. 605, 748 S.E.2d 865 (2013).

Charge on voluntary intoxication did not constitute plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58 because the charge on voluntary intoxication stated as a prerequisite to the statute's applicability the fact that the person was legally sane, i.e, that the person's mind was capable of distinguishing right from wrong and of reasoning and acting rationally, when not affected by intoxicants. Alvelo v. State, 290 Ga. 609, 724 S.E.2d 377 (2012).

Trial court did not plainly err in failing to charge the jury that the state bore the burden of disproving the defendant's alibi defense beyond a reasonable doubt when the trial court completely and correctly instructed the jury on the defendant's presumption of innocence, the state's burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the crimes at issue, and on assessment of the credibility of witnesses. Scott v. State, 290 Ga. 883, 725 S.E.2d 305 (2012).

Giving of disapproved jury charge was plain error. — Jury charge that a DUI defendant's refusal to submit to a blood alcohol test could create an inference that the test would show the presence of alcohol which impaired the driver's driving was plain error, requiring a new trial, because the charge shifted the burden of proof to the defendant, requiring the driver to rebut the inference that the driver was an impaired driver. Wagner v. State, 311 Ga. App. 589, 716 S.E.2d 633 (2011).

Erroneous jury charge not excused. — Defendant's conviction for statutory rape was reversed because the trial court committed plain error by giving an erroneous jury charge, which affected the defendant's substantial right to a charge that provided the jury with the proper guideline for determining the defendant's guilt or innocence, and the court failed to remedy the error. Agan v. State, 319 Ga. App. 560, 737 S.E.2d 347 (2013).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

There was no plain error in the trial court's charge to the jury because the trial court gave an appropriate limiting instruction prior to the admission of the similar transaction evidence and because the purposes cited in the trial court's final charge were permissible and relevant to the state's case. Griffin v. State, 327 Ga. App. 751, 761 S.E.2d 146 (2014).

Verdict form constituted plain error. — Preprinted verdict form constituted plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b) because the form affected the defendant's substantial rights by actively removing the presumption of innocence from the defendant's trial; the defendant did not intentionally relinquish the right to have the burden of proof properly stated in the verdict form because the defendant's failure to object was more appropriately described as a forfeiture of the right. Cheddersingh v. State, 290 Ga. 680, 724 S.E.2d 366 (2012).

No failure to distinguish between civil and criminal liability. — Trial court did not commit plain error with regard to the instruction on reckless driving and reckless disregard by purportedly failing to sufficiently distinguish between civil and criminal liability as reviewing both the recharge and the initial charge together the appellate court failed to see how the jury was confused to the extent that the defendant was convicted on a lower level of criminal intent. Lauderback v. State, 320 Ga. App. 649, 740 S.E.2d 377 (2013).

ARTICLE 4

CONDUCT AND ARGUMENT OF COUNSEL

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Comment by prosecution on failure of defendant to call character witnesses, 80 A.L.R. 227.

Criticism in judge's charge to jury of argument of defendant's counsel in criminal case, 86 A.L.R. 899.

Attorney's comment on opposing party's refusal to permit introduction of, or to offer, privileged testimony, or to permit privileged witness to testify, 116 A.L.R. 1170.

Comments by prosecuting attorney regarding jury's right or privilege to recommend or fix punishment, 120 A.L.R. 502.

Exclusion or absence of defendant, pending trial of criminal case, from courtroom, or from conference between court and attorneys, during argument on question of law, 144 A.L.R. 199; 85 A.L.R.2d 1111.

Propriety and effect of attack on opposing counsel during trial of a criminal case, 99 A.L.R.2d 508.

Comment or argument by court or counsel that prosecution evidence is uncontradicted as amounting to improper reference to accused's failure to testify, 14 A.L.R.3d 723.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecuting attorney's arguing new matter or points in his closing summation in criminal case, 26 A.L.R.3d 1409.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of informing jury that accused has taken polygraph test, where results of test would be inadmissible in evidence, 88 A.L.R.3d 227.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument to jury indicating his belief or knowledge as to guilt of accused — modern state cases, 88 A.L.R.3d 449.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument giving jury impression that defense counsel believes accused guilty, 89 A.L.R.3d 263.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument to jury indicating that he has additional evidence of defendant's guilt which he did not deem necessary to present, 90 A.L.R.3d 646.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument giving jury impression that judge believes defendant guilty, 90 A.L.R.3d 822.

Circumstances giving rise to prejudicial conflict of interests between criminal defendant and defense counsel — state cases, 18 A.L.R.4th 360.

Attorney's right to appear pro hac vice in state court, 20 A.L.R.4th 855.

Prosecutor's appeal in criminal case to self-interest or prejudice of jurors as taxpayers as grounds for reversal, new trial, or mistrial, 60 A.L.R.4th 1063.

Prosecutor's appeal to racial, national, or religious prejudice as ground for mistrial, new trial, reversal, or vacation of sentence, 70 A.L.R.4th 664.

Propriety of trial court order limiting time for opening or closing argument, 71 A.L.R.4th 200.

17-8-70. Number of counsel permitted to argue case.

Not more than two counsel shall be permitted to argue any case for each side, except by express leave of the court. In no case shall more than one counsel for each side be heard in conclusion.

History. — Ga. L. 1924, p. 75, § 1; Code 1933, § 27-2202.

U.S. Code. — Closing arguments, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 29.1.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of criminal law, see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 153 (2004).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Separately represented jointly tried defendants. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-70 was not intended to act as a limitation on rights of separately represented, jointly tried defendants. Instead, the final portion of that section is a limitation on the number of attorneys who may present closing arguments on behalf of any one defendant tried jointly. McDuffie v. Jones, 248 Ga. 544, 283 S.E.2d 601 (1981), overruled on other grounds, West v. Waters, 272 Ga. 591, 533 S.E.2d 88 (2000).

Second sentence of this section applies to the party exercising the privilege of the final jury argument chronologically. Limbrick v. State, 152 Ga. App. 615, 263 S.E.2d 502 (1979).

Appellate court improperly overruled Limbrick v. State, 152 Ga. App. 615 (1979) as: (1) O.C.G.A. §§ 9-10-182 and 17-8-70 were to be construed under the substantive law in effect when the 1982 Code was enacted; (2) the statutory limitation of one counsel "heard in conclusion" applied to the party exercising the privilege of the final jury argument chronologically; (3) the construction harmonized all parts of the statutes and gave a sensible and intelligent effect to each part of the statutes; (4) the first parts of §§ 9-10-182 and 17-8-70 provided that two attorneys could present argument on behalf of a party without leave of court; and (5) if the second parts of the statutes were construed as limiting the middle and concluding argument to one attorney, it rendered the first parts of the statutes meaningless. Sheriff v. State, 277 Ga. 182, 587 S.E.2d 27 (2003).

Discretion of court. — Generally, order and extent of argument is entirely within discretion of trial court. Little v. State, 157 Ga. App. 462, 278 S.E.2d 17 (1981).

Closing argument. — Trial court did not err in refusing the defendant's request to allow both of the defendant's retained attorneys to present the defendant's closing argument as the plain language of the statute regarding closing argument, O.C.G.A. § 17-8-70, expressly limited closing argument to one counsel for each side. Sheriff v. State, 258 Ga. App. 423, 574 S.E.2d 449 (2002).

Appellate court erred in affirming the trial court's refusal to permit both of the defendant's attorneys to argue in the middle of the state's opening and concluding argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-70, and the error was not harmless as, although the defendant's right to make a closing argument was not completely abridged since one of the defendant's attorneys was allowed to address the jury, the evidence of the defendant's guilt was not so overwhelming that it rendered any other version of the events virtually without belief, and the convictions were reversed. Sheriff v. State, 277 Ga. 182, 587 S.E.2d 27 (2003).

Cited in Godfrey v. State, 243 Ga. 302, 253 S.E.2d 710 (1979); Wells v. State, 177 Ga. App. 419, 339 S.E.2d 392 (1986).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 754 et seq.

ALR. — Appearance of additional counsel in civil case after impaneling of jury, 56 A.L.R.2d 971.

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Ineffective Assistance of Appellate Counsel, 183 Am. Jur. POF 3d 161

17-8-71. Order of argument after evidence presented.

After the evidence is closed on both sides, the prosecuting attorney shall open and conclude the argument to the jury. The defendant shall be entitled to make a closing argument prior to the concluding argument of the prosecuting attorney.

History. — Ga. L. 1851-52, p. 242, § 1; Code 1868, § 4551; Code 1873, § 4645; Code 1882, § 4645; Penal Code 1895, § 1029; Penal Code 1910, § 1055; Code 1933, § 27-2201; Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 10/HB 170.

Cross references. — Right of district attorney to open and defendant or counsel to conclude argument in presentence hearings, § 17-10-2(a).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 1/HB 170, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Criminal Justice Act of 2005.'"

Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 17/HB 170, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the 2005 amendment applies to all trials which commence on or after July 1, 2005.

U.S. Code. — Closing arguments, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 29.1.

Law reviews. — For annual survey article discussing developments in criminal law, see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 209 (1999). For annual survey of criminal law, see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 153 (2004).

For comment on Park v. State, 224 Ga. 467, 162 S.E.2d 359 (1968), see 20 Mercer L. Rev. 318 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Opening and Closing by Defendant
Waiver of Right to Open and Close
Denial of Right to Open and Close

General Consideration

Prosecution's right to open and close constitutional. — General rule that the right to open and close argument to the jury belongs to the prosecution, contained in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, is constitutional. Harper v. State, 166 Ga. App. 797, 305 S.E.2d 488 (1983).

Effect of 2005 amendment. — Because the 2005 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 did nothing to alter the prosecution's rights with respect to closing argument, no error flowed from the state waiving the state's initial closing argument and presenting a full summation after the defendant's closing statement. Lewis v. State, 283 Ga. 191, 657 S.E.2d 854 (2008).

State had right to open and close. — Pursuant to the Bradham precedent, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the state to make a nonsubstantive initial closing argument in the defendant's criminal matter, and to reserve its full presentation for its conclusion, even though the state had the burden of proof and the defendant was required to respond to an argument that the defendant had not heard. Warren v. State, 281 Ga. App. 490, 636 S.E.2d 671 (2006).

Failure to object to order of arguments. — Since the defendant did not have a "constitutional privilege" to both present evidence in the defendant's defense and open and conclude the closing arguments of the guilt/innocence phase of trial, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the order of closing arguments set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Hammond v. State, 264 Ga. 879, 452 S.E.2d 745, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 829, 116 S. Ct. 100, 133 L. Ed. 2d 54 (1995).

Right granted to defendants who introduce no evidence does not deny equal protection. — Allowance of an accused who has not introduced evidence to have the opening and closing argument is a reasonable exception to the general rule that the right to open and close argument belongs to the prosecution, and not a denial of equal protection of the laws to those who are not benefitted by the rule. Yeomans v. State, 229 Ga. 488, 192 S.E.2d 362 (1972).

Mistrial properly denied based on prosecutor's improper opening statement. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant the defendant's motion for a mistrial after the prosecutor commented during opening statements on what the state anticipated the defense would entail; the trial court gave a curative instruction and instructed the jury after all the evidence was presented as to the presumption of the defendant's innocence, the right to not testify, the state's burden to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, and that the state's opening statement did not constitute evidence. Cook v. State, 276 Ga. App. 803, 625 S.E.2d 83 (2005).

Procedure in trial on defendant's claim of mental retardation. — Trial of a habeas corpus petitioner's claim of mental retardation should be regarded as a completion of the guilt/innocence phase of the petitioner's original trial and, therefore, the state was entitled under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 10.2 to make an opening statement before the petitioner. Under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, the state was entitled to make an initial closing argument, the petitioner could then make the petitioner's closing argument, and the state was entitled to make a final closing argument. Stripling v. State, 289 Ga. 370, 711 S.E.2d 665 (2011).

Ineffectiveness of counsel. — Defendant's assertion that, under former O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, defense counsel could have called a witness for impeachment and not lost the right to conclude final arguments was erroneous, and thus defense counsel's strategy was not ineffective; in any event, at trial, the codefendant called a witness, which meant that the defendant, as well as the codefendant, lost the right to make the final closing argument to the jury. Rolland v. State, 280 Ga. 517, 630 S.E.2d 386 (2006).

Defendant's attorney did not provide ineffective assistance in the defendant's child molestation trial by failing to call witnesses for the defense because the attorney's decision was based on a strategic choice to preserve the right to the final closing argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71; in addition, the defendant failed to show prejudice by proffering the testimony of any witnesses who would have provided testimony that was favorable to the defendant and would have changed the outcome of the trial. Wheat v. State, 282 Ga. App. 655, 639 S.E.2d 578 (2006).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Because the record showed that trial counsel's decision to not impeach a state's witness with evidence of two prior shoplifting convictions was part of a sound trial strategy to preserve the right to make the final closing argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, and counsel instead pursued alternative impeachment methods to establish bias, counsel was not ineffective; moreover, given this fact and the state's evidence, it was unlikely that introduction of the shoplifting convictions would have produced a different outcome at trial. Duggan v. State, 285 Ga. App. 273, 645 S.E.2d 733, cert. denied, No. S07C1329, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 662 (Ga. 2007).

Because trial counsel did not provide the defendant with ineffective assistance to the extent that the relevant strategic decisions made would have affected the outcome of the trial, and counsel properly chose not to object to the court's failure to merge a kidnapping and false imprisonment conviction, as those crimes were independent offenses, the defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Snelson v. State, 286 Ga. App. 203, 648 S.E.2d 647 (2007).

Trial counsel's decision not to impeach a witness and to develop that witness as a suspect in the murder for which the defendant was on trial, as part of the strategy to preserve the right to final argument under O.C.G.A. 17-8-71, did not amount to deficient performance. Eason v. State, 283 Ga. 116, 657 S.E.2d 203 (2008).

Defendant did not show that trial counsel was ineffective by failing to request rebuttal time following the State of Georgia's closing statement because the defendant had no right under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 to make a rebuttal argument. Cobb v. State, 309 Ga. App. 70, 709 S.E.2d 9 (2011).

Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel on the ground that trial counsel called the defendant as the only defense witness because under the version of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 in effect at the time of trial, a criminal defendant had the right to make the final closing argument to the jury if the defendant presented no evidence; thus, it was a reasonable trial strategy not to present evidence in order to preserve the right to close and despite that initial strategy being defeated when one of the codefendants introduced documentary evidence, the defendant failed to demonstrate that trial counsel failed to perform effectively once the trial strategy changed mid-trial. Bulloch v. State, 293 Ga. 179, 744 S.E.2d 763 (2013).

Cited in Aldredge v. Williams, 188 Ga. 607, 4 S.E.2d 469 (1939); McElwaney v. State, 66 Ga. App. 112, 17 S.E.2d 202 (1941); Lewis v. State, 126 Ga. App. 123, 190 S.E.2d 123 (1972); Dean v. State, 126 Ga. App. 633, 191 S.E.2d 477 (1972); Park v. Huff, 493 F.2d 923 (5th Cir. 1974); Rolland v. State, 235 Ga. 808, 221 S.E.2d 582 (1976); Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976); Phillips v. State, 238 Ga. 497, 233 S.E.2d 758 (1977); Joseph v. State, 149 Ga. App. 296, 254 S.E.2d 383 (1979); Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979); Varnes v. State, 159 Ga. App. 452, 283 S.E.2d 673 (1981); Chambers v. State, 159 Ga. App. 669, 284 S.E.2d 682 (1981); Mitchell v. State, 169 Ga. App. 630, 314 S.E.2d 468 (1984); Campbell v. State, 253 Ga. 11, 315 S.E.2d 902 (1984); Stephens v. State, 170 Ga. App. 267, 316 S.E.2d 847 (1984); Baty v. State, 257 Ga. 371, 359 S.E.2d 655 (1987); Burden v. State, 187 Ga. App. 778, 371 S.E.2d 410 (1988); Williams v. State, 217 Ga. App. 347, 457 S.E.2d 257 (1995); Quintanilla v. State, 273 Ga. 20, 537 S.E.2d 352 (2000); Harrison v. State, 251 Ga. App. 302, 553 S.E.2d 343 (2001); Sheriff v. State, 277 Ga. 182, 587 S.E.2d 27 (2003); English v. State, 282 Ga. App. 552, 639 S.E.2d 551 (2006); Espinosa v. State, 285 Ga. App. 69, 645 S.E.2d 529 (2007); Madison v. State, 281 Ga. 640, 641 S.E.2d 789 (2007); Parker v. State, 283 Ga. App. 714, 642 S.E.2d 111 (2007); Chandler v. State, 281 Ga. 712, 642 S.E.2d 646 (2007); Lewis v. State, 292 Ga. App. 257, 663 S.E.2d 721 (2008); Stinski v. State, 286

Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854 (2010).

Opening and Closing by Defendant

Purpose in allowing an accused with no defense to have the opening and concluding argument is to allow defense counsel every opportunity to persuade the jury that the state has failed to prove the defendant's guilt. Yeomans v. State, 229 Ga. 488, 192 S.E.2d 362 (1972).

Which party is entitled to open and close is often-times unclear, based on whether or not any admissible testimony or documentary evidence has been introduced by the accused. Scott v. State, 243 Ga. 233, 253 S.E.2d 698 (1979).

Effect of no evidence by defendant and no argument by state. — In the trial of a criminal case, the accused introduced no evidence, and the accused's attorney opened the case to the jury by presenting the law applicable to the facts, consuming less time than the rule of court allowed for argument, and the solicitor (now district attorney), without having previously given any notice of such intention, announced that there would be no argument for the state and that the court might charge the jury, and thereupon the attorney for the defendant stated to the court that the defense attorney had expected the solicitor to argue the case, and had, therefore, reserved for a concluding speech the defense attorney's argument on the facts, and requested the court to allow the defense attorney to present argument on the facts to the jury, within the limits of the rule of court for argument, and this request was refused by the court, it was held that the court was in error. Porter v. State, 6 Ga. App. 770, 65 S.E. 814 (1909). See also Grant v. State, 97 Ga. 789, 25 S.E. 399 (1896).

Right of accused if the accused offers nothing but accused's own testimony. — It is beyond question in this state that when an accused offers no testimony or evidence into the trial of a case, other than the accused's own testimony, the accused has the right to the opening and closing arguments. Scott v. State, 243 Ga. 233, 253 S.E.2d 698 (1979).

Defendant's right to open and conclude closing argument. — When defense counsel, during cross examination, has a witness read portions of a prior written statement by that witness for the purpose of impeachment, the defendant has not lost the right to open and conclude closing argument under the standards set forth in Smith v. State, 272 Ga. 874, 536 S.E.2d 514 (2000). Lane v. State, 274 Ga. 751, 559 S.E.2d 455 (2002).

Because no defendant had a vested right in any rule of evidence or procedure, the trial court did not err when the court enforced the amended version of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 and denied the defendants' request for concluding argument at trial. Newman v. State, 286 Ga. App. 353, 649 S.E.2d 349 (2007).

Trial strategy in child sexual abuse cases. — Trial court properly determined that the defendant's counsel rendered effective assistance pursuant to the Sixth Amendment as the decision of counsel not to cross-examine a minor sexual offense victim by using the victim's diary was a matter of trial strategy in that counsel wished to preserve closing argument pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71; furthermore, counsel's failure to present evidence of an allegedly previous "false allegation" was a non-issue as the defendant misunderstood that the step-daughter's previous statement was not false, but instead, was supportive of the assertions of abuse, but the step-daughter indicated that she chose not to say anything at the prior time because she wanted to keep her family intact, such that the failure to present evidence on that issue was also a trial strategy by counsel. Lewis v. State, 275 Ga. App. 41, 619 S.E.2d 699 (2005).

Mere offer of testimony rejected by judge. — When in a criminal case the accused introduces no testimony, defense counsel is entitled to open and conclude the argument to the jury. This rule is not varied by reason of the defendant's mere offer of testimony which is rejected by the court. Haywood v. State, 14 Ga. App. 114, 80 S.E. 213 (1913).

Effect of making statement. — Making of a statement by the defendant, when the defendant introduces no other evidence, entitles the defendant to the opening and concluding arguments. Hart v. State, 88 Ga. App. 334, 76 S.E.2d 561 (1953).

Opening and Closing by Defendant (Cont'd)

Making of a statement by the defendant, when the defendant introduces no other evidence, entitles the defendant to conclude the argument in the case. Kelly v. State, 149 Ga. App. 388, 254 S.E.2d 737 (1979).

For illustration of what constitutes an introduction of evidence, see Freeney v. State, 129 Ga. 759, 59 S.E. 788 (1907).

Relationship between introduction of evidence and opening and closing arguments. — Criminal defendant has no burden of proof and no obligation to introduce evidence, and the fact that the defendant has a right to introduce evidence does not allow the defendant both to introduce evidence and to claim a right to open and conclude closing argument; and the particular reason the defendant chooses to invoke the defendant's right to introduce evidence, including the necessity of rebuttal, does not control whether the defendant may open and conclude argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Howard v. State, 204 Ga. App. 743, 420 S.E.2d 594 (1992).

Defendant who gives evidence cannot open and conclude argument to jury. — Defendant who, on the trial of a criminal charge against the defendant, introduces in the defendant's defense either oral or documentary evidence has no right to open and conclude the argument before the jury. Hargrove v. State, 117 Ga. 706, 45 S.E. 58 (1903).

In a trial for sodomy and cruelty to children, when, during cross-examination of the defendant's older daughter, counsel marked the daughter's previous sworn statement as an exhibit, and the daughter was questioned about the sworn statement and read excerpts from the statement to the jury, the defendant clearly offered evidence for impeachment purposes and the trial court admitted the evidence for that purpose. Because the defendant introduced evidence into the trial, the trial court properly ruled that the state was entitled to the opening and concluding arguments. Warnock v. State, 195 Ga. App. 537, 394 S.E.2d 382 (1990).

Defendant who displayed a photograph of the alleged crime scene to the jury and gave direct testimony regarding representations in the photograph forfeited the defendant's right to opening and closing arguments by introducing evidence outside the defendant's own testimony. Seavers v. State, 208 Ga. App. 711, 431 S.E.2d 717 (1993).

Although a tape recording of a statement by the defendant's coindictee was not formally tendered by the defendant, presentation of the contents of the tape to the jury was the equivalent of a formal tender divesting the defendant of the right to open and close final arguments. Kennebrew v. State, 267 Ga. 400, 480 S.E.2d 1 (1996).

Right to open and conclude closing argument is the constitutional right of the state and is not a right of the defendant, but is only a privilege, or a compensation, which is given when a defendant chooses not to introduce evidence. The criminal defendant has no burden of proof and no obligation to introduce evidence, and the fact that the defendant has a right to introduce evidence does not allow a defendant both to introduce evidence and to claim a right to open and conclude closing argument; the particular reason a defendant chooses to invoke the right to introduce evidence, including the necessity of rebuttal, does not control whether a defendant may open and conclude argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Tanner v. State, 259 Ga. App. 94, 576 S.E.2d 71 (2003).

Because the defendant introduced additional evidence, other than the defendant's own testimony, no right to open and conclude closing argument existed. Simmons v. State, 281 Ga. 437, 637 S.E.2d 709 (2006).

Introduction of prior written inconsistent witness statement did not impact defendant's right to open and close. — Although a trial court erred in requiring a defendant to introduce a prior inconsistent written statement of a witness into evidence before using the statement to impeach the witness, that error did not cause harm to the defendant by causing the defendant to lose the right to open and conclude the argument to the jury under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 because the record showed that the defendant introduced an abundance of other evidence that had the same effect under the statute. Jackson v. State, 292 Ga. App. 312, 665 S.E.2d 20 (2008).

Time for defendant to elect this right is at the conclusion of state's evidence. — Defendant cannot then elect to introduce testimony pertinent and material to the issue, and subsequently, at the end of the entire evidence, withdraw the defendant's evidence and thus regain the defendant's right to open and conclude the argument. Daniels v. State, 8 Ga. App. 469, 69 S.E. 588 (1910). See also Freeney v. State, 129 Ga. 759, 59 S.E. 788 (1907).

Lack of indication in record that defendant has introduced evidence. — When the record contains no indication whatsoever that documents mentioned by a defendant in the defendant's statement were introduced in evidence, the defendant is entitled to the opening and concluding argument. Park v. State, 224 Ga. 467, 162 S.E.2d 359, cert. denied, 393 U.S. 980, 89 S. Ct. 449, 21 L. Ed. 2d 441 (1968), commented on in 20 Mercer L. Rev. 318 (1969).

Rejection of defense testimony treated as introducing no evidence. — Rule giving the right of opening and closing to the defendant who introduces no evidence (other than the defendant's own testimony) is not varied by the defendant's mere offer of testimony when this testimony is rejected by the court. Hubbard v. State, 167 Ga. App. 32, 305 S.E.2d 849 (1983).

Failure of the defendant to introduce any evidence does not preclude the state from arguing to the jury, but merely grants to the defendant's counsel the right of opening and closing after the testimony on the part of the state is closed. Brooks v. State, 63 Ga. App. 575, 11 S.E.2d 688 (1940).

Opening and closing by admitting crime and seeking to prove justification. — If the defendant has introduced evidence on the defendant's own behalf, the fact that the defendant may admit the crime for which the defendant is indicted and seek to prove justification does not entitle the defendant to open and conclude the argument. Cady v. State, 198 Ga. 99, 31 S.E.2d 38, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 323 U.S. 676, 65 S. Ct. 190, 89 L. Ed. 549 (1944).

Offer to prove justification of homicide. — On a trial for murder, the defendant is not entitled to open and conclude by admitting the homicide and offering to prove the defendant's justification. Mize v. State, 135 Ga. 291, 69 S.E. 173 (1910).

Defendant recalls prosecution witness to stand. — Defendant in a criminal case who, after the testimony of a witness for the prosecution has been concluded, and the witness retired from the stand, calls and examines the witness, is not entitled to open and conclude the argument unless, for some reason addressed to the discretion of the court, the defendant has been granted permission to ask further questions in order to complete the cross-examination of the witness. Dunn v. State, 18 Ga. App. 95, 89 S.E. 170 (1916).

Cross-examination of witnesses. — Defendant whose only evidence was the defendant's own testimony would not have given up the defendant's right to open and to conclude closing argument by subjecting a witness to further cross-examination since mere cross-examination of a witness does not constitute "introduction of evidence" under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Wilson v. State, 227 Ga. App. 59, 488 S.E.2d 121 (1997).

When the defendant, in a cross-examination of state witnesses, asked the witnesses to read highlighted portions of arrest reports which had been marked as the defendant's exhibits, portions of these documents were presented to the jury, and this amounted to the equivalent of a formal tender of evidence, divesting the defendant of the right to open and close final arguments. Aldridge v. State, 237 Ga. App. 209, 515 S.E.2d 397 (1999).

Defendant who examines the witness called by another defendant loses the right to open and close the closing arguments. — When two are tried jointly, and a witness introduced by one is also examined by the other, both should be considered as having introduced evidence, and the state will be entitled to conclude. Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

Opening and Closing by Defendant (Cont'd)

If one defendant in criminal case introduces evidence in trial of codefendants, the right to make closing argument is lost to all defendants. McDuffie v. Jones, 248 Ga. 544, 283 S.E.2d 601 (1981), overruled on other grounds, West v. Waters, 272 Ga. 591, 533 S.E.2d 88 (2000); Rogers v. State, 205 Ga. App. 739, 423 S.E.2d 435 (1992); Sullivan v. State, 213 Ga. App. 308, 444 S.E.2d 392 (1994).

If a codefendant called a witness who had before testified in behalf of the state and did not invoke any ruling from the court to permit the codefendant to further cross examine the witness after the state had closed, it was proper to conclude that the codefendant called the witness as the codefendant's own and, thus, the defendant was not entitled to make the opening and concluding argument to the jury. Sullivan v. State, 213 Ga. App. 308, 444 S.E.2d 392 (1994).

If one defendant offers evidence in the trial of the codefendants, the right to make the closing argument is lost to all defendants, even those introducing no evidence. Williams v. State, 236 Ga. App. 351, 511 S.E.2d 910 (1999).

If the codefendant in a trial attempted impeachment of the coindictee during cross-examination by tendering into evidence the entire written statement of that witness, this amounted to the introduction of substantive evidence, and the state thereby retained the right to conclude. Williams v. State, 236 Ga. App. 351, 511 S.E.2d 910 (1999).

Trial court did not err by refusing to allow the defendant to open and close final arguments as the defendant did not timely and properly object to the refusal and, in any event, was not entitled to open and close since the codefendants of the defendant introduced some evidence and, by doing so, divested the defendant of the right to open and close. McFarlin v. State, 259 Ga. App. 838, 578 S.E.2d 546 (2003).

Loss of right to open and close not grounds for severance. — Loss of the right to open and close arguments under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 because another defendant presented evidence was held not to be grounds for severance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4. Robinson v. State, 164 Ga. App. 652, 297 S.E.2d 751 (1982).

Since codefendants were represented by separate counsel and neither presented any evidence, each defense counsel had the right to open and conclude the closing argument and the trial court erred in only allowing one counsel to open and the other to conclude the closing argument. Givens v. State, 211 Ga. App. 290, 439 S.E.2d 22 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 264 Ga. 522, 448 S.E.2d 687 (1994).

Defendant may conclude argument in presentence death penalty hearing. — After the evidence is closed on both sides in a presentence hearing in which the death penalty is being considered, the defendant may conclude the argument to the jury even if the defendant presents evidence during the hearing. Beck v. State, 254 Ga. 51, 326 S.E.2d 465, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 872, 106 S. Ct. 195, 88 L. Ed. 2d 164 (1985).

Informing jury as to why defendant has opening and closing arguments. — It is not error for the court to inform the jury that "the defendant would have opening and closing arguments because no evidence had been put up" because this is a correct statement of the law. If the defendant thinks it prejudicial, a proper objection should be made to preserve the issue for review on appeal. Shavers v. State, 244 Ga. 491, 260 S.E.2d 883 (1979).

Waiver of Right to Open and Close

Right to opening statement may be waived. — After the close of the evidence, the trial court, in the court's discretion, may permit the party having the opening and concluding argument to waive the opening statement and make a full presentation regarding the legal and factual facets of the party's case to the jury following the final argument of the adverse party. Bradham v. State, 243 Ga. 638, 256 S.E.2d 331 (1979).

Defendant forfeited the defendant's right to opening and closing arguments after the defendant successfully moved without objection to admit a police report into evidence and crossexamined an officer on the report's contents. Eppinger v.

State, 231 Ga. App. 614, 500 S.E.2d 383 (1998).

Waiver does not deny any rights under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. — Right to open and conclude the argument, especially in a criminal case, is a substantial and valuable right, but like every other right, even the right of trial itself, it may be waived. Garrett v. State, 21 Ga. App. 801, 95 S.E. 301 (1918).

Waiver of a party's opening argument, which results in limiting of the closing argument to rebuttal in response to the opposing party's closing argument, does not deny the party any right under this section. Williamson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 177, 235 S.E.2d 643 (1977).

Right to concluding argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 may be waived by failure to object. McDuffie v. Jones, 248 Ga. 544, 283 S.E.2d 601 (1981), overruled on other grounds, West v. Waters, 272 Ga. 591, 533 S.E.2d 88 (2000).

Cross-examination of codefendant. — Trial court erred in forcing a defendant to choose between cross-examining a codefendant and opening and concluding the closing argument as the cross-examination of a witness does not constitute the introduction of evidence under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Dasher v. State, 233 Ga. App. 833, 505 S.E.2d 792 (1998).

Use of witnesses' statements during cross-examination. — Record supported the trial court's judgment that defendant's counsel introduced new evidence when counsel used a statement which a witness gave to police to cross-examine the witness, and because counsel introduced new evidence on behalf of the defendant, the trial court did not err when the trial court denied the defendant's request to give the final closing argument to the jury pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Thompson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 696, 595 S.E.2d 377 (2004).

Improper use of evidence results in forfeiture of right. — Court correctly concluded that the defendant forfeited the defendant's right to open and close by the improper use of evidence; in any case, the issue was unpreserved as was the contention that the trial attorney was ineffective. Allen v. State, 263 Ga. App. 350, 587 S.E.2d 833 (2003).

Waiver by state. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71 did not require the state to give an initial closing argument; thus, the trial court permitted the state to waive this argument. Petty v. State, 283 Ga. 268, 658 S.E.2d 599 (2008).

Waiver by defendant's counsel. — As counsel's decision to call a defense witness, thus forfeiting the right to make the final closing argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, was not patently unreasonable, and as the defendant provided no basis for concluding that the result of the trial would have been different if the defendant had the last closing argument, the defendant did not show counsel was ineffective. McKenzie v. State, 284 Ga. 342, 667 S.E.2d 43 (2008).

Failure to impeach witnesses did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. — With regard to the defendant's convictions for malice murder and other crimes, the defendant failed to show that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to impeach four witnesses' testimony by the witnesses' convictions as such impeachment would have caused defense counsel to lose the right to make the final closing argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Adams v. State, 283 Ga. 298, 658 S.E.2d 627 (2008).

Denial of Right to Open and Close

Denial of right to open and conclude works a reversal. — Right to open and conclude to the jury is an important right and an improper denial of that right will work a reversal. Hart v. State, 88 Ga. App. 334, 76 S.E.2d 561 (1953).

Trial court commits reversible error when at the close of the evidence for the state, over objection of the defendants, counsel for the state is granted the right to the opening and concluding argument, although the defendants introduced no evidence, but merely made the defendants' statements, during the making of which one of the defendants exhibited to the jury certain clothing which was never introduced in evidence. Hart v. State, 88 Ga. App. 334, 76 S.E.2d 561 (1953).

Right to open and conclude to the jury is an important right and the right's denial will generally cause a reversal of the decision of the lower court. Kelly v. State, 149 Ga. App. 388, 254 S.E.2d 737 (1979).

Denial of Right to Open and Close (Cont'd)

Court's denial of right to the opening and closing arguments constituted reversible error. Hubbard v. State, 167 Ga. App. 32, 305 S.E.2d 849 (1983).

Since defendants were represented by separate counsel and neither defendant presented evidence, each had the right to have defense counsel open and conclude the closing argument to the jury and it was reversible error to deny such right. Givens v. State, 264 Ga. 522, 448 S.E.2d 687 (1994).

Trial court's erroneous ruling that the defendant waived the defendant's right to open and close argument was not harmless as to the defendant's convictions for cocaine possession and abandonment as those convictions rested primarily on the testimony of an officer defendant was attempting to impeach when the trial court found the defendant waived the defendant's right to argument, the evidence of those offenses was not overwhelming, and the jury had to believe the officer's testimony over that of the defendant to convict the defendant. Jones v. State, 260 Ga. App. 487, 580 S.E.2d 278 (2003).

Defendants were improperly denied the right to open and close final argument after defense counsel used a police officer's report to cast doubt on defendant's recollection and credibility, and did not read police and child services agencies' reports into evidence when attempting to implicate other family members; while the evidence was sufficient to support the convictions, the evidence was not overwhelming, so the error was not harmless and the defendants were entitled to a new trial. Thomas v. State, 262 Ga. App. 492, 589 S.E.2d 243 (2003).

Forced to forfeit right to open and close arguments. — Because to pursue attempt at impeaching the witness, the defendant was wrongly required to introduce evidence and forfeit the defendant's right to open and conclude closing argument, the defendant showed presumptive harm. Whitehead v. State, 232 Ga. App. 140, 499 S.E.2d 922 (1998).

It is a substantial procedural right. — Right to open and conclude when the defendant introduces no evidence is a substantial procedural right. Park v. State, 224 Ga. 467, 162 S.E.2d 359, cert. denied, 393 U.S. 980, 89 S. Ct. 449, 21 L. Ed. 2d 441 (1968), commented on in 20 Mercer L. Rev. 318 (1969).

Party deprived of right to open and close is presumed to be injured by right's denial. Kelly v. State, 149 Ga. App. 388, 254 S.E.2d 737 (1949).

Even if defendant makes statement unless clearly guilty. — In a criminal case, although the defendant introduced no evidence, but made a statement, the defendant was entitled to conclude the argument in the case. This is an important right, and the right's denial will generally cause a reversal of the decision of the lower court. But if the evidence demanded a verdict of guilty, an erroneous ruling will not require a reversal, except when the presiding judge has expressed or intimated an opinion on the facts of the case. Seyden v. State, 78 Ga. 105 (1886).

Effect of deprivation of right to open and conclude. — If the evidence in a criminal case demands a verdict of guilty, the fact that the defendant was improperly deprived of the right to open and conclude the argument will not necessitate a new trial. Scott v. State, 243 Ga. 233, 253 S.E.2d 698 (1979).

After the defendant cross-examined a witness for the state regarding the witness's first offender sentence under the First Offender Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq., in an effort to show witness bias, the trial court erred in requiring the defendant to introduce into evidence certified copies of the relevant sentencing record and in thus denying the defendant the right to open and conclude closing arguments by forcing the defendant to present evidence. Defendant had a right under the Confrontation Clause of U.S. Const., amend. 6 to cross-examine the witness regarding the witness's first offender probation status to show bias, but the records relevant to that status were not admissible because there was no adjudication of the witness's guilt; however, the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Smith v. State, 276 Ga. 263, 577 S.E.2d 548 (2003).

Although the trial court may have erred in allowing the state to open and conclude closing argument in the defendant's cocaine possession case since the defendant did not present any evidence other than the defendant's own testimony, the error was harmless because the defendant's own frank admission to possessing the cocaine and the defendant's attorney's arguments conceding guilt on that charge meant the trial court's alleged error did not contribute to the conviction. Starks v. State, 260 Ga. App. 719, 580 S.E.2d 672 (2003).

Arguments after defendant impeaches codefendant. — Counsel was not deficient for belatedly notifying the state of the counsel's intent to impeach the codefendant with a letter, in which the codefendant took full responsibility for two of the robberies and purportedly exonerated the defendant of those crimes; although the introduction of the letter cost defendant the right to open and close final arguments, the prior inconsistent statements in the letter served to impeach the codefendant's testimony and were used for that purpose by trial counsel after defense counsel discussed the matter with the defendant. Buchanan v. State, 273 Ga. App. 174, 614 S.E.2d 786 (2005).

While the trial court erred by requiring the defendant to introduce a certified copy of the victim's prior conviction or forego questioning the victim about the victim's probationary status, resulting in the loss of the right to open and close final argument to the jury, given the overwhelming evidence against the defendant, it was highly probable that this error did not contribute to the judgment. Johnson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 724, 644 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, No. S07C1179, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 538 (Ga. 2007).

Defendant may not assert denial of right for first time on appeal. — If the court announces that the state has opening and closing arguments and appellant makes no objection, the appellant cannot during the trial ignore what the appellant thinks to be an injustice, take the appellant's chances on a favorable verdict, and complain later on appeal. Scott v. State, 243 Ga. 233, 253 S.E.2d 698 (1979).

Absent codefendant. — Trial court did not err in allowing the codefendant to present a concluding final argument after the defendant's final argument to the jury, despite the fact that the codefendant was tried in absentia and was later granted a new trial when it was determined that the trial in absentia was error. Manders v. State, 280 Ga. App. 742, 634 S.E.2d 773 (2006).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Time as of which defense counsel in criminal case may make opening statement, 93 A.L.R.2d 951.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecuting attorney's arguing new matter or points in his closing summation in criminal case, 26 A.L.R.3d 1409.

Power of trial court to dismiss prosecution or direct acquittal on basis of prosecutor's opening statement, 75 A.L.R.3d 649.

Propriety of trial court order limiting time for opening or closing argument, 71 A.L.R.4th 200.

Negative characterization or description of defendant, by prosecutor during summation of criminal trial, as ground for reversal, new trial, or mistrial—modern cases, 88 A.L.R.4th 8.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of counsel's negative characterization or description of witness during summation of criminal trial—modern cases, 88 A.L.R.4th 209.

17-8-72. Misdemeanors and cases arising from inferior judicatories; time limits on closing argument.

In all misdemeanor cases and cases brought up from inferior judicatories, counsel for either party shall not occupy more than one-half hour in the whole discussion of the case after the evidence is closed without obtaining special leave of the court before the argument is opened.

History. — Ga. L. 1924, p. 75, § 2; Code 1933, § 27-2203.
U.S. Code. — Closing arguments, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 29.1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Showing required for time extension generally. — It is necessary that counsel make a showing in the manner prescribed, as to the necessity of an extension of time, in order to do justice to the case of their client. If the showing required by this section is not made, it will not be held that there was any abuse of discretion on the part of the trial judge in refusing to extend the time for argument as requested. Bloodworth v. State, 161 Ga. 332, 131 S.E. 80 (1925).

Waiver of error in limiting closing argument time. — In a juvenile proceeding wherein a juvenile was adjudicated delinquent as a result of an assault of a schoolmate on a school bus, the trial court did not err in limiting closing arguments to five minutes since the trial court informed the parties that the parties would each have five minutes to argue and defense counsel did not insist upon the right to the full time, and instead remained silent, thereby waiving the issue on appeal. In the Interest of E.J., 283 Ga. App. 648, 642 S.E.2d 179 (2007).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 88 C.J.S., Trial, § 288 et seq.
ALR. — Allowing attorney to exceed allotted time for argument as reversible error, 1 A.L.R. 1257.

Propriety of trial court order limiting time for opening or closing argument in criminal case—state cases, 71 A.L.R.4th 200.

17-8-73. Noncapital and capital felony cases; time limits on closing argument.

In felony cases other than those involving capital felonies, counsel shall be limited in their closing arguments to one hour for each side. In cases involving capital felonies, counsel shall be limited to two hours for each side.

History. — Ga. L. 1924, p. 75, § 3; Code 1933, § 27-2204.
U.S. Code. — Closing arguments, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 29.1.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of death penalty law, see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 197 (2004).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Judge may not reduce time allowed for argument in capital felony. — Counsel in a capital felony case are entitled, as a matter of right, to two hours on a side in which to argue their case, and the trial judge has no right in the judge's discretion in such a case to limit counsel's argument to a shorter period of time. Kittles v. State, 74 Ga. App. 383, 39 S.E.2d 766 (1946).

Murder defendant's closing argument could not be restricted to one hour as a capital felony defendant is entitled to two hours of closing argument. Massey v. State, 270 Ga. 76, 508 S.E.2d 149 (1998).

Trial court erred as a matter of law when the court did not treat the defendant's malice murder trial as one involving a capital felony under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73 and did not give the defendant the two-hour limit on closing argument to which the defendant was entitled. Monroe v. State, 272 Ga. 201, 528 S.E.2d 504 (2000).

For purposes of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73, malice murder and felony murder are capital felonies even when the death penalty is not sought. Chapman v. State, 273 Ga. 865, 548 S.E.2d 278 (2001).

Trial court erred by limiting defense counsel to one hour for closing argument at the end of the defendant's trial on charges of malice murder and felony murder, and the state supreme court reversed the defendant's conviction for malice murder and related crimes because the state's case was based in large part on circumstantial evidence, and the error was not harmless. Hendricks v. State, 277 Ga. 61, 586 S.E.2d 317 (2003).

Violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73 ignored. — Even though the trial court illegally infringed upon the right of closing argument by shortening the time permitted to defendant by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73 and then refusing the defendant the unused time of the codefendants, the presumption of harm was overcome because the evidence of guilt was so compelling. Hayes v. State, 268 Ga. 809, 493 S.E.2d 169 (1997).

Allotted time was sufficient. — Defendant's right to make a closing argument was not completely abridged since the defendant did not deny that the defendant killed the defendant's spouse, the defendant's sole defense was that the killing was voluntary manslaughter, and the defendant's trial counsel specifically did not request additional time for closing argument as part of the defense trial strategy not to lose the jurors' attention. Ricketts v. State, 276 Ga. 466, 579 S.E.2d 205 (2003).

Defendant was properly limited to one hour for the closing argument as the defendant was charged with drug related offenses and was not indicted for a crime that could be punished by death; the defendant was not entitled to two hours for the defendant's closing argument under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 13.1 and O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73. Miller v. State, 281 Ga. App. 354, 636 S.E.2d 60 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0087, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 106 (Ga. 2007).

Presumption of harm not rebutted. — Although defense counsel was not completely cut off from making a closing argument on the defendant's behalf, the trial court erred in not allowing defense counsel to use the full amount of time that statutory law permitted counsel as the evidence in the case of the shooting death of the defendant's business partner, although strong, was not so overwhelming as to render any other version of events to be completely without belief and, thus, the presumption of harm that arose from shortening defense counsel's closing argument was not rebutted, and required that the defendant receive a new trial. Laster v. State, 276 Ga. 645, 581 S.E.2d 522 (2003).

Reduced time harmless error. — At a trial in which a trial court limited closing arguments in defendant's capital murder trial to one hour per side, and the defendant's counsel acquiesced in the trial court's ruling, the issue of whether the defendant was denied the right to a longer closing argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73 was waived on appeal; nonetheless, any error was harmless, as the defendant's right was not denied completely, and the evidence of guilt was so overwhelming that any other version of events was not credible. Agee v. State, 279 Ga. 774, 621 S.E.2d 434 (2005).

Counsel's plan to deliver 30-minute closing. — Although the trial court erred in limiting closing arguments to one hour's duration, the defendant's right to make a two-hour closing was not abridged by the trial court's misstatement of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73, since counsel had informed the trial court of counsel's plan to deliver a 30-minute closing argument and since counsel was not interrupted during the delivery of closing argument by the trial court. Stovall v. State, 287 Ga. 415, 696 S.E.2d 633 (2010).

Trial counsel's acquiescence in limited time waived error. — Although the defendant charged with murder was entitled to two hours in the defendant's closing argument, the defendant's trial counsel acquiesced at trial to the trial court's ruling that closing arguments would be limited to one hour per side, waiving the issue on appeal; therefore, the defendant's appellate counsel was not ineffective for failing to raise this alleged error. Seabolt v. Norris, 298 Ga. 583, 783 S.E.2d 913 (2016).

Brief extension of time not abuse of discretion. — Because a trial court had discretion to grant a short period of additional time for a party to reach the logical conclusion of the party's closing argument, even without a pre-argument request for more time, no abuse of discretion resulted from the trial court's decision to permit a brief extension to the state. Dorsey v. State, 285 Ga. App. 510, 646 S.E.2d 713 (2007).

Using less time than allotted not ineffective assistance. — Existence of the statutory right to make a two-hour closing argument in a murder case does not mean that an attorney acts incompetently whenever the attorney decides to use less than the whole two hours. Brown v. State, 288 Ga. 902, 708 S.E.2d 294 (2011).

Ineffective assistance. — While the defendant met the burden of showing trial counsel's deficient performance based on a misimpression that counsel was entitled to only one hour to make a closing argument, instead of two as permitted by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73, the defendant failed to show that but for the error, trial counsel could have convinced the jury that the defendant was innocent of the crimes charged. Hardeman v. State, 281 Ga. 220, 635 S.E.2d 698 (2006).

As to the defendant's habeas claim that the defendant's trial counsel was ineffective for failing to use counsel's entire two hours for closing argument as provided in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73, because kidnapping with bodily injury was a capital offense, but counsel believed counsel only had 30 minutes, there was no showing that trial counsel could have convinced the jury that the client was innocent of the crimes charged. Wilkerson v. Hart, 294 Ga. 605, 755 S.E.2d 192 (2014).

Forfeiture of right to appeal insufficient time. — Although the trial court erred by limiting the defendant's closing arguments in a felony murder trial to one hour, the defendant forfeited the right to raise the issue on appeal by faling to object or ask for more time when the court said time was running out. Lay v. State, 305 Ga. 715, 827 S.E.2d 671 (2019).

Cited in Carter v. State, 263 Ga. 401, 435 S.E.2d 42 (1993).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 88 C.J.S., Trial, § 288 et seq.

ALR. — Propriety of trial court order limiting time for opening or closing argument in criminal case — state cases, 71 A.L.R.4th 200.

17-8-74. Allowance of additional time for closing argument.

If, before argument begins, counsel on either side applies to the court for an extension of the time prescribed for argument and states in his place or on oath, in the discretion of the court, that he cannot do the case justice within the time prescribed and that it will require for that purpose additional time, stating how much additional time will be necessary, the court shall grant such extension of time as may seem reasonable and proper, provided that the extension of time granted in misdemeanor cases or cases brought up from inferior judicatories shall not exceed 30 minutes.

History. — Ga. L. 1924, p. 75, § 4; Code 1933, § 27-2205; Ga. L. 1982, p. 3, § 17.

U.S. Code. — Closing arguments, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 29.1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Hand v. State, 88 Ga. App. 775, 77 S.E.2d 746 (1953).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Allowing attorney to exceed allotted time for argument as reversible error, 1 A.L.R. 1257.

Propriety of trial court order limiting time for opening or closing argument in criminal case — state cases, 71 A.L.R.4th 200.

17-8-75. Improper statements by counsel.

Where counsel in the hearing of the jury make statements of prejudicial matters which are not in evidence, it is the duty of the court to interpose and prevent the same. On objection made, the court shall also rebuke the counsel and by all needful and proper instructions to the jury endeavor to remove the improper impression from their minds; or, in his discretion, he may order a mistrial if the prosecuting attorney is the offender.

History. — Civil Code 1895, § 4419; Civil Code 1910, § 4957; Code 1933, § 81-1009.

History of Code section. — This Code section is a codification of the rulings contained in Augusta & S.R.R. v. Randall, 85 Ga. 297, 11 S.E. 706 (1890); Metropolitan S.R.R. v. Johnson, 90 Ga. 500, 16 S.E. 49 (1892); Croom v. State, 90 Ga. 430, 17 S.E. 1003 (1893); Farmer v. State, 91 Ga. 720, 18 S.E. 987 (1893).

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-185.

Law reviews. — For article, "From O.J. to McVeigh: The Use of Argument in the Opening Statement," see 48 Emory L.J. 107 (1999). For article, "Death Penalty Law," see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 233 (2001).

For note, "Argument of Counsel," see 1 Ga. B.J. 44 (1927).

For comment on Aycock v. State, 180 Ga. 150, 4 S.E.2d 221 (1939), see 2 Ga. B.J. 69 (1940). For comment on Washington v. State, 80 Ga. App. 415, 56 S.E.2d 119 (1949), see 1 Mercer L. Rev. 320 (1950). For comment on Cornett v. State, 218 Ga. 405, 128 S.E.2d 317 (1962), see 25 Ga. B.J. 448 (1963).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Conduct of Counsel
Requirement that Objection or Motion Be Made
Rebuke of Counsel, Instruction of Jury, or Grant of Motion by Court
Discretion of Court

General Consideration

Introduction of facts not in record is what is forbidden. — What the law forbids is the introduction into a case, by way of argument, of facts not in the record, and calculated to prejudice the accused. Brooks v. State, 55 Ga. App. 227, 189 S.E. 852 (1937); Bradley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 865, 219 S.E.2d 451 (1975).

What the law forbids is introduction into case by way of argument of facts which are not in the record and are calculated to prejudice a party and render trial unfair; the language used in argument may be extravagant, but figurative speech is a legitimate weapon in forensic warfare if there are facts admissible in evidence upon which the speech may be founded. Stancil v. State, 158 Ga. App. 147, 279 S.E.2d 457 (1981); Davis v. State, 178 Ga. App. 357, 343 S.E.2d 140 (1986).

Introduction of facts not in record requires application of remedies. — It is the introduction of facts before the jury which are not in evidence that requires the application of remedies such as mistrial or rebuke. Thompson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 567, 258 S.E.2d 180 (1979); Turner v. State, 152 Ga. App. 354, 262 S.E.2d 618 (1979).

Section does not prevent counsel from commenting on and drawing deductions from evidence. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 concerns the introduction of facts not in evidence, but does not prevent counsel from commenting on and drawing deductions from the evidence; a prosecutor's comments in the presence of the jury about the Jackson-Denno hearing were not improper when because the prosecutor did not disclose the Jackson-Denno findings, but merely commented that the prosecutor did not believe there was evidence of threats, harassment, or intimidation when the defendant gave a statement to police, and there was no error since the prosecutor did not introduce new facts into evidence, and the trial court made no comments about the hearing, but later instructed the jury on the jury's duty to decide if the defendant understood the rights and made the statement voluntarily. Elliott v. State, 275 Ga. App. 359, 620 S.E.2d 584 (2005).

Introduction of facts not in record not reasonable and permissible inferences from the evidence already before the jury. Thompson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 567, 258 S.E.2d 180 (1979).

Proper basis for jury verdict. — Verdict of a jury should be based only on legal evidence properly submitted to the jury, not remarks of counsel, which are not in evidence nor drawn from evidence, irrelevant and immaterial to the vital issue, and which are used ostensibly only for the purpose of prejudicing the minds of the jury against the defendant. Hammond v. State, 51 Ga. App. 225, 179 S.E. 841 (1935).

Use of "highly probable test." — Proper standard for a determination as to whether an uncorrected argument of counsel resulted in a miscarriage of justice to the defendant is the "highly probable test"; i.e., that it is highly probable that the error did not contribute to the judgment. Jones v. State, 159 Ga. App. 704, 285 S.E.2d 45 (1981).

When no timely objection is interposed during improper closing argument, the test for reversible error is not simply whether or not the argument was objectionable, or even if the argument might have contributed to the verdict, but whether the improper argument in reasonable probability changed the result of the trial. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

Proper for prosecutor to testify. — If a prosecuting attorney seeks merely to rebut defense testimony regarding something the prosecuting attorney personally is supposed to have heard or observed, it is not an abuse of discretion to allow a prosecuting attorney to testify. Watson v. State, 176 Ga. App. 610, 337 S.E.2d 54 (1985).

Statements prohibited, but not acts. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 prohibits statements of prejudicial matters not in evidence, but does not prohibit acts. Patten v. State, 184 Ga. App. 152, 361 S.E.2d 203 (1987).

Nonprejudicial statements are not grounds for reversal. — If the remark or statement is not such as would be likely to prejudice the defendant's rights in regard to whether the defendant has had a fair trial, the error will not be reversible. Ingram v. State, 97 Ga. App. 468, 103 S.E.2d 666 (1958); Davis v. State, 178 Ga. App. 357, 343 S.E.2d 140 (1986).

Control of improper statements made by witnesses. — So far as improper statements by witnesses are concerned, there is no statute bearing directly on the subject. Cases must be governed by analogizing the law embodied in this section, and by reference to the fundamental rules of law guaranteeing fair and impartial trials. Felton v. State, 93 Ga. App. 48, 90 S.E.2d 607 (1955).

Because the prosecutor did not deliberately elicit a witness's response relating to the defendant's character and tried to stop the witness even before the defense objected, and because the trial court acted immediately, struck the comments, and gave a curative instruction, the trial court's refusal to grant a mistrial was not error. Ryan v. State, 276 Ga. App. 87, 622 S.E.2d 446 (2005).

Defense counsel's right to argue punishment avoided by state's witnesses. — Trial court erred in preventing defense counsel from arguing the extent of the benefit the state's witnesses received by agreeing to testify against the defendant, and such error was not harmless; the defense had a right to encourage the jury to infer from that evidence that the witnesses had bias and interest in the case that could compromise the witnesses credibility. Palma v. State, 280 Ga. 108, 624 S.E.2d 137 (2005).

Remedy for questions which are inherently improper and prejudicial. — If a question standing alone is inherently improper and prejudicial, the remedy is a motion for a rebuke or for a mistrial. Herndon v. State, 178 Ga. 832, 174 S.E. 597 (1934), appeal dismissed, 295 U.S. 441, 55 S. Ct. 794, 79 L. Ed. 1530 (1935).

Questioning by defense counsel of investigator did not merit mistrial. — Trial court was not required to declare a mistrial under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 when defense counsel cross-examined an investigator about similar crimes. Defense counsel had not made an improper argument, but merely attempted to introduce evidence into the record for strategic reasons by questioning a witness. Gary v. State, 291 Ga. App. 757, 662 S.E.2d 742 (2008).

Since the jury had not yet been sworn, mistrial was not a viable remedy since, in response to defense counsel's question whether any of the prospective jurors had ever been the victim of a crime, one person answered that their store or home had been burglarized six times "by some of your best clients." Petty v. State, 179 Ga. App. 767, 347 S.E.2d 663 (1986).

No error in not declaring mistrial for violation of granted motion in limine. — Court did not err in not declaring a mistrial when a state's witness referred to the defendant's actions as "rape" after the court had granted defendant's motion in limine to refrain from the use of that word. Gaines v. State, 179 Ga. App. 623, 347 S.E.2d 673 (1986).

Harmless error. — Trial court's error in allowing the prosecutor to inject evidence of the "buddy syndrome" at the defendant's trial for child molestation was harmless error since the error did not contribute to the judgment. McCann v. State, 200 Ga. App. 256, 407 S.E.2d 482 (1991).

If the record showed that defense counsel was able to argue substantially on a contested issue prior to its objection by the state, the court's error in limiting defense counsel's closing argument was harmless. Prejean v. State, 209 Ga. App. 411, 433 S.E.2d 628 (1993).

In a prosecution for shoplifting, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a mistrial after the state improperly commented on the right to remain silent as the error was harmless given the overwhelming evidence of guilt, eyewitness testimony and videotaped evidence of the crime, and the prosecutor's compliance with an instruction to not make any further comment on the defendant's silence. Ekanger v. State, 279 Ga. App. 421, 631 S.E.2d 459 (2006).

Despite the prosecutor's improper argument during closing, and the trial court's failure to perform the court's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75, no reversible error resulted from the failure as it was highly improbable that the error contributed to the verdict. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 521, 640 S.E.2d 274 (2007).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Although the trial court erred in not fulfilling the court's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 when the prosecutor's remark regarding what the defendant had told deputies was a misstatement of the evidence, the error was harmless because it was highly probable that the trial court's error did not contribute to the verdicts; the improper statement, consisting of one sentence, was interrupted by defense counsel's prompt objection, the trial court immediately observed that the jury would remember the evidence, and the trial court charged the jury fully as to what constituted evidence, including instructing the jurors that evidence did not include the attorneys' opening statements or closing arguments. Arrington v. State, 286 Ga. 335, 687 S.E.2d 438 (2009), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 112, 178 L. Ed. 2d 69 (U.S. 2010).

Prosecutor's argument went slightly beyond the trial testimony by describing a video game as involving the use of "bludgeoning objects to kill somebody," and the trial court erred by failing to rebuke counsel and to instruct the jury to disregard the unauthorized argument, as was required by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75, but the error was not reversible error because it was highly probable that the prosecutor's minor misstatement of the evidence, particularly in light of the trial court's subsequent statement to the jury that the jury had to determine what evidence was actually presented, did not contribute to the sentencing verdict. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

While the prosecutor's comment that "the next time he does this, he might shoot somebody" was improper, the defendant was not entitled to relief because, even assuming the trial court's response fell short of satisfying O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75, it was highly probable that any error in failing to comply with § 17-8-75 based upon a single comment did not contribute to the verdict. Wright v. State, 319 Ga. App. 723, 738 S.E.2d 310 (2013).

Trial court's error in failing to remedy the impact of the prejudicial statements by the prosecutor, if any, was harmless. Given the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, including the defendant's custodial confession, it was highly probable that the trial court's error, if any, did not contribute to the verdict. Geiger v. State, 295 Ga. 190, 758 S.E.2d 808 (2014).

Trial court's failure to rebuke the prosecutor for making statements within the hearing of the jury regarding prejudicial matters not in evidence was harmless because the prosecutor's closing argument indicating that the prosecutor could predict from the outset of the case that the defendant would either assert a claim of self-defense or a claim that someone else committed the act could not have misled the jury as a claim of self-defense was not pursued by the defendant; the jury instructions stated that the closing arguments of the lawyers did not constitute evidence; and it was highly probable that neither the statement by the prosecutor, nor any alleged failure of the trial court to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 contributed to the verdict. Ware v. State, 302 Ga. 792, 809 S.E.2d 762 (2018).

When defense counsel objected to the prosecutor's statement in closing argument as an improper comment on the defendant's right to remain silent, presuming that the trial court's response amounted to a ruling on the defendant's objection, any error from the trial court's failure to act pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 was harmless considering the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt; and the trial court's instruction to the jury that the statements of counsel during closing arguments did not constitute evidence. Taylor v. State, 303 Ga. 583, 814 S.E.2d 302 (2018).

Pretermitting whether the defendant's motion for mistrial constituted a proper objection to the state's reference to the defendant's "previous trial," and even assuming that the trial court erred by failing to rebuke counsel, any such assumed error would be harmless as the evidence of the defendant's guilt was strong; and the trial court instructed the jury both before opening statements and after closing arguments that the lawyers' statements were not evidence. Dobbins v. State, 844 S.E.2d 814, No. S20A0402, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 449 (2020).

Double jeopardy did not bar retrial. — Prosecutorial misconduct did not bar a retrial of the defendant under the Double Jeopardy Clause, U.S. Const., amend. V, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, when the defendant alleged that the state made many statements of fact outside the record during closing argument in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 as the defendant did not allege that the prosecutor intended to prevent an acquittal that the prosecutor believed at the time was likely to occur in the absence of the prosecutor's misconduct. Wadley v. State, 317 Ga. App. 333, 730 S.E.2d 536 (2012).

Comments not prejudicial. — Since the defendant did not answer any of the complained-of questions posed by the prosecutor, and the subject matter of those questions was already in evidence, the questions did not amount to forbidden prejudicial statements within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Brockman v. State, 292 Ga. 707, 739 S.E.2d 332 (2013).

Noncompliance did not contribute to verdict. — In light of the substantial evidence against the defendant, as well as the jury instructions given, it was highly probable that neither the statement by the prosecutor in closing argument, nor any alleged failure of the trial court to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75, contributed to the verdict. Anderson v. State, 302 Ga. 74, 805 S.E.2d 47 (2017).

Cited in Mitchum v. State, 11 Ga. 615 (1852); Sims v. Ferrill, 45 Ga. 585 (1872); Blackman v. State, 78 Ga. 592, 3 S.E. 418 (1887); Johnson v. State, 88 Ga. 606, 15 S.E. 667 (1891); Smalls v. State, 105 Ga. 669, 31 S.E. 571 (1898); Evans v. State, 115 Ga. 229, 41 S.E. 691 (1902); Rawlins v. State, 124 Ga. 31, 52 S.E. 1 (1905); Reese v. State, 3 Ga. App. 610, 60 S.E. 284 (1908); Clary v. State, 8 Ga. App. 92, 68 S.E. 615 (1910); Miller v. State, 8 Ga. App. 540, 69 S.E. 922 (1911); Carswell v. State, 10 Ga. App. 30, 72 S.E. 602 (1911); Hinsman v. State, 14 Ga. App. 481, 81 S.E. 367 (1914); Jones v. State, 14 Ga. App. 568, 81 S.E. 801 (1914); Cofield v. State, 14 Ga. App. 813, 82 S.E. 355 (1914); Gazaway v. State, 15 Ga. App. 467, 83 S.E. 857 (1914); Cason v. State, 16 Ga. App. 820, 86 S.E. 644 (1914); Mays v. State, 18 Ga. App. 241, 89 S.E. 174 (1916); White v. State, 19 Ga. App. 230, 91 S.E. 280 (1917); Garrett v. State, 21 Ga. App. 801, 95 S.E. 301 (1918); Brown v. State, 148 Ga. 264, 96 S.E. 435 (1918); Palmer v. State, 23 Ga. App. 84, 97 S.E. 460 (1918); Mitchell v. State, 24 Ga. App. 135, 99 S.E. 889 (1919); Jones v. State, 24 Ga. App. 129, 99 S.E. 893 (1919); Dixon v. State, 26 Ga. App. 13, 105 S.E. 39 (1920); Lewis v. State, 59 Ga. App. 387, 1 S.E.2d 62 (1939); Hayes v. State, 199 Ga. 251, 34 S.E.2d 97 (1945); Brady v. State, 199 Ga. 566, 34 S.E.2d 849 (1945); Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 336, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948); Pressley v. State, 207 Ga. 274, 61 S.E.2d 113 (1950); Ralls v. State, 87 Ga. App. 655, 75 S.E.2d 26 (1953); Heard v. State, 210 Ga. 108, 78 S.E.2d 38 (1953); Payne v. State, 89 Ga. App. 568, 80 S.E.2d 93 (1954); Montos v. State, 212 Ga. 764, 95 S.E.2d 792 (1956); McFarlin v. State, 95 Ga. App. 425, 98 S.E.2d 99 (1957); Bailey v. State, 95 Ga. App. 859, 99 S.E.2d 311 (1957); Martin v. State, 98 Ga. App. 136, 105 S.E.2d 250 (1958); Moore v. State, 222 Ga. 748, 152 S.E.2d 570 (1966); Martin v. State, 223 Ga. 649, 157 S.E.2d 458 (1967); Lingo v. State, 224 Ga. 333, 162 S.E.2d 1 (1968); Willingham v. State, 118 Ga. App. 321, 163 S.E.2d 317 (1968); McBride v. State, 119 Ga. App. 418, 167 S.E.2d 374 (1969); Gore v. State, 124 Ga. App. 398, 184 S.E.2d 24 (1971); Spann v. State, 126 Ga. App. 370, 190 S.E.2d 924 (1972); Wingfield v. State, 231 Ga. 92, 200 S.E.2d 708 (1973); Ramsey v. State, 232 Ga. 15, 205 S.E.2d 286 (1974); Culpepper v. State, 132 Ga. App. 733, 209 S.E.2d 18 (1974); Martin v. State, 132 Ga. App. 658, 209 S.E.2d 103 (1974); Reed v. State, 134 Ga. App. 47, 213 S.E.2d 147 (1975); Coker v. State, 234 Ga. 555, 216 S.E.2d 782 (1975); Crumley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 394, 217 S.E.2d 464 (1975); Westbrooks v. State, 135 Ga. App. 807, 218 S.E.2d 908 (1975); Hughes v. State, 136 Ga. App. 927, 222 S.E.2d 645 (1975); Reid v. State, 137 Ga. App. 495, 224 S.E.2d 482 (1976); Greeson v. State, 138 Ga. App. 572, 226 S.E.2d 769 (1976); Crawford v. State, 139 Ga. App. 347, 228 S.E.2d 371 (1976); Thurston v. State, 139 Ga. App. 647, 229 S.E.2d 124 (1976); Johnson v. State, 238 Ga. 59, 230 S.E.2d 869 (1976); Gillespie v. State, 140 Ga. App. 408, 231 S.E.2d 154 (1976); Gamble v.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

State, 141 Ga. App. 304, 233 S.E.2d 264 (1977); Ransom v. State, 142 Ga. App. 325, 235 S.E.2d 748 (1977); Sheets v. State, 143 Ga. App. 510, 239 S.E.2d 196 (1977); Eubanks v. State, 240 Ga. 544, 242 S.E.2d 41 (1978); Bethea v. State, 149 Ga. App. 312, 254 S.E.2d 468 (1979); Fleming v. State, 149 Ga. App. 781, 256 S.E.2d 56 (1979); Boatright v. State, 150 Ga. App. 283, 257 S.E.2d 314 (1979); Rivers v. State, 151 Ga. App. 380, 259 S.E.2d 650 (1979); Sanford v. State, 153 Ga. App. 541, 265 S.E.2d 868 (1980); Gregoroff v. State, 158 Ga. App. 363, 280 S.E.2d 373 (1981); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981); Spicer v. State, 159 Ga. App. 826, 285 S.E.2d 258 (1981); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981); Jones v. State, 159 Ga. App. 845, 285 S.E.2d 584 (1981); Neal v. State, 160 Ga. App. 498, 287 S.E.2d 399 (1981); Ferry v. State, 161 Ga. App. 795, 287 S.E.2d 732 (1982); Garrett v. State, 160 Ga. App. 877, 288 S.E.2d 592 (1982); State v. Abdi, 162 Ga. App. 20, 288 S.E.2d 772 (1982); Bryant v. State, 249 Ga. 242, 290 S.E.2d 75 (1982); Dempsey v. State, 162 Ga. App. 390, 291 S.E.2d 449 (1982); Bramlett v. State, 162 Ga. App. 584, 291 S.E.2d 739 (1982); Phillips v. State, 162 Ga. App. 471, 291 S.E.2d 776 (1982); Ritter v. State, 163 Ga. App. 158, 293 S.E.2d 547 (1982); Luckett v. State, 163 Ga. App. 90, 294 S.E.2d 200 (1982); Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281 (1982); Johnson v. State, 164 Ga. App. 501, 297 S.E.2d 38 (1982); Rivers v. State, 250 Ga. 288, 298 S.E.2d 10 (1982); Chancellor v. State, 165 Ga. App. 365, 301 S.E.2d 294 (1983); Wilbanks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 876, 303 S.E.2d 144 (1983); Phillips v. State, 167 Ga. App. 260, 305 S.E.2d 918 (1983); Williams v. State, 251 Ga. 749, 312 S.E.2d 40 (1983); Estes v. State, 169 Ga. App. 685, 314 S.E.2d 700 (1984); Harrell v. State, 253 Ga. 474, 321 S.E.2d 739 (1984); Smith v. State, 172 Ga. App. 6, 321 S.E.2d 771 (1984); Sprayberry v. State, 174 Ga. App. 574, 330 S.E.2d 731 (1985); Milford v. State, 178 Ga. App. 792, 344 S.E.2d 505 (1986); Baker v. State, 179 Ga. App. 802, 348 S.E.2d 128 (1986); Hunt v. State, 180 Ga. App. 103, 348 S.E.2d 467 (1986); Tucker v. Kemp, 802 F.2d 1293 (11th Cir. 1986); Louis v. State, 185 Ga. App. 472, 364 S.E.2d 607 (1988); Grant v. State, 185 Ga. App. 497, 364 S.E.2d 628 (1988); Smith v. State, 186 Ga. App. 303, 367 S.E.2d 573 (1988); Oller v. State, 187 Ga. App. 818, 371 S.E.2d 455 (1988); Polk v. State, 192 Ga. App. 888, 386 S.E.2d 682 (1989); Marshall v. State, 193 Ga. App. 314, 387 S.E.2d 602 (1989); Mantooth v. State, 197 Ga. App. 797, 399 S.E.2d 505 (1990); Hayes v. State, 261 Ga. 439, 405 S.E.2d 660 (1991); Edwards v. State, 200 Ga. App. 580, 408 S.E.2d 802 (1991); Bailey v. State, 200 Ga. App. 621, 409 S.E.2d 230 (1991); Brown v. State, 204 Ga. App. 176, 418 S.E.2d 776 (1992); Medlock v. State, 263 Ga. 246, 430 S.E.2d 754 (1993); Davis v. State, 209 Ga. App. 187, 433 S.E.2d 366 (1993); Remediation Servs., Inc. v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 209 Ga. App. 427, 433 S.E.2d 631 (1993); Rivers v. State, 265 Ga. 694, 461 S.E.2d 205 (1995); Wilkes v. State, 221 Ga. App. 390, 471 S.E.2d 332 (1996); Pope v. State, 221 Ga. App. 578, 472 S.E.2d 111 (1996); Ortiz v. State, 222 Ga. App. 432, 474 S.E.2d 300 (1996); Wyatt v. State, 267 Ga. 860, 485 S.E.2d 470 (1997); Joseph v. State, 231 Ga. App. 399, 498 S.E.2d 808 (1998); Perry v. State, 232 Ga. App. 484, 500 S.E.2d 923 (1998); Billups v. State, 234 Ga. App. 824, 507 S.E.2d 837 (1998); Brown v. State, 246 Ga. App. 517, 541 S.E.2d 112 (2000); Parker v. State, 276 Ga. 598, 581 S.E.2d 7 (2003); Hernandez v. State, 291 Ga. App. 562, 662 S.E.2d 325 (2008); Whatley v. State, 296 Ga. App. 72, 673 S.E.2d 510 (2009); Henderson v. State, 285 Ga. 240, 675 S.E.2d 28 (2009); Stolte v. Fagan, 291 Ga. 477, 731 S.E.2d 653 (2012); Johnson v. State, 293 Ga. 641, 748 S.E.2d 896 (2013).

Conduct of Counsel

No duty of defense counsel to request additional remedies. — Nowhere in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 is there a requirement for defense counsel to specifically request additional remedies after interposing an objection to the improper statements made by a prosecutor; to the contrary, the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 refers to the trial court's independent duty, after defense counsel's objection, to rebuke the prosecutor, give an appropriate curative instruction, or grant a mistrial in the event that the prosecutor has injected into the case prejudicial statements on matters outside of the evidence. O'Neal v. State, 288 Ga. 219, 702 S.E.2d 288 (2010).

Argument should be confined to facts and authorized inferences. — Counsel should confine counsel's argument to the facts and such authorized inferences arising from the facts as are properly before the court and the jury. Brown v. State, 57 Ga. App. 864, 197 S.E. 82 (1938).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in restricting the defendant's closing argument as the defendant attempted to inform the jurors about facts the defendant thought the jurors should know about, but were not in evidence and the law only permitted the defendant to discuss the facts and authorized inferences that flowed from the evidence properly before the jury. Brown v. State, 256 Ga. App. 603, 568 S.E.2d 727 (2002).

Voluntary statement of a witness differs from counsel's statements. — Voluntary statement made by a witness stands on a different basis with reference to a mistrial from that covered by this section, which has reference to the conduct of attorneys, who are officers of the court. Brown v. State, 118 Ga. App. 617, 165 S.E.2d 185 (1968).

Mistrial more likely if district attorney directly elicits improper remarks. — Mistrial is more likely to be the solution required in those instances when the solicitor (now district attorney) directly elicits the improper evidence than in those instances where the witness volunteers the testimony. Brown v. State, 118 Ga. App. 617, 165 S.E.2d 185 (1968).

Not every remark justifies reversal. — Not every remark of counsel, although the remark strains at the evidence, will justify reversal. Koza v. State, 158 Ga. App. 709, 282 S.E.2d 131 (1981).

Defendant's claim that the defense counsel was ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to object to evidence that the defendant's parental rights were terminated failed as the record did not reflect that such evidence was ever admitted; the state objected to the defendant's evidence showing that the children had moved from foster home to foster home on relevance grounds, asserting that the jury was not present to decide a parental termination case, and therefore did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75, which prohibits counsel from making statements of prejudicial matters not in evidence. Zepp v. State, 276 Ga. App. 466, 623 S.E.2d 569 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

There are two types of improper statements made in argument of counsel, to wit: statements that can be cured by the court's rebuking counsel, or giving needed instructions to the jury, or both, and irrelevant statements so inflammatory and prejudicial that the statement's injurious effect cannot be eradicated from the minds of the jurors by instruction from the court to disregard the statements. Hicks v. State, 196 Ga. 671, 27 S.E.2d 307 (1943); Washington v. State, 80 Ga. App. 415, 56 S.E.2d 119 (1949).

Attorneys should be allowed all reasonable latitude in the argument of cases to the jury, provided the attorneys do not go outside the facts legitimately appearing from the trial, and lug in extraneous matters as if those matters were a part of the case. Waller v. State, 80 Ga. App. 488, 56 S.E.2d 491 (1949).

Considerable latitude in imagery and illustration exists. — Solicitor general (now district attorney) may argue to the jury the necessity for enforcement of the law and may impress on the jury, with considerable latitude in imagery and illustration, the jury's responsibility in this regard. Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. 126, 269 S.E.2d 18 (1980); Stancil v. State, 158 Ga. App. 147, 279 S.E.2d 457 (1981); Williams v. State, 159 Ga. App. 772, 285 S.E.2d 232 (1981).

False logic does not call for mistrial or rebuke. — In determining whether an argument is improper, it should be borne in mind that flights of oratory and false logic do not call for mistrials or rebuke. It is the introduction of facts not in evidence that requires the application of such remedies. Hicks v. State, 196 Ga. 671, 27 S.E.2d 307 (1943).

Conduct of Counsel (Cont'd)

All reasonable latitude should be allowed attorneys in their argument to the jury on the facts and on inferences and deductions sustained by the evidence. It is not necessary that they be logical. False logic does not call for objections, rebukes, or mistrials. It is the introduction of facts not in the record which requires the application of such remedies. Cawthon v. State, 71 Ga. App. 497, 31 S.E.2d 64 (1944).

District attorney may draw illogical or unreasonable deductions. — Prosecution in closing argument is permitted to draw deductions from the evidence and these deductions may be illogical, unreasonable, or even absurd so long as there is evidence from which such deductions can be made. Abner v. State, 139 Ga. App. 600, 229 S.E.2d 83 (1976); Adams v. State, 260 Ga. 298, 392 S.E.2d 866 (1990); Rogers v. State, 205 Ga. App. 739, 423 S.E.2d 435 (1992).

It is permissible for the district attorney in argument to draw deductions from the evidence which may be illogical, unreasonable, or even absurd. Sharp v. State, 153 Ga. App. 486, 265 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

It is up to opposing counsel, not the court, to reply to illogical argument. — Fact that the deductions are illogical is a matter for reply by adverse counsel and not for rebuke by the court. Gray v. Cole, 20 Ga. 203 (1856); Taylor v. State, 83 Ga. 647, 10 S.E. 442 (1889); Owens v. State, 120 Ga. 209, 47 S.E. 545 (1904); Frank v. State, 141 Ga. 243, 80 S.E. 1016 (1914).

While counsel should not be permitted in argument to state facts which are not in evidence, it is permissible to draw deductions from the evidence, and the fact that the deductions may be illogical, unreasonable, or even absurd is a matter for reply by adverse counsel and not for rebuke by the court. Bradley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 865, 219 S.E.2d 451 (1975); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981); Murphy v. State, 203 Ga. App. 152, 416 S.E.2d 376 (1992).

Counsel should not state prejudicial facts not appearing from the evidence or not fairly deducible therefrom. Martin v. State, 10 Ga. App. 798, 74 S.E. 306 (1912); Pelham & H.R.R. v. Elliott, 11 Ga. App. 621, 75 S.E. 1062 (1912).

Portions of counsel's closing argument concerning a matter on which there was no evidence on the record were properly excluded from the jury's consideration upon objection from opposing counsel. Seabrooks v. State, 164 Ga. App. 747, 297 S.E.2d 745 (1982), aff'd, 251 Ga. 564, 308 S.E.2d 160 (1983).

Prosecutorial comment on defendant's failure to testify constitutes reversible error if: (1) there was a manifest intent to comment on the failure to testify; and (2) the remark was of such a character that the jury would naturally and necessarily take it to be a comment on the defendant's failure to testify. Japhet v. State, 176 Ga. App. 189, 335 S.E.2d 425 (1985).

Reference to defendant's silence. — Prosecutor's reference during the prosecutor's opening statement to the defendant's silence upon arrest did not require mistrial since the trial court admonished the prosecutor to stay away from the subject and otherwise cured the error. Cheney v. State, 233 Ga. App. 66, 503 S.E.2d 327 (1998).

Prosecutor's two improper comments on the defendant's pre-trial silence were not reversible error as the trial court took corrective measures after the first comment and the defendant failed to request a curative instruction or a mistrial after the second comment. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 69, 608 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 987, 126 S. Ct. 571, 163 L. Ed. 2d 478 (2005).

Because a prosecutor's conduct violated one of the most basic rules of prosecutorial procedure, specifically, producing documents in discovery showing that the defendant refused to speak with police and requested a lawyer after being advised of Miranda, and hence intentionally goading the defendant into moving for a mistrial, the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a plea in bar on double jeopardy grounds. Anderson v. State, 285 Ga. App. 166, 645 S.E.2d 647 (2007).

Mistrial was not warranted upon a motion made the day after the prosecutor's prefatory comments concerning the defendant's desire not to be interviewed were made; further, the defendant failed to make a contemporaneous objection to the prosecutor's comments and the jury was already aware from the officer's response during cross-examination that the defendant declined to make a statement. Tennyson v. State, 282 Ga. 92, 646 S.E.2d 219 (2007).

Reference to defendant's failure to rebut evidence of guilt. — Trial court did not err in refusing the defendant's motion for mistrial after the state started to comment in closing argument that the defendant had not rebutted the cell phone evidence that placed the defendant near decedent's residence on the morning decedent was killed as the state was not commenting on the defendant's right to remain silent, but instead was making reference to the defendant's stipulation as to the cell phone evidence; the comment was not improper since the state had the right to argue that a defendant failed to rebut certain evidence of guilt. Pullin v. State, 258 Ga. App. 37, 572 S.E.2d 722 (2002).

Because a prosecutor's comments were directed at defense counsel's failure to rebut or explain the state's evidence and the prosecutor made a permissible analogy, there was no prosecutorial misconduct; consequently, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial. Duffy v. State, 271 Ga. App. 668, 610 S.E.2d 620 (2005).

Prosecutor's comments during closing argument that the defendant's story was not credible and if the defendant was innocent then why did the defendant flee from the police were not comments on the defendant's exercise of the defendant's right to remain silent; a prosecutor's argument that evidence of guilt has not been contradicted or rebutted is permissible and is not a comment on the defendant's failure to testify. McClendon v. State, 287 Ga. App. 238, 651 S.E.2d 165 (2007).

Comment on defendant's "future dangerousness." — Although the statement made by the prosecutor in closing argument could be construed as a mention of the defendant's future dangerousness, and therefore improper, the prosecutor's argument, when taken as a whole, was not addressing that issue but rather seeking to explain the reasons for the victim's recantation at trial; therefore, the comment did not warrant an order granting a mistrial. Hambrick v. State, 278 Ga. App. 768, 629 S.E.2d 442 (2006).

Mistrial may be refused when the argument is merely illogical. Sable v. State, 14 Ga. App. 816, 82 S.E. 379 (1914); Phillips v. State, 149 Ga. 255, 99 S.E. 874 (1919).

Any reasonable inference may be drawn from evidence admitted without restriction as to the evidence's applicability to the issues involved. Smalls v. State, 105 Ga. App. 669, 31 S.E. 571 (1898); Holmes v. State, 7 Ga. App. 570, 67 S.E. 693 (1910); McLeod v. State, 22 Ga. App. 241, 95 S.E. 934 (1918).

If the remarks made by the prosecuting attorney during closing argument were logically inferable from the evidence presented, the presentation of the inferences as if the inferences were coming from the defendant did not amount to an impermissible comment upon the defendant's decision not to testify. George v. State, 260 Ga. 809, 400 S.E.2d 911 (1991).

Counsel is permitted, in the sound discretion of the court, to argue all reasonable inferences and deductions which may be drawn from the evidence. Fowler v. State, 201 Ga. App. 417, 411 S.E.2d 335 (1991).

Legitimacy of an inference is a question for the jury. Ramsey v. State, 92 Ga. 53, 17 S.E. 613 (1893).

Instruction by the court to limit comments strictly to what is in evidence does not improperly restrict the comments of counsel. Lancette v. State, 151 Ga. App. 740, 261 S.E.2d 405 (1979).

Surreptitious attempts to get facts not proven before the jury. — For counsel to attempt surreptitiously to get before the jury facts by way of supposition, which have not been proven, is highly reprehensible. The practice should be instantly repressed by the court, without waiting to be called upon by the opposite party. Grayhouse v. State, 65 Ga. App. 853, 16 S.E.2d 787 (1941).

State will not permit the prosecuting officer to use any unfair means in the trial to the prejudice of the accused. Grayhouse v. State, 65 Ga. App. 853, 16 S.E.2d 787 (1941).

Conduct of Counsel (Cont'd)

District attorney's duty to refrain from making unauthorized statements. — It is especially the duty of a solicitor (now district attorney) to cautiously refrain from making statements in the solicitor's (now district attorney) argument to the jury which are unauthorized, and which will tend to prejudice the jury against the defendant. Brown v. State, 57 Ga. App. 864, 197 S.E. 82 (1938).

Knowing use of illegal evidence by prosecution. — When a prosecuting attorney knowingly injects into evidence an illegal element to the prejudice of the defendant, a mistrial is often the only complete and satisfactory remedy. Brown v. State, 118 Ga. App. 617, 165 S.E.2d 185 (1968); Perry v. State, 154 Ga. App. 559, 269 S.E.2d 63 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Joiner v. State, 231 Ga. App. 61, 497 S.E.2d 642 (1998).

Counsel may not complain of error that counsel procured or aided. — Induced error is impermissible. Counsel cannot complain on appeal of an order or ruling that the counsel's own conduct procured or aided. Mosley v. State, 150 Ga. App. 802, 258 S.E.2d 608 (1979).

Improper remark of one counsel is no excuse for an improper reply thereto, when no objection was made against the latter. Bennett v. State, 86 Ga. 401, 12 S.E. 806, 22 Am. St. R. 465, 12 L.R.A. 449 (1890); Nixon v. State, 14 Ga. App. 261, 80 S.E. 513 (1914).

Remarks as to what is expected to be proved generally. — In making a preliminary statement to the jury of facts which the solicitor (now district attorney) intends or expects to prove, the solicitor (now district attorney) should confine remarks to facts which, under the rules of law governing the admissibility of evidence, the solicitor (now district attorney) will be allowed to prove. Gossett v. State, 6 Ga. App. 439, 65 S.E. 162 (1909).

In opening a case, it is not improper to state what the solicitor (now district attorney) expects to prove by a witness, and to argue reasons for the admission of such testimony. Corbitt v. State, 7 Ga. App. 13, 66 S.E. 152 (1909).

It is not improper to state what one intends to prove and to argue reasons for admission; a prosecutor may state a fact to clarify the circumstances surrounding the introduction of a document to which the defendants object, and may also recite what the prosecutor is trying to establish in response to an objection. Thayer v. State, 189 Ga. App. 321, 376 S.E.2d 199 (1988).

District attorney may not state to the jury the district attorney's personal belief in the defendant's guilt. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

Remark that evidence will be introduced which affords inference of guilt. — It is not improper for counsel in opening case to state that counsel will rely in part on proof of conduct affording an inference of guilt. White v. State, 127 Ga. 273, 56 S.E. 425 (1907).

Writing "guilty" on chalkboard. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the assistant district attorney to write "GUILTY" on the chalkboard during closing argument. Blue v. State, 170 Ga. App. 304, 316 S.E.2d 862 (1984).

Prosecution may discuss and criticize defendant's statement. — Prosecuting attorney has the right to discuss and criticize, within proper bounds, a defendant's statement, although the prosecuting attorney has no right to criticize the defendant's failure to make any statement at all. Fitzgerald v. State, 51 Ga. App. 636, 181 S.E. 186 (1935).

Statement by counsel for the state that counsel believes defendant to be guilty. — Prosecuting attorney, over objection, should not be permitted to express an opinion that the accused is guilty. Broznack v. State, 109 Ga. 514, 35 S.E. 123 (1900); Moore v. State, 10 Ga. App. 805, 74 S.E. 315 (1912).

It is improper for counsel for the state, on the trial of a criminal defendant, to state to the jury counsel's belief that the defendant is guilty. Forster v. State, 60 Ga. App. 598, 4 S.E.2d 498 (1939).

While a district attorney may draw conclusions from facts proven, it is improper for the district attorney to urge the district attorney's personal belief as to the defendant's guilt. Hoerner v. State, 246

Ga. 374, 271 S.E.2d 458 (1980).

Prosecution's statement of belief that defendant is guilty. — If the solicitor (now prosecuting attorney) states in the solicitor's argument that if the solicitor ever expressed an opinion, this case would be one that the solicitor would like to express the solicitor's opinion and that the solicitor thought the defendant was guilty, and the defendant moves for a mistrial on the ground that the solicitor has expressed the solicitor's opinion that the defendant was guilty, but the court merely overrules the motion, and neither rebukes the solicitor nor instructs the jury to disregard such argument, nor in any way expresses the court's disapproval, it is reversible error to refuse a new trial after a verdict of conviction. Forster v. State, 60 Ga. App. 598, 4 S.E.2d 498 (1939).

Defense counsel's statement that counsel believes defendant is innocent. — Court may charge the jury to disregard a statement by counsel for the defendant that defense counsel believes the defendant is innocent. Smith v. State, 95 Ga. 472, 20 S.E. 291 (1894).

Counsel's statement of belief as to witness' veracity is improper. — It is improper for counsel to state to the jury counsel's personal belief as to the veracity of a witness. Shirley v. State, 245 Ga. 616, 266 S.E.2d 218 (1980).

Counsel may urge the jury to deduce a witness's veracity from proven facts. Shirley v. State, 245 Ga. 616, 266 S.E.2d 218, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 879, 101 S. Ct. 227, 66 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1980).

Improbable statement of a witness may be commented upon. Cobb v. State, 27 Ga. 648 (1859).

Interest of a witness in the result of the trial may be commented upon. Moore v. State, 97 Ga. 759, 25 S.E. 362 (1896).

Credibility of a witness may be attacked in the concluding argument, although in the opening argument, counsel has not given notice of an intention to do so. Taffe v. State, 90 Ga. 459, 16 S.E. 204 (1892).

Disagreement between counsel as to testimony of witness. — If a disagreement arose between counsel as to the testimony of a witness, the judge may leave the matter to the recollection of the jury. Fort v. State, 3 Ga. App. 448, 60 S.E. 282 (1908).

Assumption that counsel's own testimony proven when testimony conflicts. — When the testimony is conflicting, counsel may assume that the facts testified to by counsel's witnesses were proven. Hatcher v. State, 18 Ga. 460 (1855).

Purpose and effect of impeaching evidence may be discussed. Memmler v. State, 75 Ga. 576 (1885).

Right of cross-examination is subject to limitations to prevent abuse. Green v. State, 242 Ga. 261, 249 S.E.2d 1 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 442 U.S. 95, 99 S. Ct. 2150, 60 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1979).

Control of the cross-examination of a witness is to a great degree within the discretion of the trial court and will not be controlled unless abused. Green v. State, 242 Ga. 261, 249 S.E.2d 1 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 442 U.S. 95, 99 S. Ct. 2150, 60 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1979).

Evidence as to silence of the accused at time of arrest. — Evidence as to silence on the part of the defendant at the time of the defendant's arrest should be excluded when objected to, for the defendant is then entitled to remain silent, and the prosecution may not use against the defendant the fact that the defendant stood mute or claimed the privilege. Newton v. State, 154 Ga. App. 98, 267 S.E.2d 641 (1980).

Reference to fact that prisoner did not make a statement. — Mistrial is required if there is a reference to the fact that the prisoner did not make a statement. Barker v. State, 127 Ga. 276, 56 S.E. 419 (1907); Griffin v. State, 3 Ga. App. 476, 60 S.E. 277 (1908).

Omission in the statement of the accused may be commented upon. Tolbert v. State, 12 Ga. App. 685, 78 S.E. 131 (1913).

Failure of the accused to produce witnesses to rebut evidence introduced by the state may be commented upon. Ponder v. State, 18 Ga. App. 727, 90 S.E. 376 (1916).

Argument of inferences to be drawn from defendant's failure to produce witnesses. — Although a prosecutor is prohibited from commenting on the defendant's failure to testify, a prosecutor can argue to the jury the inferences to be drawn from the defendant's failure to produce witnesses who are competent to testify and who allegedly would give evidence favorable to the defendant. Shirley v. State, 245 Ga. 616, 266 S.E.2d 218, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 879, 101 S. Ct. 227, 66 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1980).

Conduct of Counsel (Cont'd)

Mistrial may be refused when deductions from the evidence are admitted. Carraway v. State, 16 Ga. App. 161, 84 S.E. 615 (1915); Swearengen v. State, 18 Ga. App. 763, 90 S.E. 653 (1916).

Effect of prosecutor's inaccurate statement. — If the statement by the prosecutor, although inaccurate, is effectively shown by the defendant's incriminating admissions, the trial court does not err in overruling the motion for mistrial based on prosecutorial misconduct or in failing to rebuke the prosecutor. Barnes v. State, 244 Ga. 302, 260 S.E.2d 40 (1979).

Prosecutor's characterization of evidence as incriminating. — If appellant, convicted of aggravated assault with intent to rape, alleged that the trial court erred by denying the appellant's motion for a mistrial after the prosecutor referred to certain evidence as being incriminating, and the transcript showed the comment was made in the presence of the jury during argument on one of the appellant's objections and after the defense counsel referred to the evidence as being exculpatory, the court did not err in refusing to rely upon O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 because the evidence in question was admitted in evidence and, further, the comment was a reply to appellant's argument. Hawkins v. State, 195 Ga. App. 739, 395 S.E.2d 251 (1990).

Comment on defendant's plea of guilty to another crime. — Although technically speaking it is error for the solicitor general (now district attorney) to make a statement regarding the defendant's guilty plea to a different crime, it is not sufficient for reversal for the judge to have refused to declare a mistrial when defendant admits on the stand the crime in question. Thornton v. State, 94 Ga. App. 169, 94 S.E.2d 94 (1956).

Closing commentary on defense witnesses' absence proper. — Prosecutor's comment in closing argument concerning the absence of foretold defense witnesses was not an improper character attack as the comment was confined to the written statement properly admitted into evidence by the defense. Alexander v. State, 263 Ga. 474, 435 S.E.2d 187 (1993).

Announcement that witness is to be prosecuted for same offense. — It is improper for a solicitor general (now district attorney) to announce in the hearing of the jury that the solicitor intends to prosecute a witness for the same offense. Lewis v. State, 89 Ga. 396, 15 S.E. 489 (1892).

Placing of defendant's character before jury when case does not involve it. — It is error to allow, over objection of the defendant, prejudicial and irrelevant matter to go before the jury in a trial, which tends to place the defendant's character and conduct before the jury, if the nature of the case does not involve such character. Smith v. State, 118 Ga. App. 464, 164 S.E.2d 238 (1968).

Prosecution's statement that defendant's character may not be discussed unless put in issue. — Whether or not the statement of a solicitor general (now district attorney), made to the jury in the solicitor's argument, that the solicitor is not allowed to discuss the character of the defendant unless the solicitor puts the solicitor's character in issue, when the solicitor has not, is in any respect prejudicial and harmful to the defendant, a prompt instruction by the court that the jury should disregard the argument thus made, and the further clarification by the court of the law on character, would render the statement completely harmless. Harris v. State, 212 Ga. 186, 91 S.E.2d 492 (1956).

Comment on bar against compelling defendant's spouse to testify. — It is erroneous and prejudicial to the defendant to allow state's counsel to state to the jury that if the law of Georgia would permit counsel to call the defendant's spouse as a witness, counsel would do so. Askins v. State, 210 Ga. 532, 81 S.E.2d 471 (1954).

Defendant's manner of dress at trial. — Prosecution's argument as to the conduct of a defendant in the defendant's manner of dress during the defendant's trial is not such improper conduct as to require a reversal of the trial judge in refusing a mistrial, especially when the judge makes a statement to the jury that the solicitor's (now district attorney's) argument is out of order and is not to be considered. Locklear v. State, 52 Ga. App. 87, 182 S.E. 534 (1935).

If district attorney makes improper personal reference to defense counsel, the trial court errs in not taking remedial action. Estep v. State, 129 Ga. App. 909, 201 S.E.2d 809 (1973).

Statement of facts in reply to criticism of opposing counsel. — Counsel, in reply to a criticism by opposing counsel, has no right to state facts by way of explanation of counsel's own conduct disclosed by the evidence. Hodgkins v. State, 89 Ga. 761, 15 S.E. 695 (1892).

Remark that court could have directed a not guilty verdict were it not for state's case. — It is error requiring the grant of a new trial for a trial court to simply overrule, without remedial instructions to the jury, the defendant's objection to the solicitor general's (now district attorney) use of the following language in the solicitor's concluding argument to the jury: "If a case had not been made out against the defendant, then the court could and would have directed a verdict of not guilty." Washington v. State, 80 Ga. App. 415, 56 S.E.2d 119 (1949).

Certified copy of the brief of the evidence may be read. Cribb v. State, 118 Ga. 316, 45 S.E. 396 (1903); Hanley v. State, 128 Ga. 24, 57 S.E. 236 (1907).

Reading from law reports, see Glover v. State, 15 Ga. App. 44, 82 S.E. 602 (1914); Nix v. State, 149 Ga. 304, 100 S.E. 197 (1919).

Counsel may not read briefs of literary or historical matter which perform the office of evidence, and do not merely serve to illustrate the facts. Quattlebaum v. State, 119 Ga. 433, 46 S.E. 677 (1904).

Quotation by district attorney of passages from the Bible. — In the absence of any motion for a mistrial, or the invoking of some ruling or instruction by the court with reference thereto, or even of any objection at the time, there is no merit in the ground of the motion for new trial complaining for the first time of the argument of the solicitor general (now district attorney) quoting passages from the Bible as to the punishment for homicide. Wheat v. State, 187 Ga. 480, 1 S.E.2d 1 (1939).

For case in which prosecution repeatedly asked certain questions of a witness, see Loughridge v. State, 181 Ga. 261, 182 S.E. 12 (1935).

Remarks aimed toward popular prejudice. — Court should not treat remarks aimed toward popular prejudice as a deduction from the evidence, and hence a ground of a motion for new trial failing to aver that remarks of this character are not supported by the evidence would not be defective. Brown v. State, 110 Ga. App. 401, 138 S.E.2d 741 (1964).

For remark that conviction would be a lesson to the general public, see Collins v. State, 86 Ga. App. 157, 71 S.E.2d 99 (1952).

Reference to historical figures. — Prosecutor did not err during the defendant's trial on a charge of armed robbery by making reference to the defendant's name and stating that "Jesse James lived up to his name." James v. State, 265 Ga. App. 689, 595 S.E.2d 364 (2004).

Use of crime statistics to argue for strict enforcement of the law. — On the trial of an indictment for murder, it is error to allow the solicitor general (now district attorney), over objections of defendant's counsel, to argue to the jury statistics compiled by "reliable authorities" showing the number of murders committed in Georgia in a year and to argue to the jury in consequence thereof to strictly enforce the law in the case on trial and to impose the capital penalty. Fair v. State, 168 Ga. 409, 148 S.E. 144 (1929).

Comment or prevalence of crime in the county. — Counsel should not in counsel's argument refer to the prevalence of crime in that part of the county where the jury is organized. Thomas v. State, 129 Ga. 419, 59 S.E. 246 (1907).

Arguments dealing with community safety and general crime prevention. — Closing arguments by the district attorney which appeal to the safety of the community and general prevention of crime are proper. Burke v. State, 153 Ga. App. 769, 266 S.E.2d 549 (1980).

Conduct of Counsel (Cont'd)

Comment by prosecution that "too many pardons have been granted in Georgia." — See Hyde v. State, 196 Ga. 475, 26 S.E.2d 744 (1943).

Counsel's repeated use of a racial epithet, even if counsel meant this line of argument as a trial tactic on the defendant's behalf, should have been stopped with a strong reprimand by the trial court because failure to reprimand or appropriately instruct the jury gave the imprimatur of judicial tolerance to the factor of race being at least subliminally relevant to consideration of guilt or innocence. Kornegay v. State, 174 Ga. App. 279, 329 S.E.2d 601 (1985).

Improper questions also subject to court's control. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 has been applied not only in situations when counsel have made improper statements or prejudicial remarks in the presence of the jury during a trial, but it also has been applied when the remarks are made in the form of a question. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983).

If irrelevant and prejudicial information inferable from an improper question of the prosecutor was jettisoned, and the jury was immediately instructed that a question does not constitute evidence, the directives of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 were obeyed. Gutierrez v. State, 235 Ga. App. 878, 510 S.E.2d 570 (1998).

Argument that death penalty set aside if not warranted. — Prosecutor's argument, over objection, that the jury should impose the death penalty and assume that the death penalty will be set aside if not warranted, absent curative instructions, requires reversal. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Conduct during closing argument involving gun in murder trial. — In a prosecution for murder, the victim's gun was properly in evidence and thus was a proper subject for the prosecutor's final argument, and the prosecutor's conclusion that the victim could hardly have missed the appellant with a pistol shot at such close range was within the considerable latitude in imagery and illustration granted a district attorney in final argument. Williams v. State, 254 Ga. 508, 330 S.E.2d 353 (1985), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 891, 109 S. Ct. 225, 102 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1988).

Asking jury to speculate as to murder victim's wishes. — In a prosecution for murder, a prosecutor's demonstration during closing argument that a small person could easily pull the trigger of the victim's alleged pistol constituted the introduction of new evidence to respond to the appellant's evidence that the trigger was extremely difficult to pull. This was error because the appellant had no chance to rebut the prosecutor's demonstration that could easily have been performed during trial when both sides could have fleshed out the evidence's implications thoroughly. Williams v. State, 254 Ga. 508, 330 S.E.2d 353 (1985), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 891, 109 S. Ct. 225, 102 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1988).

Trial court did not err in sustaining an objection to defense counsel's closing argument in which defense counsel asked the jury to speculate whether the deceased victim would have wanted the victim's friend (defendant) convicted of murder, since there was no evidence that the victim would not have wanted the defendant to be convicted, nor was it a necessary inference from evidence of any friendship. Hawkins v. State, 260 Ga. 138, 390 S.E.2d 836 (1990).

Comment on seating arrangement at defense counsel table not error. — Prosecuting attorney's remark regarding the alleged implications of the seating arrangements at the defense counsel table approaches but is not outside the parameters of the wide latitude accorded counsel for the state and does not impermissibly allude to facts which are not in evidence. Carpenter v. State, 167 Ga. App. 634, 307 S.E.2d 19 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 79, 310 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Prosecutor's remarks on potential future drug victims not error. — Prosecutor's hypothecation to jurors that student observers in the courtroom were potential victims of defendant's drug traffic did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Black v. State, 167 Ga. App. 204, 305 S.E.2d 837 (1983).

Prosecutor's comments on the potential effects of crack cocaine use were reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence and did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Hunt v. State, 219 Ga. App. 741, 466 S.E.2d 894 (1995).

Prosecutor's comment to jurors that the jurors could take part in the war against drug trafficking by convicting the defendant did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Black v. State, 167 Ga. App. 204, 305 S.E.2d 837 (1983).

Reference to purchases made with proceeds of crime. — When there was testimony in evidence that the defendant had purchased a number of items with the proceeds of the crime, the state was entitled to refer to these purchases in the state's closing argument notwithstanding that the items themselves were not admitted in evidence. Lee v. State, 258 Ga. 82, 365 S.E.2d 99, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 879, 109 S. Ct. 195, 102 L. Ed. 2d 165 (1988).

Prosecutor's comments that "you get an attorney." — Prosecutor's comments that in this country, "you get an attorney," were ambiguous as to whether the defendant's counsel was appointed instead of retained, and did not constitute statements of prejudicial matters which were not in evidence as would be precluded by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Ham v. State, 303 Ga. App. 232, 692 S.E.2d 828 (2010), overruled in part by Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Argument that prosecutor's office carefully considered death penalty. — If the prosecutor told the jury that the prosecutor's office made a careful decision that this case warranted seeking the death penalty and went on to describe why that decision was made, focusing on the individual characteristics of this crime and this defendant, allowing the jury to assess for itself the appropriateness of a death sentence, the trial judge's corrective instructions were sufficient to counter any unfairness that might have otherwise resulted. Tucker v. Kemp, 802 F.2d 1293 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 911, 107 S. Ct. 1359, 94 L. Ed. 2d 529 (1987).

Prosecutor's closing argument which called the jury's attention to certain notorious cases involving violent criminal acts was within permissible bounds. Bell v. State, 208 Ga. App. 201, 430 S.E.2d 124 (1993).

Prosecutor's statements during closing argument were within the wide leeway granted to counsel to argue all reasonable inferences from the evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75(c), including that a former girlfriend whom the defendant forced to purchase a gun was fearful of the surroundings and that another girlfriend was a battered woman, such that there was no cause to grant a new trial. Varner v. State, 285 Ga. 300, 676 S.E.2d 189 (2009).

Prosecutor's comments did not warrant mistrial. — See Jones v. State, 250 Ga. 166, 296 S.E.2d 598 (1982).

Although the prosecuting attorney referred to facts not in evidence during closing argument, the query merely sought to raise possible explanations of the fact that the burglary car was not the defendant's car, and the suggestion that the jury could deduce that the defendant was using a car other than the defendant's own was a fair comment and not improper. Murphy v. State, 203 Ga. App. 152, 416 S.E.2d 376 (1992).

Even if a prosecutor's remarks about the defendant's credibility and statement that if the jury convicted the defendant of a lesser charge the jury "would be letting this defendant off the hook" could be interpreted as improper, the court held it was highly improbable in light of the evidence that the remarks changed the result of the trial, and any error in the prosecutor's argument was therefore harmless. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

Prosecutor did not violate a prior stipulation in making a reasonable inference from the evidence that either the defendant or the defendant's accomplice could have stepped in the victim's blood and left the footprint while they were leaving the victim's house after the murder; the statement did not violate the state's narrow stipulation which merely eliminated a single pair of the defendant's boots as the source of the footprint, and there was no stipulation or evidence that the seized boots were the ones the defendant wore the night the crime was committed. Messick v. State, 276 Ga. 528, 580 S.E.2d 213, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 880, 124 S. Ct. 302, 157 L. Ed. 2d 144 (2003).

Conduct of Counsel (Cont'd)

Comments about outstanding warrants. — Trial court did not err under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 in failing to rebuke the prosecutor and declare a mistrial after the court allowed the prosecutor to, in violation of a previous ruling, elicit testimony about whether there were outstanding warrants against the defendant at the time the defendant was arrested; the cited exchange did not demonstrate the alleged misconduct as the exchange showed the state's careful questioning of the witness in order to avoid disclosing whether there were such warrants. Denny v. State, 281 Ga. 114, 636 S.E.2d 500 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for mistrial on the ground that the state made improper arguments in closing because the challenged comments referred to evidence in the case, which was the defendant's refusal to submit to testing and other manifestations of impairment, and, thus, were not improper under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75; considering the strength of the state's evidence, it was highly unlikely that the prosecutor's closing argument contributed to the guilty verdict. Crusselle v. State, 303 Ga. App. 879, 694 S.E.2d 707 (2010).

Requiring slides from opening argument be taken down. — Trial court did not deprive the defendant of a fair trial by failing to declare a mistrial sua sponte after the prosecutor showed the jury slides during the prosecutor's opening statement because when the defendant objected, the trial court took immediate corrective action, ordering that the slides be taken down, and the defendant did not seek additional relief in the form of a curative instruction or a mistrial; the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the slides were inappropriately argumentative for opening statement, and the trial court instructed the jury before opening statements and again after the close of the evidence that the prosecutor's opening statements were not evidence. Dolphy v. State, 288 Ga. 705, 707 S.E.2d 56 (2011).

Prosecutor's comments about defendant's obscene gestures. — Trial court discharged the court's duties properly when the court allowed the prosecutor to state, during closing arguments, that the defendant had made an obscene gesture to someone in the courtroom during the course of the trial because the defendant offered no evidence that the gesture was incorrectly attributed to the defendant. Jeffers v. State, 290 Ga. 311, 721 S.E.2d 86 (2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant a mistrial because there was no indication that either the jury or the trial court heard the prosecutor's remark that the defendant was "swaying" during the defendant's horizontal gaze nystagmus test nor was the remark recorded; the trial court explained to the jury, both in the court's preliminary and closing instructions, that evidence consisted only of witness testimony and exhibits and that the jurors were to decide the case for themselves, based solely on the testimony heard from the witness stand and any exhibits admitted into evidence. Travis v. State, 314 Ga. App. 280, 724 S.E.2d 15 (2012).

Improper question to defense witness was harmless error. — Question posed to a defense witness asking whether the witness was aware that the defendant told the defendant's mother "I didn't shoot that man, mama, three times, I only shot him twice" was improper and warranted a rebuke from the trial court; however, the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 69, 608 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 987, 126 S. Ct. 571, 163 L. Ed. 2d 478 (2005).

Requirement that Objection or Motion Be Made

Generally, an objection is necessary. Scarborough v. State, 46 Ga. 26 (1872); Kearney v. State, 101 Ga. 803, 29 S.E. 127, 65 Am. St. R. 344 (1897); O'Dell v. State, 120 Ga. 152, 47 S.E. 577 (1904).

Because no motion for mistrial was made, the court did not err in failing to direct a mistrial for improper remarks. Beach v. State, 258 Ga. 700, 373 S.E.2d 210 (1988).

In order to secure appellate review of a purported violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75, it is necessary to object in the trial court to the allegedly prejudicial comment at the time the comment is made. Johnson v. State, 198 Ga. App. 316, 401 S.E.2d 331 (1991); Earnest v. State, 262 Ga. 494, 422 S.E.2d 188 (1992); Dix v. State, 246 Ga. App. 338, 540 S.E.2d 294 (2000).

When an improper argument is made, the adversary must act. — Defendant's counsel's failure to object or to move for a mistrial upon the prosecutor's improper, impermissible, and prejudicial use of similar transaction evidence of uncharged crimes was not within the realm of being a reasonable trial tactic as such statements were not only improper, the statements were pervasive and harmful to the defendant's case. Accordingly, counsel was ineffective in failing to request a mistrial. Collier v. State, 266 Ga. App. 345, 596 S.E.2d 795 (2004).

When the defendant said the trial court erred because the court took no corrective action when the prosecuting attorney alluded to facts not in evidence when questioning the victim, the defendant was not entitled to appellate review of this issue as no objection was made in the trial court at the time the allegedly prejudicial comment was made. Jackson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 317, 609 S.E.2d 643 (2004).

Party may not take chance on favorable verdict and complain later. — Party cannot during the trial ignore what the party thinks to be an injustice, take the party's chances on a favorable verdict, and complain later. Joyner v. State, 208 Ga. 435, 67 S.E.2d 221 (1951); Johnson v. State, 226 Ga. 511, 175 S.E.2d 840 (1970).

Waiver of the irregularity will result unless objection or motion is made. Fuller v. State, 10 Ga. App. 34, 72 S.E. 515 (1911); Livingston v. State, 17 Ga. App. 136, 86 S.E. 449 (1915); Nix v. State, 149 Ga. 304, 100 S.E. 197 (1919).

Judge is not required to grant a mistrial on the judge's own motion if defense counsel waives an objection and fails to specify what further form of relief, if any, is desired. Vernon v. State, 152 Ga. App. 616, 263 S.E.2d 503 (1979).

Actions which counsel may take in response to improper argument. — When improper argument is made by counsel, counsel for the opposite party, in order to make the action of the judge in reference to the improper argument the basis for a review, may object to the argument, and rest simply on the objection. If the court fails to take any notice of the objection and allows the argument to proceed, this conduct may be reviewed. Brooks v. State, 55 Ga. App. 227, 189 S.E. 852 (1937); Washington v. State, 80 Ga. App. 415, 56 S.E.2d 119 (1949).

When improper argument to the jury is made by an attorney for one of the parties, it is necessary in order to make the argument a basis for review that opposing counsel should make objection to such argument or invoke some ruling or instruction with reference thereto by the court, but it is not essential that a motion for mistrial should be made. Brooks v. State, 55 Ga. App. 227, 189 S.E. 852 (1937); Mims v. State, 188 Ga. 702, 4 S.E.2d 831 (1939).

In addition to making an objection, counsel may move for appropriate instructions to the jury, or for a reprimand or rebuke of counsel in order that the jury may be impressed with the grave nature of the impropriety which has taken place, or, if the impropriety is of a very grave character, counsel may move for a mistrial, and upon the refusal of the court to do that which ought to have been done on the motion made, whatever the motion's nature may be, the conduct of the judge will then be a subject for review. Washington v. State, 80 Ga. App. 415, 56 S.E.2d 119 (1949).

When improper argument is made to the jury by an attorney for one of the parties, it is necessary, in order to make the argument a basis for review, that opposing counsel make proper objection to the argument at the time made or invoke some ruling or instruction from the court respecting the argument, either by way of reprimanding counsel, or of instructing the jury to disregard the argument, or of declaring a mistrial. Joyner v. State, 208 Ga. 435, 67 S.E.2d 221 (1951).

Requirement that Objection or Motion Be Made (Cont'd)

Effect of objection to improper argument and of ruling thereon generally. — Simple objection to an improper argument is in effect a request of counsel for the complaining party for the court to require opposing counsel to desist from further improper argument. The effect of a proper ruling by the court on a simple objection also is to inform the jury as to whether or not the argument was improper. When the argument is improper and the court rules in effect that the argument is not, such ruling may be prejudicial. Johns v. State, 79 Ga. App. 429, 54 S.E.2d 142 (1949).

Mere objection to improper argument is insufficient to invoke a ruling. — Mere objection to improper argument of counsel, without more, is not sufficient to invoke a ruling of the court. In the absence of a specific motion either for a mistrial, or that the jury be instructed to disregard the argument, it is not error to fail to grant a mistrial or to instruct the jury. Holt v. State, 147 Ga. App. 186, 248 S.E.2d 223 (1978); Carroll v. State, 147 Ga. App. 332, 248 S.E.2d 702 (1978); Hinton v. State, 233 Ga. App. 213, 504 S.E.2d 49 (1998).

Failure to object to closing argument. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a portion of the state's closing argument because counsel stated that the prosecutor was heard using the newspaper analogy in other cases and counsel strategically decided not to object, choosing instead to comment on the prosecution's theatrics in closing as a way to turn the prosecutor's remarks to the appellant's advantage. Smith v. State, 296 Ga. 731, 770 S.E.2d 610 (2015).

Trial court did not err in failing to give a curative instruction following the state's allegedly improper closing argument because trial counsel did not object to the prosecutor's closing argument as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75; and the record did not support the defendant's contention that the prosecutor improperly implied that the defendant's trial counsel was under the influence of drugs. Clary v. State, 344 Ga. App. 710, 812 S.E.2d 31 (2018).

To the extent that the defendant's appellate brief may be read to challenge the prosecutor's statements, the defendant waived any such claim by failing to object and, regardless, the most natural reading of the statements was that the prosecutor pivoted away from relying on facts not in evidence and instead raised an unobjectionable (if inartful) argument about the illegality of the defendant's and the co-defendant's actions. Riley v. State, No. A20A1376, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 431 (July 21, 2020).

Mere objection which is sustained does not constitute a motion for mistrial. Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 398, 280 S.E.2d 419 (1981).

Failure to renew request for admonishment or to challenge curative instruction. — Regarding the prosecutor's statement during closing argument that the defendant had stated that the defendant was a pimp because the defendant did not renew the defendant's request for an admonishment or otherwise challenge the curative instruction given by the court as inadequate, any issue concerning the propriety of the prosecutor's comments was waived; and, if defense counsel believed that the trial court's curative action in sustaining the objection was insufficient, defense counsel should have sought additional relief. Mackey v. State, 342 Ga. App. 791, 805 S.E.2d 596 (2017).

Improper remarks must be properly excepted to in order to warrant new trial. — If defendant fails to properly except to allegedly improper remarks of judge and solicitor general (now district attorney) during examination of witnesses by a motion for mistrial, the allegedly improper remarks are insufficient to support a motion for new trial. Simmons v. State, 181 Ga. 761, 184 S.E. 291 (1936).

If no objection is made to solicitor's (now district attorney's) comment on defendant's failure to testify, the grant of a new trial is not required. Lunsford v. State, 60 Ga. App. 537, 4 S.E.2d 112 (1939).

Unless the court's attention is called to improper arguments and a ruling invoked upon the trial, the point may not be raised in a motion for new trial. Such a motion presents nothing for decision by the Supreme Court when no objection is shown to have been made at the trial. Morris v. State, 200 Ga. 471, 37 S.E.2d 345 (1946); Hudson v. State, 250 Ga. 479, 299 S.E.2d 531 (1983).

If the trial judge's attention is not called to improper argument during the trial, it will not constitute a good ground of a motion for new trial. Morris v. State, 200 Ga. 471, 37 S.E.2d 345 (1946).

New trial is not required on account of improper argument unless a ruling thereon be invoked by timely objection. Dix v. State, 153 Ga. App. 868, 267 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Defendant's motion for mistrial was properly denied since in the trial court no motion for mistrial was made specifically based upon ground which is asserted on appeal to have been violative of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Whatley v. State, 165 Ga. App. 13, 299 S.E.2d 87 (1983).

Trial court did not err by allowing the state to make improper and prejudicial comments during the defendant's trial on drug-related offenses as defense counsel only objected to the prosecutor's statement recounting defendant's previous conviction and did not object to the two questions posed by the prosecutor, which questions implied that the prosecutor personally believed that the defendant was guilty of the charged offense. Thus, the issue of whether those two questions constituted improper remarks was waived on appeal. Heard v. State, 291 Ga. App. 550, 662 S.E.2d 310 (2008).

Because the defendant either failed to object or had an objection sustained as to questions or statements made by the prosecutor, there was no ruling by the trial court that was adverse to the defendant for the court of appeals to review; the court of appeals will not reverse a conviction based on alleged prosecutorial misconduct when the defendant did not take proper exception or when the defendant received a favorable ruling on any objection or requested corrective action. Willis v. State, 309 Ga. App. 414, 710 S.E.2d 616 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1356, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 70 (Ga. 2012).

Defendant's argument that the trial court erred in finding that the court did not have a sua sponte duty to intervene and prevent the prosecutor's statement regarding the codefendants' pleas of guilty was waived because no objection was made during trial. Tucker v. State, 313 Ga. App. 537, 722 S.E.2d 139 (2012).

Defendant waived the argument that the trial court erred in allowing the prosecutor to state, during closing arguments, that the defendant had made an obscene gesture to someone in the courtroom during the course of the trial because there was no contemporaneous objection to the argument. Jeffers v. State, 290 Ga. 311, 721 S.E.2d 86 (2012).

Necessary allegations in motion for new trial. — Motion for a new trial based upon a remark, alleged to be improper and prejudicial to the rights of the defendant, which was made by the solicitor (now district attorney) in the solicitor's argument to the jury should allege that the movant made a motion for a mistrial before the verdict was rendered, or that the court refused to grant a mistrial, or that it is probable that the injury was not eradicated by the instructions to the jury to disregard the remarks. Meadow v. State, 45 Ga. App. 240, 163 S.E. 915 (1932).

Special ground for new trial complaining of an alleged improper and prejudicial statement made by the solicitor (now district attorney) during the trial and in the presence of the jury which fails to show or allege that a motion to declare a mistrial was made, or that any objection whatsoever to the statement was made to the court at the time, or subsequently, during the trial fails to show any error of commission or omission by the court. Dukes v. State, 57 Ga. App. 835, 197 S.E. 69 (1938).

Improper remarks to be considered on appeal must be properly excepted to. — Alleged improper statements made by the solicitor general (now district attorney) in the presence of the jury, and testimony of a witness, neither of which is objected to upon the trial, will not be considered by the Supreme Court. Aycock v. State, 188 Ga. 551, 4 S.E.2d 221 (1939).

To enforce by review the performance of the duty imposed by this section upon the trial judge, the law in the form of a rule of procedure requiring an objection during the trial must be observed. Morris v. State, 200 Ga. 471, 37 S.E.2d 345 (1946).

Requirement that Objection or Motion Be Made (Cont'd)

Contentions may not be raised for the first time on appeal. Mayfield v. State, 153 Ga. App. 459, 265 S.E.2d 366 (1980).

Defendant failed to object to any statements made by the prosecution that allegedly commented on matters not admitted into evidence in the defendant's child molestation and sexual battery trial; therefore, the defendant waived the right to argue about those statements pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 on appeal. Carson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 21, 576 S.E.2d 12 (2002), overruled on other grounds, Watson v. State, 297 Ga. 718, 777 S.E.2d 677 (2015).

Because the overwhelming evidence presented against the defendant supported the convictions, and the defendant failed to assert a timely and contemporaneous objection to the prosecutor's opening statement comments, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motions for a new trial and a mistrial. Brooks v. State, 284 Ga. App. 762, 644 S.E.2d 891 (2007).

Improper remarks must be subject of motion for reprimand. — Appellate court will not reverse the judgment of the trial court overruling a motion for mistrial on the ground that the court in overruling the motion failed to reprimand the solicitor (now district attorney) for an improper question since no request was made that the solicitor be reprimanded and the objectionable query was never answered by the witness. Nelson v. State, 92 Ga. App. 746, 90 S.E.2d 91 (1955).

Improper remarks are not ground for reversal if court's attention not called thereto. — If the solicitor (now district attorney) in the course of argument uses certain language which is calculated to excite prejudice against the defendant, but it does not appear that the attention of the court was called thereto or any ruling was invoked on the subject, either by way of reprimanding counsel, or of instructing the jury, or of declaring a mistrial, such impropriety in argument will not furnish a ground for a reversal by the Supreme Court. Benton v. State, 185 Ga. 254, 194 S.E. 166 (1937).

No duty to reprimand counsel absent motion. — When the defendant's objection to a question by the prosecution was sustained but there was no motion for mistrial or rebuke of counsel, it was not the court's duty to reprimand counsel without such a motion. Phillips v. State, 230 Ga. 444, 197 S.E.2d 720 (1973).

Trial court was not required sua sponte to prevent the state from making improper remarks during the state's closing argument because the defendant did not object to the closing argument; O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 only requires the judge to act when counsel makes a timely objection. Tidwell v. State, 306 Ga. App. 307, 701 S.E.2d 920 (2010), overruled on other grounds, White v. State, 305 Ga. 111, 823 S.E.2d 794, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 66 (2019).

Failure to object to reference to confession which is not in evidence. — See Mims v. State, 188 Ga. 702, 4 S.E.2d 831 (1939).

Error in failing to do more than caution prosecutor deemed waived. — Because the defendant did not move for a mistrial or curative instructions at any point in the trial, the contention that the trial court erred in failing to do more than caution the assistant district attorney to comply with the court's ruling was deemed waived. Tennyson v. State, 282 Ga. 92, 646 S.E.2d 219 (2007).

Defendant must renew objection or motion for mistrial if court's action unsatisfactory to request further jury instructions. — If the defendant's counsel deems the instruction or admonition to the jury, plus the reprimand or the rebuke of offending counsel, inadequate to remove the harmful effect, it is incumbent on the defendant to request further instructions or renew the defendant's motion for a mistrial in order to preserve a basis for appeal. Pitts v. State, 141 Ga. App. 845, 234 S.E.2d 682 (1977).

If the defendant is not satisfied with the court's action in response to the improper question or remark of prosecuting counsel, it is incumbent upon the defendant to renew an objection and motion for mistrial. The defendant's failure to do so precludes complaint on appeal. Delaney v. State, 154 Ga. App. 772, 270 S.E.2d 48

(1980); Barksdale v. State, 161 Ga. App. 155, 291 S.E.2d 18 (1982).

Failure to renew objections and motion for mistrial after corrective instructions makes the denial of the motion for mistrial not subject to review. Whitaker v. State, 246 Ga. 163, 269 S.E.2d 436 (1980).

Rebuke of Counsel, Instruction of Jury, or Grant of Motion by Court

Duty of judge to prevent improper argument generally. — It is only when prejudicial matters which are not in evidence are stated in the argument that it becomes the duty of the court to interpose and prevent, or to hear objections and rebuke counsel, or to instruct the jury, or to declare a mistrial. Hicks v. State, 196 Ga. 671, 27 S.E.2d 307 (1943).

This section forbids improper arguments and imposes a duty upon the trial judge to interpose and prevent such arguments. Morris v. State, 200 Ga. 471, 37 S.E.2d 345 (1946).

It is the duty of the court, with or without objection, to interpose, prevent, and rebuke improper argument, and to endeavor by proper instructions to remove from the minds of the jury improper impressions made by unfair argument. Josey v. State, 89 Ga. App. 215, 79 S.E.2d 64 (1953).

This section places an affirmative duty upon the trial judge to prevent on the judge's own motion argument by counsel calculated to invoke prejudice against the adverse party. Brown v. State, 110 Ga. App. 401, 138 S.E.2d 741 (1964).

Trial court has a duty, even without a motion therefor, to see that the trial is fairly conducted, and when improper remarks are made in the presence of the jury, it is the absolute duty of the judge to intervene and stop it and by all needful instructions remove the improper impressions which the state's counsel has sought to create in the minds of the jurors. Winget v. State, 138 Ga. App. 433, 226 S.E.2d 608, overruled on other grounds, Quick v. State, 139 Ga. App. 440, 228 S.E.2d 592 (1976).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 requires that when statements of prejudicial matters not in evidence are made the court must interpose, and the court shall also rebuke counsel and give such instructions as will remove the improper impression, or, if necessary, grant a mistrial if the plaintiff's attorney is the offender. Morris v. State, 160 Ga. App. 505, 287 S.E.2d 405 (1981).

If counsel makes improper remarks, the court has a duty to rebuke counsel so as to remove the improper impression or give adequate instructions to the jury so as to remove the prejudicial effect of the remark. However, the remark must both have been heard by the jury and not go to matters in evidence. Jordan v. State, 166 Ga. App. 417, 304 S.E.2d 522 (1983).

Questions and responses alluding to prior arrests impermissibly placed a defendant's character in issue, and since the trial court failed to take any corrective action in fulfillment of the court's duty defendant was denied a fair trial. Richardson v. State, 199 Ga. App. 10, 403 S.E.2d 877 (1991).

Trial court erred by failing to fulfill the court's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 to rebuke the prosecutor and instruct the jury in order to remove any improper impression that could have been left in the jury's' minds, and the court of appeals erred in concluding that the defendant waived review of the defendant's claim that the trial court erred by failing to give a curative instruction after the defendant objected to the state's closing argument by failing to obtain a ruling on the defendant's request for a curative instruction; the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 speaks in terms of the trial court's duty to give a curative instruction when a proper objection is made to the state's introduction of improper argument on matters that are not in evidence, and a mere objection is sufficient to preserve the issue for appellate review. O'Neal v. State, 288 Ga. 219, 702 S.E.2d 288 (2010).

Statement by counsel that counsel expects to prove patently inadmissible matters. — While technically this section applies to argument by counsel on matters not in evidence, the same harm results if counsel makes the statement that counsel expects to prove patently inadmissible matters before the introduction of evidence, and it is as much the duty of the court upon objection made to rebuke counsel and by all needful and proper instructions to the jury endeavor to remove the improper impression from their minds, or to grant a motion for mistrial. Pilcher v. State, 91 Ga. App. 428, 85 S.E.2d 618 (1955).

Rebuke of Counsel, Instruction of Jury, or Grant of Motion by Court (Cont'd)

Improper comment on irrelevant evidence. — Since the defendant was accused of child molestation under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4, the trial court did not err under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 in admonishing the defense counsel not to suggest that the defendant's penetration of the victim and the resulting injury had been insignificant; the evidence was irrelevant as § 16-6-4 did not distinguish between degrees of vaginal injury. Pickett v. State, 277 Ga. App. 316, 626 S.E.2d 508 (2006).

Duty of court upon motion for mistrial being made. — If unwarranted and prejudicial remarks not referring to any matter in evidence in the case are made, and a motion for mistrial is based on such remarks, the court has the duty of eradicating the effect of the remarks from the jury's mind by ruling the remarks out, reprimanding counsel, and instructing the jury to disregard the remarks. Ordinarily, this cures the error. Emerson v. State, 90 Ga. App. 323, 82 S.E.2d 882 (1954).

No duty after objection sustained. — After an objection to an improper question or statement is sustained, the court has no duty to rebuke counsel or give curative instructions absent a further request from the complaining party. Garner v. State, 199 Ga. App. 468, 405 S.E.2d 299 (1991).

Defendant was not entitled to curative instructions or a mistrial by virtue of the prosecution's question of the defendant as to whether his ex-wife was "ex-wife number five or six" since the defendant's objection to the question was sustained and the defendant made no further motion. Woodham v. State, 263 Ga. 580, 439 S.E.2d 471 (1993).

Merely "ruling out" a statement is insufficient. Collins Park & B.R.R. v. Ware, 112 Ga. 663, 37 S.E. 975 (1901); Holmes v. State, 21 Ga. App. 150, 94 S.E. 69 (1917).

Because the court did not hear a remark by the district attorney and did not believe that the jury had done so, the court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the motion for mistrial. Jordan v. State, 166 Ga. App. 417, 304 S.E.2d 522 (1983).

Limitations on judge's duty. — When prejudicial matters not in evidence are made in the hearing of the jury, on objection the court shall rebuke counsel or, among other measures, order a mistrial if the prosecuting attorney is the offender. However, it is not within the court's discretion to dismiss the indictment, nor is it the court's duty to interpret the stated objection and speculate that the defendant intended to move for a mistrial. Redmond v. State, 252 Ga. 142, 312 S.E.2d 315 (1984).

No duty to rebuke prosecutor. — Even assuming that the prosecutor's argument that one of the jailhouse informants might have appeared nervous based on the saying that "snitches get stitches" was improper under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 because the trial court sustained the defendant's objection, and the defendant did not request a rebuke or any other corrective action after the defendant's objection was sustained, the trial court had no duty to rebuke the prosecuting attorney. Cheley v. State, 299 Ga. 88, 786 S.E.2d 642 (2016).

Provision for rebuke of counsel and instructing jury is mandatory. — Provision that the court shall rebuke counsel and by all needful and proper instructions to the jury endeavor to remove the improper impression from the jury's minds is mandatory. Ingram v. State, 97 Ga. App. 468, 103 S.E.2d 666 (1958).

Court's discretion. — Extent of a rebuke and instruction is within the discretion of the court. Benefield v. State, 140 Ga. App. 727, 232 S.E.2d 89 (1976); Brooks v. State, 169 Ga. App. 543, 314 S.E.2d 115 (1984); O'Kelley v. State, 175 Ga. App. 503, 333 S.E.2d 838 (1985).

Whether to grant a mistrial after taking precautionary measures is within the court's discretion. Green v. State, 242 Ga. 261, 249 S.E.2d 1 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 442 U.S. 95, 99 S. Ct. 2150, 60 L. Ed. 2d 738, vacated in part on other grounds, 244 Ga. 27, 257 S.E.2d 543 (1979).

Extent of a rebuke and instructions is within the discretion of the court, and when the improper remark is cured by timely corrective action calculated to preserve the defendant's right to a fair trial, then the court does not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant a mistrial. High v. State, 153 Ga. App. 729, 266 S.E.2d 364 (1980).

Abuse of discretion not shown. — Trial court employed language appropriate to the situation and evidenced no abuse of discretion after trial counsel made a disparaging remark about the assistant district attorney. Cammon v. State, 269 Ga. 470, 500 S.E.2d 329 (1998).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by not declaring a mistrial as the court issued a curative instruction after the prosecutor made improper remarks during closing argument by twice referring to the defendant's possession of marijuana as a misdemeanor, rather than the charged offense of possession of marijuana less than an ounce. Dix v. State, 307 Ga. App. 684, 705 S.E.2d 903 (2011).

In the defendants' trial for robbery and murder, even if the prosecutor's question to a bereaved witness as to whether the witness had observed the defendants laughing while the jury was not present was improper, the trial court fully complied with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 and did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant a mistrial. Dixon v. State, 302 Ga. 691, 808 S.E.2d 696 (2017).

Even if defendant's character is placed in issue. — Ordinarily, when illegal testimony is placed in evidence, it is not an abuse of discretion to refuse to grant a mistrial when sufficient corrective instructions are given in ruling out the testimony. This is true even when the illegal testimony has the effect of placing the defendant's character in issue, especially if the testimony is volunteered by the witness and not directly elicited by the solicitor (now district attorney). Brown v. State, 118 Ga. App. 617, 165 S.E.2d 185 (1968).

Court must be presumed to be listening to argument. — It must be presumed that the court in performing the court's duty to interpose and prevent prejudicial argument is listening to the argument and has heard the remarks. Brown v. State, 110 Ga. App. 401, 138 S.E.2d 741 (1964).

Overruling motion for mistrial overruled without hearing argument complained of. — When a motion for mistrial is made based on improper argument reasonably calculated to appeal to or evoke racial prejudice, and the trial court has not heard the argument, but overrules the motion without inquiring to ascertain what the improper argument was, and therefore without knowing the facts upon which the motion was based and without determining whether corrective action is needed, one fails to perform the duty imposed and exercise the discretion contemplated by the statute. Brown v. State, 110 Ga. App. 401, 138 S.E.2d 741 (1964).

What action by the court is sufficient depends on circumstances of the case. — In some cases of misconduct by a solicitor (now district attorney) the injurious effect may be averted by appropriate action and instructions from the court, but what would be sufficient in any case would depend on the character of the misconduct, the nature of the case, and the action or instructions from the court relied on to counteract the injurious effect of the misconduct. These may differ in each case. Brown v. State, 118 Ga. App. 617, 165 S.E.2d 185 (1968).

Motion for mistrial raises question of what less drastic action would be sufficient. — Motion for mistrial raises the question of what ameliorative action less than summarily cutting off the trial is obligatory on the judge under the circumstances. Gore v. State, 110 Ga. App. 344, 138 S.E.2d 471 (1964).

Cautionary instructions are usually sufficient. — Usually, cautionary instructions to the jury by the judge, when matters of procedure must be left to the judge's sound discretion, will suffice to cure irregularity and remove prejudice. Grayhouse v. State, 65 Ga. App. 853, 16 S.E.2d 787 (1941).

Curative instruction may in effect amount to rebuke of counsel. — If the instruction by the court to the jury to disregard the remarks is full, the instruction in effect amounts to a rebuke of counsel. London v. State, 142 Ga. App. 426, 236 S.E.2d 158 (1977); Crawford v. State, 203 Ga. App. 215, 416 S.E.2d 820 (1992).

Rebuke of Counsel, Instruction of Jury, or Grant of Motion by Court (Cont'd)

Improper remark of prosecutor not cured by instruction. — General curative instruction given by the trial court after the prosecutor made an improper statement about the defendant's link to an earlier gang-related shooting during closing arguments was an inadequate curative measure and did not serve to remove the improper impression from the jurors' minds as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Jones v. State, 292 Ga. 656, 740 S.E.2d 590 (2013).

Prejudice may be such that neither instruction nor rebuke will suffice. — There are instances when the character of the prejudice, precipitated by the injection into the trial of extrinsic matters with no evidentiary basis, is such that cautionary instructions to the jury and rebuke of counsel, either or both, fail to remove the harm done, when, in the interest of fair and impartial trials, mistrials must result. Grayhouse v. State, 65 Ga. App. 853, 16 S.E.2d 787 (1941).

Instruction to the jury to disregard improper remarks amounts to a rebuke of counsel. Martin v. State, 196 Ga. App. 145, 395 S.E.2d 391 (1990).

Objection without motion not grounds for mistrial. — Sustained objection to an improper question, answer, or remark by opposing counsel without a motion for mistrial will not constitute grounds for reversal, especially if the improper matter has been stricken with curative instructions. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 765, 261 S.E.2d 487 (1979).

Certainty that no injury to the accused would result. — It is not erroneous to refuse to grant a mistrial on account of misconduct of the solicitor (now district attorney) if it is certain that no injury could have resulted therefrom to the accused. Brown v. State, 118 Ga. App. 617, 165 S.E.2d 185 (1968).

Grant of mistrial may be the only effective remedy in some cases. — Mistrial should be declared if the remarks are injurious to the defendant, and cannot be cured by instructions. Wallace v. State, 126 Ga. 749, 55 S.E. 1042 (1906); Hunter v. State, 133 Ga. 78, 65 S.E. 154 (1909); Manning v. State, 13 Ga. App. 709, 79 S.E. 905 (1913); Morrow v. State, 18 Ga. App. 12, 88 S.E. 911 (1916).

Misconduct of counsel may be such that its effect cannot be overcome, and misconduct so prejudicial that the verdict of the jury must have been influenced thereby, and is not cured by an admonition to the jury, or by sustaining an objection thereto, or by rebuke or admonition of counsel, or by withdrawal by counsel. In such cases, the court should grant a mistrial. Emerson v. State, 90 Ga. App. 323, 82 S.E.2d 882 (1954).

If judge takes curative action, no new trial or mistrial granted unless such action fails. — It is improper for counsel to remark upon the force or effect of evidence while it is being submitted to the jury, but when the remark is not prejudicial or inflammatory, is withdrawn by counsel, and the court gives proper instructions to the jury, a mistrial is not required. Bryant v. State, 197 Ga. 641, 30 S.E.2d 259 (1944).

If the trial judge acts immediately, and in the exercise of the judge's discretion takes such action as in the judge's judgment prevents harm to the accused as a result of improper statements by the prosecution, a new trial will not be granted unless it is clear that such action failed to eliminate from the consideration of the jury such improper statements. Moore v. State, 228 Ga. 662, 187 S.E.2d 277 (1972); Pullen v. State, 146 Ga. App. 665, 247 S.E.2d 128 (1978); Vernon v. State, 152 Ga. App. 616, 263 S.E.2d 503 (1979).

In passing on a motion for mistrial because of an improper statement of the prosecutor, the trial judge may take such action as in the judge's judgment will prevent harm to the defendant, and a new trial will not be granted unless it is clear that such action failed to eliminate the statement from consideration by the jury. Hoerner v. State, 246 Ga. 374, 271 S.E.2d 458 (1980).

After the trial court rebuked offending counsel and instructed the jury appropriately, a new trial will not be granted unless it is clear that the court's action failed to eliminate from the consideration of the jury such improper remark. White v. State, 159 Ga. App. 545, 284 S.E.2d 76 (1981); Jordan v. State, 159 Ga. App. 716, 285 S.E.2d 71 (1981).

Although the prosecutor, during closing argument, remarked to the jury that the grand jury had found sufficient evidence to bring the case to trial, the judge's prompt and corrective measures in admonishing counsel and instructing the jury were sufficient to eliminate the necessity of declaring a mistrial. Stoker v. State, 177 Ga. App. 94, 338 S.E.2d 525 (1985).

Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for mistrial, after the prosecution's statement possibly left the jury with the false impression that defense counsel's opening statement was improper, although the trial court gave curative instructions only, an additional statement rebuking the prosecutor was not necessary. Crawford v. State, 203 Ga. App. 215, 416 S.E.2d 820 (1992).

Trial court three times instructed the jury to disregard the prosecutor's remarks regarding money in the defendant's prosecution for drug offenses. Since an instruction to the jury to disregard improper remarks amounts to a rebuke of counsel and in light of the curative instruction and the inadvertent nature of the prosecutor's remark, there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's denial of the motion for mistrial. Myers v. State, 268 Ga. App. 607, 602 S.E.2d 327 (2004).

Trial court properly issued a curative instruction after an inadvertent reference to the defendant's status on bond, avoiding a mistrial as to this issue; the defendant's request for a curative instruction was granted after a reference to the "drug problem" the defendant and the defendant's ex-spouse shared waived any error in the trial court's failure to grant a mistrial as to this issue. Hill v. State, 285 Ga. App. 503, 646 S.E.2d 718 (2007).

Jury must be instructed to remove improper impressions. — When a motion for a mistrial is made, the court may grant the mistrial or take other corrective measures less than granting of a mistrial if the latter are sufficient for the purpose, but the court should by all needful and proper instruction to the jury endeavor to remove the improper impression from the jury's minds. Stanley v. State, 94 Ga. App. 737, 96 S.E.2d 195 (1956).

Curative instructions are not mandatory under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 when a motion for mistrial is denied. Foshee v. State, 256 Ga. 555, 350 S.E.2d 416 (1986).

Improper remark of prosecutor cured by instruction. — When the trial court under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 instructed the jury to disregard a statement by state's counsel relative to the fact that some of the witnesses would say the same thing as the witnesses that are called, and the court rebuked state's counsel for making that statement, even if the remark by the state's counsel was improper, the error was cured by the trial court's instruction. Hilburn v. State, 166 Ga. App. 357, 304 S.E.2d 480 (1983).

Trial court does not err in denying a mistrial after the prosecuting attorney asks the defendant why the defendant did not bring any witnesses in the courtroom to back up the defendant's explanation of the criminal episode, when the trial court correctly and fully cures any misimpression that the defendant bears the burden of proving the defendant's innocence, by instructing the jury that the defendant may or may not bring in witnesses, as the defendant chooses, but regardless of whether the defendant brings in witnesses, the burden is always on the state to prove the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt. Brown v. State, 166 Ga. App. 765, 305 S.E.2d 386 (1983).

Trial court's instruction to the jury to disregard remarks amounting to a misstatement of evidence was complete and, in effect, amounted to a rebuke of the prosecuting attorney, and the minimal impact of the statement did not require reversal of a murder conviction. Ward v. State, 252 Ga. 85, 311 S.E.2d 449 (1984).

Because the prosecutor's misstatement regarding blood on the porch was arguably no more than an overstatement (most of the blood had been washed off the porch) of the evidence, the mistaken attribution of testimony was insignificant in light of the fact that several witnesses had given similar testimony regarding the defendant's statements of anger toward the victim, defendant's mother. The trial court told the jury in preliminary jury instructions and the prosecuting attorney reminded the jury in closing argument that the argument of counsel was not evidence; therefore, it was highly probable that the trial court's error in failing to sustain the defendant's objections to improper argument by the prosecution and to perform the jury's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 to instruct the jury regarding improper statements by counsel did not contribute to the verdict; thus, the defendant's conviction for murder was affirmed. Fincher v. State, 276 Ga. 480, 578 S.E.2d 102 (2003).

Rebuke of Counsel, Instruction of Jury, or Grant of Motion by Court (Cont'd)

Denial of a motion for a mistrial was proper given the trial court's prompt, detailed curative instruction to the jury; it was unlikely that the defendant was prejudiced by the prosecutor's improper comment on the defendant's silence. Ford v. State, 274 Ga. App. 695, 617 S.E.2d 262 (2005).

In a joint prosecution, a second defendant was not entitled to a mistrial based on the prosecutor's improper comments during closing argument to the jury as the trial judge was authorized to admonish the prosecutor and instruct the jurors that the prosecutor's comments were inappropriate, were not proper for their consideration, and were to be disregarded. Jones v. State, 285 Ga. App. 121, 645 S.E.2d 608 (2007).

While the trial court did not necessarily rebuke the prosecutor, because the court did give curative instructions informing the jury that a cell phone used in the state's closing argument was not evidence, the demonstration was not to be considered, and the demonstration was completely irrelevant to the case, the defendant was not entitled to a mistrial as a result; further, the appeals court agreed with the trial judge that the improper demonstration did not prejudice the defendant because enough other evidence existed for the jury to come to the jury's conclusion without relying on the improper demonstration. Cook v. State, 287 Ga. App. 81, 650 S.E.2d 757 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1874, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 127 (Ga. 2008).

Prosecutor's improper comment on a defendant's failure to explain the presence of a gun and cash in the defendant's car immediately following a robbery was cured by the trial court rebuking the prosecutor at length and giving the jury curative instructions. Brown v. State, 307 Ga. App. 797, 706 S.E.2d 170 (2011).

Prosecutor's remark not improper. — In defendant's trial for sexual assault of a victim who was a stripper, the prosecutor's statement during closing that the jury could all hypothesize that the defendant didn't tell the defendant's family about where the defendant was that night (at a strip club), was simply a proper argument to urge the jury not to discount the victim's credibility; the statement did not improperly place the defendant's character in issue, and a mistrial was properly denied. Savage v. State, 264 Ga. App. 709, 592 S.E.2d 188 (2003).

Considering the nature of the state's improper reference, the other evidence in the case, and the trial court's and counsel's actions in dealing with the impropriety, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial; O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 did not apply because the state did not state prejudicial facts that were not in evidence and did not inject into the case illegal elements but simply made an inadvertent reference to the nature of a hearing at which the victim's statement differed from the victim's testimony at trial. Lewis v. State, 317 Ga. App. 218, 735 S.E.2d 1 (2012).

Instruction pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 was not required as the state's references in closing argument were to the psychologist's forensic findings and the inferences thereto, not to any opinion as to the veracity of the victim. Thompson v. State, 321 Ga. App. 756, 743 S.E.2d 446 (2013).

Mistrial may be refused if remark withdrawn and jury instructed. — It is not error to refuse to grant a mistrial on account of the improper remark of the solicitor general (now district attorney) in the solicitor's argument to the jury, after the solicitor expressly withdraws the remark and the court instructs the jury not to consider the remark. Goodman v. State, 122 Ga. 111, 49 S.E. 922 (1905).

Withdrawal of remark and apology may be insufficient. — Mere apology and withdrawal of the improper remarks by counsel, if there is no reprimand by the court, will not be sufficient to prevent a mistrial if it appears that the remarks were such as to prejudice a fair trial. Smith v. State, 118 Ga. App. 464, 164 S.E.2d 238 (1968).

Case in which judge's statement insufficient to remove solicitor's (now district attorney's) remarks from consideration. — See Duncan v. State, 51 Ga. App. 97, 179 S.E. 638 (1935).

Instruction on improper remarks as to self-incrimination. — Although no person can be compelled to self-incriminate, an improper comment thereon may be cured by an instruction to the jury. Alcorn v. State, 21 Ga. App. 148, 94 S.E. 46 (1917).

Failure to rebuke for question that was not crucial. — There was no error in either the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a mistrial or in not rebuking the prosecutor for asking an allegedly improper question, particularly when the trial judge found that the question was not of a crucial nature. Martin v. State, 196 Ga. App. 145, 395 S.E.2d 391 (1990).

When new trial required. — When a motion for mistrial is made because of counsel's improper statement and there is no rebuke of counsel by the court and no charge to the jury to disregard such statement, the grant of a new trial is required. Hammond v. State, 51 Ga. App. 225, 179 S.E. 841 (1935).

When argument of counsel is manifestly improper and prejudicial to the defendant, and the trial court neither grants a mistrial, nor rebukes counsel, nor by needful and proper instructions to the jury endeavors to remove the improper impressions from the jurors' minds, and the verdict later reached by the jury is adverse to the defendant and is not demanded by evidence, a new trial is required. Baggett v. State, 77 Ga. App. 24, 47 S.E.2d 769 (1948); Brown v. State, 77 Ga. App. 245, 48 S.E.2d 565 (1948).

When the court after objection fails to rebuke counsel and endeavor by needful instructions to remove the prejudicial effect of the remarks from the minds of the jury or to order a mistrial, a new trial is required. Brown v. State, 110 Ga. App. 401, 138 S.E.2d 741 (1964); Smith v. State, 118 Ga. App. 464, 164 S.E.2d 238 (1968).

With regard to the defendant's trial and conviction for possession of methamphetamine and giving a false name to a law enforcement officer, although the prosecutor's argument was improper and the trial court erred by failing to rebuke the prosecutor as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75, the error was harmless since the improper argument consisted only of one comment not directly related to the defendant's case, the trial court twice told the jurors that the arguments of counsel were not evidence, and there was ample evidence of the defendant's guilt. As such, the trial court's failure to perform the court's duty under § 17-8-75 did not contribute to the verdict. Griffin v. State, 291 Ga. App. 657, 662 S.E.2d 767 (2008).

Failure to give curative instruction harmless error. — Trial court's error in failing to give a curative instruction in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-7-85 was harmless because it was highly probable that the trial court's error did not contribute to the verdict; the trial court specifically instructed the jury that the closing arguments of counsel did not constitute evidence, and despite the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, the jury was unable to reach a verdict on two of the counts against the defendant that were later dead docketed. O'Neal v. State, 288 Ga. 219, 702 S.E.2d 288 (2010).

In two defendants' trials for murder, even if the trial court erred under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 by failing to give, sua sponte, a curative instruction when the prosecutor referred to an absent witness who had been intimidated, any error was harmless because numerous witnesses had testified regarding threats made against the witnesses by the defendants as well as the general disregard in the community for "snitches." Stephens v. State, 307 Ga. 731, 838 S.E.2d 275 (2020).

Rebuke of Counsel, Instruction of Jury, or Grant of Motion by Court (Cont'd)

Prosecutor's statements were outside of the evidence because the slides the prosecutor introduced were shown during opening statement before either side had put on any evidence; however, it was highly probable that the trial court's alleged error in failing to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 by not rebuking counsel or specifically instructing the jury to disregard the slides did not contribute to the guilty verdicts because it was doubtful that the slides qualified as prejudicial within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 since the slides reflected evidence that the prosecutor expected to and, ultimately did, get admitted during the trial and argument that would be, and ultimately was, properly made during closing argument, so the same information later reached the jury appropriately. Dolphy v. State, 288 Ga. 705, 707 S.E.2d 56 (2011).

Defendant waived the right to complain about an assistant district attorney's remarks on appeal because the trial court's alleged error in failing to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 did not contribute to the verdicts, and the assistant district attorney's closing comments did not entreat the jury to place themselves in the victim's shoes. Gomez v. State, 315 Ga. App. 898, 728 S.E.2d 691 (2012).

It was error to refuse to rebuke the assistant district attorney for asking an allegedly improper question during cross-examination of the defendant when it was not "a statement of prejudicial [matter]." Chancellor v. State, 165 Ga. App. 365, 301 S.E.2d 294 (1983).

Aggravated child molestation conviction was reversed after a prosecutor elicited improper testimony that the defendant had been molested as a child, and the trial court failed to rebuke the prosecutor or give a curative instruction; since the evidence of guilt was far from overwhelming, this error was not harmless. Tyler v. State, 266 Ga. App. 221, 596 S.E.2d 651 (2004).

Prosecutorial conduct harmless even if not waived on appeal. — As the defendant sought no additional relief for the prosecutor's improper argument following the last curative instructions, the defendant waived the argument on appeal; moreover, the strength of the eyewitness evidence against the defendant, coupled with the contemporaneous curative instructions, rendered any prosecutorial misconduct harmless. Garcia v. State, 271 Ga. App. 794, 611 S.E.2d 92 (2005), overruled on other grounds by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Trial court's actions in rebuking defense counsel out of the presence of the jury after counsel misstated the evidence during closing argument, and then informing the jury that counsel had been rebuked, were appropriate; the trial court's actions did not amount to an erroneous comment on the evidence. Lassic v. State, 278 Ga. 701, 606 S.E.2d 266 (2004).

Comments by trial judge during defense counsel's closing argument. — Defendant was not entitled to a new trial because the trial judge's comments were limited in scope, were for the purpose of controlling the trial conduct and ensuring a fair trial, did not involve the issue of defendant's guilt or innocence, and did not express an opinion on the evidence as to what was proved or not; comments by the trial judge during defense counsel's closing arguments were for the purpose of preventing misstatements to the jury concerning matters not in evidence and were not improper under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75. Mathis v. State, 276 Ga. App. 205, 622 S.E.2d 857 (2005).

Harmless error. — Trial court specifically instructed the jury that the closing arguments of counsel were not evidence. Given the evidence, along with the trial court's instruction to the jury, it was highly probable that the trial court's error in failing to perform the court's duty under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 did not contribute to the verdict. Holsey v. State, 316 Ga. App. 801, 729 S.E.2d 465 (2012).

Discretion of Court

Grant of mistrial is in court's discretion. — Whether mistrial should be granted for improper argument of opposing counsel is largely discretionary. Waller v. State, 80 Ga. App. 488, 56 S.E.2d 491 (1949).

This section leaves to the discretion of the trial court the decision to grant a mistrial. Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 526, 236 S.E.2d 493 (1977).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial after the state alluded to the defendant's father testifying at a probation revocation hearing as considering the evidence introduced at trial, the nature of the character evidence about which the defendant complained, and the trial court's immediate curative instruction, the appellate court could not say that the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial. King v. State, 269 Ga. App. 658, 605 S.E.2d 63 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by failing to rebuke the state's prosecutor for presenting a slide that hospital records showed the defendant's history of alcohol abuse or by failing to declare a mistrial because the defendant did not object after the court provided the curative instruction. Samuels v. State, 335 Ga. App. 819, 783 S.E.2d 344 (2016).

Inadvertent information that defendant seeing psychiatrist did not warrant mistrial. — Because the state did not intentionally elicit information from a witness that the defendant was seeing a psychiatrist, and such information did not necessarily inject one's character into evidence, the defendant was not entitled to a mistrial; moreover, even assuming the comment did improperly put the defendant's character into evidence, the trial court's curative instruction was sufficient. Morita v. State, 270 Ga. App. 372, 606 S.E.2d 595 (2004).

In response to the defendant's attempt to make various pronouncements and address the victim's spouse, prompting the prosecutor to object, and the court to admonish the defendant in the presence of the jury, the actions did not warrant a mistrial as the actions properly took issue with the defendant's statements and conduct in a fair and objective manner and the trial court did not employ any measure which could be said to have compromised the jury's ability to remain impartial. Taylor v. State, 282 Ga. 44, 644 S.E.2d 850, cert. denied, 552 U.S. 950, 128 S. Ct. 384, 169 L. Ed. 2d 263 (2007).

Issue of mistrial waived on appeal. — Because the record showed that the defendant acquiesced in the trial court's decision to give curative instructions regarding testimony given by a state's witness which the defendant claimed reflected prior criminal conduct that improperly placed the defendant's character in issue, and did not again move for a mistrial after the instructions were given, the defendant waived the issue for purposes of appeal. Northern v. State, 285 Ga. App. 303, 645 S.E.2d 701 (2007).

Abuse of discretion generally. — In passing upon a motion for a mistrial on account of alleged improper argument or remarks to the jury, the trial judge is vested with broad and sound discretion, and the trial judge's ruling will not be controlled unless manifestly abused. Grayhouse v. State, 65 Ga. App. 853, 16 S.E.2d 787 (1941); Smith v. State, 204 Ga. 184, 48 S.E.2d 860 (1948); Parks v. State, 208 Ga. 508, 67 S.E.2d 716 (1951); Domingo v. State, 213 Ga. 24, 96 S.E.2d 896 (1957); James v. State, 215 Ga. 213, 109 S.E.2d 735 (1959); McCorquodale v. State, 233 Ga. 369, 211 S.E.2d 577 (1974), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3223, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1218 (1976).

If improper statements have been made by counsel in the presence of the jury, it is the duty of the judge to endeavor to remove from the minds of the jury improper impressions made by unfair arguments. In determining the proper method, the judge is vested with sound discretion, and the judge's rulings thereon will not require a new trial, unless it manifestly appears that the judge's discretion was abused. Hicks v. State, 196 Ga. 671, 27 S.E.2d 307 (1943).

Grant or refusal of motions for mistrial is largely within the discretion of the trial court, and this discretion will not be interfered with unless manifestly abused. If the trial court immediately upon the happening of an irregularity gives cautionary instructions to the jury, the appellate court will not disturb the trial court's judgment refusing a motion for mistrial.

Discretion of Court (Cont'd)

Cox v. State, 109 Ga. App. 797, 137 S.E.2d 516 (1964).

Matter of granting a mistrial is largely within the discretion of the trial court and unless it is apparent that a mistrial was essential to preservation of the right of fair trial, that discretion will not be controlled. Brown v. State, 118 Ga. App. 617, 165 S.E.2d 185 (1968); Cochran v. State, 144 Ga. App. 820, 242 S.E.2d 735 (1978).

If, during oral argument, an assistant district attorney makes statements deemed by the defendant to be improper and upon a motion for mistrial being made the trial court immediately instructs the jury not to consider such argument, no harmful error appears in the overruling of the motion for mistrial unless it is manifest that an abuse of the trial court's discretion has occurred. White v. State, 159 Ga. App. 545, 284 S.E.2d 76 (1981).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 commits to the judge's discretion the decision to order a mistrial when counsel has made statements of prejudicial matters not in evidence before the jury. This discretion will not be interfered with on appeal unless manifestly abused. Welch v. State, 251 Ga. 197, 304 S.E.2d 391 (1983).

Trial court did not run afoul of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 in permitting the state to explain the absence of the testimony of the other accomplice, which, during the state's opening statement, the state had told the jury to expect as: (1) the state informed the trial court, outside the hearing of the jury and before making a statement to the jury, that the state's witness had changed the witness's mind about testifying and that the state wanted to let the jury know why the witness would not be testifying; (2) the state made the statement as a statement of fact, without any attempt to argue the evidence or prejudice the case; (3) the appellate court found no case in which § 17-8-75 has been applied in a situation in which a party informed the trial court of the content of a statement it intended to make and received the consent of the trial court to make such a statement; (4) the state did not act with an improper motive, bad faith, or with intent to subvert the defendant's constitutional rights; and (5) the truthful statement was not harmful under the facts of this case. Clemons v. State, 265 Ga. App. 825, 595 S.E.2d 530 (2004).

Discretion not abused in denying mistrial if counsel rebuked and jury instructed. — When the court immediately rebukes counsel and instructs the jury to ignore the improper comments, the denial of the motion for mistrial is not an abuse of discretion. Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 526, 236 S.E.2d 493 (1977).

If counsel has made statements regarding prejudicial matters not in evidence before the jury, the trial court has the discretion to order a mistrial. The trial court's refusal to do so, however, coupled with appropriate curative instructions and admonishment of state's counsel, absent manifest abuse, will not be reversed. Schirato v. State, 260 Ga. 170, 391 S.E.2d 116 (1990); Willingham v. State, 212 Ga. App. 457, 442 S.E.2d 4 (1994); King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 957, 122 S. Ct. 2659, 153 L. Ed. 2d 834 (2002).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declining to grant a mistrial after an improper statement by the prosecutor as the court immediately sustained the defendant's objection, rebuked the prosecutor, and instructed the jury not to consider the statement. Campbell v. State, 329 Ga. App. 317, 764 S.E.2d 895 (2014).

Remark that witnesses were credible because the witnesses had not been impeached. — Trial judge did not abuse the judge's discretion in refusing to grant a mistrial based on the prosecutor's argument that two of the state's witnesses were credible because the witnesses had not been impeached with prior inconsistent statements. Forney v. State, 255 Ga. 316, 338 S.E.2d 252 (1986).

Defendant's plan to comment on specific cases of mistaken identity. — Trial court properly disallowed defense counsel's plan to comment on specific cases of mistaken identity which defense counsel personally knew about from experience or had read about, presumably from newspaper articles, and limited the argument to experiences common to everyone since the evidence would have been totally irrelevant if offered during the trial because the comments were not related to this case, and since the facts may well have been in dispute. Watson v. State, 180 Ga. App. 82, 348 S.E.2d 557 (1986).

Denial of mistrial after offer of curative instructions declined. — If counsel for a codefendant improperly placed a defendant's character in evidence and the defendant's counsel declined the trial court's offer to give curative instructions to the jury, the court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial. Daily v. State, 195 Ga. App. 4, 392 S.E.2d 554 (1990).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to request mistrial. — Counsel was not ineffective for failing to move for a mistrial because the evidence of guilt was overwhelming and it was highly probable that any improper argument did not contribute to the verdicts. Lloyd v. State, 280 Ga. 187, 625 S.E.2d 771 (2006).

Trial court ruling prohibiting comment on spouse's plea agreement. — With regard to a defendant's drug conviction, the trial court did not err in prohibiting further comment by defense counsel about the terms of the plea agreement of the defendant's spouse as the state had objected and the terms of the plea agreement had not been admitted into evidence. Dingler v. State, 293 Ga. App. 27, 666 S.E.2d 441 (2008).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 88 C.J.S., Trial, § 193 et seq.

ALR. — Statement by prosecuting attorney in presence of jury implying that defendant had made incriminating statements to him not in evidence, as ground of reversal or new trial, 52 A.L.R. 1022.

Counsel's appeal to racial, religious, social, or political prejudices or prejudice against corporations as ground for a new trial or reversal, 78 A.L.R. 1438.

Prosecuting attorney urging jury against compromising upon verdict carrying a lesser penalty than that incident to offense or degree of offense of which defendant is shown to have been guilty, 95 A.L.R. 566.

Motion for mistrial, or other similar motion, as condition of reviewing improper argument of counsel, 108 A.L.R. 756.

Offering improper evidence, or asking improper question, as ground for new trial or reversal, 109 A.L.R. 1089.

Comments by prosecuting attorney regarding jury's right or privilege to recommend or fix punishment, 120 A.L.R. 502.

Statements, comments, or conduct of court or counsel regarding perjury, as ground for new trial or reversal in civil action or criminal prosecution other than for perjury, 127 A.L.R. 1385.

Prejudicial effect of argument or remark that adversary was attempting to suppress facts, 29 A.L.R.2d 996.

Prejudicial effect of admission of evidence as to communist or other subversive affiliation or association of accused, 30 A.L.R.2d 589.

Prejudicial effect of trial court's denial, or equivalent, of counsel's right to argue case, 38 A.L.R.2d 1396.

Prejudicial effect of prosecuting attorney's misconduct in physically exhibiting to jury objects or items not introduced as evidence, 46 A.L.R.2d 1423.

Prejudicial effect of prosecuting attorney's remarks, in opening statement to jury, that another defendant has been convicted or has pleaded guilty, 48 A.L.R.2d 1004.

Prejudicial effect of counsel's addressing individually or by name particular juror during argument, 55 A.L.R.2d 1198.

Remarks or acts of trial judge criticizing, rebuking, or punishing defense counsel in criminal case, as requiring new trial or reversal, 62 A.L.R.2d 166.

Prejudicial effect of prosecutor's comment on character or reputation of accused, where accused has presented character witnesses, 70 A.L.R.2d 559.

Prejudicial effect of prosecuting attorney's argument to jury that people of city, county, or community want or expect a conviction, 85 A.L.R.2d 1132.

Propriety and effect of attack on opposing counsel during trial of a criminal case, 99 A.L.R.2d 508.

Comment or argument by court or counsel that prosecution evidence is uncontradicted as amounting to improper reference to accused's failure to testify, 14 A.L.R.3d 723.

Prejudicial effect of statement of prosecutor as to possibility of pardon or parole, 16 A.L.R.3d 1137.

Counsel's reference in criminal case to wealth, poverty, or financial status of defendant or victim as ground for mistrial, new trial, or reversal, 36 A.L.R.3d 839.

Propriety and prejudicial effect, in criminal case, of placing jury in charge of officer who is a witness in the case, 38 A.L.R.3d 1012.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's remarks as to victim's age, family circumstances, or the like, 50 A.L.R.3d 8.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument to jury indicating his belief or knowledge as to guilt of accused — modern state cases, 88 A.L.R.3d 449.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument giving jury impression that defense counsel believes accused guilty, 89 A.L.R.3d 263.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument to jury indicating that he has additional evidence of defendant's guilt which he did not deem necessary to present, 90 A.L.R.3d 646.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's argument giving jury impression that judge believes defendant guilty, 90 A.L.R.3d 822.

Double jeopardy as bar to retrial after grant of defendant's motion of mistrial, 98 A.L.R.3d 997.

Prosecutor's reference in opening statement to matters not provable or which he does not attempt to prove as ground for relief, 16 A.L.R.4th 810.

Propriety of attorney's communication with jurors after trial, 19 A.L.R.4th 1209.

Failure to object to improper questions or comments as to defendant's pretrial silence or failure to testify as constituting waiver of right to complain of error — modern cases, 32 A.L.R.4th 774.

Communication between court officials or attendants and jurors in criminal trial as ground for mistrial or reversal—post-Parker cases, 35 A.L.R.4th 890.

Postretirement out-of-court communications between jurors and trial judge as grounds for new trial or reversal in criminal case, 43 A.L.R.4th 410.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of comments by counsel vouching for credibility of witness — state cases, 45 A.L.R.4th 602.

Prosecutor's appeal in criminal case to self-interest or prejudice of jurors as taxpayers as ground for reversal, new trial, or mistrial, 60 A.L.R.4th 1063.

Prosecutor's appeal in criminal case to racial, national, or religious prejudice as ground for mistrial, new trial, reversal, or vacation of sentence — modern cases, 70 A.L.R.4th 664.

Negative characterization or description of defendant, by prosecutor during summation of criminal trial, as ground for reversal, new trial, or mistrial—modern cases, 88 A.L.R.4th 8.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of counsel's negative characterization or description of witness during summation of criminal trial—modern cases, 88 A.L.R.4th 209.

Prejudicial effect, in civil case, of communications between court officials or attendants and jurors, 31 A.L.R.5th 572.

17-8-76. Argument to or in front of jury as to possibility of clemency.

(a) No attorney at law in a criminal case shall argue to or in the presence of the jury that a defendant, if convicted, may not be required to suffer the full penalty imposed by the court or jury because pardon, parole, or clemency of any nature may be granted by the Governor, the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, or other proper authority vested with the right to grant clemency.

(b) If counsel for either side in a criminal case argues to or in the presence of the jury as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, opposing counsel shall have the right immediately to request the court to declare a mistrial, in which case it shall be mandatory upon the court to declare a mistrial. Failure to declare a mistrial shall constitute reversible error.

(c) This Code section shall be construed as setting forth requirements in addition to other requirements of law.

History. — Ga. L. 1955, p. 191, §§ 1-3.

U.S. Code. — Closing arguments, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 29.1.

Law reviews. — For note, "Can't Do the Time, Don't Do the Crime?: Dixon v. State, Statutory Construction, and the Harsh Realities of Mandatory Minimum Sentencing in Georgia," see 22 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 519 (2005).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Clemency
Probation and Parole
Death Penalty
Mistrial

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Ability or inability to obtain early release does not relate to the defendant's character, the defendant's prior record, or circumstances of the defendant's offense; thus, policy forbidding argument about such matters does not run afoul of either U.S. Const., amend. 8 or 14, and the trial court did not err in refusing to allow such argument. Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030 (1983).

Construction with § 17-10-31.1. — Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-31.1 expressly authorizing argument to the jury on the issue of parole in the sentencing phase of death penalty trials conflicted with O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 which imposed an absolute bar on such argument; however, former § 17-10-31.1 prevailed since it was the more recent enactment. Jenkins v. State, 265 Ga. 539, 458 S.E.2d 477 (1995).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 has not been implicitly repealed. Quick v. State, 256 Ga. 780, 353 S.E.2d 497 (1987).

Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 is to prevent prosecutors from arguing that jury should give more severe sentence to compensate for possible pardon, parole, or other clemency. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Policy underlying O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76. — This section establishes the policy of the law that the jury should not be influenced in a criminal case in the rendition of their verdict by a consideration of the fact that the penalty imposed by the jury might be commuted by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles. McGruder v. State, 213 Ga. 259, 98 S.E.2d 564 (1957); Cash v. State, 231 Ga. 285, 201 S.E.2d 625 (1973).

If the state simply reminds the jury that the jurors are not concerned with punishment and not that the defendant might not be required to suffer the full penalty of the law imposed by the court because of pardon, parole, or clemency, the prosecutor's comments do not violate this section. Berrian v. State, 139 Ga. App. 571, 228 S.E.2d 737 (1976); Freeman v. State, 245 Ga. App. 384, 537 S.E.2d 776 (2000).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Test for reversible error. — When no timely objection is interposed during improper closing argument, the test for reversible error is not simply whether or not the argument was objectionable, or even if the argument might have contributed to the verdict, but whether the improper argument in reasonable probability changed the result of the trial. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

Discussion of defendant's future being in jeopardy. — When the prosecutor in closing argument stated that the defendant's life was not in jeopardy, only the defendant's immediate future, although the Supreme Court disapproved of the prosecutor's comment, it did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 because it did not specifically refer to pardon, parole, or other clemency, and under the circumstances, the trial court's curative instructions were sufficient. Jones v. State, 258 Ga. 249, 368 S.E.2d 313 (1988).

Prosecutorial comment not violation. — Prosecutor's comment to the jury during final argument that "if [the defendant] is ever on the street again in his whole life, there is no doubt but that he'll commit crimes like this again" did not violate subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76. Finney v. State, 253 Ga. 346, 320 S.E.2d 147 (1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1088, 105 S. Ct. 1854, 85 L. Ed. 2d 151 (1985).

Viewed in context, the prosecutor's statements during closing argument merely served to remind the jury that the jurors were to be concerned with the defendant's guilt only, not the defendant's punishment, and thus, did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76. Joyce v. State, 235 Ga. App. 167, 509 S.E.2d 85 (1998).

Prosecutor may request jury not to consider possible penalties. — Closing argument by the state's attorney informing the jury that the jury should not take into consideration any possible penalty should the jury convict is not in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76. Mitchell v. State, 167 Ga. App. 306, 306 S.E.2d 322 (1983).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claim procedurally barred. — Defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the prosecutor's improper closing argument that life did not mean life was procedurally barred because the defendant did not raise it in the motion for new trial and did not obtain a ruling on the motion by the trial court. Cowart v. State, 294 Ga. 333, 751 S.E.2d 399 (2013).

Harmless error. — Even if a prosecutor's remarks about the defendant's credibility and statement that if the jury convicted the defendant of a lesser charge the jury "would be letting this defendant off the hook," could be interpreted as improper, the court held it was highly improbable in light of the evidence that the remarks changed the result of the trial, and any error in the prosecutor's argument was therefore harmless. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

Prosecutorial comment improper, but harmless. — Although harmless in view of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, the prosecutor's remark that the defendant had served only 14 of 20 years for a prior conviction was highly improper. Moore v. State, 242 Ga. App. 249, 529 S.E.2d 381 (2000).

Reference to drug rehabilitation not violation of section. — Trial court was not required to declare a mistrial when the prosecutor asked the jurors if the jurors believed that the defendant would be rehabilitated rather than go back to drugs if the defendant were released from jail since the prosecutor did not specifically refer to pardon, parole, or other clemency. Romine v. State, 256 Ga. 521, 350 S.E.2d 446 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Attack on witness not violation. — State counsel's contested closing argument attacking the credibility of testimony that had been given by the defendant's psychiatric expert did not work a violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 as no reference was made to the possibilities of pardon, parole, or other clemency. McGill v. State, 263 Ga. 81, 428 S.E.2d 341 (1993).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 prohibits only the argument that a defendant not serve the full amount of the defendant's sentence; the statute does not prohibit even making an argument in this regard concerning a witness. Thus, the defendant was entitled to cross examine the witness on the deal made with the prosecution to secure the witness's testimony in an effort to ascertain the witness's motive to testify, bias, or any interest in cooperating with the prosecution. Hernandez v. State, 244 Ga. App. 874, 537 S.E.2d 149 (2000).

Objection and motion for mistrial after prosecutor's argument ended was untimely. — Defendant's objection and motion for mistrial, made after the prosecutor's improper closing argument that life did not mean life ended, were not timely and were not preserved for appeal. Cowart v. State, 294 Ga. 333, 751 S.E.2d 399 (2013).

Cited in Wilson v. State, 212 Ga. 157, 91 S.E.2d 16 (1956); McKuhen v. State, 216 Ga. 172, 115 S.E.2d 330 (1960); Terhune v. State, 117 Ga. App. 59, 159 S.E.2d 291 (1967); Hunt v. State, 133 Ga. App. 548, 211 S.E.2d 601 (1974); Willingham v. State, 134 Ga. App. 144, 213 S.E.2d 516 (1975); Biddy v. State, 138 Ga. App. 4, 225 S.E.2d 448 (1976); Smith v. State, 146 Ga. App. 428, 246 S.E.2d 442 (1978); Spraggins v. State, 243 Ga. 73, 252 S.E.2d 620 (1979); Washington v. State, 245 Ga. 117, 263 S.E.2d 152 (1980); Felker v. State, 252 Ga. 351, 314 S.E.2d 621 (1984); Jackson v. State, 173 Ga. App. 851, 328 S.E.2d 741 (1985); Willis v. Kemp, 838 F.2d 1510 (11th Cir. 1988); Owens v. State, 192 Ga. App. 335, 384 S.E.2d 920 (1989); Pitts v. State, 259 Ga. 745, 386 S.E.2d 351 (1989); Saunders v. State, 198 Ga. App. 666, 402 S.E.2d 542 (1991); Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642 (1998); Bentley v. State, 262 Ga. App. 541, 586 S.E.2d 32 (2003); Daniel v. State, 292 Ga. App. 560, 665 S.E.2d 696 (2008).

Clemency

Grants of clemency. — Statute is not limited to clemency granted by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles or the Governor, but clemency that may be granted by any authority authorized by law including clemency granted by the trial court in permitting the service of the sentence on probation. Cash v. State, 231 Ga. 285, 201 S.E.2d 625 (1973).

This section applies to those statements concerning clemency by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles or other executive officers. Henderson v. State, 234 Ga. 893, 218 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

Probation and Parole

Trial court's flat refusal to answer a question about parole is not improperly suggestive and is not error. Tucker v. State, 244 Ga. 721, 261 S.E.2d 635 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 972, 100 S. Ct. 1666, 64 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 covers parole in misdemeanor cases. — While this section makes argument by counsel before the jury that the defendant may be paroled or the defendant's sentence reduced a mandatory ground for mistrial, the terms of the section are broad enough to cover the action of the trial court in paroling a defendant in a misdemeanor case. Cain v. State, 113 Ga. App. 477, 148 S.E.2d 508 (1966).

Sending of blank probation sentence to jury room together with blank misdemeanor sentence. — To send a blank probation sentence out to the jury room along with the blank misdemeanor sentence and as a part of it is indubitably a clear indication to the jury that it is at least possible, if not probable, that the defendant will not be sentenced to imprisonment, and is a fact which the jury might well take into illegal account in determining whether the defendant was guilty or innocent. This is the very thing which it was the intention of the General Assembly to prevent. Cain v. State, 113 Ga. App. 477, 148 S.E.2d 508 (1966).

Defendant is not permitted to refer to the possibility of parole in arguing to the jury, and later obtain a new trial based upon such argument, after an unfavorable verdict. Tamplin v. State, 235 Ga. 20, 218 S.E.2d 779, vacated in part on other grounds, 235 Ga. 774, 221 S.E.2d 455 (1975).

While O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 benefits defendants in many cases, the statute's prohibition is not limited to cases where the prosecutor would argue parole in order to obtain a more severe sentence. Instead, the statute proscribes all use of parole in argument. Davis v. State, 255 Ga. 598, 340 S.E.2d 869, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 245, 93 L. Ed. 2d 170 (1986).

Probation and Parole (Cont'd)

Defendant's parole eligibility is not, and ought not be, an issue considered by the jury in the sentencing phase of a death penalty case, and the jury should not be encouraged to add stipulations, conditions, or recommendations of no parole to the jury's verdict, nor should the jury be instructed, implicitly or explicitly, that a defendant's release on parole is a matter governed solely by the illimitable discretion of the Board of Pardons and Parole. Quick v. State, 256 Ga. 780, 353 S.E.2d 497 (1987).

Failure to object and reference to parole as precluding defendant from obtaining new trial. — Defendant is not permitted to introduce evidence of a prior parole, fail to object to the state's argument to the jury of the possibility of parole, argue a reference to parole and later obtain a new trial based upon such argument after an unfavorable verdict. Tucker v. State, 245 Ga. 68, 263 S.E.2d 109, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 891, 101 S. Ct. 253, 66 L. Ed. 2d 119 (1980).

Argument of rules and regulations regarding time to be served before parole may be applied for. — Court does not err in refusing to allow the defense attorney to argue to the jury the rules and regulations of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles regarding time served by the accused before the accused can make application for parole. Golden v. State, 213 Ga. 481, 99 S.E.2d 882 (1957).

Jury charge that probation sentence may be invoked for misdemeanor punishment. — If the trial court charges that there could be a probation sentence invoked for misdemeanor punishment, there is no reversible error if the trial court later recharges the jury to disregard this instruction. Fraley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 427, 170 S.E.2d 729 (1969).

Instruction regarding revocation of parole. — After the jury asks the court whether a prisoner who commits another felony after serving the minimum term fixed by the sentence and being paroled would be returned to serve the remainder of the sentence, and after the court tells the jury that the court cannot give the jury any instructions regarding a parole, but then proceeds to instruct the jury that the prison authorities have certain rules and regulations which the authorities have formulated and under which the authorities release a prisoner after the prisoner has served a minimum sentence provided the prisoner complies with certain conditions, and that the prison is thereafter permitted to serve the difference between the minimum and maximum sentence outside the confines of the prison, the latter portion of the instructions violates this section. Berry v. State, 107 Ga. App. 643, 131 S.E.2d 115 (1963).

Comments about possible probation. — After the district attorney commented during closing argument: "Of course, he [Defendant] doesn't want to get up on the stand and say, 'Well, a little of these drugs were mine.' What he wants to admit to is that the misdemeanor—the probationary amount of marijuana was his because he figures, 'I'll get something . . .,'" it was held that although probation is a judicial, rather than an executive function, it is not a matter for the jury, and the trial court properly instructed the jury to disregard the offending remarks and directed the district attorney not to comment further in this regard, and that it could not be said as a matter of law that the defendant was harmed in any way by the trial court's denial of a mistrial. Steele v. State, 181 Ga. App. 695, 353 S.E.2d 612 (1987).

Commenting on inability, as well as ability, to make parole. — Policy of not allowing argument or charge on matters concerning parole forbids comment with regard to the defendant's inability to make parole, as well as the defendant's ability to do so. Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030 (1983).

Meaning of life without parole. — Trial court may charge the jury on the meaning of life without parole but is not required to charge the jury that life without parole "means what it says" or to discourage the jury from considering parole eligibility. McClain v. State, 267 Ga.

378, 477 S.E.2d 814 (1996), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1106, 118 S. Ct. 2485, 138 L. Ed. 2d 993 (1997).

Prospect of parole in burglary prosecution. — In burglary prosecution, motion for mistrial was properly denied after the prosecuting attorney commented on the policy of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles regarding early release of prisoners because sentences in noncapital felony cases are imposed by the trial judge and not the jury. Cave v. State, 171 Ga. App. 22, 318 S.E.2d 689 (1984).

Questions from jury about parole. — If, and only if, the jury asks to be instructed about the possibility of parole, the court should mention the issue only to the extent of telling the jury in no uncertain terms that such matters are not proper for the jury's consideration. Quick v. State, 256 Ga. 780, 353 S.E.2d 497 (1987).

Violation of section not defective representation. — Violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 by raising the issue of the possibility of parole, by itself, does not constitute deficient representation by defense counsel. Parker v. Turpin, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1332 (N.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd sub nom. Parker v. Head, 244 F.3d 831 (11th Cir. 2001).

Death Penalty

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 does not apply to cases of waiver of the death penalty by the prosecution. Henderson v. State, 234 Ga. 893, 218 S.E.2d 622 (1975).

Remarks that death penalty, rather than life sentence, should be imposed. — When in a resentencing trial the remarks to the jury by the district attorney made no reference to parole of any nature, but were simply an attempt to convince the jury that the only appropriate punishment in the case was a sentence of death since, if a life sentence were imposed, the defendant would have another chance to do harm, even if in prison, such remarks were not improper. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Comment that case was not death penalty case. — Prosecutor's comment to the jury venire that the defendant's case was not a death penalty case did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76; the comment did not reflect upon the guilt or innocence of the defendant, and the defendant did not demonstrate harm from the statement. Stokes v. State, 281 Ga. 875, 644 S.E.2d 116 (2007).

Discussion of past parole in capital sentencing hearing not error. — In the sentencing phase of a capital murder trial, the prosecutor's discussion of the defendant's past parole did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76. Tucker v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 1496 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 1022, 106 S. Ct. 3340, 92 L. Ed. 2d 743 (1986).

Mistrial

Upon objection to argument which contravenes O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76, mistrial is mandatory; however, prosecutors must make explicit reference to pardon, parole, or other clemency. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Guilty plea exchange offer admissible at sentencing. — After a mistrial was granted at the behest of the defendant, a retrial was not barred by principles of double jeopardy because the government had not intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial by the inadvertent mistestimony of the state's private investigator. Mobley v. State, 262 Ga. 808, 426 S.E.2d 150, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 870, 114 S. Ct. 198, 126 L. Ed. 2d 156 (1993).

Failure to move for mistrial. — After the defendant objected to improper argument and asked the court to instruct the jury to disregard the argument, but did not move for a mistrial, the trial court did not err by merely sustaining the objection and giving curative instructions. Hammond v. State, 260 Ga. 591, 398 S.E.2d 168 (1990).

O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 does not require that a mistrial be declared even without a request. Hammond v. State, 260 Ga. 591, 398 S.E.2d 168 (1990).

When the defendant's counsel objected to an improper argument by the prosecutor based on O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 and the trial court sustained the objection and instructed the jury accordingly, counsel's failure to move for a mistrial did not constitute ineffective assistance since the defendant was not deprived of a fair sentencing trial. Hammond v. State, 264 Ga. 879, 452 S.E.2d 745, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 829, 116 S. Ct. 100, 133 L. Ed. 2d 54 (1995).

Mistrial (Cont'd)

Denial of motion for mistrial appropriate. — Testimony to which the defendant objected came from the defendant's wife, who stated that during hostage negotiations the defendant mentioned a parole officer; such testimony did not address the possibility of pardon, parole, or other clemency for the instant charges and thus did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76. Freeman v. State, 252 Ga. App. 217, 555 S.E.2d 879 (2001).

Prosecutor did not make a specific reference to pardon, parole, or other clemency in the prosecutor's closing arguments to the jury in the defendant's trial for felony murder and malice murder; thus, there was no violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 that required a mistrial because the trial court gave a sufficient curative instruction. Curles v. State, 276 Ga. 237, 575 S.E.2d 891 (2003).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 16 C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 326. 24 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 2419. 67A C.J.S., Pardon and Parole, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Prejudicial effect of statement or instruction of court as to possibility of parole or pardon, 12 A.L.R.3d 832.

Double jeopardy as bar to retrial after grant of defendant's motion of mistrial, 98 A.L.R.3d 997.

CHAPTER 9

VERDICT AND JUDGMENT GENERALLY

Article 1

General Provisions

Sec.

17-9-1. When direction of verdict of acquittal authorized; when motion for directed verdict of acquittal allowed; effect of motion upon defendant's right to present evidence and right to jury trial; assent of jury not required.

17-9-2. Jury to judge law and facts and give general verdict; imposition of sentence; form and construction of verdicts.

17-9-3. Recommendations for mercy in capital cases other than those of homicide; effect of no recommendation for mercy in capital cases generally and where defendant under age of 17 at time of commission of offense.

17-9-4. Validity of judgment rendered by court having no jurisdiction of person or subject matter.

Article 2

Rendition and Receipt of Verdict

17-9-20. Action by juror on private knowledge as to facts, witnesses, or parties.

17-9-21. Receipt of verdicts.

17-9-22. Expression of approval or disapproval of verdict of jury by judge.

17-9-23. Commending or complimenting of jury by judge.

Article 3

Amendment and Impeachment of Verdict

17-9-40. Amendment of verdict after dispersion of jury.

17-9-41. Use of affidavits of jurors relating to verdict [Repealed].

Article 4

Motions in Arrest

17-9-60. Jurisdiction of motion; notification of opposing party.

17-9-61. Time and grounds for motion generally.

17-9-62. Defects in pleadings or record aided by verdict or amendable not subject to motion.

17-9-63. Motion not relating to merits of offense charged not to be granted.

Cross references. — Amount of mental conviction required, § 24-14-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Interrogation or poll of jurors, during criminal trial, as to whether they were exposed to media publicity pertaining to alleged crime or trial, 55 A.L.R.6th 157.

ARTICLE 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Cross references. — Default judgments in state court cases, Uniform State Court Rules, Rule 15.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Verdict as affected by agreement in advance among jurors to abide by less than unanimous vote, 73 A.L.R. 93.

Juror's reluctant, equivocal, or conditional assent to verdict, on polling, as ground for mistrial or new trial in criminal case, 25 A.L.R.3d 1149.

Lesser-related state offense instructions: modern status, 50 A.L.R.4th 1081.

17-9-1. When direction of verdict of acquittal authorized; when motion for directed verdict of acquittal allowed; effect of motion upon defendant's right to present evidence and right to jury trial; assent of jury not required.

(a) Where there is no conflict in the evidence and the evidence introduced with all reasonable deductions and inferences therefrom shall demand a verdict of acquittal or "not guilty" as to the entire offense or to some particular count or offense, the court may direct the verdict of acquittal to which the defendant is entitled under the evidence and may allow the trial to proceed only as to the counts or offenses remaining, if any.

(b) The defendant shall be entitled to move for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by the prosecuting attorney or at the close of the case, even if he fails to introduce any evidence at the trial. A defendant who moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by the prosecuting attorney may offer evidence in the event that the motion is not granted, without having reserved the right to do so and to the same extent as if the motion had not been made. A motion for a directed verdict which is not granted shall not be deemed to be a waiver of the right to trial by jury. The order of the court granting a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal is effective without any assent of the jury.

History. — Code 1933, § 27-1802, enacted by Ga. L. 1971, p. 460, § 1; Ga. L. 1982, p. 3, § 17.

U.S. Code. — Verdicts, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 31.

Law reviews. — For article discussing the effect of United States v. Bell, 678 F.2d 547 (5th Cir. 1982), on the directed verdict in criminal cases, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 1209 (1984).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Evidence
Application
Practice and Procedure

General Consideration

Section is permissive, not mandatory. — Ga. L. 1971, p. 460, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1), which provides that the trial judge "may" direct a verdict of acquittal, is simply permissive, not mandatory, and the act is cumulative of the existing law as such right already inhered in the trial judge. Feldschneider v. State, 127 Ga. App. 745, 195 S.E.2d 184 (1972).

Construction of § 17-9-1 imposes duty, not merely authority, on trial judge. — While the wording of the statute appeared merely to authorize a verdict of acquittal under the circumstances mentioned therein, the entire language must be construed in light of the Appellate Practice Act authorizing an enumeration of error on the refusal of the trial court to direct a verdict of not guilty in a criminal case. When there is no conflict in the evidence and the evidence clearly demands a verdict of acquittal as a matter of law, there is a duty upon the trial judge to grant a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. The judge's failure to do so will constitute reversible error on appeal. Merino v. State, 230 Ga. 604, 198 S.E.2d 311 (1973); Rhodes v. State, 200 Ga. App. 193, 407 S.E.2d 442 (1991).

Constitutionality of statute on which indictment based. — Even though a criminal defendant may challenge the constitutionality of the statute alleged in the indictment before trial by demurrer, motion to quash, or plea in bar, by properly raising the constitutional objection, it is not too late to challenge the statute on which an indictment is based on motion for directed verdict. Simmons v. State, 246 Ga. 390, 271 S.E.2d 468 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1125, 101 S. Ct. 942, 67 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1981).

Motion for directed verdict cannot be made before trial. State v. Cooperman, 147 Ga. App. 556, 249 S.E.2d 358 (1978).

If the defendant moves for a directed verdict before any evidence is presented, the trial court does not err in denying the motion. Mann v. State, 167 Ga. App. 829, 308 S.E.2d 12 (1983).

No statutory authority existed for directed verdict. — Since at the time a case was tried there was no statutory authority for the direction of a verdict in a criminal case, it was not error for the trial court to refuse to direct a verdict. Allen v. State, 228 Ga. 859, 188 S.E.2d 793 (1972).

Review of directed verdict was not provided for in former Code 1933, § 27-1802 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1). Stynchcombe v. Hardy, 228 Ga. 130, 184 S.E.2d 356 (1971).

No provision for motion for judgment of not guilty notwithstanding verdict of guilty. — There is no provision of law for a court in the trial of a criminal case to entertain a motion for a judgment of not guilty notwithstanding a verdict of guilty. Austin v. State, 104 Ga. App. 795, 122 S.E.2d 926 (1961).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) after the defendant was convicted of driving under the influence to the extent that the defendant was a less-safe driver in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(1) because JNOV was not a remedy available in a criminal case. Masood v. State, 313 Ga. App. 549, 722 S.E.2d 149 (2012).

No provision for motion for directed verdict of acquittal notwithstanding mistrial. — Georgia law provides for neither a motion for judgment of acquittal notwithstanding the verdict nor a motion for judgment of acquittal notwithstanding mistrial. Wilson v. State, 233 Ga. App. 327, 503 S.E.2d 924 (1998).

Opposition to directed verdict by codefendant. — O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 sets out the circumstances in which a defendant may request and receive a directed verdict of acquittal, but is silent with regard to opposition by a codefendant. Broomfield v. State, 264 Ga. 145, 442 S.E.2d 242 (1994).

Motion addresses sufficiency of evidence. — Motion for directed verdict of acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 addresses the sufficiency of the evidence, not the sufficiency of the underlying accusation. Echols v. State, 187 Ga. App. 870, 371 S.E.2d 682 (1988).

Since the state's evidence authorizes conviction, the evidence cannot be found to demand a verdict of acquittal. Milner v. State, 159 Ga. App. 887, 285 S.E.2d 602 (1981).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Directed verdict proper only if acquittal is only finding possible. — Motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be made only after a proper and timely motion for a directed verdict has been made. However, the trial judge in a criminal case may direct a verdict only if, after all the state's evidence is in, a verdict of acquittal is the only legal finding possible. Summers v. State, 99 Ga. App. 183, 108 S.E.2d 140 (1959).

It is only when evidence demands verdict of not guilty that it is error for trial court to refuse motion for directed verdict of acquittal. Paxton v. State, 160 Ga. App. 19, 285 S.E.2d 741 (1981).

Motion for directed verdict should be granted only if there is no conflict in evidence and the evidence demands a verdict of acquittal as a matter of law. Zuber v. State, 248 Ga. 314, 282 S.E.2d 900 (1981); Martin v. State, 189 Ga. App. 483, 376 S.E.2d 888, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 376 S.E.2d 888 (1988); Grier v. State, 198 Ga. App. 840, 403 S.E.2d 857 (1991); Storey v. State, 205 Ga. App. 610, 422 S.E.2d 879, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 422 S.E.2d 879 (1992).

If there is no conflict in the evidence and a verdict of acquittal is demanded as a matter of law, it is error for the trial court to refuse to direct a verdict of acquittal. Poole v. State, 159 Ga. App. 792, 285 S.E.2d 205 (1981).

Trial court is authorized to take the case from the jury and direct a verdict of acquittal if the state clearly fails to meet the state's burden. Muckle v. State, 165 Ga. App. 873, 303 S.E.2d 54 (1983).

Directed verdict of acquittal is authorized only if there is no evidence to support a verdict to the contrary. Lane v. State, 177 Ga. App. 553, 340 S.E.2d 228 (1986).

Directed verdict of acquittal is authorized only if there is no evidence. Bradley v. State, 180 Ga. App. 386, 349 S.E.2d 263 (1986).

Directed verdict of acquittal will lie only if there is no evidence to support a contrary verdict. Hamm v. State, 187 Ga. App. 318, 370 S.E.2d 158, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 907, 370 S.E.2d 158 (1988).

Directed verdict of acquittal is authorized only if there is no evidence to support a verdict to the contrary. Mathis v. State, 204 Ga. App. 896, 420 S.E.2d 788, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 922, 420 S.E.2d 788 (1992); Gude v. State, 213 Ga. App. 573, 445 S.E.2d 355 (1994).

Directed verdict was moot. — Because the jury acquitted the defendant of murder but rendered convictions on the lesser included offenses of aggravated assault and kidnapping, a directed verdict on the murder counts was moot. Reagan v. State, 281 Ga. App. 708, 637 S.E.2d 113 (2006).

Any error in the trial court's failure to grant a defendant's motion for a directed verdict was harmless because an acquittal rendered the motion moot; pretermitting whether the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict, the jury found the defendant not guilty. Brown v. State, 299 Ga. App. 782, 683 S.E.2d 874 (2009).

Because the defendant was not convicted on the statutory-rape charge but was, instead, found guilty of attempted statutory rape as a lesser-included offense, the issue of whether the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal as to the statutory-rape charge was moot. Judice v. State, 308 Ga. App. 229, 707 S.E.2d 114 (2011).

Defendant's complaint that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal as to the offense of forcible rape was rendered moot because the defendant was not found guilty of that offense. Beaudoin v. State, 311 Ga. App. 91, 714 S.E.2d 624 (2011).

Directed verdict unwarranted in bench trial. — In a bench trial, a trial court cannot direct a verdict of acquittal because there is no verdict in a bench trial. Sistrunk v. State, 287 Ga. App. 39, 651 S.E.2d 350 (2007).

Contesting sufficiency of indictment. — Motion for directed verdict of acquittal is not a proper way to contest the sufficiency of an indictment. Williams v. State, 162 Ga. App. 350, 291 S.E.2d 425 (1982); Tibbs v. State, 211 Ga. App. 250, 438 S.E.2d 706 (1993).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on the ground that there was insufficient evidence that the crimes for which the defendant was charged, aggravated assault, making terroristic threats, and cruelty to children in the third degree, were committed on the date alleged in the indictment because there was sufficient evidence to support the allegations of the indictment; the exact date of the crimes was not a material allegation of the indictment because the exact date was not an essential element with respect to any of the charged offenses, and the date of the crimes proved at trial was prior to the return of the indictment and within the limitation periods for the crimes. Coats v. State, 303 Ga. App. 818, 695 S.E.2d 285 (2010), overruled on other grounds by McClure v. State, 306 Ga. 856, 834 S.E.2d 96 (2019).

Variance in indictment insufficient. — In a prosecution for burglary, because the variance between the indictment and the proof presented at trial did not misinform or mislead the defendant in any manner that resulted in surprise or impaired a defense, and the defendant could not be subjected to another prosecution for the same offense, the alleged variance was not fatal; as a result, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict. Chambers v. State, 284 Ga. App. 400, 643 S.E.2d 871 (2007).

Denial of directed verdict as to one charge after defendant convicted on another. — After the defendant is convicted of theft by taking only, and the evidence is sufficient to support the conviction, there is no harm in the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for directed verdict on an armed robbery charge since a prosecution for theft by taking would still be permissible. Dickerson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 429, 260 S.E.2d 535 (1979).

Reasons for mistrial did not require acquittal on double jeopardy grounds. — After a mistrial was declared due to the prosecutor's improper comments during closing, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for acquittal and discharge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 as the prosecutor did not intend to subvert the protections afforded by the Double Jeopardy Clause, at Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5 by referring to the defendant's financial status due to discussions that occurred on that issue, although the prosecutor later realized that such discussions were held outside of the presence of the jury; the defendant failed to make the requisite showing of a purposeful subversion of double jeopardy, nor did the defendant show an improper motive, a benefit to the state to retry the case, or conduct that gave rise to a presumption of unlawful intent. Mathis v. State, 276 Ga. App. 587, 623 S.E.2d 674 (2005).

Non-prejudicial Brady violation did not require directed verdict. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion for a directed verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 when the state's failure to turn over an audiotape of a controlled undercover drug transaction that the defendant was involved in, due to the mistaken destruction of the tape, was not shown to have caused the defendant the kind of prejudice that undermined confidence in the outcome of the trial or that created a reasonable doubt of guilt which did not otherwise exist. Blackwood v. State, 277 Ga. App. 870, 627 S.E.2d 907 (2006).

Cited in Carter v. State, 227 Ga. 788, 183 S.E.2d 392 (1971); Morris v. State, 228 Ga. 39, 184 S.E.2d 82 (1971); McKenzey v. State, 125 Ga. App. 508, 188 S.E.2d 116 (1972); Chambers v. State, 127 Ga. App. 196, 192 S.E.2d 916 (1972); Slocum v. State, 230 Ga. 762, 199 S.E.2d 202 (1973); Geiger v. State, 129 Ga. App. 488, 199 S.E.2d 861 (1973); Butler v. State, 130 Ga. App. 469, 203 S.E.2d 558 (1973); Willingham v. State, 131 Ga. App. 851, 207 S.E.2d 249 (1974); Carlile v. State, 132 Ga. App. 787, 209 S.E.2d 241 (1974); Phillips v. State, 133 Ga. App. 461, 211 S.E.2d 411 (1974); Murray v. State, 135 Ga. App. 264, 217 S.E.2d 293 (1975); Cunningham v. State, 235 Ga. 126, 218 S.E.2d 854 (1975); Welch v. State, 235 Ga. 243, 219 S.E.2d 151 (1975); Johnson v. State, 235 Ga. 486, 220 S.E.2d 448 (1975); Kennedy v. State, 136 Ga. App. 305, 220 S.E.2d 788 (1975); Campbell v. State, 136

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Ga. App. 338, 221 S.E.2d 212 (1975); Bennett v. State, 136 Ga. App. 806, 222 S.E.2d 207 (1975); Van Voltenburg v. State, 138 Ga. App. 628, 227 S.E.2d 451 (1976); Birks v. State, 237 Ga. 861, 230 S.E.2d 294 (1976); Selph v. State, 142 Ga. App. 26, 234 S.E.2d 831 (1977); Phillips v. State, 238 Ga. 632, 235 S.E.2d 12 (1977); Glass v. State, 239 Ga. 78, 235 S.E.2d 513 (1977); Williamson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 177, 235 S.E.2d 643 (1977); Rutledge v. State, 142 Ga. App. 399, 236 S.E.2d 143 (1977); Bowen v. State, 239 Ga. 517, 238 S.E.2d 62 (1977); Hall v. State, 143 Ga. App. 706, 240 S.E.2d 125 (1977); Taylor v. State, 144 Ga. App. 534, 241 S.E.2d 590 (1978); Bowler v. State, 145 Ga. App. 633, 244 S.E.2d 142 (1978); Collins v. State, 146 Ga. App. 857, 247 S.E.2d 602 (1978); McCane v. State, 147 Ga. App. 730, 250 S.E.2d 181 (1978); Sleister v. State, 148 Ga. App. 296, 251 S.E.2d 152 (1978); Bryan v. State, 148 Ga. App. 428, 251 S.E.2d 338 (1978); Long v. State, 150 Ga. App. 796, 258 S.E.2d 603 (1979); Hood v. State, 157 Ga. App. 282, 277 S.E.2d 261 (1981); Heath v. State, 159 Ga. App. 17, 282 S.E.2d 673 (1981); Hartley v. State, 159 Ga. App. 157, 282 S.E.2d 684 (1981); Felchlin v. State, 159 Ga. App. 120, 282 S.E.2d 743 (1981); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981); Jones v. State, 159 Ga. App. 704, 285 S.E.2d 45 (1981); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981); Baxter v. State, 160 Ga. App. 181, 286 S.E.2d 460 (1981); Nelson v. State, 160 Ga. App. 168, 286 S.E.2d 504 (1981); Jones v. State, 160 Ga. App. 209, 286 S.E.2d 764 (1981); Whitehead v. State, 160 Ga. App. 644, 287 S.E.2d 648 (1981); Gaither v. State, 160 Ga. App. 705, 288 S.E.2d 18 (1981); Allums v. State, 161 Ga. App. 842, 288 S.E.2d 783 (1982); Ingram v. State, 161 Ga. App. 5, 288 S.E.2d 842 (1982); Brown v. State, 161 Ga. App. 55, 289 S.E.2d 9 (1982); Paulk v. State, 161 Ga. App. 89, 289 S.E.2d 257 (1982); Biggers v. State, 162 Ga. App. 163, 290 S.E.2d 159 (1982); Griner v. State, 162 Ga. App. 207, 291 S.E.2d 76 (1982); Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77 (1982); James v. State, 162 Ga. App. 490, 292 S.E.2d 91 (1982); Lingold v. State, 162 Ga. App. 486, 292 S.E.2d 193 (1982); Harper v. State, 249 Ga. 519, 292 S.E.2d 389 (1982); Storey v. State, 162 Ga. App. 763, 292 S.E.2d 483 (1982); Bradshaw v. State, 162 Ga. App. 750, 293 S.E.2d 360 (1982); Morris v. State, 163 Ga. App. 118, 293 S.E.2d 866 (1982); Sherrell v. State, 163 Ga. App. 345, 294 S.E.2d 559 (1982); Salter v. State, 163 Ga. App. 655, 294 S.E.2d 612 (1982); Bernard v. State, 163 Ga. App. 570, 295 S.E.2d 546 (1982); Slocumb v. State, 164 Ga. App. 114, 296 S.E.2d 409 (1982); Collins v. State, 164 Ga. App. 482, 297 S.E.2d 503 (1982); Williams v. State, 164 Ga. App. 562, 298 S.E.2d 282 (1982); Hill v. State, 164 Ga. App. 564, 298 S.E.2d 286 (1982); Graham v. State, 250 Ga. 473, 298 S.E.2d 499 (1983); Davenport v. State, 165 Ga. App. 299, 300 S.E.2d 549 (1983); Mease v. State, 165 Ga. App. 746, 302 S.E.2d 429 (1983); Wilbanks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 876, 303 S.E.2d 144 (1983); Pitts v. State, 166 Ga. App. 60, 303 S.E.2d 151 (1983); Estes v. State, 251 Ga. 347, 305 S.E.2d 778 (1983); Hubbard v. State, 167 Ga. App. 32, 305 S.E.2d 849 (1983); LaPan v. State, 167 Ga. App. 250, 305 S.E.2d 858 (1983); LaPann v. State, 167 Ga. App. 288, 306 S.E.2d 373 (1983); Keenan v. State, 168 Ga. App. 51, 308 S.E.2d 26 (1983); Lush v. State, 168 Ga. App. 740, 310 S.E.2d 287 (1983); Chester v. State, 169 Ga. App. 854, 315 S.E.2d 56 (1984); Padgett v. State, 170 Ga. App. 98, 316 S.E.2d 523 (1984); Moore v. State, 170 Ga. App. 698, 318 S.E.2d 172 (1984); H.R.G. v. State, 170 Ga. App. 776, 318 S.E.2d 210 (1984); Christmas v. State, 171 Ga. App. 4, 318 S.E.2d 682 (1984); Weems v. State, 172 Ga. App. 401, 323 S.E.2d 272 (1984); Mullinax v. State, 172 Ga. App. 601, 323 S.E.2d 897 (1984); State v. Williams, 172 Ga. App. 708, 324 S.E.2d 557 (1984); Houck v. State, 173 Ga. App. 388, 326 S.E.2d 567 (1985); Hamby v. State, 173 Ga. App. 750, 328 S.E.2d 224 (1985); Anderson v. State, 254 Ga. 470, 330 S.E.2d 592 (1985); Sprayberry v. State, 174 Ga. App. 574, 330 S.E.2d 731 (1985); Jones v. State, 174 Ga. App. 783, 331 S.E.2d 633 (1985); Green v. State, 175 Ga. App. 92, 332 S.E.2d 385 (1985); Thompson v. State, 175 Ga. App. 645, 334 S.E.2d 312 (1985); Collins v. State, 176 Ga. App. 634, 337 S.E.2d 415 (1985);

Smith v. State, 178 Ga. App. 300, 342 S.E.2d 769 (1986); Battle v. State, 178 Ga. App. 655, 344 S.E.2d 477 (1986); Hamilton v. State, 179 Ga. App. 434, 346 S.E.2d 881 (1986); Williams v. State, 181 Ga. App. 49, 351 S.E.2d 207 (1986); Russell v. State, 181 Ga. App. 665, 353 S.E.2d 565 (1987); Noeske v. State, 181 Ga. App. 778, 353 S.E.2d 635 (1987); Payne v. State, 184 Ga. App. 366, 361 S.E.2d 666 (1987); Johnson v. State, 185 Ga. App. 167, 363 S.E.2d 773 (1987); Arnold v. State, 191 Ga. App. 436, 382 S.E.2d 174 (1989); Jenkins v. State, 191 Ga. App. 546, 382 S.E.2d 389 (1989); Oglesby v. State, 192 Ga. App. 165, 384 S.E.2d 192 (1989); Hood v. State, 193 Ga. App. 701, 389 S.E.2d 264 (1989); Ross v. State, 194 Ga. App. 285, 390 S.E.2d 429 (1990); Williams v. State, 195 Ga. App. 422, 394 S.E.2d 112 (1990); Anderson v. State, 195 Ga. App. 673, 394 S.E.2d 607 (1990); Kilgore v. State, 195 Ga. App. 884, 395 S.E.2d 337 (1990); Irby v. State, 260 Ga. 401, 396 S.E.2d 210 (1990); Clark v. State, 197 Ga. App. 318, 398 S.E.2d 377 (1990); Randolph v. State, 198 Ga. App. 291, 401 S.E.2d 310 (1991); Ranson v. State, 198 Ga. App. 659, 402 S.E.2d 740; Tyler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 685, 402 S.E.2d 780 (1991); Nelson v. State, 199 Ga. App. 487, 405 S.E.2d 310 (1991); Marshall v. State, 199 Ga. App. 678, 405 S.E.2d 893 (1991); Jones v. State, 201 Ga. App. 102, 410 S.E.2d 199 (1991); Wright v. State, 205 Ga. App. 149, 421 S.E.2d 331 (1992); White v. State, 263 Ga. 94, 428 S.E.2d 789 (1993); Tucker v. State, 208 Ga. App. 224, 430 S.E.2d 84 (1993); White v. State, 208 Ga. App. 885, 432 S.E.2d 562 (1993); Moss v. State, 209 Ga. App. 59, 432 S.E.2d 825 (1993); Harden v. State, 210 Ga. App. 673, 436 S.E.2d 756 (1993); Riden v. State, 213 Ga. App. 17, 443 S.E.2d 865 (1994); Raulerson v. State, 268 Ga. 623, 491 S.E.2d 791 (1997); Pittman v. State, 230 Ga. App. 799, 498 S.E.2d 309 (1998); Anderson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 807, 499 S.E.2d 717 (1998); Oliver v. State, 232 Ga. App. 816, 503 S.E.2d 28 (1998); Johnson v. State, 234 Ga. App. 218, 507 S.E.2d 13 (1998); Morrow v. State, 272 Ga. 691, 532 S.E.2d 78 (2000); Watson v. State, 243 Ga. App. 636, 534 S.E.2d 93 (2000); King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000); Jackson v. State, 247 Ga. App. 273, 543 S.E.2d 770 (2000); Hayes v. State, 249 Ga. App. 857, 549 S.E.2d 813 (2001); Ginn v. State, 251 Ga. App. 159, 553 S.E.2d 839 (2001); Nel v. State, 252 Ga. App. 761, 557 S.E.2d 44 (2001); Weston v. State, 276 Ga. 680, 580 S.E.2d 204 (2003); Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533; Lee v. State, 281 Ga. App. 479, 636 S.E.2d 547 (2006); Lyons v. State, 282 Ga. 588, 652 S.E.2d 525 (2007); Christian v. State, 297 Ga. App. 596, 677 S.E.2d 767 (2009); Williamson v. State, 308 Ga. App. 473, 708 S.E.2d 57 (2011); Boyd v. State, 306 Ga. 204, 830 S.E.2d 160 (2019).

Evidence

Circumstantial evidence sufficient to convict. — Since the evidence introduced during the trial was sufficient to convict the appellant on circumstantial evidence and did not demand a verdict of acquittal, the trial judge properly overruled the motion for directed verdict at the end of the state's case. Sutton v. State, 237 Ga. 418, 228 S.E.2d 815 (1976); Connell v. State, 163 Ga. App. 53, 293 S.E.2d 367 (1982).

In a trial for aggravated assault, although there were certain discrepancies in the evidence and a portion of the evidence was circumstantial rather than direct and there was direct evidence pointing to the same conclusion as the circumstantial evidence, the quantum of evidence in the defendant's favor fell far short of that necessary to "demand" a verdict of acquittal. Cobb v. State, 195 Ga. App. 429, 393 S.E.2d 723 (1990).

Trial court properly denied a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1(a) since there was ample circumstantial evidence under former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-6 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-6) for the jury to have found that the defendant was guilty of aggravated battery, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-24(a); the defendant's claim that the defendant tripped and fell while carrying the infant son was contradicted by expert testimony that the injury to the infant's brain was caused by Shaken Baby Syndrome. Lindo v. State, 278 Ga. App. 228, 628 S.E.2d 665 (2006).

Given that the state's evidence showed that the defendant essentially admitted to being drunk to an investigating officer, as a result of an attempt to drive the car which was lodged on a curb, and the officer found an open beer container inside the car, although circumstantial, that evidence was sufficient to support a finding that the defendant was driving the car while intoxicated; hence, the defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal. Moore v. State, 281 Ga. App. 141, 635 S.E.2d 408 (2006).

Evidence (Cont'd)

Jury decides if circumstantial evidence sufficient. — Upon motion for directed verdicts of acquittal if there is any evidence of guilt, it is for the jury to decide whether that evidence, circumstantial though it may be, is sufficient to warrant a conviction. Castillo v. State, 166 Ga. App. 817, 305 S.E.2d 629 (1983).

No conflict in evidence. — Defendant is entitled to a directed verdict only if there is no conflict in the evidence, and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions and inferences therefrom, demands a verdict of not guilty. Benjein v. State, 158 Ga. App. 794, 282 S.E.2d 391 (1981); Howard v. State, 165 Ga. App. 555, 301 S.E.2d 910 (1983); Parrish v. State, 182 Ga. App. 247, 355 S.E.2d 682 (1987).

Only if there is no conflict in the evidence and a verdict of acquittal is demanded as a matter of law is it error for the trial court to refuse to direct a verdict of acquittal. Wisecup v. State, 157 Ga. App. 853, 278 S.E.2d 682 (1981).

Conflicts in evidence. — If there are significant conflicts in the evidence regarding material issues, it cannot be said as a matter of law that the evidence, together with reasonable inferences and deductions therefrom, "demands" a verdict of acquittal. Elzey v. State, 168 Ga. App. 633, 309 S.E.2d 906 (1983).

Because a conflict existed in the evidence presented at the defendants' cruelty to children trial arising from the testimony of one pediatrician who testified that the defendants' child's nutritional deprivation could have resulted from a reflux condition, and another pediatrician testified that the child's reflux condition could not possibly have caused the victim's malnutrition, a directed verdict was inappropriate. Allen v. State, 278 Ga. App. 292, 628 S.E.2d 717 (2006).

Because sufficient evidence was presented that a juvenile was a party to the crime of entering an automobile with the intent to commit a theft or felony, and the evidence was corroborated by a police officer who questioned the juvenile's cohort, an adjudication based on the juvenile's commission of the act was upheld on appeal; thus, given that the resolution of conflicts in the evidence and credibility of the witnesses fell within the province of the trial court, the juvenile's motion for a directed verdict was properly denied. In the Interest of B.D., 287 Ga. App. 185, 651 S.E.2d 129 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on the ground that there was insufficient corroboration of an accomplice's testimony because there was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-8 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-8); the testimony of the victim's fiancée and the accomplice's friend was sufficient to corroborate the accomplice's testimony directly identifying the defendant as the shooter, the physical description of the shooter that the fiancée provided to the police fit the defendant, and the fiancée's description of the shooter's clothes was consistent with the accomplice's trial testimony about what the defendant was wearing on the day of the incident. Johnson v. State, 288 Ga. 803, 708 S.E.2d 331 (2011).

Directed verdict in juvenile delinquency hearing. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant juvenile's motion for directed verdict as to aggravated assault and aggravated battery on the ground that the evidence established that the defendant was acting in self-defense because the evidence was sufficient for the juvenile court to find that the defendant exceeded any reasonable self-defense when the juvenile followed the victim out of a train and struck the victim. In the Interest of J. W., 306 Ga. App. 339, 702 S.E.2d 649 (2010).

Inconsistencies in evidence insufficient for direct verdict of acquittal. — Because sufficient evidence was supplied via the testimony from the child victim, and the witnesses who corroborated the child's testimony, to support the defendant's aggravated sexual battery and child molestation convictions, despite any alleged inconsistencies, the convictions were upheld as was the denial of the defendant's motions for an acquittal and a new trial. Lilly v. State, 285 Ga. App. 427, 646 S.E.2d 512 (2007).

Issues which are jury questions. — Whether a defendant impeded an officer in carrying out the officer's lawful duties is usually a jury question, except if there is no conflict in the evidence and all reasonable deductions and inferences therefrom demand a verdict of acquittal. Wagner v. State, 206 Ga. App. 180, 424 S.E.2d 861 (1992).

In a joint prosecution, the trial court did not err in denying the first defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal because of deficiencies in the victims' identifications and inconsistencies in the state's evidence, as it was within the jury's province to weigh the evidence and determine witness credibility; moreover, even if there were inconsistencies in the evidence, the jury as the trier of fact was authorized to find those identifications to be credible. Jones v. State, 285 Ga. App. 121, 645 S.E.2d 608 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for an acquittal as the question of whether or not the defendant had the requisite intent to steal was for the jury to decide. Dudley v. State, 287 Ga. App. 794, 652 S.E.2d 840 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0319, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 168 (Ga. 2008).

Jury's role to assess conflicting evidence. — Defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal in a trial for theft by taking a motor vehicle was properly denied because the jury properly assessed the evidence, although conflicting, and found each fact necessary to make out the state's case; trial counsel failed to preserve error regarding exclusion of a portion of the victim's videotaped interview; and a photographic lineup included people of the same general age and race as the defendant and was not impermissibly suggestive. Sherls v. State, 272 Ga. App. 152, 611 S.E.2d 780 (2005).

Because contradictions and uncertainties in the testimony did not render the evidence against the defendant insufficient but were ultimately for the jury to decide, and the victim's testimony that the gun used to commit the crime was not actually pointed at the victim did not mean that the intruders, including the defendant, did not commit an armed robbery since the evidence presented authorized the jury to find that the defendant participated in the committed crimes and was sufficient to support the defendant's armed robbery, false imprisonment, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony convictions; thus, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Sheely v. State, 287 Ga. App. 92, 650 S.E.2d 762 (2007).

Initial chain of custody discrepancy did not authorize directed verdict. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict and in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial after the trial court questioned the state's forensic scientist as to the scientist's findings and permitted the state to reopen the evidence to establish the chain of custody of the drugs to the crime laboratory; the trial court did not communicate an opinion as to the witness or the evidence, and defense counsel identified the failure to establish a chain of custody in the defendant's motion for a directed verdict, although the trial court identified what was missing from the chain of custody. Bramblett v. State, 259 Ga. App. 427, 577 S.E.2d 100 (2003).

Because the state met the state's burden in establishing a chain of custody by sufficiently demonstrating that the evidence seized was the same as that which was admitted at trial, the defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict on this ground. Cook v. State, 287 Ga. App. 81, 650 S.E.2d 757 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1874, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 127 (Ga. 2008).

Directed verdict not warranted if evidence on mental ability in dispute. — Defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict on the issue of the defendant's mental retardation since the evidence regarding the defendant's mental ability was disputed and conflicting. Jenkins v. State, 269 Ga. 282, 498 S.E.2d 502, cert. denied, 525 U.S. 968, 119 S. Ct. 416, 142 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1998).

Evidence (Cont'd)

Distinction between evidence requiring charge as to entrapment and evidence requiring directed verdict. — Distinction must be made between evidence which raises a defense of entrapment and which would require that the jury be charged as to the law of entrapment and the burden of proof thereon, and evidence which under the standards set out in O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 would demand a finding of entrapment and, therefore, a directed verdict of acquittal. Childs v. State, 158 Ga. App. 376, 280 S.E.2d 401 (1981); McNorton v. State, 159 Ga. App. 604, 284 S.E.2d 107 (1981); Parker v. State, 190 Ga. App. 35, 378 S.E.2d 157 (1989).

Conflict on noncontrolling point insufficient for denial of motion. — Fact that there may be some conflict in evidence on a noncontrolling point is not a sufficient conflict to justify the denial of the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal in cases when the evidence is insufficient as a matter of law to authorize a conviction. Boggus v. State, 136 Ga. App. 917, 222 S.E.2d 686 (1975).

Evidence insufficient to require directed verdict based on self-defense. — Defendant claimed to have acted in self-defense after the victim fired at the defendant, but there was a conflict in the evidence as to the point in time in which the danger posed by the deceased passed; thus, the evidence did not demand a verdict of acquittal. Murff v. State, 165 Ga. App. 808, 302 S.E.2d 697, rev'd on other grounds, 251 Ga. 478, 306 S.E.2d 267 (1983).

When defendant's testimony as to entrapment will support directed verdict. — Defendant's testimony as to entrapment, even if unrebutted by any other witness to the alleged misconduct, will not entitle the defendant to a directed verdict of acquittal unless that unrebutted testimony, together with all reasonable deductions and inferences therefrom, demands a finding that entrapment occurred. McNorton v. State, 159 Ga. App. 604, 284 S.E.2d 107 (1981); Caithaml v. State, 163 Ga. App. 429, 294 S.E.2d 674 (1982); Worley v. State, 185 Ga. App. 528, 364 S.E.2d 897 (1988); Newt v. State, 200 Ga. App. 262, 407 S.E.2d 487 (1991).

Rule that the state's failure to produce a confidential informant to rebut a defendant's entrapment testimony requires a directed verdict of acquittal did not apply after an undercover investigator testified that the informant had nothing to do with setting up the sale of the pound of cocaine, and in fact did not know the sale was going on. Armand v. State, 164 Ga. App. 350, 296 S.E.2d 734 (1982).

Since the evidence did not demand a finding of entrapment, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Rapier v. State, 245 Ga. App. 211, 535 S.E.2d 860 (2000).

Evidence insufficient to require directed verdict based on entrapment. — Evidence did not authorize the granting of a directed verdict since, other than the defendant's own uncorroborated testimony, the defendant offered no evidence whatsoever in refutation of that presented by the prosecution and the entrapment defense which the defendant attempted to raise was likewise unsupported by any evidence other than the defendant's own testimony that the informant had a reputation for violence, that the informant had uttered a threat during appellant's negotiations with the Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent, and that the defendant had assumed that a bulge the defendant allegedly observed beneath the agent's clothing was a gun, and, the testimony of the agent, who was present during all stages of the transaction, was sufficient to rebut the defense of entrapment and to create an issue of fact for the jury. Meade v. State, 165 Ga. App. 556, 301 S.E.2d 912 (1983).

Trial court did not err in convicting the defendant of the sale of cocaine and in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal because the jury was authorized to find that the state's evidence rebutted the defendant's case of entrapment beyond a reasonable doubt since the uncontroverted testimony of the informant and the surveillance recording showed that the defendant had the previously established ability to purchase cocaine from the drug dealer and that the defendant willingly participated in the drug deal; there is no entrapment when the informant merely furnishes an opportunity to a defendant who is ready to commit the offense. Jackson v. State, 305 Ga. App. 591, 699 S.E.2d 884 (2010).

Defendant must show prejudice from trial delay to prevail on directed verdict motion. — After weighing the factors considered in determining whether the defendant's right to a speedy trial was violated, the appeals court upheld the denial of the defendant's plea in bar and demand for an acquittal as the defendant failed to show that any prejudice resulted from the delay in bringing the case to trial. Lackey v. State, 283 Ga. App. 139, 640 S.E.2d 717 (2006).

Three year and two month delay was fatal. — Trial court abused the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motions for discharge and acquittal because nothing in the trial court's order showed that the court considered whether the delay before trial was uncommonly long given the circumstances of the case, the pretrial delay of three years and two months greatly exceeded the amount of time necessary to establish a presumption of prejudice, the trial court erred in failing to assign blame for the delay, and the prejudice to the defendant was legally significant; the trial court's finding that the defendant's anxiety was the same as every other defendant awaiting trial was not supported by the evidence because the defendant's anxiety included losing custody of a small child and having the state threaten to take a different child away from the defendant at the time of that child's birth. Teasley v. State, 307 Ga. App. 153, 704 S.E.2d 248 (2010).

No fatal variance in evidence and accusations. — Trial court correctly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal based on a variance between the allegations and proof as to the date of the offense. Frymyer v. State, 179 Ga. App. 391, 346 S.E.2d 573 (1986).

For construction purposes, the state's act of merely tracking the language of O.C.G.A. § 16-10-24(a), which used the masculine pronoun "his" to include the feminine gender, did not result in a fatal variance between the evidence at trial and the allegations of the accusation in a case involving a female officer, entitling both defendants to a directed verdict. Curtis v. State, 285 Ga. App. 298, 645 S.E.2d 705 (2007), overruled on other grounds by McClure v. State, 306 Ga. 856, 834 S.E.2d 96 (2019).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal, which alleged that the evidence fatally varied from the allegations in the accusation as: (1) the defendant failed to raise a challenge to the sufficiency of an indictment through a special demurrer; and (2) the defendant admitted to possessing, endorsing, and uttering a check belonging to the victim. Tucker v. State, 283 Ga. App. 428, 641 S.E.2d 653 (2007).

Evidence did not demand verdict of acquittal. See Carpenter v. State, 167 Ga. App. 634, 307 S.E.2d 19 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 79, 310 S.E.2d 912 (1984); Spence v. State, 252 Ga. 338, 313 S.E.2d 475 (1984); Brooks v. State, 169 Ga. App. 543, 314 S.E.2d 115 (1984); Sharp v. State, 183 Ga. App. 641, 360 S.E.2d 50 (1987); Rose v. State, 195 Ga. App. 399, 393 S.E.2d 459 (1990); Funderburk v. State, 195 Ga. App. 441, 393 S.E.2d 727 (1990); Gray v. State, 207 Ga. App. 648, 428 S.E.2d 663 (1993); Felder v. State, 264 Ga. App. 583, 591 S.E.2d 471 (2003).

When a conviction is upheld on appeal because the evidence is such that a rational trier of fact could find appellant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, it cannot possibly be said the evidence demanded a verdict of acquittal. Miller v. State, 201 Ga. App. 108, 410 S.E.2d 328 (1991).

Given evidence that the defendant (1) knowingly provided the officer with a false name and date of birth, (2) failed to provide written identification when asked to do so, and (3) refused to respond when the police repeatedly knocked and telephoned, all of elements of an obstruction charge were shown, thus supporting the denial of a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Williams v. State, 289 Ga. App. 402, 657 S.E.2d 556 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on a charge of attempted burglary in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-4-1 and 16-7-1(a) because the evidence was sufficient to authorize the jury to conclude that the defendant took a substantial step toward entering an owner's apartment to commit a felony; the defendant's inculpatory statement that the defendant intended to enter the owner's apartment to get money was direct evidence of the defendant's guilt, and this statement, combined with a witness's testimony that the witness heard the defendant and the defendant's brother discuss entering the owner's apartment through the window, saw them on the owner's porch, and then heard the window breaking, provided ample evidence to support the defendant's conviction of attempted burglary beyond a reasonable doubt. Durham v. State, 295 Ga. App. 734, 673 S.E.2d 80 (2009).

Evidence (Cont'd)

There was sufficient evidence to support a defendant's convictions on two counts of armed robbery, and the trial court did not err by failing to grant the defendant's motion for a directed verdict, based on both victims' identification of the defendant; the defendant being found in a nearby location to the truck stop where the attacks occurred walking rapidly away; and the defendant being found with exactly the amount of cash taken from one victim. Burden v. State, 296 Ga. App. 441, 674 S.E.2d 668 (2009).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion for a new trial or the defendant's motion for a directed verdict because the evidence was sufficient for the trial court to find the defendant guilty of burglary in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(a) beyond a reasonable doubt when the back window of a home was broken and police found the defendant hiding in a closet under a pile of clothing. Williams v. State, 297 Ga. App. 723, 678 S.E.2d 95 (2009).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal because the evidence was sufficient to authorize the defendant's convictions for attempted armed robbery, O.C.G.A. § 16-4-1, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b)(1), given the victim's eyewitness testimony that the defendant approached the eyewitness with a handgun while attempting to obtain money from the cash register of a store. Nyane v. State, 306 Ga. App. 591, 703 S.E.2d 53 (2010), cert. denied, No. S11C0420, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 538 (Ga. 2011).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal because the state presented sufficient evidence to corroborate a coconspirator's testimony under former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-8 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-8) and for the jury to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the crimes for which the defendant was convicted; the state presented the testimony of numerous witnesses and other evidence that sufficiently corroborated the coconspirator's testimony about the defendant's participation in the crimes. Walker v. State, 310 Ga. App. 223, 713 S.E.2d 413 (2011).

Because there was sufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict that the defendant was guilty of criminal damage to property in the second degree, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal; the owner of the truck the defendant damaged testified that the owner paid to have the broken windows repaired and that the owner paid the amount shown on the repair bill, and the bill and photographs of the damages to the vehicle were introduced into evidence. Elsasser v. State, 313 Ga. App. 661, 722 S.E.2d 327 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0949, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 555 (Ga. 2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on the ground that there was no competent evidence to corroborate the codefendant's testimony because the codefendant's testimony was corroborated in the wealth of similar transaction evidence presented to the jury. Alatise v. State, 291 Ga. 428, 728 S.E.2d 592 (2012).

Because the evidence was sufficient to sustain the defendant's convictions and to establish venue, there was no merit to the defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to move for a directed verdict of acquittal on those issues. Bearden v. State, 316 Ga. App. 721, 728 S.E.2d 874 (2012).

While the co-murderer's statement to police did make up a significant portion of the testimony connecting the defendant to the murders, it was not the only evidence against the defendant as cell phone evidence indicated the defendant was near the victims' home near the time the crimes took place and direct testimony established that the defendant recruited at least one participant in the robbery scheme that resulted in the murders. Thompson v. State, 302 Ga. 533, 807 S.E.2d 899 (2017).

Cited in Klausen v. State, 294 Ga. App. 463, 669 S.E.2d 460 (2008).

Application

Mere presence where the crime is being committed is insufficient for conviction. — Mere presence of one where a crime is being committed without any evidence to further show participation in the crime, directly or indirectly, is insufficient upon which to base a conviction. Therefore, in such case a defense motion for directed verdict should be granted. Simmons v. State, 149 Ga. App. 589, 254 S.E.2d 907 (1979).

Directed verdict not required if sufficient evidence of lesser included offense. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict since sufficient evidence was adduced to convict the defendant for the lesser included offense of voluntary manslaughter. Pierce v. State, 209 Ga. App. 366, 433 S.E.2d 641 (1993).

Distinction between legally insufficient evidence and verdict against weight of evidence. — Trial court's review of the evidence under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-21 differs from the court's review of the evidence on a motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1. In the latter case, the trial court has a duty to grant a directed verdict of acquittal when there is no conflict in the evidence and it clearly demands a verdict of acquittal as a matter of law. Lavertu v. State, 325 Ga. App. 709, 754 S.E.2d 663 (2014).

Directed verdict in assault cases. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for acquittal as a matter of law, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1, as the evidence was sufficient to support the defendant's conviction on four counts of assault, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-20 and 16-5-21(a)(2), as the defendant and the codefendant committed two home invasions, whereupon the victims therein were fearful, some were harmed, and during the incidents, the defendant held a night stick and instructed the victims to cooperate with the codefendant, who brandished a handgun. Moyer v. State, 275 Ga. App. 366, 620 S.E.2d 837 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863 (2008).

Directed verdict in aggravated assault cases. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal as direct evidence that the defendant fired at the victim and the defendant's own admission that the defendant fired at the victim was sufficient to submit the question of whether the defendant was guilty of aggravated assault to the jury; no error occurred pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-6 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-6), involving a conviction based solely on circumstantial evidence, as the state offered more than circumstantial evidence to support the state's case against the defendant. Cobb v. State, 268 Ga. App. 66, 601 S.E.2d 443 (2004).

Trial court did not err in denying a codefendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal as to two aggravated assault charges given that sufficient evidence was presented that: (1) both the defendant and the codefendant, while armed, attempted to rob the victims; (2) off-duty police officers working as security officers identified the defendants; (3) an assault rifle and a sawed-off shotgun were fired at the police as both the defendants were pursued; and (4) the weapons were recovered after both the defendants were apprehended. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. App. 163, 635 S.E.2d 422 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal because there was ample evidence of the defendant's guilt of aggravated assault in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(a)(1) based on the defendant's act of firing two shots in the victim's direction, wounding the victim in the chest and leg. Nyane v. State, 306 Ga. App. 591, 703 S.E.2d 53 (2010), cert. denied, No. S11C0420, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 538 (Ga. 2011).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict after a jury found the defendant guilty of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon against a bus driver, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(a)(2), because the bus driver testified that the driver did not feel free to drive away since the driver felt the driver's life was in danger; the driver testified that the driver chose not to drive away for fear that the defendant would shoot. Cannon v. State, 310 Ga. App. 262, 712 S.E.2d 645 (2011).

Directed verdict in aggravated assault and reckless conduct case. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1, because there was sufficient evidence to support the convictions for aggravated assault and reckless conduct, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-21(a)(2) and 16-5-60(b), respectively; the defendant and the codefendants were involved in a physical altercation with two restaurant patrons, and a codefendant's testimony that the defendant retrieved a gun and shot the victim was sufficiently repeated by the testimony of other witnesses, who also connected the defendant with the shooting pursuant to the corroboration requirement in former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-8 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-8). Baker v. State, 273 Ga. App. 297, 614 S.E.2d 904 (2005).

Directed verdicts in aggravated assault and armed robbery cases. — Despite the defendant's claim of innocence, convictions for armed robbery and two counts of aggravated assault were upheld on appeal, given sufficient evidence showing that the defendant waited at the scene of the robbery and then assisted the codefendants in an attempted escape; hence, the defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal and the state was not required to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except guilt as required by former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-6 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-6). Jordan v. State, 281 Ga. App. 419, 636 S.E.2d 151 (2006).

Directed verdict in aggravated assault with intent to rape cases. — Denial of a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1, was proper because the evidence was sufficient to support the defendant's conviction of aggravated assault with intent to rape in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21; defendant came to the home of the victim, who was a former girlfriend, and the victim claimed that the defendant physically and sexually assaulted her, causing multiple serious injuries and bruises. Goodall v. State, 277 Ga. App. 600, 627 S.E.2d 183 (2006).

Directed verdict in aggravated battery cases. — Because the defendant shot the victim in the buttocks, rendering the victim's rectum and a portion of the victim's colon useless for a period of time, the evidence sufficed to sustain an aggravated battery conviction under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-24(a); consequently, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict. Parham v. State, 270 Ga. App. 54, 606 S.E.2d 79 (2004).

Directed verdicts in aggravated sexual battery cases. — Aggravated sexual battery conviction was upheld on appeal as was the trial court's order denying the defendant a directed verdict of acquittal because: (1) the victim's testimony sufficiently demonstrated that the defendant put the defendant's hand inside her vaginal area; (2) the victim's testimony authorized the jury to conclude that the defendant penetrated the victim's sexual organ with a foreign object; (3) similar transaction evidence was properly admitted to prove the defendant's bent of mind and motive; (4) each similar transaction witness positively identified the defendant as the person who committed the independent act, and the proof of one of the incidents tended to prove the offense at trial, which also involved digital penetration in a hospital setting; and (5) three other similar transaction incidents, while not involving an actual touching, were properly admitted as evidence that the defendant offered a female money or clothing in exchange for a sexual favor of some sort; finally, because the defendant failed to object that testimony from these witnesses was cumulative, the defendant waived this claim of error for purposes of appeal. Enurah v. State, 279 Ga. App. 883, 633 S.E.2d 52 (2006).

Directed verdict on aggravated sodomy charge. — Denial of a motion for directed verdict on a charge of aggravated sodomy was proper because the defendant and codefendant sexually assaulted three victims during an armed robbery, including one instance in which the defendant and the codefendant took turns raping one victim, and the aggravated sodomy was committed during the sexual assaults; the jury could reasonably find that the defendant and codefendant had a common criminal intent to commit the sexual assaults and the defendant could be found guilty of the act performed by the codefendant. Coley v. State, 272 Ga. App. 446, 612 S.E.2d 608 (2005).

Directed verdict in aggravated stalking cases. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal as to two aggravated stalking charges, despite claims that: (1) the state failed to prove the defendant acted for the purpose of harassing and intimidating the victim; and (2) the defendant lacked the requisite intent to commit the crimes; the former argument attacked the credibility of the witnesses, which the appeals court did not weigh, and, regarding the latter argument, the intention with which an act was committed was a jury question. Chatham v. State, 280 Ga. App. 695, 634 S.E.2d 856 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict after a jury found the defendant guilty of aggravated stalking in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-91(a) because evidence of the defendant's continuing unauthorized contacts with the victim and repeated violations of restraining orders established a pattern of harassing behavior; a permanent restraining order had been entered that prohibited the defendant from having any contact with the victim, but the defendant violated that order by sending a letter to the victim that caused the victim to fear for the victim's own family and that of the victim's family. Additionally, a directed verdict was also inappropriate when the evidence authorized the jury to find that venue in Lowndes County was properly established; the victim and the victim's family resided in Lowndes County, and the victim's mother testified that the defendant had sent the letter to their residence and that the letter was retrieved from the mailbox at their residence. Bowen v. State, 304 Ga. App. 819, 697 S.E.2d 898 (2010).

Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict because the jury was authorized to find the defendant guilty of aggravated stalking in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-91(a); the victim testified that the defendant had previously threatened the victim, the defendant had a history of violence against the victim, and the defendant made repeated phone calls and sent several text messages to the victim. Brooks v. State, 313 Ga. App. 789, 723 S.E.2d 29 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C0974, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 1035 (Ga. 2012).

Directed verdicts in armed robbery cases. — Despite the defendant's assertion that the defendant only pretended to have a weapon while robbing a restaurant, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motions for a directed verdict of acquittal on charges of armed robbery in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(a) and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony as the victims testified that the defendant used something that felt and looked like a gun and one victim, the night manager, testified that the defendant threatened to "blow" that victim's head off if the victim did not open the safe; such testimony sufficiently showed that the defendant's actions created a reasonable apprehension on the part of the victims that an offensive weapon was being used. White v. State, 258 Ga. App. 546, 574 S.E.2d 629 (2002).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 because there was sufficient evidence to support the defendant's conviction of armed robbery in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41; defendant and two others waited at a vacant house for a pizza delivery person, and upon arrival, the defendant held up a revolver and demanded the pizza. Oliver v. State, 270 Ga. App. 429, 606 S.E.2d 874 (2004).

Application (Cont'd)

Despite the defendant's contention on appeal that the state's evidence was insufficient, specifically, regarding the presence of a gun, given that the state presented sufficient evidence to support the jury's finding of a reasonable apprehension on the part of the victim that an offensive weapon was being used in an armed robbery, when coupled with the defendant's admission to possessing a gun at the time of the robbery, the defendant's armed robbery conviction was upheld; thus, the defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal. Fluellen v. State, 284 Ga. App. 584, 644 S.E.2d 486 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict after the defendant was convicted of armed robbery because there was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-8 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-8) since there was evidence from which a jury could find sufficient corroboration of the accomplice's testimony to support the defendant's conviction; the testimony of the victims corroborated the accomplice's testimony because the victims physical description of the perpetrator was consistent with the accomplice's testimony about what the defendant was wearing on the day of the robbery. Harris v. State, 311 Ga. App. 336, 715 S.E.2d 757 (2011).

Directed verdict in armed robbery and aggravated assault cases. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on an armed robbery and aggravated assault charge as there was evidence that the defendant picked up a coin bag from a table in a laundry room, twice pointed a gun at the victim's neck, ordered the victim to kneel, demanded the victim's wallet and keys, and left the laundry room with the coin bag and the victim's keys. Kirk v. State, 271 Ga. App. 640, 610 S.E.2d 604 (2005).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal on the defendant's aggravated assault with intent to rob convictions because the jury was authorized to conclude that the defendant fired a gun at the victims to further a robbery, and the indictment did not charge the defendant with a specific intent to rob the victims but only with a general intent to rob; the defendant approached the victims, pointed a gun toward the head of one of the victims, and demanded money, and after robbing that victim, the defendant fled and fired several shots at the porch where the victims had been standing and at the victims once the victims began chasing the defendant. Johnson v. State, 304 Ga. App. 371, 696 S.E.2d 396 (2010).

Directed verdict in armed robbery and theft of a motor vehicle. — In a case wherein a defendant confessed that after killing the defendant's mother the defendant took cash and blank checks from the mother's purse and drove away in the mother's car, sufficient evidence existed to support the defendant's conviction for armed robbery and theft by taking a motor vehicle, in addition to the defendant's conviction for malice murder; as a result, the trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on the counts charging armed robbery and theft by taking a motor vehicle. Hester v. State, 282 Ga. 239, 647 S.E.2d 60 (2007).

Directed verdict in attempt to commit armed robbery cases. — In a criminal trial on a charge of criminal attempt to commit armed robbery, a trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for directed verdict; the criminal attempt under O.C.G.A. § 16-4-1 was committed when the defendant and the defendant's two coworkers obtained equipment, including guns and ammunition, in preparation for robbing a store, drove to the store, and were thereafter spotted by the police. Level v. State, 273 Ga. App. 601, 615 S.E.2d 640 (2005).

Directed verdict in attempted arson and aggravated assault case. — Denial of the defendant's motions for a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict was proper as the evidence established the essential elements of attempted arson and aggravated assault; the evidence showed that the defendant poured gasoline near two ignition sources, a light bulb and hot water heater, in the crawlspace of his estranged girlfriend's house and then told the estranged girlfriend's adult children to light the water heater's pilot flame. McGraw v. State, 276 Ga. App. 607, 624 S.E.2d 232 (2005).

Directed verdict in burglary cases. — As the defendant assisted her husband in committing burglaries by not only driving with him to the scene of the crimes, but by serving as the getaway driver, the evidence sufficed to show that she was a party to her husband's crimes, and the denial of the defendant's motion for directed verdict was proper. Head v. State, 261 Ga. App. 185, 582 S.E.2d 164 (2003).

Trial court correctly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on burglary charges since: (1) the evidence showed that property which was reported stolen from various residences was found at the house where the defendant was staying; (2) recent unexplained possession of that property was probative evidence of burglary; and (3) shoe prints made on the premises of two burglarized residences belonged to shoes owned by the defendant. Porter v. State, 264 Ga. App. 526, 591 S.E.2d 436 (2003).

Defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal was properly denied because evidence from independent sources sufficiently corroborated the accomplice's statements implicating the defendant in the burglary. The accomplice's statements were corroborated by the victim's testimony that the defendant saw the victim bring the shotguns inside the apartment, by the victim's wife's testimony that the defendant had seen the victims leave the victims' apartment, and by the apartment manager's testimony that the defendant had been standing outside the victims' apartment, along with the accomplice, during the time period when the crimes were committed. Stocks v. State, 268 Ga. App. 351, 601 S.E.2d 729 (2004).

Because the evidence presented by the state was sufficient to sustain the defendant's conviction for burglary, trial counsel's failure to move for a directed verdict did not constitute ineffective assistance. Brown v. State, 289 Ga. App. 297, 656 S.E.2d 582 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict, which was based on the argument that the state's case relied too heavily on allegedly tainted evidence concerning the victims' pretrial identification of burglars, because at the time trial counsel moved for the directed verdict, the allegedly tainted identification evidence had been admitted without objection and, accordingly, the trial court properly considered that evidence in deciding the motion; even in the absence of testimony concerning the victims' pretrial identification of the defendant, there was sufficient evidence to support the defendant's conviction because the defendant and the codefendant matched the general description of the burglars that the victims gave to police, the defendants were seen walking a short distance from the scene, not long after the burglary occurred, at the time police first saw them, the codefendant was carrying a backpack stolen during the break-in, when the codefendant saw police, the codefendant immediately discarded the backpack, and a number of items stolen during the burglary were recovered from the front porch of the defendant's residence. Bell v. State, 306 Ga. App. 853, 703 S.E.2d 680 (2010).

Directed verdict for violating age prohibition for body piercing. — Denial of the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal was proper, in the defendant's conviction of piercing the body of a person under the age of 18, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-71.1(a), as the defendant did not verify that an individual was, in fact, 18 years old before the defendant pierced the individual's tongue. At the time, the individual was 17 years old. Sparks v. State, 292 Ga. App. 143, 664 S.E.2d 247 (2008).

Directed verdict in child molestation cases. — Child's testimony that the child saw the defendant molest the child's sister was sufficient competent evidence to support a conviction for that crime, and the trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict. Mantooth v. State, 197 Ga. App. 797, 399 S.E.2d 505 (1990), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669 (2003).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on the charge of aggravated child molestation because the evidence was sufficient to allow a jury to find that the defendant had the requisite intent for aggravated child molestation as the fact that the defendant expected a drug dealer to give the defendant and the defendant's daughter crack cocaine in exchange for their sexual favors did not exclude a finding that the defendant also intended the sexual acts to arouse or satisfy the defendant or the daughter's sexual desires. Odom v. State, 267 Ga. App. 701, 600 S.E.2d 759 (2004).

Trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1, on two counts of child molestation in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4, was proper because the evidence of the defendant's inappropriate sexual abuse of the victim, defendant's son, sufficiently placed the dates of the charged offenses within the seven-year limitations period of O.C.G.A. §§ 17-3-1(c) and 17-3-2.1(a)(5). Allen v. State, 275 Ga. App. 826, 622 S.E.2d 54 (2005).

Because the 13-year-old male victim testified that when the victim was sleeping the defendant pulled down the victim's pants and underwear and performed oral sex on him, and that testimony was corroborated by the defendant's girlfriend who observed the incident, there was sufficient evidence to support the defendant's conviction for aggravated child molestation, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(c), as there was sufficient evidence to establish that the defendant committed "sodomy," as that term was defined under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-2(a); accordingly, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a judgment of acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1. Steverson v. State, 276 Ga. App. 876, 625 S.E.2d 476 (2005).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on a child molestation charge, despite a claim that no physical evidence of other support for the victim's testimony was presented as: (1) Georgia law did not require corroboration of a child molestation victim's testimony; and (2) the victim's testimony was sufficient to support the defendant's conviction. Keith v. State, 279 Ga. App. 819, 632 S.E.2d 669 (2006).

Directed verdict of acquittal unwarranted as: (1) the credibility of the child victim and any conflicts in the trial testimony were matters solely within the province of the jury to decide; (2) physical findings were not required to corroborate the charges of child molestation, aggravated sexual battery, and aggravated child molestation; and (3) the victim's testimony alone was sufficient to authorize the jury to find the defendant guilty of the crimes charged under the standard of Jackson v. Virginia. Hutchinson v. State, 287 Ga. App. 415, 651 S.E.2d 523 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on the count of an indictment charging the defendant with attempted aggravated child molestation because the defendant was convicted only of the offense of criminal attempt, which was supported by the evidence, and the defendant could be convicted of the lesser-included offense of criminal attempt pursuant to a proper jury instruction. Arnold v. State, 305 Ga. App. 45, 699 S.E.2d 77 (2010).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal as to the child-molestation count because the evidence was sufficient to support the jury's findings that the defendant committed the offense of child molestation, O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(a)(1); the jury was authorized to infer that the defendant was kissing the victim on the mouth because the victim testified that they were kissing, and the evidence was sufficient to show that the defendant violated the statute prohibiting child molestation in at least two of the ways alleged in the indictment, which charged the defendant with kissing the victim on the mouth, exposing the defendant's privates to and having intercourse with the victim, who was under 16 years of age, with intent to arouse and satisfy their sexual desires. Judice v. State, 308 Ga. App. 229, 707 S.E.2d 114 (2011).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a directed verdict based on the testimony of the victim that defendant repeatedly had sexual intercourse and engaged in other sexual acts with the victim, who was younger than 16, as well as the wife's testimony that defendant admitted to having sex with the victim. Jones v. State, 333 Ga. App. 796, 777 S.E.2d 480 (2015).

Motion for a judgment of acquittal on charges of aggravated sexual battery, aggravated child molestation, and child molestation was properly denied as the defendant's testimony that the defendant blacked out during the incident did not demand a finding that the defendant lacked the requisite criminal intent; the victim testified that the defendant began rubbing the victim's legs, touched the victim's "private part" through her clothing, pulled down the defendant's pants as well as the victim's pants, picked the victim up, and began rubbing the victim up and down against the defendant's "private part." Ward v. State, 274 Ga. App. 511, 618 S.E.2d 154 (2005).

Directed verdict in concealment of death and theft by taking case. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal as the defendant did not show that the defendant's trial for charges of concealment of a death and theft by taking was conducted in an improper venue, that there was a fatal variance between the allegations in the indictment and the proof offered at trial, that the case against the defendant was barred by the statute of limitations, or that the indictment was fatally defective. James v. State, 274 Ga. App. 498, 618 S.E.2d 133 (2005).

Directed verdict in trafficking in cocaine cases. — In a trial when the defendant was subsequently convicted of trafficking in cocaine, the trial court did not err in overruling the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal on the ground that as a matter of law the state failed to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that the contraband was in the defendant's actual or constructive possession. Since the defendant presented no evidence to show that anyone else had equal access to the defendant's personal bag under the bed in the room the defendant rented, there was clearly sufficient evidence from which a rational trier of fact could find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Mathis v. State, 204 Ga. App. 896, 420 S.E.2d 788, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 922, 420 S.E.2d 788 (1992).

Trafficking in cocaine and heroin possession upheld based on circumstantial evidence. — Defendant's convictions for trafficking in cocaine and possession of heroin with intent to distribute, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(b) and 16-13-31(a), were supported by sufficient circumstantial evidence pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-6 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-14-8) since it was shown that a woman stated that the defendant was residing in an apartment and selling drugs, a search of the apartment revealed drugs, cash, and photographs and papers with the defendant's name on them, as well as a sweater which the defendant was seen wearing, and the defendant changed the locks on the apartment; accordingly, the trial court's denial of the defendant's motions for a directed verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 and for a new trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-5-23 were properly denied. Williams v. State, 262 Ga. App. 67, 584 S.E.2d 625 (2003).

Directed verdict in possession of cocaine with intent to distribute case. — Despite the defendant's equal access claim, because: (1) the evidence sufficiently showed the defendant's ownership and possession of the vehicle where the contraband was found; (2) the similar transaction evidence showed that the defendant previously admitted possessing an almost identical array of drugs and drug processing paraphernalia; (3) the informant was a mere tipster and not a material or necessary witness; and (4) trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance, the defendant's possession of cocaine with intent to distribute conviction was upheld on appeal; thus, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Cauley v. State, 287 Ga. App. 701, 652 S.E.2d 586 (2007).

Codefendants' convictions for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(b), and possession with intent to distribute a controlled substance within 1,000 feet of a housing project, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-32.5(b), were unsupportable as a matter of law, and the trial court erred by denying the codefendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal because the circumstantial evidence and the reasonable inferences derived therefrom were insufficient to connect the codefendant to the cocaine, which was found in an upstairs bedroom occupied by the codefendants; no evidence was introduced to show that the codefendant resided in the apartment where the cocaine was found, which could authorize an inference that the codefendant possessed the property therein. Jackson v. State, 306 Ga. App. 33, 701 S.E.2d 481 (2010).

Application (Cont'd)

Directed verdict in trafficking in cocaine cases. — Defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal was properly denied and the evidence supported the defendant's conviction for trafficking in cocaine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(a)(1) as the defendant arranged the drug transaction with an undercover officer, accepted the container in which the officer directed the defendant to place the cocaine, and delivered to the officer 397 grams of cocaine with a purity of 44 percent. Salgado v. State, 268 Ga. App. 18, 601 S.E.2d 417 (2004).

Directed verdict in sale of cocaine cases. — Because the evidence supporting the defendant's convictions revealed that the defendant was twice caught on tape selling crack cocaine to confidential informants, and a police officer testified that the location of one of the sales was within 200 to 300 feet of a public housing project, the defendant's convictions for selling cocaine and of distributing cocaine within 1,000 feet of a housing project and 1,000 feet of a school were upheld; thus, the defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal. Banks v. State, 270 Ga. App. 221, 606 S.E.2d 34 (2004).

Directed verdict in possession with intent to distribute cocaine case. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1(a) in a case for possession with intent to distribute cocaine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30; defendant was seen fleeing into the woods wearing an unmarked black hat, a dog smelled the defendant on the same hat that was found near the defendant and that contained cocaine, and the defendant was not wearing a hat when the defendant was found. Riggins v. State, 281 Ga. App. 266, 635 S.E.2d 867 (2006).

Directed verdict on charge of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute. — Defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on a charge of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute was properly denied; the evidence establishing the defendant's constructive possession of cocaine included the defendant's presence in the room where the cocaine was found, the defendant's actual possession of a key to the apartment where the cocaine was found and $346 in cash, testimony by another individual at the scene that the individual and the defendant were partners in the drug trade, and the defendant's giving a false name when police arrived. Jackson v. State, 276 Ga. App. 694, 624 S.E.2d 270 (2005).

Directed verdict in trafficking in methamphetamine cases. — After a search of the defendant's car produced, among other things, drugs, syringes, scales, and a slip of paper with amounts of money listed next to various names and initials, there was sufficient evidence from which the jury was authorized to find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of trafficking in methamphetamine; the trial court therefore did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Yarbrough v. State, 264 Ga. App. 848, 592 S.E.2d 681 (2003).

Trial court's denial of a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 was proper as the evidence was sufficient to support a conviction of trafficking in methamphetamine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(e); there was clearly evidence that the sale of the drug involved more than 28 grams of methamphetamine, that the defendant either possessed or sold the methamphetamine through the defendant's presence when the drug was being cut, weighed, packaged, and sold, and that the defendant was liable as an aider and abettor under O.C.G.A. § 16-2-21 even if there was no evidence that the defendant either arranged the sale or received any money in connection therewith. Blackwood v. State, 277 Ga. App. 870, 627 S.E.2d 907 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying a codefendant's motion for a directed verdict on the charge of trafficking in methamphetamine because based upon the circumstantial evidence presented, the jury was authorized to find that the codefendant was in joint constructive possession of the methamphetamine with the defendant, which was located at the kitchen table where the defendant had been sitting; the defendant lived at the residence with the codefendant, the defendant was present at the time of a controlled buy, and the defendant had access to the drugs that were seized from the kitchen table. Fyfe v. State, 305 Ga. App. 322, 699 S.E.2d 546 (2010).

Defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal because the jury was authorized to find the defendant guilty of trafficking in methamphetamine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(e) beyond a reasonable doubt since the evidence was sufficient to show that the defendant knowingly had the power and intention to exercise dominion and control over the drugs, which were stashed inside a green vehicle; the defendant had moments earlier given an accomplice the keys to the vehicle, told the accomplice where to drive and park the vehicle, and led the accomplice to a motel. Flores v. State, 308 Ga. App. 368, 707 S.E.2d 578 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1072, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 527 (Ga. 2011).

Trial court erred in denying the codefendant's motion for a directed verdict after the codefendant was convicted of trafficking in methamphetamine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(e) because the evidence against the codefendant was insufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the codefendant was in actual or constructive possession of the drugs found in a vehicle, and there was no presumption of drug possession since there was no evidence that the codefendant owned or controlled the vehicle in which the drugs were found; there was no evidence that the codefendant had even been in or had any connection to that vehicle, no testimony implicated the codefendant in the transaction, and the evidence showed nothing more than the codefendant's presence in the vehicle with the defendant, but there was no evidence that the codefendant had the power and intent to exercise control over the drugs. Flores v. State, 308 Ga. App. 368, 707 S.E.2d 578 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1072, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 527 (Ga. 2011).

Directed verdict in sale of methamphetamine case. — Conviction for the sale of methamphetamine was upheld on appeal because the state presented sufficient evidence to support a charge of the sale of methamphetamine before the defendant moved for a directed verdict of acquittal, specifically, that the drugs allegedly sold to an informant were packaged in the same type of Ziploc bag as those found on the defendant's person, and the defendant was in possession of a large of amount of cash and paraphernalia. Ramey v. State, 288 Ga. App. 800, 655 S.E.2d 675 (2007).

Directed verdict in possession of methamphetamine cases. — Although the defendant contended that the trial court erred by denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal because presence in the vicinity of contraband did not establish possession, the defendant and the codefendant were indicted and tried together for possession of methamphetamine, the jury was entitled to conclude that the defendant was in possession of the methamphetamine-coated pipe, which was found in the car the defendant drove, next to the driver's seat; moreover, the jury heard the officer's testimony that the defendant stated at arrest that the defendant was aware the item was used to smoke methamphetamine, and the trial court charged the jury on the doctrine of equal access. Thus, the jury was able to contemplate and reject the equal access defense, and sufficient evidence was presented for the jury to find that the defendant possessed the methamphetamine. Dover v. State, 307 Ga. App. 126, 704 S.E.2d 235 (2010).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal as to the charge of possession of methamphetamine because the trier of fact was presented with sufficient evidence to determine beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of possessing methamphetamine since the court was authorized to conclude that the defendant either dropped or discarded the methamphetamine during the struggle with police when the defendant fled from a traffic stop; the evidence included the officer's testimony that the officer saw the defendant tuck something into a waistband while in a car, the defendant's flight from law enforcement after being stopped for a minor traffic offense, the proximity of the methamphetamine to the location where the defendant fell to the ground, and the defendant's statement to the officer that the defendant had exchanged drugs for use of the car. Bone v. State, 311 Ga. App. 390, 715 S.E.2d 789 (2011).

Directed verdict in driving without insurance cases. — Defendant's conviction for driving without insurance in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-10(b) was based on sufficient evidence and, accordingly, the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a judgment of acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 was properly denied since the jury determined, based mainly on circumstantial evidence, that the elements of the crime were satisfied; the record revealed that the defendant was involved in a collision, slowed down briefly and then fled the scene, and then produced an insurance card which did not appear to be authentic and was not validated by the insurance company. Augustin v. State, 260 Ga. App. 631, 580 S.E.2d 640 (2003).

Defendant's motion for a directed verdict on the charge of driving with no proof of insurance was properly denied because the arresting officer confirmed several times that the defendant could not find the defendant's proof of insurance, which was sufficient evidence to sustain the conviction. Broadnax-Woodland v. State, 265 Ga. App. 669, 595 S.E.2d 350 (2004).

Directed verdict in issues of delinquency. — Evidence was sufficient to authorize a trial court to find the defendant delinquent for being a party to a homicide, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-2-20(b)(3), and, thus, the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal was properly denied; the defendant's intent could be inferred easily from the fact that the defendant stood and watched while a friend beat the victim and defecated on the victim, never leaving to call for help. In the Interest of K.B.T., 279 Ga. App. 350, 631 S.E.2d 412 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant juvenile's motion for a directed verdict and in adjudicating the defendant delinquent on an obstruction charge because an officer working as a security guard at a restaurant was engaged in the lawful discharge of the officer's official duties at the time of the officer's encounter with the defendant as required by O.C.G.A. § 16-10-24. In the Interest of D.S., 295 Ga. App. 847, 673 S.E.2d 321 (2009).

Directed verdict in disorderly conduct cases. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on a charge of disorderly conduct since the evidence did not demonstrate that the defendant's cursing and violent movement of the defendant's car door was directed solely at the passenger, as the defendant alleged, but was directed at the victim; furthermore, there was evidence that the defendant "violently" shook the defendant's keys at the victim, and the victim saw the defendant actually damaging the victim's vehicle by scratching the vehicle with a key. Crutcher v. State, 267 Ga. App. 410, 599 S.E.2d 353 (2004).

Directed verdicts in drug cases. — Defendant's spontaneous oral identification of a substance as marijuana and possession of over 12 pounds of the substance authorized denial of a directed verdict of acquittal by the trial court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1. Turner v. State, 173 Ga. App. 782, 328 S.E.2d 368 (1985).

There was sufficient evidence to support the defendant's convictions for trafficking in cocaine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(a) and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b)(5) and, accordingly, the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a directed verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 was proper; the record revealed that upon being stopped for a seatbelt violation, the defendant and the defendant's passenger were very anxious, their versions of where the defendants had been conflicted, and upon a consensual search of the car, a pistol and cocaine were found, which gave rise to a rebuttable presumption that the defendant and the passenger were in joint constructive possession thereof. Taylor v. State, 263 Ga. App. 420, 587 S.E.2d 791 (2003), cert. denied, 542 U.S. 941, 124 S. Ct. 2916, 159 L. Ed. 2d 820 (2004).

Defendant was not entitled to an acquittal on either a charge of conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamine or possession of methamphetamine as the evidence showed that methamphetamine was being manufactured inside the residence in which the defendant was found, and conviction of possession of methamphetamine did not rest solely upon evidence that the methamphetamine was found on the premises also occupied by others, nor did such conviction rest solely upon the defendant's spatial proximity to the contraband. McWhorter v. State, 275 Ga. App. 624, 621 S.E.2d 571 (2005).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, and properly entered judgments of conviction against the defendant for misdemeanor possession of marijuana and possession of cocaine as the evidence sufficiently showed that the defendant possessed marijuana which police found in a search of the defendant's home and that the defendant possessed cocaine found in a search of the home and car. Heller v. State, 275 Ga. App. 637, 621 S.E.2d 591 (2005).

Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on a charge of felony possession of marijuana. The amount of marijuana was established by a witness's testimony that the defendant returned to the witness's apartment with "about a pound" of marijuana in a grocery bag. Rosser v. State, 284 Ga. 335, 667 S.E.2d 62 (2008).

Denial of a motion for mistrial or directed verdict on a possession of marijuana charge based on the state's alleged failure to prove the evidence was marijuana beyond a reasonable doubt was proper. The defendant referred to the substance as marijuana during the defendant's testimony, and this, together with an officer's testimony, was sufficient for the jury to find the defendant guilty of possession of marijuana beyond a reasonable doubt. Dulcio v. State, 297 Ga. App. 600, 677 S.E.2d 758 (2009).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict after a jury found the defendant guilty of trafficking in cocaine, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(a)(1)(A), and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(j), because the verdict was not insupportable as a matter of law; in addition to evidence that the defendant rented a hotel room where illegal drugs were found, had a key to the suite, and was going to the suite at a time when a great quantity and variety of drugs were in open view, there was other evidence linking the defendant to the contraband found there, including the defendant's suspicious behavior upon seeing officers near the suite and the presence of the defendant's personal property inside the suite. Glass v. State, 304 Ga. App. 414, 696 S.E.2d 140 (2010).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal after a jury found the defendant guilty of possession of methamphetamine because the totality of the evidence, although circumstantial, was sufficient to authorize a rational jury to find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt and to reject as speculative and unreasonable the hypothesis that someone else discarded the drugs in a patrol car; the defendant possessed a homemade smoking pipe containing methamphetamine residue, there was similar transaction evidence, and the patrol officer testified that the officer had exclusive control of the officer's patrol car, the officer stayed with the officer's car whenever the car was serviced by third parties, the officer searched the backseat immediately after the defendant exited from the car, and the officer discovered the drugs directly up under the seat where the defendant had been sitting. Taylor v. State, 305 Ga. App. 748, 700 S.E.2d 841 (2010).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict because the evidence was sufficient for a rational trier of fact to find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of distribution of marijuana, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(j), and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b)(4); the testimony of a party to the transaction was corroborated by the observations of the detectives, the marijuana taken into evidence, the written statements of the parties regarding the defendant's involvement, and the defendant's own statement to a detective. Arnett v. State, 311 Ga. App. 811, 717 S.E.2d 312 (2011).

Directed verdict in firearm possession cases. — Trial court erred in denying the codefendant's motion for a directed verdict after the codefendant was convicted of possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b)(5) because the evidence did not support the "during the commission of a felony" element of the firearm possession charge; the evidence against the codefendant was insufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the codefendant was in actual or constructive possession of drugs found in the vehicle in which the codefendant was riding. Flores v. State, 308 Ga. App. 368, 707 S.E.2d 578 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1072, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 527 (Ga. 2011).

Evidence sufficient to show drug transaction within 1,000 feet of public housing. — Defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1(a) on a charge of distributing cocaine within 1,000 feet of a public housing project in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-32.5(b); because another participant in the drug transaction testified that the transaction occurred at the "Atlanta Street Apartments," and an officer familiar with the area testified that the "Atlanta Street Apartments" were owned by a housing authority and people of lower income lived there, evidence was sufficient to show that the transaction occurred within 1,000 feet of a housing project. Barnett v. State, 276 Ga. App. 238, 623 S.E.2d 136 (2005).

Directed verdicts in DUI cases. — Directed verdicts of acquittal were not required on charges because the evidence was sufficient to enable any rational trier of fact to find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of driving under the influence of alcohol in both manners charged and of carrying a concealed weapon. Anderson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 118, 416 S.E.2d 309, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 309 (1992).

Because the defendant made no objection to the admissibility of the defendant's breath test results or to any of the trooper's testimony concerning a roadblock or the defendant's condition in the defendant's criminal trial on driving under the influence charges, the evidence was properly before the trial court and the evidence supported the charges, such that denial of the defendant's motion for a directed verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1(a) was proper. Overton v. State, 270 Ga. App. 285, 606 S.E.2d 306 (2004).

Because the state failed to present sufficient evidence that the defendant drove a vehicle within three hours prior to the Intoxilyzer 5000 test being administered, and no evidence was presented to support a per se violation of the offense, a driving under the influence of alcohol with an unlawful blood alcohol level conviction was reversed; but, given the defendant's admission to losing control of the vehicle and running into an embankment on the opposite side of the road, and evidence of a blood alcohol level well above the legal limit, which constituted circumstantial evidence of being a less-safe driver, a less-safe driving under the influence conviction was upheld, and no error resulted from the trial court's denial of a motion for directed verdict as to this charge. Norton v. State, 280 Ga. App. 303, 640 S.E.2d 48 (2006).

Given that sufficient evidence was presented through the testimony of the arresting officer, the property damage victims, and the defendant's admissions, and a 16-year gap between the current DUI offense and a prior DUI arrest did not require exclusion of the prior DUI as a similar transaction, as it provided evidence of the defendant's bent of mind to get behind the wheel of a vehicle when it was less safe to do so, the defendant's conviction for the recent offense was upheld on appeal; thus, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Evans v. State, 287 Ga. App. 74, 651 S.E.2d 363 (2007).

Because sufficient evidence was presented to support a finding that the defendant was intoxicated to the level that the intoxication caused both the defendant's loss of consciousness and an accident resulting in the defendant's truck straddling a ditch with the truck's nose down at close to a 90-degree angle, and the responding deputies testified that the defendant appeared to be under the influence of alcohol to the extent that it was less safe to drive, the defendant's conviction for violating O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(1) was supported by sufficient direct evidence of guilt; thus, a directed verdict of acquittal as to the DUI charge was properly denied. Stewart v. State, 288 Ga. App. 735, 655 S.E.2d 328 (2007).

Directed verdict in bus hijacking case. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict after a jury found the defendant guilty of bus hijacking, O.C.G.A. § 16-12-123(a)(1)(A), because the jury was authorized to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant exercised control of the bus by force; the defendant brandished a handgun in the open door of the bus as the defendant ordered a passenger to get off, and the bus driver testified that the driver did not feel free to drive away because the driver felt the driver's life was in danger and the driver did not want to agitate the defendant. Cannon v. State, 310 Ga. App. 262, 712 S.E.2d 645 (2011).

Directed verdicts in kidnapping cases. — Trial court did not err when the court denied a motion for a verdict of acquittal or "not guilty" in a prosecution for kidnapping since there was evidence that the defendant asserted control of the victim by ordering the victim to enter an apartment, and that the defendant participated in repeated assaults and the ultimate death of the victim after having forcibly kept the victim in the apartment. Hanifa v. State, 269 Ga. 797, 505 S.E.2d 731 (1998).

There was sufficient evidence for a rational trier of fact to have found beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was guilty of kidnapping with bodily injury in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-40(a) since the victim testified that the defendant held a knife to the victim's throat, made the victim get into the defendant's truck and drove for a while, and that the defendant told the victim that the defendant was going to kill the victim, at which point the victim escaped; accordingly, the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 was proper. Mann v. State, 264 Ga. App. 631, 591 S.E.2d 495 (2003), overruled on other grounds, Kaiser v. State, 285 Ga. App. 63, 646 S.E.2d 84 (2007).

Conviction for kidnapping with bodily injury, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-40(a), was not supported by sufficient evidence of asportation as the defendant brandished a gun at the victim and attempted to have the victim get into the car but instead, the victim braced the victim's back against the car and refused to move, whereupon a struggle ensued between the victim and the defendant and the victim fell to the ground; such movement of the victim did not constitute asportation, and the trial court erred in denying a motion for a directed verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1. Leppla v. State, 277 Ga. App. 804, 627 S.E.2d 794 (2006).

It was not error for the trial court to deny the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on the kidnapping charge because during the incident, as the victim exited the defendant's truck, the defendant grabbed the victim by the neck and moved the victim away from the more public area near the truck into a backyard, and after beating the victim in that location, the defendant moved the victim deeper into the backyard toward the tree line; when the defendant finished beating the victim the defendant picked the victim up and carried the victim to a trailer. The defendant moved the victim away from the area before the defendant began the beating, which was not necessary to the battery and independently increased the victim's danger and prevented the victim from making an escape, calling for help, or being spotted by witnesses. Amaya v. State, 308 Ga. App. 460, 708 S.E.2d 28 (2011).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in allowing the jury to consider the lesser included offense of false imprisonment after granting a directed verdict on the kidnapping charges against the defendant because false imprisonment was a lesser included offense of kidnapping, and the indictment against the defendant contained all the essential elements related to false imprisonment. Martinez v. State, 318 Ga. App. 254, 735 S.E.2d 785 (2012).

Directed verdict in impersonating an officer, kidnapping, and other charges. — Because sufficient evidence showed that the defendant, by posing as a police officer and driving the victims to remote locations, used fear and intimidation to ensure that the victims would cooperate and agree to have sex, the defendant was not entitled to an acquittal as to the charges of impersonating an officer, aggravated sodomy, attempted aggravated sodomy, aggravated assault and rape; furthermore, though both victims willingly got into the defendant's car, after the victims pleaded to be let go and the defendant refused to grant those pleas, that act amounted to a kidnapping. Dasher v. State, 281 Ga. App. 326, 636 S.E.2d 83 (2006).

Directed verdict in kidnapping, rape, and robbery trials. — Trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for acquittal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1, was proper as there was sufficient evidence to support the defendant's convictions for kidnapping, rape, and robbery by intimidation in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-40, 16-6-1, and 16-8-41, respectively, because the victim positively identified the defendant upon the defendant's arrest and at trial, there was similar transaction evidence from another victim who was approached and threatened in the same manner, and there was also corroborative physical evidence; defendant threatened the victim, who was at a bus stop, with a gun, robbed her, forced her to a storage area in a garage, and raped her. Sims v. State, 275 Ga. App. 836, 621 S.E.2d 869 (2005).

Directed verdict in murder cases. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal as the evidence was sufficient to show that the defendant killed the victim without justification or mitigation by strangling the victim and that the defendant, without the authority and with the intent to steal from the victim, entered the victim's apartment with keys defendant had access to as a maintenance worker in the victim's apartment complex. Oliver v. State, 276 Ga. 665, 581 S.E.2d 538 (2003).

Because the defendant admitted that, while the children were sleeping and to scare defendant's girlfriend, defendant used a cigarette lighter to set fire to the bedding on the corner of the son's bed, causing a fire in a trailer that killed the son and two daughters, the evidence was sufficient to enable a rational trier of fact to find that defendant was, beyond a reasonable doubt, guilty of three counts of malice murder, three counts of felony murder, and two counts of arson in the first degree; thus, the trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1(a). Riley v. State, 278 Ga. 677, 604 S.E.2d 488 (2004).

Trial court did not err in denying the codefendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal because the circumstantial evidence the state presented was sufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find the codefendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of the malice murder of a girlfriend's child; both the girlfriend and the codefendant were with the child during the time period within which the fatal injuries were believed to have been inflicted upon the child. Smith v. State, 290 Ga. 428, 721 S.E.2d 892 (2012).

Directed verdict in murder and aggravated assault case. — Convictions for felony murder and aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-1 and 16-5-21, were supported by sufficient evidence including that the defendant and the codefendant were acting in concert, and the denial of the defendant's motion for a judgment of acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 was proper; the defendant argued with the victim, a prostitute, and refused to pay for the victim's services, prompting the victim to get a gun and fire a shot into the air, whereupon the defendant and a codefendant fired their guns back at the victim in a car leaving the area, and a bullet from the codefendant's gun killed the victim. Stinchcomb v. State, 280 Ga. 170, 626 S.E.2d 88 (2006).

Directed verdict in obstruction of officer cases. — Defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal on obstruction of an officer charge since the defendant consented to the deputy's entry into the defendant's home and the defendant knowingly and wilfully grabbed the deputy's arm to stop the deputy from arresting a woman while in the lawful discharge of the deputy's duties. Schroeder v. State, 261 Ga. App. 879, 583 S.E.2d 922 (2003).

Defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict on the count charging the defendant with obstructing a correctional officer in the lawful discharge of the officer's official duties because the record did not support the defendant's argument that the state failed to prove that the person named in the indictment was a correctional officer even though the evidence showed that the dispatcher had not yet been trained five months after the dispatcher was employed. Grier v. State, 262 Ga. App. 777, 586 S.E.2d 448 (2003).

Because sufficient evidence was presented that the defendant physically assaulted an off-duty sheriff's officer prior to arrest and continued to resist and obstruct the officer's official duties thereafter, the defendant was properly denied an acquittal and a new trial. Helton v. State, 284 Ga. App. 777, 644 S.E.2d 896 (2007).

Authority of officer questioned in motion for directed verdict. — University police officer had authority under O.C.G.A. § 40-13-30 to issue citations for an accident that occurred at an intersection that bordered the campus, and the trial court, therefore, properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 relating to the charge of failing to obey a traffic control device in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-20; the broad language of § 40-13-30 gave any officer of Georgia that had authority to arrest for a misdemeanor the authority to prefer charges and bring offenders to trial. Hawkins v. State, 281 Ga. App. 852, 637 S.E.2d 422 (2006).

Directed verdict in less safe driver cases. — Because: (1) the appeals court did not weigh the evidence or determine witness credibility, despite the two conflicting views of the evidence; and (2) a jury charge related to HGN tests, where no HGN test was given, was proper, sufficient evidence supported the defendant's less-safe driver conviction under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(1); thus, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Massa v. State, 287 Ga. App. 494, 651 S.E.2d 806 (2007).

Directed verdict in driving under a suspended license case. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1 after a jury found the defendant guilty of driving on a suspended license in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-5-121(a) because there was some evidence that the defendant was served with a notice of suspension pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 40-5-60; the state introduced the defendant's driver's license history report, which showed that the defendant had been served with the notice of the license suspension by a police officer, and the officer testified that the officer served the defendant with the notice. Sledge v. State, 312 Ga. App. 97, 717 S.E.2d 682 (2011).

Directed verdict in rape cases. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, and the defendant's rape conviction was upheld on appeal, given the victim's testimony at trial that the defendant's sexual organ penetrated hers after telling the defendant to stop was sufficient in and of itself, and no evidence was presented that directly contradicted this statement; hence, the jury had the right to accept the victim's testimony depicting non-consensual, forcible intercourse, as satisfying the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1. Scott v. State, 281 Ga. App. 106, 635 S.E.2d 582 (2006).

Application (Cont'd)

Directed verdict in statutory rape cases. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion for a directed verdict on a charge of statutory rape as the victim's recantation did not render the evidence against the defendant insufficient because the victim's prior inconsistent statements concerning the sexual activity was substantive evidence of guilt; further, the prior inconsistent statements, corroborated by statements to others, as well as the defendant's own testimony that there was a sexual relationship, satisfied the sufficiency of the evidence standard of Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 307 (1999). Lewis v. State, 278 Ga. App. 160, 628 S.E.2d 239 (2006).

Directed verdict in robbery by sudden snatching. — Because the state's evidence failed to show that the robbery victim was aware that something was being taken before that taking was complete, the defendant was entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal on a robbery by sudden snatching charge; however, given that: (1) the defendant gained entry to a back office by passing through a storage area, and the jury implicitly rejected an argument that the absence of an "Employees Only" sign meant, despite the victim's testimony to the contrary, that the defendant had permission to enter either the storage area or the office; and (2) the defendant admitted to entering the office without permission, took a cash bag, and reentered the store in a manner intending to hide from view, a burglary conviction was upheld. Smith v. State, 281 Ga. App. 91, 635 S.E.2d 385 (2006).

Directed verdict in shoplifting cases. — In defendant's shoplifting conviction, the trial court did not err by failing to grant a directed verdict of acquittal because, as the defendant claimed, the state failed to exclude every reasonable conclusion from the circumstantial evidence presented; the evidence showed that the defendant was in the lobby of the store when the alarm was triggered, that the defendant ran, that the defendant was apprehended, that a bag from the store was recovered, and that the bag contained a number of items from the store but no receipt. Smith v. State, 275 Ga. App. 60, 619 S.E.2d 694 (2005).

Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal with regard to the defendant's trial for felony shoplifting because the testimony of the store's loss prevention officer established each element of the crime and provided sufficient evidence to support the conviction. Parham v. State, 320 Ga. App. 676, 739 S.E.2d 135 (2013).

Directed verdict in theft by receiving stolen property case. — Evidence was sufficient to sustain the defendant's conviction of theft by receiving stolen property in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-7(a) and, thus, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1, because the defendant's vehicle was stopped for violating traffic laws, the defendant could not produce a driver's license or proof of insurance, the personal information the defendant gave conflicted with the information on the identification card, the vehicle the defendant was driving had no vehicle tag, and the rental application found in the glove compartment along with a health insurance application showed that the car was rented to a person other than the defendant as the evidence showed that the defendant knew or should have known that the car the defendant possessed was stolen. Richardson v. State, 275 Ga. App. 320, 620 S.E.2d 522 (2005).

Directed verdict in theft by taking case. — Because no evidence was presented that the defendant converted the victim's funds for the defendant's own use or cashed the victim's check and because the state did not exclude every other reasonable hypothesis, the evidence was insufficient to convict the defendant of theft by taking, under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-2; consequently, the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Hydock v. State, 275 Ga. App. 122, 619 S.E.2d 807 (2005).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict because the evidence was sufficient for a rational trier of fact to infer that the defendant acted with criminal intent and to find the defendant guilty of theft by taking in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-2, and whether the defendant intended to deprive the victims of the victims' property was a question for the trier of fact, who was not required to believe the defendant's testimony; the manner in which the property was appropriated was irrelevant, and even if the trial court had accepted the defendant's claim that the defendant lawfully appropriated the trailer, the evidence supported a finding that although the defendant could have had lawful possession of the truck initially, the defendant failed to return the truck, or even provide the victims with the location of the truck upon their demands. Rushing v. State, 305 Ga. App. 629, 700 S.E.2d 620 (2010).

Directed verdict on charge of theft by taking. — Defendant's recent possession of stolen goods, coupled with other evidence linking the defendant with the theft, negated the propriety of a directed verdict of acquittal on a charge of theft by taking. Rautenberg v. State, 178 Ga. App. 165, 342 S.E.2d 355 (1986).

Directed verdict in possession of tools for crime cases. — In a prosecution for the possession of tools for the commission of a crime, which was a felony, while the evidence presented against the defendant was sufficient to support the jury's verdict, because the defendant's conduct could also have been charged as a misdemeanor offense of possession of a drug related object, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-32.2(a) and the rule of lenity, the felony conviction was reversed, and the matter was remanded for a resentencing on the misdemeanor offense; hence, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Washington v. State, 283 Ga. App. 570, 642 S.E.2d 199 (2007).

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal because the evidence was insufficient to support the defendant's conviction for possession of tools for the commission of a crime for lack of evidence showing that body armor was a tool commonly used in the commission of attempted armed robbery pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-7-20(a). Nyane v. State, 306 Ga. App. 591, 703 S.E.2d 53 (2010), cert. denied, No. S11C0420, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 538 (Ga. 2011).

Directed verdict on charge of terroristic threats. — Trial judge did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on a charge of terroristic threats, as due to the implicit nature of the threats against an undercover officer, a reasonable inference of guilt could be found from the evidence; as corroborating evidence existed that proved the incident occurred as alleged, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the jury to weigh the issue of corroboration and make a conclusion based on the evidence presented. Mendoza v. State, 274 Ga. App. 662, 618 S.E.2d 712 (2005).

Because evidence of the defendant's act of pointing the defendant's finger like a gun and threatening the victim, along with the use of racial slurs and profanity, was sufficient to support a charge of terroristic threats, the defendant's conviction was upheld on appeal, supporting the denial of a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal as to that charge; further, as to the state's evidence in support of the charge, given the equivalence between the words "ought" and "should," the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court overruled an objection to the state's assertion during closing argument that the defendant told the victim, "I ought to kill you." Self v. State, 288 Ga. App. 77, 653 S.E.2d 787 (2007).

Directed verdict in vehicular homicide and DUI cases. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motions for directed verdict and new trial because the evidence was sufficient to sustain the defendant's convictions for vehicular homicide and DUI since several witnesses on the scene testified that the defendant was in the driver's seat of the vehicle immediately after the accident. Hunt v. State, 261 Ga. App. 417, 582 S.E.2d 493 (2003).

Directed verdict in voluntary manslaughter cases. — Defendant's motion for a directed verdict was properly denied as the evidence supported the defendant's conviction for voluntary manslaughter because: (1) the victim assaulted the defendant, but turned away to leave the scene; (2) after the victim turned away, the defendant shot the victim in the back from two and one-half feet away; (3) the jury could reject the defendant's justification defense; (4) the defendant was identified as the assailant on the night of the shooting; and (5) the defendant admitted firing a gun at the victim. Nelloms v. State, 273 Ga. App. 448, 615 S.E.2d 153 (2005).

Application (Cont'd)

Defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal on a voluntary manslaughter count predicated on the defendant's claim of defense of habitation, O.C.G.A. § 16-3-23, because the evidence was sufficient to authorize a rational trier of fact to find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of voluntary manslaughter in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-2(a) and to find that the defendant's stabbing of the victim was not justified in defense of the defendant's habitation; the jury was authorized to rely upon the defendant's prior inconsistent statement to the defendant's relative to conclude that the victim's entry into the defendant's apartment was not "violent and tumultuous," and based upon the eyewitness testimony of a neighbor, the jury also was authorized to find that the victim was unarmed and that deadly force was not necessary for the defendant's protection. Muckle v. State, 307 Ga. App. 634, 705 S.E.2d 721 (2011).

Directed verdict in racketeering crime offenses. — Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion for a directed verdict with regard to the racketeering charges brought against the defendant for which the defendant was convicted of as the activities that the defendant engaged in involving various codefendants, the abduction of a store manager, and the victim's murder were sufficiently linked to form a racketeering pattern, but sufficiently distinguishable so that the crimes were not mere single transactions. Overton v. State, 295 Ga. App. 223, 671 S.E.2d 507 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0654, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 212 (Ga. 2009).

Defendant's motion for a directed verdict was properly denied because the defendant strangled the victim, robbed the victim, buried the victim, and then drove the victim's car for approximately two weeks after the crimes. Shelton v. State, 279 Ga. 161, 611 S.E.2d 11 (2005).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion for directed verdict. Loggins v. State, 169 Ga. App. 511, 313 S.E.2d 769 (1984).

Verdict of acquittal not demanded. — Although there was no conflict in the evidence, the evidence does not demand a verdict of acquittal if there is evidence from which the jury could infer that the defendant was attempting to take a shotgun without paying for the shotgun. Brown v. State, 160 Ga. App. 285, 287 S.E.2d 278 (1981).

Denial of a motion for directed verdict was upheld as there was sufficient evidence to support the verdict, including testimony by an officer identifying the defendant as a passenger in a stolen car and DNA evidence matching blood found on the defendant's shoes to a victim. Gonzalez v. State, 277 Ga. App. 362, 626 S.E.2d 569 (2006).

Trial court did not err when the court denied the defendant's motion to dismiss based on a purported violation of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial because the circumstances of the case warranted a finding that the twelve-month, ten-day delay between the defendant's indictment and the filing of the defendant's motion to dismiss was not presumptively prejudicial. The defendant was serving a sentence on an unrelated charge in Mississippi when the indictment was returned, a requisition warrant had to be obtained from the Mississippi Governor, which process was initiated within a month of the defendant's indictment and took three months before the warrant was issued, and the defendant was brought to Georgia two months after the warrant issued and was arraigned approximately two months later. Rogers v. State, 286 Ga. 387, 688 S.E.2d 344 (2010).

Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1(a) for an acquittal in the defendant's trial for aiding and abetting a housemate in committing acts of aggravated child molestation against the defendant's children because there was ample evidence that the defendant acquiesced in and encouraged the acts of child molestation by forcing the children to sleep in the same room with the housemate, although the children objected. Valentine v. State, 301 Ga. App. 630, 689 S.E.2d 76 (2009).

Based on the evidence presented by the state from the eyewitnesses and the medical examiner, even if the defendant's act of beating the decedent victim was not the direct cause of death, given that it either materially contributed to the death or materially accelerated the death, the defendant was not entitled to an acquittal. Jones v. State, 281 Ga. 758, 642 S.E.2d 816 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal after a jury convicted the defendant of two counts of cruelty to children in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-70(b) because the state did not fail to prove that the defendant used a bat and a belt as stated in the indictment; both victims, who were the defendant's adopted children, testified that the defendant beat the victims with a belt and a bat and that the beatings occurred when the victims did not complete the exercises that the defendant required the victims to do on a daily basis. Dinkler v. State, 305 Ga. App. 444, 699 S.E.2d 541 (2010), overruled on other grounds, Stuart v. State, 318 Ga. App. 839, 734 S.E.2d 814 (2012).

Superior court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal because the defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated; the defendant did not assert the right until the defendant filed the motion, which was approximately 48 months from the time of the indictment, the defendant did not maintain that the defendant suffered any extraordinary anxiety or concern due to the delay in trial, and the defendant made no challenge to the finding of the defense's failure to show diligence in attempting to locate witnesses, i.e., that the witnesses were unavailable to the defendant. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. 24, 717 S.E.2d 640 (2011).

Defendant's claim that the defendant was entitled to a directed verdict based on a fatal variance between the names of the victims in the indictment and the evidence failed because the state presented sufficient evidence to allow a reasonable trier of fact to conclude the names in the indictment referred to the victims present during the home invasion. Thompson v. State, 320 Ga. App. 150, 739 S.E.2d 434 (2013).

Because there was evidence, including blood that was a match for the defendant's DNA on the inside of the display case, showing that the defendant was connected to the crimes of robbery and theft by receiving, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Watson v. State, 337 Ga. App. 16, 785 S.E.2d 656 (2016).

Proof of conspiratorial acts on dates not alleged in indictment. — Defendants were not entitled to directed verdicts of acquittal even though the state's evidence failed to prove that a conspiracy took place within the time frame alleged in the indictment since the indictment did not allege that the dates of the offense were material, and under these circumstances the state was entitled to offer any evidence proving commission of the conspiratorial acts on any date within the statute of limitations. Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 885, 311 S.E.2d 427, cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1241, 104 S. Ct. 3510, 82 L. Ed. 2d 819 (1984).

Directed verdict proper when inadequate link between arson conspiracy and murder. — Conspiracy to commit arson, without more, does not naturally, necessarily, and probably result in the murder of one coconspirator by another; thus, the defendant was improperly convicted of murder and a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal should have been granted because although the defendant was guilty of conspiracy to commit arson, the subsequent murder of one coconspirator by another to keep the murdered coconspirator quiet was not reasonably foreseen as a necessary, probable consequence of the arson conspiracy. Everritt v. State, 277 Ga. 457, 588 S.E.2d 691 (2003).

Application (Cont'd)

Directed verdict in financial transaction card theft case. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict on the charge of financial transaction card theft because the victim was in constructive possession of the victim's credit card, which was sufficient to establish the allegation set forth in the accusation; because the victim was the cardholder on the account, the victim had the authority to exercise dominion and control over the credit card that had been issued in the victim's name. Amaechi v. State, 306 Ga. App. 333, 702 S.E.2d 680 (2010).

Directed verdict in driving without a valid license case. — Because the charge of being a habitual violator operating a vehicle without a valid driver's license, O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58(c)(1), demanded a verdict of acquittal as a matter of law, the trial court erred by denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict; the defendant was not driving without a valid driver's license because the arresting officer testified that the defendant had a probationary driver's license on the day of the arrest. Murray v. State, 315 Ga. App. 653, 727 S.E.2d 267 (2012).

Practice and Procedure

Ruling on motion after jury dispersed. — Defendant failed to show any harm so as to justify reversal after the trial court reserved a ruling on a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal and ruled upon the motion after the jury had dispersed. Ballantine v. State, 194 Ga. App. 560, 390 S.E.2d 887, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 390 S.E.2d 887 (1990).

There is no prohibition on the court's reservation of a final ruling on a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal and the court rendering a decision after the jury returns a verdict and is dispersed. State v. Seignious, 197 Ga. App. 766, 399 S.E.2d 559 (1990).

Venue properly established. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict of acquittal after a jury convicted the defendant of two counts of cruelty to children in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-70(b) because venue was properly established by the state; one of the victims testified that the victim and the victim's sister lived about three blocks from the courthouse in which the trial was held, and the defendant testified that the defendant had been living in the same home for 14 years and that the defendant and the defendant's spouse had attempted to adopt in the county where the trial was held. Dinkler v. State, 305 Ga. App. 444, 699 S.E.2d 541 (2010), overruled on other grounds, Stuart v. State, 318 Ga. App. 839, 734 S.E.2d 814 (2012).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict because the testimony, taken as a whole, was sufficient evidence from which the jury could conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that the child molestation was committed in Fayette County; during trial and the victim's forensic interview, the victim described that the molestation incident occurred during a visit to the victim's aunt's residence, which was located in Fayette County, Georgia, and two detectives testified that the referenced visit and molestation incident took place at a residence in Fayette County. Hargrave v. State, 311 Ga. App. 852, 717 S.E.2d 485 (2011).

Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion for directed verdict after the judgment of conviction had been entered because the trial court's reservation of a ruling upon the motion was entered after the trial court imposed sentencing and entered the court's judgment of conviction; therefore, the decision on the motion came too late and was procedurally barred. State v. Canup, 300 Ga. App. 678, 686 S.E.2d 275 (2009).

Directed verdict granted as to some items in the accusation but not as to all. — Defendant's substantial rights were not affected and the trial court did not err in granting a directed verdict as to some items in the accusation of shoplifting, but not as to all, as the defendant was not surprised, and the defendant could not be prosecuted later for the same offense. Smith v. State, 275 Ga. App. 60, 619 S.E.2d 694 (2005).

Trial judge's interruption of defense counsel's argument of motion for directed verdict, in which the judge stated that the judge was aware of counsel's reasons for the motion, did not constitute harmful error; there was sufficient evidence to find the defendant guilty of the offense charged. Morris v. State, 205 Ga. App. 650, 423 S.E.2d 54 (1992).

Review of directed verdict motion. — Overruling of a motion for directed verdict of acquittal is reviewable on appeal. Bethay v. State, 235 Ga. 371, 219 S.E.2d 743 (1975).

Scope of appellate review of denial of directed verdict. — Supreme Court will hold that the trial court did not err in failing to direct a verdict of acquittal if the Supreme Court cannot say that there was no conflict in the evidence and the evidence demanded a verdict of acquittal. Conger v. State, 250 Ga. 867, 301 S.E.2d 878 (1983); Horton v. State, 194 Ga. App. 797, 392 S.E.2d 259, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 392 S.E.2d 259 (1990).

Although the denial of a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal is reviewable on appeal, it is the basis for reversal only when the evidence demands a verdict of not guilty. Meade v. State, 165 Ga. App. 556, 301 S.E.2d 912 (1983); Johnson v. State, 165 Ga. App. 773, 302 S.E.2d 626 (1983).

Test for determining sufficiency of the evidence. — In light of the test established in Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 307, 99 S. Ct. 2781, 61 L. Ed. 2d 560 (1979), which holds that evidence to support a criminal conviction must be such that a rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt, that test rather than the "any evidence" test of Bethay v. State, 235 Ga. 371, 219 S.E.2d 743 (1975) is the proper test for a reviewing court to use when the sufficiency of evidence is challenged, whether the challenge arises from the overruling of a motion for directed verdict or the overruling of a motion for a new trial based upon allegedly insufficient evidence. Humphrey v. State, 252 Ga. 525, 314 S.E.2d 436 (1984).

Same test for directed verdict and sufficiency of evidence. — Standard of review for the denial of a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal is the same as that for reviewing the sufficiency of the evidence to support a conviction; a motion for a directed verdict in a criminal case should only be granted when there is no conflict in the evidence and the evidence demands a verdict of acquittal as a matter of law. On appeal, the evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the verdict, the defendant no longer enjoys the presumption of innocence, and an appellate court does not weigh the evidence or determine witness credibility but only determines whether the evidence was sufficient for a conviction. Truitt v. State, 266 Ga. App. 56, 596 S.E.2d 219 (2004).

On appeal from overruled motion, all evidence in the case can be considered. — On appeal of the overruling of a motion for directed verdict of acquittal made at the close of the state's case in chief, the reviewing court can consider all the evidence in the case in determining whether the trial court erred in overruling the motion. Bethay v. State, 235 Ga. 371, 219 S.E.2d 743 (1975); Causey v. State, 154 Ga. App. 76, 267 S.E.2d 475 (1980).

On appeal from an overruled motion, all evidence in a case can be considered whether overruled at the close of the state's case or at the conclusion of all evidence. Causey v. State, 154 Ga. App. 76, 267 S.E.2d 475 (1980).

Consideration of rebuttal evidence by appellate court. — Defendant prosecuted for the sale of methamphetamine was not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal due to the state's failure to prove venue because the state introduced testimony, on rebuttal, establishing that the crime occurred in the county in which the defendant was prosecuted, establishing venue beyond a reasonable doubt, and the appellate court was required to consider this rebuttal evidence when reviewing the denial of the defendant's motion. Reynolds v. State, 265 Ga. App. 776, 595 S.E.2d 606 (2004).

When failure to direct verdict of acquittal or not guilty constitutes error. — It constitutes reversible error for the trial court to refuse to direct a verdict of acquittal if there is absolutely no conflict in the evidence and the verdict of acquittal is demanded as a matter of law. Bethay v. State, 235 Ga. 371, 219 S.E.2d 743 (1975); Sims v. State, 242 Ga. 256, 248 S.E.2d 651 (1978).

Practice and Procedure (Cont'd)

If the evidence demands a verdict of acquittal, the failure of a trial judge to so direct a verdict is reversible error. Cleveland v. State, 155 Ga. App. 267, 270 S.E.2d 687 (1980).

It is only if the evidence demands a verdict of not guilty that it is error for the trial court to refuse to grant a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. Battle v. State, 155 Ga. App. 541, 271 S.E.2d 679 (1980).

Directed verdict motion on constitutional challenge held untimely. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal as to the aggravated sexual battery charge, which specifically alleged that O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22.2(b) violated the equal protection clause of both the Georgia and U.S. Constitutions, as the defendant did not move for a directed verdict until filing a second motion for a new trial, which was considered untimely. Phillips v. State, 284 Ga. App. 224, 644 S.E.2d 153 (2007).

Motion not moot by nolle prosequi of charges. — After a trial court in the defendant's criminal matter entered an order of nolle prosequi regarding criminal charges against the defendant, the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal, based on a claim that the trial court failed to comply with the demand for a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, should have still been ruled on; accordingly, it was error to find that defendant's petition for a writ of mandamus, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-6-20, seeking to have the trial court judge rule on the motion for discharge and acquittal, was rendered moot. Davis v. Wilson, 280 Ga. 29, 622 S.E.2d 325 (2005).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 22 C.J.S., Criminal Law: Substantive Procedures, § 188 et seq. 22A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 639 et seq. 23A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, §§ 1387, 1980 et seq.

ALR. — Power and duty of court to direct or advise acquittal in criminal case for insufficiency of evidence, 17 A.L.R. 910.

Power of court to enter nolle prosequi or dismiss prosecution, 69 A.L.R. 240.

Propriety of direction of verdict of guilty or of instruction or requested instruction requiring jury in criminal case to take the law from the court, or advising them as to their duty in that regard, 72 A.L.R. 899.

Power of trial court to dismiss defendant in criminal case for insufficiency of evidence after submitting case to jury or after verdict of guilty, 131 A.L.R. 187.

Propriety of direction of verdict in favor of fewer than all defendants at close of plaintiff's case, 82 A.L.R.3d 974.

Prejudicial effect of juror misconduct arising from internet usage, 48 A.L.R.6th 135.

17-9-2. Jury to judge law and facts and give general verdict; imposition of sentence; form and construction of verdicts.

The jury shall be the judges of the law and the facts in the trial of all criminal cases and shall give a general verdict of "guilty" or "not guilty." Upon a verdict of "guilty," the sentence shall be imposed by the judge, unless otherwise provided by law. Verdicts are to have a reasonable intendment, are to receive a reasonable construction, and are not to be avoided unless from necessity.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 835; Code 1863, §§ 3481, 4532; Code 1868, §§ 3503, 4552; Code 1873, §§ 3561, 4646; Code 1882, §§ 3561, 4646; Penal Code 1895, § 1033; Penal Code 1910, § 1059; Code 1933, § 27-2301; Ga. L. 1974, p. 352, § 1.

Cross references. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI. Trial juries, § 15-12-120 et seq.

U.S. Code. — Verdicts, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 31.

Law reviews. — For comment on Finch v. State, 87 Ga. App. 426, 74 S.E.2d 121 (1953), granting defendant a new trial where the jury returned inconsistent verdicts, see 17 Ga. B.J. 381 (1955).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Practice and Procedure
Jury Instructions
Verdicts

General Consideration

For historical development of the principle that the jury are "judges of the law and the facts," see Harris v. State, 190 Ga. 258, 9 S.E.2d 183 (1940).

This section as amended applied to trials conducted after July 1, 1974, rather than to offenses committed after that date. Henderson v. State, 134 Ga. App. 898, 216 S.E.2d 696 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Moran v. State, 139 Ga. App. 274, 228 S.E.2d 216 (1976), but see 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-74.

Construction with general verdict requirement. — Verdict of guilty but mentally ill under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 does not conflict with the requirement of a general verdict as provided by O.C.G.A. § 17-9-2. Mitchell v. State, 187 Ga. App. 40, 369 S.E.2d 487, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 369 S.E.2d 487 (1988).

O.C.G.A. § 19-10-1(i) is an exception to the use of a general verdict form in criminal cases as provided by O.C.G.A. § 17-9-2; the statute authorizes but does not require the trier of fact to return a special verdict as to the issue of paternity. Whitman v. State, 212 Ga. App. 523, 442 S.E.2d 313 (1994).

Duties of court and jury generally. — It is the province of the court to construe the law applicable in the trial of a criminal case, and of the jury to apply the law so construed to the facts in evidence. Mims v. State, 188 Ga. 702, 4 S.E.2d 831 (1939); Harris v. State, 190 Ga. 258, 9 S.E.2d 183 (1940); Griffin v. State, 154 Ga. App. 261, 267 S.E.2d 867 (1980).

Court is responsible for the correct exposition of the law. It is the duty of the jury to take the law from the court, as it is their duty to take the evidence from the witnesses. Griffin v. State, 154 Ga. App. 261, 267 S.E.2d 867 (1980).

Trial court and jury issues. — Whether a particular offense is a lesser included offense of another is an issue for the trial court to resolve, not the jury; whether an accused is guilty of a particular lesser included offense, based on the evidence and proper charge by the court, is the issue for the jury. Sanders v. State, 212 Ga. App. 832, 442 S.E.2d 923 (1994).

Jurors are judges of the law insofar as jurors are judges of the facts. — Right of the jury to judge the law and the facts does not authorize the jury to get the law except through the court. There must be some channel through which the jury is to get the law. It is the jury's duty, the jury's necessary duty, to find out what the law is, and to come to a conclusion upon the matter, just as it is the jury's duty to find out what the facts are. Jurors have to judge both to come to a conclusion as to both. The judge is the channel through which the jurors are to get the law, just as the evidence introduced is the channel through which the jurors are to get the facts. Jurors have no right to go out of the evidence for the facts, nor to go away from the judge for the law. From these two courses the jurors are to get the material for their verdict, and the jurors are thus judges of the law and facts, and must find a general verdict, including law and fact. Edwards v. State, 53 Ga. 428 (1874).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

While the jurors are made absolutely and exclusively judges of the facts in the case, the jurors are, in this sense only, judges of the law. Mims v. State, 188 Ga. 702, 4 S.E.2d 831 (1939); Harris v. State, 190 Ga. 258, 9 S.E.2d 183 (1940); Griffin v. State, 154 Ga. App. 261, 267 S.E.2d 867 (1980).

Jury are the judges of the law and the facts so as to enable the jury to apply the law to the facts, and bring in a general verdict, but jurors have no right to make law. The law is laid down in the Code and it is the province of the court to construe the law and give the law in the charge, and of the jury to take the law as given, apply the law to the facts as found by the jury, and bring in a general verdict. Harris v. State, 190 Ga. 258, 9 S.E.2d 183 (1940).

How verdicts to be construed generally. — Verdicts are to be construed in the light of the pleadings, the issues made by the evidence, and the charge of the court. Reed v. State, 87 Ga. App. 154, 73 S.E.2d 223 (1952).

Supreme Court must assume judgment valid. — It is the duty of the Supreme Court to construe the verdict of the jury and the judgment and sentence of the court as valid and binding. Owen v. White, 182 Ga. 67, 185 S.E. 97 (1936).

Verdict may be construed in the light of the issues actually submitted to the jury under the charge of the court. If, when so construed, it expresses with reasonable certainty a finding supported by the evidence, it is to be upheld as legal. Henson v. Scoggins, 203 Ga. 540, 47 S.E.2d 643 (1948).

In the construction of verdicts, the accusation must be considered. Arnold v. State, 51 Ga. 144 (1874); Dunbar v. State, 21 Ga. App. 502, 94 S.E. 587 (1917).

Construction of ambiguous verdict. — Verdict is to be given a reasonable intendment and, when ambiguous, may be construed in the light of the issues actually submitted to the jury under the charge of the court. If, when so construed, the verdict expresses with reasonable certainty a finding supported by the evidence, the verdict is to be upheld as legal. Barbour v. State, 8 Ga. App. 27, 68 S.E. 458 (1910).

Use of preprinted jury verdict form. — It is not error to use the preprinted jury verdict form: "We, the jury, find the defendant __ guilty." Dixon v. State, 154 Ga. App. 828, 269 S.E.2d 909 (1980).

Use of a printed verdict form which reads "We the jury find the defendant __ guilty" is not harmful error constituting reason for reversal. Chance v. State, 154 Ga. App. 543, 268 S.E.2d 737 (1980).

Failure of transcript to show either the verdict or sentence. — Failure of the transcript of a criminal trial to show either the jury verdict or the sentence by the judge has no bearing on the validity of the conviction, especially when the punishment was written on the indictment by the jury foreman, and the judge published the verdict and sentence in open court. Maddox v. State, 131 Ga. App. 86, 205 S.E.2d 31 (1974).

Cited in Brown v. State, 40 Ga. 689 (1870); Dunbar v. State, 21 Ga. App. 502, 94 S.E. 587 (1917); Johnson v. State, 29 Ga. App. 659, 116 S.E. 226 (1923); B'Gos v. State, 43 Ga. App. 379, 159 S.E. 137 (1931), cert. dismissed, 175 Ga. 627, 165 S.E. 566 (1932); Arrington v. State, 48 Ga. App. 70, 171 S.E. 878 (1933); Meriwether v. State, 189 Ga. 746, 8 S.E.2d 72 (1940); Hopkins v. State, 190 Ga. 180, 8 S.E.2d 633 (1940); Griffin v. State, 195 Ga. 368, 24 S.E.2d 399 (1943); Central of Ga. R.R. v. Sellers, 129 Ga. App. 811, 201 S.E.2d 485 (1973); Johnson v. State, 134 Ga. App. 67, 213 S.E.2d 170 (1975); Willingham v. State, 134 Ga. App. 144, 213 S.E.2d 516 (1975); Rhodes v. State, 135 Ga. App. 484, 218 S.E.2d 159 (1975); Mealor v. State, 135 Ga. App. 682, 218 S.E.2d 683 (1975); Jones v. State, 235 Ga. 103, 218 S.E.2d 899 (1975); Stanley v. State, 136 Ga. App. 385, 221 S.E.2d 242 (1975); McNeese v. State, 236 Ga. 26, 222 S.E.2d 318 (1976); Atkins v. State, 236 Ga. 624, 225 S.E.2d 7 (1976); Partain v. State, 139 Ga. App. 325, 228 S.E.2d 292 (1976); Richardson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 416, 240 S.E.2d 917

(1977); Presnell v. State, 241 Ga. 49, 243 S.E.2d 496 (1978); Favors v. State, 145 Ga. App. 864, 244 S.E.2d 902 (1978); Legare v. State, 243 Ga. 744, 257 S.E.2d 247 (1979); Taylor v. State, 245 Ga. 501, 265 S.E.2d 803 (1980); State v. Wilkerson, 161 Ga. App. 185, 288 S.E.2d 137 (1982); Pender v. State, 249 Ga. 495, 292 S.E.2d 69 (1982); Bryant v. State, 163 Ga. App. 872, 296 S.E.2d 168 (1982); McGee v. State, 172 Ga. App. 208, 322 S.E.2d 500 (1984); Barnes v. State, 184 Ga. App. 513, 361 S.E.2d 876 (1987); Wilkes v. State, 210 Ga. App. 898, 437 S.E.2d 837 (1993); Carter v. State, 224 Ga. App. 445, 481 S.E.2d 238 (1997); Davis v. State, 225 Ga. App. 627, 484 S.E.2d 655 (1997); Stevenson v. State, 234 Ga. App. 103, 506 S.E.2d 226 (1998); Parker v. State, 270 Ga. 256, 507 S.E.2d 744 (1998); Scott v. State, 243 Ga. App. 383, 532 S.E.2d 141 (2000).

Practice and Procedure

Joint indictment for offense which does not require joint act. — If two parties are jointly indicted for an offense which does not require in its commission the joint act of both, but may be separately committed by either, a verdict finding one of the defendants guilty, if supported by the evidence, would be authorized. Cruce v. State, 59 Ga. 83 (1877); Easterling v. State, 12 Ga. App. 690, 78 S.E. 140 (1913).

Requirements of jury communications after deliberations have started. — In an exercise of the court's inherent power to maintain a court system capable of providing for the administration of justice in an orderly and efficient manner, trial courts should be required to have jurors' communications submitted to the court in writing; to mark the written communication as a court exhibit in the presence of counsel; to afford counsel a full opportunity to suggest an appropriate response; and to make counsel aware of the substance of the trial court's intended response in order that counsel may seek whatever modifications counsel deems appropriate before the jury is exposed to the instruction. Lowery v. State, 282 Ga. 68, 646 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 552 U.S. 999, 128 S. Ct. 508, 169 L. Ed. 2d 355 (2007).

When court may avoid jury verdict. — Court is not privileged to invade the province of the jury and avoid the jury's verdicts unless from clear necessity, and the rule is to be applied only in cases in which such verdicts are in irreconcilable conflict. Jackson v. State, 230 Ga. 640, 198 S.E.2d 666 (1973).

Improper closing argument. — When defendant was charged with, inter alia, child molestation, the prosecutor's remark, in closing argument, that if the jury found the defendant not guilty the jury would be calling the defendant's victims liars, was improper because it could be construed as improperly suggesting to the jurors that the jurors go beyond the jurors' role of reaching a verdict based solely on the law and the evidence, but, under the circumstances, the error was harmless. Hunt v. State, 268 Ga. App. 568, 602 S.E.2d 312 (2004).

Resequestration if verdict of involuntary manslaughter without due caution. — Verdict of guilty of "involuntary manslaughter without due caution and circumspection," is so uncertain as to authorize the judge not to receive the verdict, and to send the jury back; and when the jury returns with a verdict of voluntary manslaughter, which is fully supported by the evidence, the presiding judge was right to receive the verdict, and no error was committed. Turbaville v. State, 58 Ga. 545 (1877).

Verdict which finds neither what is charged in the indictment nor a lesser grade. — If the jury intends conviction and punishment of something, but the verdict returned is neither as to something charged in the indictment nor of a lesser grade of the crime actually charged against a defendant, the verdict returned is a mere nullity and has the legal effect of an acquittal. Cross v. State, 124 Ga. App. 152, 183 S.E.2d 93 (1971).

Acquittal if verdict does not find necessary facts for crime. — If the verdict applies directly to the offense expressly charged, but stops short in the verdict's finding of the requisite facts to constitute that offense, the verdict is equivalent to an acquittal. Couch v. State, 28 Ga. 367 (1859); O'Connell v. State, 55 Ga. 191 (1875); Wells v. State, 116 Ga. 87,

Practice and Procedure (Cont'd)

42 S.E. 390 (1902); Lambert v. State, 17 Ga. App. 348, 86 S.E. 782 (1915).

Variance between offense as charged in indictment and form of jury verdict. — If one is charged in an indictment with the offense of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of an unlawful act, a verdict of the jury that "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of involuntary manslaughter by his negligence, and we recommend that he be punished as for a misdemeanor," is a verdict finding the defendant guilty of the offense as charged and is not rendered ambiguous by the words "by his negligence" or by the fact that the jury made a recommendation that the defendant be punished as for a misdemeanor when the jury did not have the power to do so. Cain v. State, 53 Ga. App. 331, 185 S.E. 615 (1936).

Involuntary manslaughter verdict not inconsistent with felony murder/cruelty to children verdict. — In a shaken baby death, an involuntary manslaughter verdict was not mutually exclusive of a guilty verdict for felony murder/cruelty to children because, consistent with the jury's guilty verdict on the felony murder charge, an offense requiring criminal intent, the jury predicated the jury's involuntary manslaughter verdict on a misdemeanor involving criminal intent, battery, or simple battery under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-23(a) and 16-5-23.1(a), although the jury was also instructed on reckless conduct, a misdemeanor committed by criminal negligence, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-60(b). Drake v. State, 288 Ga. 131, 702 S.E.2d 161 (2010).

Erroneous interchange of terms "maximum" and "minimum" in verdict. — It is reasonable to construe a verdict finding the accused guilty and fixing a "maximum" penalty of one year, and a "minimum" penalty of one and one-half years as meaning a minimum of one year and a maximum of one and one-half years so as to uphold the validity of the verdict. Jordan v. State, 36 Ga. App. 648, 137 S.E. 798 (1927).

Reference to evidence or court's charge to interpret verdict impermissible. — Though complaint of a verdict is made in a motion for a new trial and not by a motion in arrest of judgment, it is not legitimate to refer either to the evidence or the charge of the court for the purpose of ascertaining what the verdict really meant. English v. State, 105 Ga. 516, 31 S.E. 448 (1898).

There is no error in trial court, rather than jury, sentencing defendant. Daniel v. State, 248 Ga. 271, 282 S.E.2d 314 (1981).

In the defendant's trial for murder, the trial court properly exercised the court's discretion to sentence the defendant to life in prison with the possibility of parole under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-1(e)(1), 17-9-2, and 17-10-7(a), rather than life without the possibility of parole, because parole did not extend the duration of the sentence. Blackwell v. State, 302 Ga. 820, 809 S.E.2d 727 (2018).

Court of Appeals may recognize hypothesis supporting innocence of accused. — Whether or not in a given case circumstances are sufficient to exclude every reasonable hypothesis save the guilt of the accused is primarily a question for determination by the jury; however, if there appears a hypothesis from the evidence pointing to the innocence of the accused, and which tested by all human experience is a reasonable one, the Court of Appeals may declare it to be true as a matter of law. Bogan v. State, 158 Ga. App. 1, 279 S.E.2d 229 (1981).

Verdict with recommendation regarding parole. — Since there were two counts of murder and the jury reached a unanimous verdict on both counts that "we recommend mercy or that defendant's punishment be life imprisonment with the stipulation that it be life without parole," the jury's verdict was clear, and the jury's "stipulation" regarding parole was mere surplusage not affecting the jury's recommendation of mercy so that the trial court erred in not accepting the verdict. Westbrook v. State, 256 Ga. 776, 353 S.E.2d 504 (1987).

Affidavit regarding viewing crime scene. — Juror's affidavit stated only that, after viewing the scene of the crime, some of the jurors had concluded, based upon the jurors' observations, that the defendant's testimony had been false in some respects, the affidavit showed only that the jurors acted as jurors after a judicially sanctioned scene view and did not show that any juror acted as an unsworn witness against the defendant as to any finding resulting from an unauthorized visit to the scene of the crime, and the trial court did not err in refusing to consider the affidavit. Harper v. State, 182 Ga. App. 760, 357 S.E.2d 117 (1987).

Instructing jurors that the jurors cannot abstain is not error. — Telling a jury that the jury must vote one way or another, and that a juror cannot abstain from voting was not error. Thompson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 850, 305 S.E.2d 662 (1983).

It is clearly the law that the jury must vote either guilty or not guilty, and consequently the court likewise committed no error in advising the jury that the jury could not vote to "pass." Jordan v. State, 172 Ga. App. 496, 323 S.E.2d 657 (1984).

Determinative factor in deciding whether verdicts are repugnant is whether the acquittal of one charge necessarily includes a finding against a fact that is essential to conviction for the other charge. If so, the evidence is then insufficient to support a verdict of guilty in the convicted charge. Shehee v. State, 167 Ga. App. 542, 307 S.E.2d 54 (1983); Taylor v. State, 177 Ga. App. 624, 340 S.E.2d 263 (1986).

Jury Instructions

It is the duty of the judge to charge the law in a criminal case. Darsey v. State, 136 Ga. 501, 71 S.E. 661 (1911), writ dismissed, 231 U.S. 741, 34 S. Ct. 318, 58 L. Ed. 462 (1913); Holton v. State, 137 Ga. 86, 72 S.E. 949 (1911).

To the jury, the highest and best evidence of what the law is, is the charge of the court; indeed, the jury's only final access to the law is through this charge. Habersham v. State, 56 Ga. 61 (1876).

Jury must accept as the law what the court charges the jury as being the law. Darsey v. State, 136 Ga. 501, 71 S.E. 661 (1911); Holton v. State, 137 Ga. 86, 72 S.E. 949 (1911); Mims v. State, 188 Ga. 702, 4 S.E.2d 831 (1939).

Erroneous but nonfatal instruction in civil case. — It was erroneous in a civil case to charge the jury, "after you have ascertained the facts, then you will apply the facts to the law, and then you are the sole judges of the law and the facts in this case," but in the circumstances the error was not cause for a reversal. Higgins v. Trentham, 186 Ga. 264, 197 S.E. 862 (1938).

Since an accusation was drawn in the conjunctive, charging the defendant with being a less safe driver and with having a blood alcohol count over 0.10, providing a verdict form that listed separately each of the two methods by which the defendant was accused of violations and instructing the jury to indicate "guilty" or "not guilty" as to each method was not a request for a special verdict in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-9-2. Dean v. State, 232 Ga. App. 390, 501 S.E.2d 895 (1998).

Instruction of jurors that jurors are judges of the law in applying the law to the facts. — Mere use of the words "except that" in an instruction that "the charge of the court is the law of the case, and by it you are bound, except that you are the judges of the law in applying it to the facts as you find them to be," could not mislead the jury into conceiving that the jury would be free to reject the law charged by the court. Davis v. State, 190 Ga. 100, 8 S.E.2d 394 (1940).

It is not error to so instruct the jury. — Court does not err in instructing the jury to take the law of the case from the court, apply the law to the facts as the jury might find the facts to be, and reach a verdict therefrom. Mims v. State, 188 Ga. 702, 4 S.E.2d 831 (1939).

Words "with leniency" in verdict. — Because a jury was instructed not to concern itself with punishment and was never instructed that the jury could recommend leniency, the words "with leniency" in the verdict were mere surplusage and did not affect the validity of the jury's finding of guilt; consequently, the Court of Appeals erred by reversing the defendant's sentence as illegal. State v. Benton, 278 Ga. 503, 604 S.E.2d 169 (2004).

Failure to charge jury that the jury are judges of the law and facts. — It is not ground for reversal that the judge failed to charge the jury, without a request, that the jury were judges of the law and the facts. Turk v. State, 55 Ga. App. 732, 191 S.E. 283 (1937).

Jury Instructions (Cont'd)

In response to the following question from the jury: "If the jury disagrees with the law that we have been charged with applying to the facts of this case, can we find the defendant not guilty for that reason?", the trial court did not err in refusing to charge that "the jury shall be the judges of the law and the facts" and, instead, charging the jury in the language of the suggested pattern jury instructions promulgated by the Council of Superior Court Judges. Cornwell v. State, 246 Ga. App. 686, 541 S.E.2d 101 (2000).

Trial court did not err in refusing to charge the jury that "the jury shall be the judges of the law and the facts in the trial of all criminal cases," after the court charged on the applicable law and instructed the jurors to apply the law to the facts as found by the jury. Chiasson v. State, 250 Ga. App. 63, 549 S.E.2d 503 (2001).

Charge that jurors are also judges of the law. — When the court instructs the jury that the jurors are judges of the facts, the jurors need not be instructed in the same connection that the jurors are also judges of the law, if in the general charge as a whole the jurors are correctly instructed as to the law. Webb v. State, 8 Ga. App. 430, 69 S.E. 601 (1910).

No need to instruct jury on prior sentencing procedure in noncapital felonies. — With the existence of mandatory judge sentencing in felony cases, except cases in which the death penalty may be imposed, it is unnecessary and inappropriate for the jury to receive any instructions from the trial judge on the previously applicable bifurcated procedure. Harris v. State, 234 Ga. 871, 218 S.E.2d 583 (1975).

Verdicts

Definition of special verdict. — Special verdict is rendered when the jury finds certain facts to exist, and leaves the court to determine whether or not, according to the law which controls these facts, the prisoner is guilty. McGuffie v. State, 17 Ga. 497 (1855); Isom v. State, 83 Ga. 378, 9 S.E. 1051 (1889).

Verdict on indictment which joins separate crimes as several counts. — When separate crimes are joined in one indictment, former Code 1933, § 27-2301 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-9-2) should be construed as applying to each one of those counts as separate and independent cases. A general verdict should be rendered as to each one of the separate cases. Lee v. State, 66 Ga. App. 613, 18 S.E.2d 778 (1942).

Verdict on offense eliminated by legislature. — When the offense charged in one count of the indictment was eliminated by the legislature prior to the defendant's trial and the trial court instructed the jury only with respect to a lesser included charge, but the jury nevertheless returned a verdict on the indicted offense, the court properly entered judgment on the lesser included charge. Blackstock v. State, 270 Ga. 117, 506 S.E.2d 130 (1998).

General verdict of guilty is a verdict on the highest offense charged. — If offenses of different grades are joined in the same indictment, a general verdict of guilty means guilty of the highest offense. Dean v. State, 43 Ga. 218 (1871); Estes v. State, 55 Ga. 131 (1875).

If two felonies only in degree are charged as separate counts of the same indictment, general verdict of, "We, the jury, find the defendants guilty and recommend mercy," is by intention of the law, a finding that the defendants are guilty of the highest offense charged in either of the counts in the indictment. Miller v. State, 60 Ga. App. 682, 4 S.E.2d 729 (1939).

General verdict of guilty is by intendment of the law a verdict that the defendant is guilty of the highest offense charged in the indictment. Bissell v. State, 153 Ga. App. 564, 266 S.E.2d 238 (1980).

Unless judge submits only the lesser charge to the jury. — When one is tried on an indictment charging the person with the offense of robbery by force and by intimidation, and after the evidence has been adduced the judge submits to the jury only the question whether the defendant is guilty of the offense of robbery by intimidation, a general verdict of guilty will be construed as convicting the accused only of the lesser offense of robbery by intimidation. If in such a case there is evidence authorizing the conviction of the defendant for robbery by intimidation, which is conceded by counsel for the defendant, a general verdict of guilty will not be disturbed as contrary to the evidence or to the law. Reed v. State, 87 Ga. App. 154, 73 S.E.2d 223 (1952).

Jury indicates guilt for similar lesser offense. — Indictment was for assault with intent to murder. The verdict was that the defendant was "guilty of shooting another unlawfully." It is contended in behalf of the accused that there is no such offense as this, and that the verdict is void for uncertainty. There is no merit in this contention. Under an indictment containing a single count for assault with intent to murder, there may be a conviction of the statutory offense of shooting at another, that being a lesser offense of the same general character. Wostenholms v. State, 70 Ga. 720 (1883); Watson v. State, 116 Ga. 607, 43 S.E. 32, 21 L.R.A. (n.s.) 1 (1902); Rhinehart v. State, 7 Ga. App. 425, 66 S.E. 982 (1910).

General verdict on multiple count indictment when evidence sufficient for conviction on all counts. — When several misdemeanors, which though of the same general character are separate and distinct offenses, are joined in different counts of the same indictment, such a verdict is to be construed as a conviction on all of the counts. Driver v. State, 112 Ga. 229, 37 S.E. 400 (1900).

If by the indictment the state is prosecuting not merely for one offense, but charges several different and distinct transactions, though of a kindred nature, in the respective counts of the indictment, a general verdict of guilty is not sustainable, and is contrary to the evidence, unless the proof is such as to uphold a conviction as to each and every offense alleged. Driver v. State, 112 Ga. 229, 37 S.E. 400 (1900).

Misdemeanors of a similar nature may be joined in the same indictment in any number of counts, and a general verdict as to each count should be returned. A general verdict of guilty as to such entire indictment will be set aside unless there is sufficient evidence to support each count of the indictment. If the evidence supports each count, such general verdict is a conviction on each count and the court may impose cumulative penalties. Lee v. State, 66 Ga. App. 613, 18 S.E.2d 778 (1942).

General verdict on multiple count indictment when evidence authorizes conviction on less than all counts. — It is error to refuse a new trial on an indictment containing two counts, both charges growing out of the same transaction when the evidence authorizes a conviction on the second count only and the verdict is a general verdict of guilty. Davis v. State, 59 Ga. App. 343, 200 S.E. 808 (1939).

General verdict possible although acquittal on some counts. — Verdict of guilty, specifying the particular counts to which the verdict relates, is nevertheless a general verdict, and there may be a conviction as to some of the counts and an acquittal as to the others. Roberts v. State, 14 Ga. 8, 58 Am. Dec. 528 (1853); Lynes v. State, 46 Ga. 208 (1873); Wilson v. State, 67 Ga. 658 (1881).

General verdict on multiple count indictment when all but one count withdrawn. — State's counsel may abandon or the judge may withdraw from the consideration of the jury the unsupported counts, and in that event a general verdict of guilty will relate only to the counts submitted. Camp v. State, 91 Ga. 8, 16 S.E. 379 (1892); Waver v. State, 108 Ga. 775, 33 S.E. 423 (1899); Tooke v. State, 4 Ga. App. 495, 61 S.E. 917 (1908).

If there are two counts in the indictment, and during the trial of the case the state, through statement of the state's counsel made in open court, withdraws the second count of the indictment, a general verdict will be construed as meaning guilty on the first count only. Guthas v. State, 53 Ga. App. 362, 185 S.E. 837 (1936).

General verdict on indictment for offense which may be committed in various ways. — As to indictments charging misdemeanors only, if the indictment as a whole relates to but one offense, to but one transaction, stated in different counts with variation of details so that the indictment, as pleading, may adapt itself to the different phases which may appear in the proof at the trial, a general verdict of guilty, without a specification as to the count on which it is rendered, is sustainable and proper, if any one of the counts is supported by sufficient proof. Stewart v. State, 58 Ga. 577 (1877); Dohme v. State, 68 Ga. 339 (1882); Williams v. State, 107 Ga. 693, 33 S.E. 641 (1899).

Verdicts (Cont'd)

If a statute provides that a single offense may be committed in distinct and various ways, the different and various ways may be charged in the same count, or in as many counts as there are various ways of committing the offenses. A general verdict on such an indictment charging the commission of such offense will be sustained if any of the counts is supported by evidence, even though there may be no evidence to sustain the conviction under the other counts specified in the indictment. Lee v. State, 66 Ga. App. 613, 18 S.E.2d 778 (1942).

Verdict of stabbing after indictment charging assault with deadly intent by stabbing. — Indictment for assault with intent to murder by stabbing includes the minor offense of stabbing, and a verdict finding this minor offense need not negative the exception in the statute by setting out that the stabbing was not done by the prisoner in the prisoner's own defense or other circumstances of justification; the meaning of the verdict, construed in light of the indictment, being that the accused was guilty of the offense, and not of the mere act of stabbing. Isom v. State, 83 Ga. 378, 9 S.E. 1051 (1889).

Jury need not deny mitigating circumstances for shooting. — It was clearly the intention of the jury in this case to find the accused guilty of the offense of shooting another as to which the court had fully instructed the jury. It is not necessary for the verdict to negative the statutory exception by stating that the shooting was "not in his own defense or under circumstances of justification." Arnold v. State, 51 Ga. 144 (1874); Isom v. State, 83 Ga. 378, 9 S.E. 1051 (1889); Kidd v. State, 10 Ga. App. 147, 75 S.E. 266 (1911).

Verdict finding one defendant guilty as charged and the other of lesser offense. — In a joint trial of two persons for murder, the jury returned a verdict finding one of the defendants guilty of murder, and finding the other guilty of manslaughter, it is error for the court to refuse to receive the verdict so far as the verdict related to the latter finding, and to require the jury to reconsider the case as to the latter accused under instruction that the latter cannot be convicted of voluntary manslaughter unless the codefendant also is guilty of that offense. Allen v. State, 164 Ga. 669, 139 S.E. 415 (1927).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Section as amended applies to offenses committed on or after July 1, 1974. — This section, which authorized the jury to determine guilt or innocence and the judge to pass sentence, applied only to those defendants who allegedly committed criminal offenses on July 1, 1974, or thereafter. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-74, but see Henderson v. State, 134 Ga. App. 898, 216 S.E.2d 696 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Moran v. State, 139 Ga. App. 274, 228 S.E.2d 216 (1976).

General verdict is to be returned in both felony and misdemeanor verdicts. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-412.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 706, 709, 713, 718.

C.J.S. — 23A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, §§ 1772 et seq., 1777 et seq., 1792 et seq., 1895 et seq.

ALR. — Right of court to accept verdict upon one or more counts of an indictment or information when jury is unable to reach a verdict on all counts or is silent as to part of counts, and effect of such acceptance, 114 A.L.R. 1406.

Power of trial court to dismiss defendant in criminal case for insufficiency of evidence after submitting case to jury or after verdict of guilty, 131 A.L.R. 187.

Imposition or enforcement of sentence which has been suspended without authority, 141 A.L.R. 1225.

Power to impose sentence with direction that after defendant shall have served part of time he be placed on probation for the remainder of term, 147 A.L.R. 656.

Validity and effect of verdict in civil action finding defendant "not guilty," 7 A.L.R.2d 1341.

Withdrawal of waiver of right to jury trial in criminal case, 46 A.L.R.2d 919.

Right of accused to insist, over objection of prosecution or court, upon trial by court without a jury, 51 A.L.R.2d 1346; 37 A.L.R.4th 304.

Effect on verdict in criminal case of haste or shortness of time in which jury reached it, 91 A.L.R.2d 1238.

Inconsistency of criminal verdict with verdict on another indictment or information tried at the same time, 16 A.L.R.3d 866.

Inconsistency of criminal verdict as between different counts of indictment or information, 18 A.L.R.3d 259.

Juror's reluctant, equivocal, or conditional assent to verdict, on polling, as ground for mistrial or new trial in criminal case, 25 A.L.R.3d 1149.

Validity and efficacy of accused's waiver of unanimous verdict, 97 A.L.R.3d 1253.

Loss of jurisdiction by delay in imposing sentence, 98 A.L.R.3d 605.

Prejudicial effect of jury's procurement or use of book during deliberations in criminal cases, 35 A.L.R.4th 626.

Right of accused, in state criminal trial, to insist, over prosecutor's or court's objection, on trial by court without jury, 37 A.L.R.4th 304.

Requirement of jury unanimity as to mode of committing crime under statute setting forth the various modes by which offense may be committed, 75 A.L.R.4th 91.

17-9-3. Recommendations for mercy in capital cases other than those of homicide; effect of no recommendation for mercy in capital cases generally and where defendant under age of 17 at time of commission of offense.

In all capital cases, other than those of homicide, when the verdict is "guilty," with a recommendation for mercy, it shall be legal and shall mean imprisonment for life. When the verdict is "guilty," without a recommendation for mercy, it shall be legal and shall mean that the convicted person shall be sentenced to death. When it is shown that a person convicted of a capital offense without a recommendation for mercy had not reached his seventeenth birthday at the time of the commission of the offense, the punishment of such person shall not be death but shall be imprisonment for life.

History. — Ga. L. 1875, p. 106, § 2; Code 1882, § 4646a; Penal Code 1895, § 1034; Penal Code 1910, § 1060; Code 1933, § 27-2302; Ga. L. 1963, p. 122, § 2; Ga. L. 1974, p. 352, § 2.

Cross references. — Further provisions regarding jury recommendations in death penalty cases, § 17-10-2. Finding by jury of statutory aggravating circumstance and recommendation of death sentence as prerequisites to imposition of death sentence, § 17-10-31.

U.S. Code. — Verdicts, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 31.

Law reviews. — For article discussing the 1968 Criminal Code of Georgia, comparing preexisting provisions of Georgia criminal law, see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 185 (1968).

For article, "Jury Sentencing in Georgia — Time for a Change?," see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 421 (1969). For article recommending more consistency in age requirements of laws pertaining to the welfare of minors, see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 189 (1969). For article, "The Execution of America's Children," see 6 Ga. State U.L. Rev. 403 (1990).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability to homicide cases. — Last sentence of O.C.G.A. § 17-9-3 applies to cases of homicide, the legislature having intended to create a general prohibition against the execution of persons who had not reached their 17th birthday at the time of the commission of the offense. Bankston v. State, 258 Ga. 188, 367 S.E.2d 36 (1988).

Verdict and not the indictment determined when this section applied. Cox v. State, 33 Ga. App. 144, 125 S.E. 731 (1924).

Judge may not give different sentence than law requires when guilty plea. — This section did not permit the judge, on a plea of guilty, to fix a different sentence than that prescribed by a particular section. Morris v. Clark, 156 Ga. 489, 119 S.E. 303 (1923).

Jury recommendation is binding. — In jury cases, the trial judge is bound by the jury's recommended sentence. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Charge cannot take away jury's role. — Charge depriving the jury of the right and duty devolving upon the jury by this section was erroneous. Thompson v. State, 160 Ga. 520, 128 S.E. 756 (1925).

When applicable, this section should be charged. Butt v. State, 150 Ga. 302, 103 S.E. 466 (1920).

Charge that gave the substance of this section would suffice. Lewis v. State, 25 Ga. App. 7, 102 S.E. 367 (1920).

Jury has power to fix minimum and maximum sentence after plea of innocence. — Power given to the jury to prescribe a minimum and maximum term is emphasized by the further provision that "in cases of pleas of guilty, then the judge shall have the right to prescribe such minimum and maximum term as he may see fit." Mitchell v. State, 34 Ga. App. 505, 130 S.E. 355 (1925).

Effect of jury failing to fix maximum and minimum. — If the jury fails to prescribe the maximum and minimum in a burglary case but merely recommends the defendant to the mercy of the court, the verdict is not in proper form, and it is error for the judge to receive the verdict and fix the minimum and maximum term of punishment. The judge should send the jury back with the instruction that the jury fix the minimum and the maximum penalty. Mitchell v. State, 34 Ga. App. 505, 130 S.E. 355 (1925).

Verdict of the jury fixing the same maximum and minimum is sufficient. Powell v. State, 25 Ga. App. 329, 103 S.E. 174 (1920); Johnson v. State, 154 Ga. 806, 115 S.E. 642 (1923).

Defendant has right to poll jury. — If the jury returns a maximum-minimum sentence and the judge immediately turns to the accused and states that that would be the accused's sentence, the accused is not deprived of the right to poll the jury. The accused has this privilege while the verdict is being reduced to writing and retired as a judgment. Taylor v. State, 36 Ga. App. 639, 138 S.E. 83 (1927).

Abuse of jury's discretion is not reviewable. — Whether or not a jury has abused the unlimited discretion given a jury by law, in regard to recommending a defendant to the mercy of the court, under which the defendant would be sentenced to life imprisonment, is in no instance subject to review by the courts. Aiken v. State, 170 Ga. 895, 154 S.E. 368 (1930).

Death sentence on seventeen year old. — If the defendant was 17 years old at the time of the crime, the defendant's death sentence does not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-9-3. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606 (1989).

Cited in Towns v. State, 149 Ga. 613, 101 S.E. 678 (1919); Daniel v. State, 24 Ga. App. 557, 101 S.E. 812 (1919); Walker v. Dorminey, 150 Ga. 635, 104 S.E. 447 (1920); Moore v. State, 150 Ga. 679, 104

S.E. 907 (1920); Thompson v. State, 151 Ga. 328, 106 S.E. 278 (1921); Durden v. State, 152 Ga. 441, 110 S.E. 283 (1921); Miller v. State, 224 Ga. 627, 163 S.E.2d 730 (1968); Holmes v. State, 224 Ga. 553, 163 S.E.2d 803 (1968); Massey v. Smith, 224 Ga. 721, 164 S.E.2d 786 (1968); Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S. Ct. 2861, 53 L. Ed. 2d 982 (1977); Cape v. Francis, 558 F. Supp. 1207 (M.D. Ga. 1983).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 843 et seq. 40A Am. Jur. 2d, Homicide, § 499 et seq. 75A Am. Jur. 2d, Trial, §§ 471 et seq., 1157 et seq.

C.J.S. — 24 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 2203 et seq.

ALR. — Bail: imposition of life sentence as affecting capital character of offense, 3 A.L.R. 970.

Recommendation of mercy in criminal case, 87 A.L.R. 1362; 138 A.L.R. 1230.

Loss of jurisdiction by delay in imposing sentence, 98 A.L.R.3d 605.

17-9-4. Validity of judgment rendered by court having no jurisdiction of person or subject matter.

The judgment of a court having no jurisdiction of the person or subject matter, or void for any other cause, is a mere nullity and may be so held in any court when it becomes material to the interest of the parties to consider it.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3513; Code 1868, § 3536; Code 1873, § 3594; Code 1882, § 3594; Civil Code 1895, § 5369; Civil Code 1910, § 5964; Code 1933, § 110-709.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-12-16.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Jurisdiction in criminal cases extends only to matters declared criminal by law. — In criminal cases, the jurisdiction of the court extends to such matters as the law has declared criminal, and none other. When a court undertakes to punish for an offense to which no criminality attaches, however reprehensible such offense may be in the forum of conscience, the court acts beyond the court's jurisdiction. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

Indictment, information, or written accusation is the very groundwork of the whole superstructure of a prosecution for the commission of an offense. If such an information contains allegations of overt acts or conduct which does not constitute any crime known to the law, or undertakes to state an offense, but the facts stated do not constitute the offense, and no addition to them, however full and complete, can supply what is essential, the court is without jurisdiction to put the accused on trial. In such case, the judgment of conviction cannot be corrected, it is simply void. Imprisonment thereunder is illegal, and the accused is entitled to release in a habeas corpus proceeding, even though the accused might secure the same relief on appeal. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

Court had no jurisdiction to amend defendant's sentence two years after sentence was imposed. — Trial court erred by denying the defendant's motion to vacate the defendant's amended sentence on drug-related charges as the trial court had no jurisdiction to amend the defendant's sentence since, at the time it was undertaken, over two years had passed since the sentence was originally pronounced; thus, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f), there was no jurisdiction to amend the sentence. Hall v. State, 291 Ga. App. 649, 662 S.E.2d 753 (2008).

No reinvested subject matter jurisdiction in trial court. — When the sentence is not void and the defendant filed an application for review of the defendant's sentence under former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6, as long as the sentence is one which is otherwise covered by an application, a Sentence Review Panel decision is totally insulated from a trial court's claim of reinvested subject matter jurisdiction over the question of punishment. McClendon v. State, 318 Ga. App. 676, 734 S.E.2d 505 (2012).

Allowing livestock to run at large is not criminal. — Appellate court reversed the trial court's judgment convicting the defendants of violating O.C.G.A. § 4-3-3 by allowing livestock to roam at large because § 4-3-3 was not a penal statute and the defendants were improperly charged by use of a uniform traffic citation in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-71. Cotton v. State, 263 Ga. App. 843, 589 S.E.2d 610 (2003).

Right to attack judgment as nullity not waived. — Since the defendant did not sign a jury trial waiver, the probate court was without authority to dispose of the case. Even though there was no indication that the waiver-of-jury-trial issue was raised in the superior court, this was a matter which went to the subject matter jurisdiction of the probate court, and the right to attack the judgment as a nullity was not waived by the failure to attack the judgment before. Davis v. State, 197 Ga. App. 746, 399 S.E.2d 554 (1990).

Motion to vacate does not lie in criminal case. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for burglary, two counts of aggravated assault and armed robbery, aggravated sodomy and rape, and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, the trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion to correct a void judgment and to correct an illegally merged sentence as the defendant's motion was essentially seeking to vacate the judgment of conviction, which motion was contrary to the longstanding rule that a motion to vacate a judgment will not lie in a criminal case. Johnson v. State, 287 Ga. App. 759, 652 S.E.2d 836 (2007).

Petitioner's motion to vacate the conviction was not an appropriate remedy in a criminal case after the petitioner's murder conviction had been affirmed on direct appeal. The court overruled Division 2 of Chester v. State, 284 Ga. 162 (2008), which had allowed such motions under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-4, and held that in order to challenge a conviction after the conviction had been affirmed on direct appeal, petitioner was required to file an extraordinary motion for new trial, O.C.G.A. § 5-5-41, a motion in arrest of judgment, O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61, or a petition for habeas corpus under O.C.G.A. § 9-14-40. Harper v. State, 286 Ga. 216, 686 S.E.2d 786 (2009).

Collateral attack on judgment if no law proscribes the act. — If there is no law proscribing the act in question, or if there was a law but the law was repealed prior to the date the offense was alleged to have been committed, or if there is a law but the law is unconstitutional, these are exceptions to the general rule that a judgment of a court having jurisdiction of the type of offense and the alleged offender is not open to collateral attack. The remedy of habeas corpus is available in these exceptional cases because the court is without jurisdiction in the particular case to render the particular judgment. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

Remedy if conviction under one count valid, but void under the other. — Habeas corpus is not an available remedy if the petitioner is a state prisoner under a valid judgment of conviction under one count of a two-count indictment even though the judgment of conviction under the other count is void. Mandamus is the only remedy available by which the petitioner can collaterally attack the void judgment of conviction under the other count and compel the Board of Pardons and Paroles to consider the petitioner's application for parole. The petition for mandamus is not premature if the petitioner is being hurt by the void judgment of conviction under the other count in that that judgment stands as a bar to petitioner's right to have the petitioner's application for parole considered. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

Erroneous judgment is not void if jurisdiction exists. — Judgment, though the judgment may be erroneous, is not void if the court had jurisdiction of the case and the parties. Crutchfield v. State, 24 Ga. 335 (1858).

Question as to sufficiency of allegations differs from question of court's jurisdiction. — Question as to the sufficiency of the allegations, that is, the completeness of the allegations to charge an act and intent which would constitute a crime, is a question of pleading, and is different than a question as to whether the act charged constitutes a crime, a question of the court's jurisdiction. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

Indictment failing to charge offense. — Person who is held or convicted under an indictment which fails to charge any offense against the laws of this state may secure that person's release by habeas corpus. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

Functions of writ of error (see O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-49 and 5-6-50) and writ of habeas corpus compared. — Function of the writ of error is to correct errors of law. The function of the writ of habeas corpus is to inquire into and determine the legality of the detention at the time of the hearing, such detention being illegal if the judgment of conviction is void. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

Habeas corpus is to correct void, not voidable judgments. — Rule that habeas corpus is not a substitute for writ of error (see O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-49 and 5-6-50) means that habeas corpus will not lie to correct voidable judgments, that is, judgments which are merely erroneous, while habeas corpus will lie to secure a release from detention under a judgment which is utterly void. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963).

No requirement for prayer that judgment be declared void. — This section dispensed with the necessity of a prayer that a judgment of conviction be declared void. Riley v. Garrett, 219 Ga. 345, 133 S.E.2d 367 (1963); Griffis v. Griffis, 229 Ga. 587, 193 S.E.2d 620 (1972).

If judgment void, no petition, notice, service, hearing, or order. — If an order and judgment are void and a nullity on the face of the record, no petition, notice, service, hearing, or order is necessary to set the judgment aside. It may be disregarded. Shotkin v. State, 73 Ga. App. 136, 35 S.E.2d 556 (1945), cert. denied, 329 U.S. 740, 67 S. Ct. 56, 91 L. Ed. 638 (1946).

Order properly set aside. — Trial court was authorized to set aside a void order granting an out-of-term motion to withdraw a guilty plea beyond the term in which the order was granted. Bennett v. State, 225 Ga. App. 284, 483 S.E.2d 612 (1997), rev'd, 268 Ga. 849, 494 S.E.2d 330 (1998).

Merger claims cannot be deemed waived. — Merger claims cannot be waived, even following a guilty plea, because a conviction that merges as a matter of law or fact with another conviction is void, and any resulting sentence is void and illegal, which means that the sentences may be challenged in any proper proceeding. Nazario v. State, 293 Ga. 480, 746 S.E.2d 109 (2013).

Court had jurisdiction. — Indictment alleging that the defendant committed criminal acts in Cobb County conferred jurisdiction over the defendant's person; consequently, the defendant failed to demonstrate that the defendant's sentences were void for lack of jurisdiction. Goodrum v. State, 259 Ga. App. 704, 578 S.E.2d 484 (2003).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to vacate a malice murder conviction as the defendant's claim that the conviction preceded the indictment, and hence that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to hear the plea, was belied by the record. Jones v. State, 282 Ga. 568, 651 S.E.2d 728 (2007).

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to hold the judgment void and reinstating the defendant's 20-year sentence for voluntary manslaughter because the defendant's application for an out-of-time sentence review was granted under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6(a) (repealed); thus, the trial court's reinvested subject matter jurisdiction over the question of the sentencing was improper. McClendon v. State, 318 Ga. App. 676, 734 S.E.2d 505 (2012).

Cited in Berkeley v. State, 74 Ga. App. 711, 41 S.E.2d 265 (1947); Wallace v. State, 112 Ga. App. 505, 145 S.E.2d 788 (1965); Pruitt v. State, 123 Ga. App. 659, 182 S.E.2d 142 (1971); Barrett v. State, 183 Ga. App. 729, 360 S.E.2d 400 (1987); Snellings v. State, 194 Ga. App. 552, 391 S.E.2d 36 (1990); Earp v. Brown, 260 Ga. 215, 391 S.E.2d 396 (1990); State v. Mohamed, 203 Ga. App. 21, 416 S.E.2d 358 (1992); Cabell v. State, 221 Ga. App. 192, 471 S.E.2d 222 (1996); Weatherbed v. State, 271 Ga. 736, 524 S.E.2d 452 (1999); Syms v. State, 244 Ga. App. 21, 534 S.E.2d 502 (2000); Bush v. State, 273 Ga. 861, 548 S.E.2d 302 (2001); McKenzie v. State, 302 Ga. App. 538, 691 S.E.2d 352 (2010); Munye v. State, 342 Ga. App. 680, 803 S.E.2d 775 (2017); Gray v. State, 351 Ga. App. 703, 832 S.E.2d 857 (2019).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 49 C.J.S. (Rev), Judgments, § 22 et seq. 89 C.J.S., Trial, § 992 et seq.

ARTICLE 2

RENDITION AND RECEIPT OF VERDICT

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Necessity and sufficiency of adjudication of guilt, or of recital of or reference to verdict in judgment pronouncing sentence in criminal case, 69 A.L.R. 792.

Failure of verdict on conviction of larceny or embezzlement to state value of property, 79 A.L.R. 1180.

Absence of accused at return of verdict in felony case, 23 A.L.R.2d 456.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of trial court's inquiry as to numerical division of jury, 77 A.L.R.3d 769.

Prejudicial effect of jury's procurement or use of book during deliberations in criminal cases, 35 A.L.R.4th 626.

17-9-20. Action by juror on private knowledge as to facts, witnesses, or parties.

A juror shall not act on his or her private knowledge respecting the facts, witnesses, or parties.

History. — Civil Code 1895, § 5337; Civil Code 1910, § 5932; Code 1933, § 110-108; Ga. L. 2011, p. 99, § 32/HB 24.

History of Code section. — This Code section is derived from the decisions in Chattanooga, R. & C. Ry. Co. v. Owen, 90 Ga. 265, 15 S.E. 853 (1892) and Pettyjohn v. Liebscher, 92 Ga. 154, 17 S.E. 1007 (1893).

Cross references. — Juror as witness, § 24-6-606.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2011, p. 99, § 101/HB 24, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that this Act shall apply to any motion made or hearing or trial commenced on or after January 1, 2013.

Law reviews. — For article discussing swearing a juror as a witness, see 11 Ga. B.J. 321 (1949). For article, "Evidence," see 27 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1 (2011). For article on the 2011 amendment of this Code section, see 28 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1 (2011).

For comment on Tumlin v. State, 88 Ga. App. 713, 77 S.E.2d 555 (1953), holding that a juror is competent to testify in a felony case against the accused and defendant is not deprived of right to fair trial, see 16 Ga. B.J. 346 (1954).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Juror as witness. — Juror is not incompetent to testify as a witness solely on account of having been impaneled and sworn in the case, if the juror is otherwise competent. Tumlin v. State, 88 Ga. App. 713, 77 S.E.2d 555 (1953), commented on in 16 Ga. B.J. 346 (1954).

Calling of juror as witness for state. — Defendant is not deprived of the right of trial by a fair and impartial jury merely because one of the jurors trying the case is called as a witness for the state. Tumlin v. State, 88 Ga. App. 713, 77 S.E.2d 555 (1953), commented on in 16 Ga. B.J. 346 (1954).

Duty to prevent improper acts and remarks and to caution jury. — When a statement is interfered with by improper acts and remarks, the jury should be prevented and the judge should at least caution the jury under this section that the jury cannot act upon outside information respecting the parties, the witnesses, or the facts in the case. Robinson v. State, 6 Ga. App. 696, 65 S.E. 792 (1909).

Unauthorized contact or communication between a witness and a juror does not vitiate an otherwise valid conviction unless the defendant was actually prejudiced. Clark v. State, 153 Ga. App. 829, 266 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Cited in Garnett v. State, 10 Ga. App. 109, 72 S.E. 951 (1911).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 89 C.J.S., Trial, §§ 949, 951. 50A C.J.S., Juries, §§ 367 et seq., 377 et seq.

ALR. — Right of jury to act upon their own knowledge in determining property values, 104 A.L.R. 1017.

Expression of opinion by juror based upon or influenced by his own observation and experience in connection with his trade, business, or profession as ground for reversal or new trial, 156 A.L.R. 1033.

Evidentiary effect of view by jury in condemnation proceedings, 1 A.L.R.3d 1397.

Prejudicial effect of unauthorized view by jury in civil case of scene of accident or premises in question, 11 A.L.R.3d 918.

Trial jurors as witnesses in same state court or related case, 86 A.L.R.3d 781.

Propriety of juror's tests or experiments in jury room, 31 A.L.R.4th 566.

Juror's reading of newspaper account of trial in state criminal case during its progress as ground for mistrial, new trial, or reversal, 46 A.L.R.4th 11.

Unauthorized view of premises by juror or jury in criminal case as ground for reversal, new trial, or mistrial, 50 A.L.R.4th 995.

Taking and use of trial notes by jury, 36 A.L.R.5th 255.

17-9-21. Receipt of verdicts.

Verdicts shall be received only in open court, in the absence of agreement of the parties.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3486; Code 1868, § 3509; Code 1873, § 3567; Code 1882, § 3567; Civil Code 1895, § 5336; Civil Code 1910, § 5931; Code 1933, § 110-107.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-12-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Judgments enforcing contract contrary to public policy as subject to collateral attack, 30 A.L.R. 1100.

Right to have jury polled regarding method of reaching verdict, 86 A.L.R. 203.

Absence of accused at return of verdict in felony case, 23 A.L.R.2d 456.

17-9-22. Expression of approval or disapproval of verdict of jury by judge.

(a) No judge of any court shall either directly or indirectly express in open court his approval or disapproval of the verdict of any jury in any case tried before him, except as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section; nor may any judge discharge any jury upon the ground that the verdict rendered in any case does not meet with his approval.

(b) If any judge of any court either directly or indirectly expresses in open court his approval or disapproval of the verdict of the jury in any case tried before him, he shall be disqualified from presiding in the case in the event a new trial is granted.

(c) Nothing in this Code section shall have the effect of prohibiting a judge of any court from approving or disapproving the verdict of a jury in any case tried before him in hearing a motion for a new trial that comes on before him; but the approval or disapproval on the hearing of a motion for new trial shall be expressed in the formal order of the judge in granting or overruling the motion and not otherwise.

History. — Ga. L. 1918, p. 168, §§ 1, 2; Code 1933, §§ 110-201, 110-202.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-8. Juries, T. 15, C. 12.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Judge not disqualified from hearing motion for new trial. — Former Code 1933, §§ 110-201—110-203 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-9-22 and 17-9-23) nowhere say a judge was disqualified in a hearing on a motion for a new trial, but say that if the judge in the original trial does certain things prohibited therein, the judge was disqualified on a retrial of the case in the event a new trial was granted. Johnson v. State, 76 Ga. App. 494, 167 S.E. 900 (1933).

Comment that verdict is proper and just. — Trial judge is not disqualified from passing upon the motion for a new trial when, after the verdict of guilty is returned into court, the judge states: "I think it is a proper verdict and one fully justified; I think the verdict is just." Johnson v. State, 46 Ga. App. 494, 167 S.E. 900 (1933).

Comments regarding sentencing options. — Judge's comments regarding sentencing options available in light of the convictions were not expressions of the judge's approval or disapproval of the verdict. Reynolds v. State, 231 Ga. App. 33, 497 S.E.2d 580 (1998).

Remedy for improper remark was not new trial. — Whether the trial court's statement to the jury after the guilty verdict was returned amounted to an improper expression of approval of the verdict was immaterial to the defendant's appeal from the convictions since the remedy for such a remark was not a new trial, but to prohibit the offending judge from presiding over the new trial in the event a new trial was granted. Abernathy v. State, 278 Ga. App. 574, 630 S.E.2d 421 (2006).

Cited in Luke v. State, 131 Ga. App. 799, 207 S.E.2d 213 (1974); Lancette v. State, 151 Ga. App. 740, 261 S.E.2d 405 (1979); Mobley v. State, 162 Ga. App. 23, 288 S.E.2d 702 (1982); Magsby v. State, 169 Ga. App. 637, 314 S.E.2d 473 (1984); Smith v. State, 258 Ga. 676, 373 S.E.2d 200 (1988).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 89 C.J.S. (Rev), Trial, § 610 et seq.

ALR. — Necessity of repeating definition of legal or technical term in different parts of instructions in which it is employed, 7 A.L.R. 135.

Threat to dismiss jury in criminal case for term, unless they could agree on verdict, as coercion, 10 A.L.R. 421.

Disqualification of judge who presided at trial or of juror as ground of habeas corpus, 124 A.L.R. 1079.

Statute providing for change of judge or venue on ground of bias or prejudice as applicable to proceeding for modification of decree of divorce, 143 A.L.R. 411.

Disqualification of judge in pending case as subject to revocation or removal, 162 A.L.R. 641.

Reviewability of action of judge in disqualifying himself, 162 A.L.R. 654.

What constitutes accused's consent to court's discharge of jury or to grant of state's motion for mistrial which will constitute waiver of former jeopardy plea, 63 A.L.R.2d 782.

Verdict-urging instructions in civil case commenting on weight of majority view or authorizing compromise, 41 A.L.R.3d 845.

Disqualification of original trial judge to sit on retrial after reversal or mistrial, 60 A.L.R.3d 176.

17-9-23. Commending or complimenting of jury by judge.

No judge of any court may commend or compliment a jury during the term of any court for discharging its duty if the commendation or compliment has the effect of approving of a verdict.

History. — Ga. L. 1918, p. 168, § 3; Code 1933, § 110-203.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-10-8.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Comment by judge that verdict is proper and just. — Trial judge is not disqualified from passing upon the motion for a new trial when, after the verdict of guilty is returned into court, the judge states: "I think it is a proper verdict and one fully justified; I think the verdict is just." Johnson v. State, 46 Ga. App. 494, 167 S.E. 900 (1933).

Penalty is disqualification from presiding over new trial. — Penalty for violating this section was the same as that prescribed for a judge's approval or disapproval of the verdict of the jury in open court, which penalty is the judge's disqualification in case a new trial should be granted. Johnson v. State, 46 Ga. App. 494, 167 S.E. 900 (1933).

Disqualification is not from hearing motion for new trial. — Former Code 1933, §§ 110-201—110-203 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-9-22 and 17-9-23) nowhere say a judge was disqualified in a hearing on a motion for a new trial, but say that, if the judge in the original trial does certain things prohibited therein, the judge was disqualified on a retrial of the case, in the event a new trial was granted. Johnson v. State, 46 Ga. App. 494, 167 S.E. 900 (1933).

Court's thanking jury for jury's service prior to determination that verdict was unanimous did not prejudice the verdict under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-23. Mobley v. State, 162 Ga. App. 23, 288 S.E.2d 702 (1982).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 75B Am. Jur. 2d, Trial, § 1268 et seq.

C.J.S. — 88 C.J.S. (Rev), Trial, §§ 305, 318 et seq.

ALR. — Threat to dismiss jury in criminal case for term, unless they could agree on verdict, as coercion, 10 A.L.R. 421.

ARTICLE 3

AMENDMENT AND IMPEACHMENT OF VERDICT

17-9-40. Amendment of verdict after dispersion of jury.

A verdict may be amended in mere matter of form after the jury have dispersed; but, after it has been received, recorded, and the jury dispersed, it may not be amended in matter of substance, either by what the jurors say they intended to find or otherwise.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3422; Code 1868, § 3442; Code 1873, § 3492; Code 1882, § 3492; Civil Code 1895, § 5111; Civil Code 1910, § 5695; Code 1933, § 110-111.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-12-7.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Verdicts in criminal cases may be reformed in presence of jury and even after jury has dispersed. Dansby v. State, 165 Ga. App. 41, 299 S.E.2d 579 (1983).

Return after dispersal of verdict which is too uncertain. — When by consent the jury in a criminal case disperses after agreeing upon the jury's finding, and thereafter return into court a verdict which is too uncertain or indefinite to support a judgment, it is beyond the power of the court to order this verdict to be so amended as to cure the defects therein. Any action by the court in attempting to thus amend such a verdict should be treated as a mere nullity. Wells v. State, 116 Ga. 87, 42 S.E. 390 (1902).

Conforming verdict to language of Code section charged. — When the jury returned a verdict of "involuntary manslaughter," without specification, the trial court does no more than conform the verdict to the pleadings and the evidence when the court asks the foreperson to conform the verdict to the language of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-3(a), unlawful act-involuntary manslaughter, when there is no evidence of lawful act-unlawful manner involuntary manslaughter. Brown v. State, 166 Ga. App. 765, 305 S.E.2d 386 (1983).

Amendment of guilty verdict to guilty but mentally ill not permitted. — Since the jury was instructed on possible verdicts of guilty and guilty but mentally ill and returned a verdict of guilty, amendment of the verdict from guilty to guilty but mentally ill would constitute an impermissible substantive change. Hollis v. State, 215 Ga. App. 35, 450 S.E.2d 247 (1994).

No amendment of guilty but mentally ill verdict. — Trial court erred in permitting the jury to consider a verdict of guilty but mentally ill on a misdemeanor count of making harassing telephone calls as that verdict is available only in felony cases. Converting, on appeal, the verdict to guilty would have constituted an impermissible substantive change in the verdict, violative of O.C.G.A. § 17-9-40, and therefore the verdict had to be reversed. Levin v. State, 222 Ga. App. 123, 473 S.E.2d 582 (1996).

Juror's affidavit should not have been considered to impeach a verdict. — Habeas court erred in setting aside a murder conviction based on claims that counsel was ineffective in failing to challenge an alternate juror, who was seated after the juror had been excused and had researched the case on the Internet, because the juror's affidavit should not have been considered to impeach the verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-40, and the research was not the type of conduct that deprived the petitioner of a fair trial. O'Donnell v. Smith, 294 Ga. 307, 751 S.E.2d 324 (2013).

Cited in Rolle v. State, 177 Ga. App. 79, 338 S.E.2d 519 (1985).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 89 C.J.S., Trial, §§ 1074 et seq., 1166 et seq.

ALR. — Power of court to mold or amend verdict with respect to the parties for or against whom it was rendered, 106 A.L.R. 418.

Entry of final judgment after disagreement of jury, 31 A.L.R.2d 885.

Court's power to increase amount of verdict or judgment over either party's refusal or failure to consent to addition, 56 A.L.R.2d 213.

Competency of juror's statement or affidavit to show that verdict in a civil case was not correctly recorded, 18 A.L.R.3d 1132.

Jury's discussion of parole law as ground for reversal or new trial, 21 A.L.R.4th 420.

Propriety and effect of jurors' discussion of evidence among themselves before final submission of criminal case, 21 A.L.R.4th 444.

Propriety of reassembling jury to amend, correct, clarify, or otherwise change verdict after jury has been discharged, or has reached or sealed its verdict and separated, 14 A.L.R.5th 89.

17-9-41. Use of affidavits of jurors relating to verdict.

Repealed by Ga. L. 2011, p. 99, § 33/HB 24, effective January 1, 2013.

Editor's notes. — This Code section was based on Civil Code 1895, § 5338; Civil Code 1910, § 5933; Code 1933, § 110-109.

Ga. L. 2011, p. 99, § 101/HB 24, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that this Act shall apply to any motion made or hearing or trial commenced on or after January 1, 2013.

Ga. L. 2016, p. 864, § 17/HB 737, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, purported to designate this reserved Code section as repealed; however, due to the pre-existing designation of this Code section as repealed, this amendment has not been given effect.

ARTICLE 4

MOTIONS IN ARREST

Cross references. — Appeal by state from order, decision, or judgment arresting judgment of conviction on legal grounds, § 5-7-1.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Appealability of order arresting judgment in criminal case, 98 A.L.R.2d 737.

Preconviction procedure for raising contention that enforcement of penal statute or law is unconstitutionally discriminatory, 4 A.L.R.3d 404.

17-9-60. Jurisdiction of motion; notification of opposing party.

All motions to arrest a judgment must be made to the court by which the judgment was rendered, and the opposite party must have reasonable notice of such motions.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3511; Code 1868, § 3534; Code 1873, § 3592; Code 1882, § 3592; Civil Code 1895, § 5367; Civil Code 1910, § 5962; Code 1933, § 110-707.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Service on state not required before term of court expired. — Trial court erred in dismissing the defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea, which was filed by letter before the term of court expired but not served on the state, because the state had reasonable notice of the motion to withdraw 18 days before it was first set for a hearing, and over two years before the hearing was eventually held. The court looked to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-60 for guidance as to whether the state was required to be served with the motion prior to the expiration of the term of court, and concluded that it was not. McKiernan v. State, 286 Ga. 756, 692 S.E.2d 340 (2010).

Cited in Berkeley v. State, 74 Ga. App. 711, 41 S.E.2d 265 (1947); Bowen v. State, 144 Ga. App. 329, 241 S.E.2d 431 (1977); Hill v. State, 183 Ga. App. 654, 360 S.E.2d 4 (1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Meritorious defense as condition of injunction against or direct attack upon judgment for want of jurisdiction, 118 A.L.R. 1498.

Power of lower court to set aside, on ground of fraud, judgment entered pursuant to mandate of, or affirmed by, reviewing court, 146 A.L.R. 1230.

Power of court to vacate or modify its judgment or order after expiration of prescribed period upon application made within that period, 168 A.L.R. 204.

17-9-61. Time and grounds for motion generally.

(a) When a judgment has been rendered, either party may move in arrest thereof for any defect not amendable which appears on the face of the record or pleadings.

(b) A motion in arrest of judgment must be made during the term at which the judgment was obtained.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, §§ 3506, 3507; Code 1868, §§ 3529, 3530; Code 1873, §§ 3587, 3588; Code 1882, §§ 3587, 3588; Civil Code 1895, §§ 5362, 5363; Civil Code 1910, §§ 5957, 5958; Code 1933, §§ 110-702, 110-703.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

What constitutes "the face of the record or pleadings." — When it is sought to arrest a judgment imposing a sentence in a criminal case, "the face of the record or pleadings" have been held to be the indictment, plea, verdict, and judgment. Hall v. State, 202 Ga. 42, 42 S.E.2d 130 (1947).

Challenge to the sufficiency of the substance of an indictment can be made after trial by means of a motion in arrest of judgment. Bowman v. State, 227 Ga. App. 598, 490 S.E.2d 163 (1997).

Challenge to enhanced sentence based on allegedly defective indictment. — Defendant could not challenge a sentence for family violence battery on appeal, claiming that the sentence was erroneously enhanced from a misdemeanor to a felony under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-23.1(f)(2) based on a previous conviction arising from a guilty plea to the same offense that was based on a defective indictment because since the defendant failed to challenge the indictment at the time the defendant pleaded guilty, the proper remedy was a motion in arrest of judgment under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61(b) or habeas corpus. Grogan v. State, 297 Ga. App. 251, 676 S.E.2d 764 (2009).

After defendant's conviction has been affirmed on appeal, motion in arrest of judgment is one of three available remedies. — Petitioner's motion to vacate the conviction was not an appropriate remedy in a criminal case after the petitioner's murder conviction had been affirmed on direct appeal. The court overruled Division 2 of Chester v. State, 284 Ga. 162 (2008), which had allowed such motions under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-4, and held that in order to challenge a conviction after the conviction had been affirmed on direct appeal, the petitioner was required to file an extraordinary motion for new trial, O.C.G.A. § 5-5-41, a motion in arrest of judgment, O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61, or a petition for habeas corpus under O.C.G.A. § 9-14-40. Harper v. State, 286 Ga. 216, 686 S.E.2d 786 (2009).

Absent perjury, fraud, accident, or mistake, only defects not amendable form basis for motion. — Verdict of a jury and the judgment based thereon cannot be set aside on a motion filed for that purpose, except for defects not amendable which appear on the face of the record, unless the verdict is obtained by perjury, fraud, accident, or mistake. Bonner v. State, 63 Ga. App. 464, 11 S.E.2d 431 (1940).

When arrest of judgment should be granted. — Motion in arrest of judgment due to a defective indictment should only be granted when the indictment was absolutely void. State v. Hammons, 252 Ga. App. 226, 555 S.E.2d 890 (2001).

Certification of judge as to judge's knowledge of events as basis for motion. — In a motion for new trial it might be appropriate for a judge to certify to events which transpired in the judge's presence, but such certification of anything within the judge's knowledge would not constitute the basis for a motion in arrest of judgment. Pippin v. State, 172 Ga. 224, 157 S.E. 185, answer conformed to, 43 Ga. App. 16, 157 S.E. 913 (1931).

Certification of judge as to allegations in motion does not make allegations part of the record. — Fact that the judge below certifies on appeal to the truth of the allegations in the motion in arrest of judgment does not make those facts a part of the record to which the motion in arrest relates. Pippin v. State, 172 Ga. 224, 157 S.E. 185, answer conformed to, 43 Ga. App. 16, 157 S.E. 913 (1931).

What matters not properly presented in motion in arrest of judgment. — Motion in arrest of judgment is not the proper mode of presenting to the attention of the court errors in overruling a motion for continuance or in allowing a separation of the jury. Pippin v. State, 172 Ga. 224, 157 S.E. 185, answer conformed to, 43 Ga. App. 16, 157 S.E. 913 (1931).

Erasure and substitute in verdict as grounds for appellate investigation. — If a verdict is rendered by a jury and there is an erasure and substitution of words, and the meaning of the verdict is perfectly clear, there is no reason why the verdict should be rejected, nor does such erasure constitute a basis for investigation by the appellate courts. Pippin v. State, 172 Ga. 224, 157 S.E. 185, answer conformed to, 43 Ga. App. 16, 157 S.E. 913 (1931).

Attack by motion on constitutionality of a statute not invoked in the prosecution. — When, by motion in arrest of judgment, a portion of a criminal statute is attacked as unconstitutional, and when neither the indictment, plea, verdict, nor judgment contains anything to indicate that the portion of the statute attacked as unconstitutional was applied or invoked in the prosecution, such motion in arrest of judgment does not present the question to the Supreme Court for determination. Hall v. State, 202 Ga. 42, 42 S.E.2d 130 (1947).

Time of motions. — Limitation provided by the statute as to the time within which each must be made constitutes the only difference between a motion to set aside and a motion to arrest in judgment. Artope v. Barker, 74 Ga. 462 (1885); Regopoulas v. State, 116 Ga. 596, 42 S.E. 1014 (1902); Garfield Oil Mills v. Stephens, 16 Ga. App. 655, 85 S.E. 983 (1915); Maddox Coffee Co. v. McHan, 22 Ga. App. 198, 95 S.E. 736 (1918).

Motions in arrest of judgment may be filed in the criminal cases within the term the judgment was rendered. Lacey v. State, 253 Ga. 711, 324 S.E.2d 471 (1985).

Defendant's challenge to the defendant's misdemeanor traffic convictions by a motion to vacate was not an appropriate remedy and the defendant's motion could not be construed as a motion for arrest of judgment or other alternative motion because the motion was untimely under O.C.G.A. § 40-13-33(a); the 180-day limit applied to any challenge that could have been brought by habeas corpus, and suspension of a driver's license interfered with a liberty interest. Munye v. State, 342 Ga. App. 680, 803 S.E.2d 775 (2017), cert. denied, No. S18C0239, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 236 (Ga. 2018).

Court correctly dismissed the defendant's motions in arrest of judgment, which were both filed in the trial court on July 12, 2016, as untimely because the defendant's convictions were entered on May 10, 2016, during the trial court's May 2016 term, which ended on July 3; although one of the motions was postmarked on July 1, that did not help the defendant as both motions were filed with the clerk of court after the May term had ended and were therefore untimely. Thompson v. State, 304 Ga. 146, 816 S.E.2d 646 (2018).

Motion filed 21 years after conviction. — Motion in arrest of judgment based on a claim that an indictment lacked an essential element had to be made during the term in which the judgment was obtained and the defendant's motion, filed 21 years after the defendant was convicted on a charge of armed robbery, was untimely. Motes v. State, 262 Ga. App. 728, 586 S.E.2d 682 (2003).

Motion in arrest of judgment, like a motion for withdrawal of plea, must be made at the same term the judgment was obtained; a trial court was without jurisdiction to grant the defendant's motion to withdraw the defendant's guilty plea which was not filed within the same term of court, and the trial court was directed to reinstate the original conviction and sentence. Bonner v. State, 268 Ga. App. 170, 601 S.E.2d 478 (2004).

When judgments on defendants' convictions were entered in April 2003 but their motions in arrest of judgment were not filed until January 2005, the motions were untimely. Mitchell v. State, 282 Ga. 416, 651 S.E.2d 49 (2007).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for burglary, two counts of aggravated assault and armed robbery, aggravated sodomy and rape, and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, the trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion to correct a void judgment and to correct an illegally merged sentence as the defendant's motion was essentially seeking to vacate the judgment of conviction, which motion was contrary to the longstanding rule that a motion to vacate a judgment will not lie in a criminal case. Johnson v. State, 287 Ga. App. 759, 652 S.E.2d 836 (2007).

Defendant waived the defendant's right to be tried under a perfect indictment because the defendant did not file a special demurrer within ten days after the arraignment as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-110. Additionally, to the extent the defendant's motion was one in arrest of judgment, the motion was untimely because the motion was not filed in the same term of court as the judgment as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61. Thompson v. State, 286 Ga. 889, 692 S.E.2d 379 (2010), overruled on other grounds, State v. Kelly, 290 Ga. 29, 718 S.E.2d 232 (2011).

Because the defendant did not file a timely special demurrer to the indictment or a timely motion in arrest of judgment, the defendant waived any claim that could have been raised via special or general demurrer. Kirt v. State, 309 Ga. App. 227, 709 S.E.2d 840 (2011).

Court's delay in providing written notice does not extend time. — Defendant's motion in arrest of judgment did not toll the time for filing an appeal of the defendant's conviction under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-38(a) as the motion was filed after the term of the trial court in which the defendant was convicted and was untimely under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61(b); the fact that the trial court was late in sending the defendant written notice of the court's ruling on the motion in arrest of judgment did not deny the defendant the right to appeal the defendant's conviction, which was lost years earlier when the motion in arrest of judgment was untimely filed. Smith v. State, 263 Ga. App. 414, 587 S.E.2d 787 (2003).

Denial of motion for out-of-time appeal was not an abuse of discretion as the trial court credited defense counsel's testimony that counsel advised the defendant of the defendant's right to appeal the defendant's aggravated assault conviction within 30 days, that the evidence against the defendant was overwhelming, that counsel did not discern any appropriate grounds for filing an appeal, and that the defendant took counsel's advice to file a motion to remold the defendant's sentence instead. Huff v. State, 271 Ga. App. 553, 610 S.E.2d 177 (2005).

Motion properly denied. — Inasmuch as it was established that a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395 was alleged to have occurred in Douglas County, Georgia, the State Court of Douglas County had subject-matter jurisdiction over the case; thus, the denial of the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment was not error. Harbuck v. State, 280 Ga. 775, 631 S.E.2d 351 (2006).

Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that the indictment was defective for failing to allege the essential element of intent to commit a theft because the indictment clearly charged that the defendant attempted to commit a burglary, not that the defendant completed the crime. Coleman v. State, 318 Ga. App. 478, 735 S.E.2d 788 (2012), recons. denied; overruled on other grounds by State v. Heath, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 362 (Ga. 2020).

Evidentiary hearing not required. — Trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to allow an out-of-time appeal without conducting an evidentiary appeal was not an abuse of discretion as the defendant explained to the trial court that the defendant decided, as a matter of strategy, to file a pro se motion in arrest of judgment under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61 rather than an immediate direct appeal; there was no need to inquire further into whether the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to file an immediate direct appeal. Smith v. State, 263 Ga. App. 414, 587 S.E.2d 787 (2003).

Preservation for appellate review. — Because the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment was untimely under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61(b), in that the motion was filed over five years after judgment was entered, the denial of the motion by the trial court was not subject to appellate review. Myers v. State, 311 Ga. App. 668, 716 S.E.2d 772 (2011).

Cited in Gravitt v. State, 165 Ga. 779, 142 S.E. 100 (1928); Pippin v. State, 172 Ga. 224, 157 S.E. 185 (1931); Phillips v. State, 60 Ga. App. 622, 4 S.E.2d 698 (1939); Berkeley v. State, 74 Ga. App. 711, 41 S.E.2d 265 (1947); Sellers v. State, 82 Ga. App. 761, 62 S.E.2d 395 (1950); McEwen v. State, 108 Ga. App. 352, 133 S.E.2d 38 (1963); Hatfield v. State, 119 Ga. App. 110, 166 S.E.2d 431 (1969); Edwards v. State, 226 Ga. 811, 177 S.E.2d 668 (1970); Wiley v. State, 124 Ga. App. 654, 185 S.E.2d 582 (1971); Bowen v. State, 144 Ga. App. 329, 241 S.E.2d 431 (1977); Hubbard v. State, 167 Ga. App. 32, 305 S.E.2d 849 (1983); State v. Kight, 175 Ga.

App. 65, 332 S.E.2d 363 (1985); May v. State, 179 Ga. App. 736, 348 S.E.2d 61 (1986); Hill v. State, 183 Ga. App. 654, 360 S.E.2d 4 (1987); State v. O'Quinn, 192 Ga. App. 359, 384 S.E.2d 888 (1989); Walker v. State, 199 Ga. App. 701, 405 S.E.2d 887 (1991); Hammock v. State, 201 Ga. App. 614, 411 S.E.2d 743 (1991); Stargell v. State, 204 Ga. App. 45, 418 S.E.2d 372 (1992); Cabell v. State, 221 Ga. App. 192, 471 S.E.2d 222 (1996); Worle v. State, 227 Ga. App. 575, 489 S.E.2d 374 (1997); Dandy v. State, 253 Ga. App. 407, 559 S.E.2d 150 (2002); Pearson v. State, 258 Ga. App. 651, 574 S.E.2d 820 (2002); Dasher v. State, 285 Ga. 308, 676 S.E.2d 181 (2009); McDaniel v. State, 298 Ga. App. 558, 680 S.E.2d 593 (2009); Fouts v. State, 322 Ga. App. 261, 744 S.E.2d 451 (2013); Nazario v. State, 293 Ga. 480, 746 S.E.2d 109 (2013).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Time within which application to reopen or set aside a judgment by confession under warrant of attorney may be made, 112 A.L.R. 797.

Scope and character of meritorious defense as condition of relief from judgment, 174 A.L.R. 10.

Right of successful party to have judgment in his favor vacated or set aside on grounds of mistake, inadvertence, excusable neglect, or the like, 40 A.L.R.2d 1127.

Attorney's inaction as excuse for failure to timely prosecute action, 15 A.L.R.3d 674.

Right to a jury trial on motion to vacate judgment, 75 A.L.R.3d 894.

DNA evidence as newly discovered evidence which will warrant grant of new trial or other postconviction relief in criminal case, 125 A.L.R.5th 497.

Actual innocence exception to procedural bars in state post-conviction proceedings, 97 A.L.R.6th 263.

17-9-62. Defects in pleadings or record aided by verdict or amendable not subject to motion.

A judgment may not be arrested for any defect in the pleadings or record that is aided by verdict or amendable as a matter of form.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 3509; Code 1868, § 3532; Code 1873, § 3590; Code 1882, § 3590; Civil Code 1895, § 5365; Civil Code 1910, § 5960; Code 1933, § 110-705.

Cross references. — Corresponding provision relating to civil procedure, § 9-12-15.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 49 C.J.S., Judgments, §§ 54, 410.

17-9-63. Motion not relating to merits of offense charged not to be granted.

No motion in arrest of judgment shall be granted for any matter not affecting the real merits of the offense charged in the indictment or accusation.

History. — Laws 1833, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 833; Code 1863, § 4517; Code 1868, § 4536; Code 1873, § 4629; Code 1882, § 4629; Penal Code 1895, § 955; Penal Code 1910, § 980; Code 1933, § 27-1601.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

What constitutes "the face of the record or pleadings." — When it is sought to arrest a judgment imposing a sentence in a criminal case "the face of the record or pleadings" have been held to be the indictment, plea, verdict, and judgment. Hall v. State, 202 Ga. 42, 42 S.E.2d 130 (1947).

Defects which will sustain a motion in arrest of judgment generally. — In order to sustain a motion in arrest of judgment, the defects must appear on the face of the record and must be fatal defects. Hatcher v. State, 176 Ga. 454, 168 S.E. 278 (1933).

Enumerations of error which do not relate to unamendable defects appearing on the face of the record show no ground for reversal. Yarbrough v. State, 119 Ga. App. 46, 166 S.E.2d 35 (1969).

Motion reaches defects, not cured by verdict, to which general demurrer could be interposed. — In criminal cases, a motion in arrest of judgment will reach any defect apparent on the face of the record, not cured by the verdict, to which the general demurrer could have been successfully interposed before arraignment. Mullen v. State, 51 Ga. App. 385, 180 S.E. 521 (1935).

Motions filed in term in which judgments rendered are treated as motions in arrest of judgment. — Motions filed during the term in which judgment are rendered, alleging that the indictments are void, will be treated by the Supreme Court as motions in arrest of judgment as provided by this section. Marshall v. State, 229 Ga. 841, 195 S.E.2d 12 (1972).

Oral motion to quash raises question of whether motion in arrest of judgment would lie. — Oral motion to quash an indictment which is made after the issue has been joined raises only the question of whether the indictment is so defective that a motion in arrest of judgment would lie. Curtis v. State, 102 Ga. App. 790, 118 S.E.2d 264 (1960).

If indictment attacked after verdict, presumption in favor of verdict. — After a verdict, every presumption and inference is in favor of the verdict. Hence, the pleading must be construed most strongly in favor of the pleader (the state). Rumph v. State, 60 Ga. App. 689, 4 S.E.2d 673 (1939).

If defendant did not demur to the indictment, but waited until after the verdict before attacking the verdict's sufficiency by way of a motion in arrest of judgment, every presumption and inference was in favor of the verdict, and the pleading would be construed most strongly in favor of the pleader (the state). Cordovano v. State, 61 Ga. App. 590, 7 S.E.2d 45 (1940).

If the defendant waits until after the verdict and judgment and files a motion to set aside the verdict and judgment on the ground of certain alleged defects on the face of the indictment, every presumption is in favor of the verdict. Grier v. State, 64 Ga. App. 718, 13 S.E.2d 909 (1941).

Inconsistent verdict not a valid basis for a motion in arrest of judgment. — Because Georgia did not recognize the inconsistent verdict rule, the state properly assigned error to the trial court's grant of the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment; the evidence was sufficient to conclude that defendant was guilty of possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b)(1). State v. Robinson, 275 Ga. App. 117, 619 S.E.2d 806 (2005).

Irregularities in jury composition may not be addressed by motion. — Motion in arrest of judgment may not be considered when directed at irregularities in the composition of the jury because this section only relates to the merits of the offense charged and did not entertain collateral attacks. Bowen v. State, 144 Ga. App. 329, 241 S.E.2d 431 (1977).

Evidence that grand jury members were improperly drawn. — It is not within the province of this motion to embrace aliunde evidence tending to show that the members of the grand jury were improperly drawn. Hand v. State, 88 Ga. App. 775, 77 S.E.2d 746 (1953).

Attack by motion on constitutionality of a statute not invoked in the prosecution. — If, by motion in arrest of judgment, a portion of a criminal statute is attacked as unconstitutional, and when neither the indictment, plea, verdict, nor judgment contains anything to indicate that the portion of the statute attacked as unconstitutional was applied or invoked in the prosecution, such motion in arrest of judgment does not present the question to the Supreme Court for determination. Hall v. State, 202 Ga. 42, 42 S.E.2d 130 (1947).

Indictment sets forth offense with sufficient clarity. — Court does not err in overruling a motion in arrest of judgment if it is reasonably apparent from the indictment that every essential ingredient of the offense is set forth with sufficient clearness to enable the defendant and the jury to understand the nature of the offense and to enable the defendant to prepare a defense. Rumph v. State, 60 Ga. App. 689, 4 S.E.2d 673 (1939).

Imperfect indictment which nonetheless charges violation understandable by the jury. — If a verdict, when construed with the indictment, does not find the defendant guilty of any offense, the judgment should be arrested, but when, regardless of the denomination of the offense, the allegations of the indictment charge, even imperfectly, a violation of the law which can be plainly understood by the jury, and a verdict finding the defendant guilty cannot be ignored without violating the rules of common sense, sentence should be pronounced upon the finding. Rumph v. State, 60 Ga. App. 689, 4 S.E.2d 673 (1939).

Before retrial, substance of indictment may also be tried by general demurrer. — Because a motion in arrest of judgment can be made after trial to challenge the substance of an indictment, it follows that a general demurrer can be made before retrial to challenge the substance of the indictment. Bramblett v. State, 239 Ga. 336, 236 S.E.2d 580 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1013, 98 S. Ct. 728, 54 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1978).

Form of objection if motion in arrest of judgment does not lie. — If an indictment is not on the indictment's face so defective that a motion in arrest of judgment would lie, an objection to the indictment must be in writing. An oral objection, being ineffective for its purpose, is the equivalent of none at all, and, if no other action be taken, a waiver results. Curtis v. State, 102 Ga. App. 790, 118 S.E.2d 264 (1960).

Cited in McClendon v. State, 81 Ga. App. 218, 58 S.E.2d 462 (1950); Jennings v. Davis, 92 Ga. App. 265, 88 S.E.2d 544 (1955); Slaughter v. State, 98 Ga. App. 59, 104 S.E.2d 911 (1958); Johnson v. State, 116 Ga. App. 406, 157 S.E.2d 773 (1967); Palmer v. State, 144 Ga. App. 480, 241 S.E.2d 597 (1978); Joiner v. State, 163 Ga. App. 521, 295 S.E.2d 219 (1982); Brown v. State, 181 Ga. App. 865, 354 S.E.2d 169 (1987); Dandy v. State, 253 Ga. App. 407, 559 S.E.2d 150 (2002).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 700 et seq.

C.J.S. — 23A C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 1980 et seq.

ALR. — Appealability of order arresting judgment in criminal case, 98 A.L.R.2d 737.

CHAPTER 10

SENTENCE AND PUNISHMENT

Article 1

Procedure for Sentencing and Imposition of Punishment

Sec.
17-10-1. (For effective date, see note.) Fixing of sentence; suspension or probation of sentence; change in sentence; eligibility for parole; prohibited modifications; exceptions.
17-10-1.1. Judicial consideration of victim impact statement; form document; manner of rebuttal; effect of noncompliance; no creation of cause of action or right of appeal.
17-10-1.2. Oral victim impact statement; presentation of evidence; cross-examination and rebuttal by defendant; effect of noncompliance; no creation of cause of action or right of appeal.
17-10-1.3. Factoring into sentencing determinations citizenship status of convict.
17-10-1.4. Split sentence.
17-10-2. Conduct of presentence hearings in felony cases; effect of reversal for error in presentence hearing.
17-10-3. Punishment for misdemeanors generally.
17-10-3.1. Punishment for violations of Code Section 40-6-391.
17-10-4. Punishment for misdemeanors of a high and aggravated nature.
17-10-5. Imposition of misdemeanor punishment for felonies punishable by imprisonment for term of ten years or less.
17-10-6. Review of sentences of imprisonment for period exceeding 12 years by three-judge panel [Repealed].
17-10-6.1. Punishment for serious violent offenders; authorization for reduction in mandatory minimum sentencing.
Sec.
17-10-6.2. Punishment for sexual offenders.
17-10-6.3. Disposition of cases currently under review by three-judge panel; duties and responsibilities of the president of The Council of Superior Court Judges of Georgia with respect to abolishing the three-judge panel.
17-10-7. Punishment of repeat offenders; punishment and eligibility for parole of persons convicted of fourth felony offense.
17-10-8. Payment of fine in felony case; rebate or refund of fine not permitted upon revocation of probation.
17-10-8.1. Fee for legal defense services as condition of probation.
17-10-9. (For effective date, see note.) Specification by judge imposing sentence of time from which penal sentence to run; effect of appeal.
17-10-9.1. Voluntary surrender to county jail or correctional institution; release of defendant.
17-10-10. Concurrent sentences.
17-10-11. (For effective date, see note.) Granting of credit generally; exceptions; use in determining parole eligibility; applicability of Code section.
17-10-12. Affidavit specifying number of days spent in confinement; disposition of affidavit; granting of credit to defendant.
17-10-13. Legal adjudication of guilt in court having jurisdiction to precede assessment of punishment.
17-10-14. Committal of person under 17 convicted of felony.
17-10-15. AIDS transmitting crimes; requiring defendant to submit to HIV test; report of results.
17-10-16. Sentence to imprisonment for life without parole authorized; ineligibility for parole or leave programs.

Sec.
17-10-16.1. Seeking death penalty not prerequisite to life without parole sentence.
17-10-17. Sentencing of defendants guilty of crimes involving bias or prejudice; identification of increased sentence.
17-10-18. Notification to seek enhanced penalty.
17-10-19. Determination of defendant's guilt; object of the offense; enhancement of sentence.
17-10-20. Collection of fines and restitution in criminal cases.
17-10-21. Vacating of sentence for trafficking victim defendants.

Article 2

Death Penalty Generally

17-10-30. Procedure for imposition of death penalty generally.
17-10-30.1. Imprisonment for life without parole; finding of statutory aggravating circumstance required; duties of judge and jury [Repealed].
17-10-31. Requirement of jury finding of aggravating circumstance and recommendation of death penalty prior to imposition; arguments of counsel during sentencing phase; jury instructions; actions of judge in event of failure to reach unanimous verdict.
17-10-31.1. Requirement of jury finding of aggravating circumstance and recommendation of sentence of death or life without parole; duties of judge; jury instruction on meaning of "life without parole" and "life imprisonment." [Repealed].
17-10-32. Sentencing of person indicted for capital offense to life imprisonment or other punishment upon plea of guilty.
17-10-32.1. Sentencing of person subject to death penalty or life without parole upon plea of guilty; duties of judge [Repealed].
Sec.
17-10-33. Imposition of sentence of death upon judgment of death; to whom copies of sentence sent; conveying defendant to state correctional institution; expenses of transporting defendant.
17-10-34. Sentence to specify time period for and place of execution; appointing time period for execution of pregnant female.
17-10-35. Review of death sentences by Supreme Court; forwarding of record and transcript; scope of review; written briefs and oral argument; similar cases to be included in decision; direct appeal to be consolidated with sentence review.
17-10-35.1. Review of pretrial proceedings when death penalty is sought; reports investigating reversible error; transmittal of reports to Supreme Court; orders regarding review; Attorney General assistance; res judicata; applicability; waiver of rights.
17-10-35.2. Hearing to determine appropriateness of interim appellate review of pretrial rulings.
17-10-36. Establishment of unified review procedure by Supreme Court; effect on habeas corpus.
17-10-37. Appointment of assistant to Supreme Court to review death sentences; employment of staff to compile data.
17-10-38. Death sentences generally.
17-10-39. Procedure for determination if female sentenced to death is pregnant; suspension of execution of sentence; issuance of new order for execution of sentence; entry of order upon minutes of court.
17-10-40. Change of time period for execution when time period set for execution has passed; recordation on court minutes; length of and time limitation for new time period for execution; setting day and time for execution.

Sec.
17-10-41. Persons required to be present at executions.
17-10-42. Preparation and filing of certification of execution.
17-10-42.1. Participation of medical professionals in executions.
17-10-43. Disposition of body of executed person; payment of expenses of transporting body.
17-10-44. Apparatus, machinery, and appliances.

Article 3

Mentally Incompetent to Be Executed

17-10-60. "Mentally incompetent to be executed" defined.
17-10-61. No execution upon determination of mental incompetency to be executed.
17-10-62. Exclusive procedure for challenging mental competency to be executed.
17-10-63. Filing of application; contents.
17-10-64. Service of application.
17-10-65. Answer by respondent.
17-10-66. Examination of applicant.
17-10-67. When application to be filed.
17-10-68. Proof; disposition.
17-10-69. Prior adjudication as presumption of mental competency.
17-10-70. Appeals.
17-10-71. Procedure upon convicted person's regaining mental competency.

Cross references. — Prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment, U.S. Const., amend. 8 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Penalty for hiring applicant with criminal record, § 31-7-353.

U.S. Code. — Sentence and judgment, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 32.

Law reviews. — For article, "The Defense Lawyer's Role in the Sentencing Process: You've Got to Accentuate the Positive and Eliminate the Negative," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 981 (1986). For annual survey article discussing developments in criminal law, see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 209 (1999). For article, "Constructing Recidivism Risk," see 67 Emory L.J. 59 (2017).

For note, "Comparative Analysis of Democracy and Sentencing in the United States as a Model for Reform in Iraq," see 33 Ga. J. Int'l & Comp. L. 303 (2004).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Application date of provisions. — Sentence Reform Act of 1994 became effective January 1, 1995, and the new sentencing provisions created by the Act only apply to offenses committed on or after that date. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 97-10.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 706 et seq. 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 819 et seq.

C.J.S. — 24 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, § 2183 et seq.

ALR. — Right to recover back fine or penalty paid in criminal proceeding, 26 A.L.R. 1523.

Censorship and evidentiary use of unconvicted prisoners' mail, 52 A.L.R.3d 548.

Propriety of conditioning probation on defendant's not entering specified geographical area, 28 A.L.R.4th 725.

Right of convicted defendant to refuse probation, 28 A.L.R.4th 736.

Computation of incarceration time under work-release or "hardship" sentences, 28 A.L.R.4th 1265.

Appealability of order suspending imposition or execution of sentence, 51 A.L.R.4th 939.

Insanity as defense to revocation of probation, 56 A.L.R.4th 1178.

The propriety of conditioning parole on defendant's not entering specified geographical area, 54 A.L.R.5th 743.

ARTICLE 1

PROCEDURE FOR SENTENCING AND IMPOSITION OF PUNISHMENT

Cross references. — Vacating of office by state officer convicted of felony, § 45-5-2. Suspension of county officer upon conviction for felony, § 45-5-6. Sentencing and sentence review, Uniform Superior Court Rules, Rule 35.2. Modification or vacation of juvenile court order of probation, Uniform Rules for the Juvenile Courts of Georgia, Rules 16.1 through 16.4.

Law reviews. — For annual survey on death penalty law, see 70 Mercer L. Rev. 73 (2018).

For note on the 1994 amendments of Code Sections 17-10-1, 17-10-6, 17-10-7 and enactment of Code Section 17-10-6.1 of this article, see 11 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 159 (1994).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Governmental Entity's Liability for Injuries Caused by Negligently Released Individual, 19 POF2d 583.

Government's Breach of Plea Bargain, 27 POF2d 133.

17-10-1. (For effective date, see note.) Fixing of sentence; suspension or probation of sentence; change in sentence; eligibility for parole; prohibited modifications; exceptions.

(a)(1)(A) Except in cases in which life imprisonment, life without parole, or the death penalty may be imposed, upon a verdict or plea of guilty in any case involving a misdemeanor or felony, and after a presentence hearing, the judge fixing the sentence shall prescribe a determinate sentence for a specific number of months or years which shall be within the minimum and maximum sentences prescribed by law as the punishment for the crime. The judge imposing the sentence is granted power and authority to suspend or probate all or any part of the entire sentence under such rules and regulations as the judge deems proper, including service of a probated sentence in the sentencing options system, as provided by Article 6 of Chapter 3 of Title 42, and including the authority to revoke the suspension or probation when the defendant has violated any of the rules and regulations prescribed by the court, even before the probationary period has begun, subject to the conditions set out in this subsection; provided, however, that such action shall be subject to the provisions of Code Sections 17-10-6.1 and 17-10-6.2.

(B) When a defendant with no prior felony conviction is convicted of felony offenses or is charged with felony offenses and is sentenced pursuant to subsection (a) or (c) of Code Section 16-13-2 or Article 3 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, and the court imposes a sentence of probation or not more than 12 months of imprisonment followed by a term of probation, the court shall include a behavioral incentive date in its sentencing order that does not exceed three years from the date such sentence is imposed. Within 60 days of the expiration of such incentive date, if the defendant has not been arrested for anything other than a nonserious traffic offense as defined in Code Section 35-3-37, has been compliant with the general and special conditions of probation imposed, and has paid all restitution owed, the Department of Community Supervision shall notify the prosecuting attorney and the court of such facts. The Department of Community Supervision shall provide the court with an order to terminate such defendant's probation which the court shall execute unless the court or the prosecuting attorney requests a hearing on such matter within 30 days of the receipt of such order. The court shall take whatever action it determines would be for the best interest of justice and the welfare of society.

(2)(A) Active probation supervision shall terminate in all cases no later than two years from the commencement of active probation supervision unless specially extended or reinstated by the sentencing court upon notice and hearing and for good cause shown; provided, however, that in those cases involving:

(i) The collection of restitution, the period of active probation supervision shall remain in effect for so long as any such obligation is outstanding, or until termination of the sentence, whichever first occurs;

(ii) A conviction under Chapter 15 of Title 16, the "Georgia Street Gang Terrorism and Prevention Act," the period of active probation supervision shall remain in effect until the termination of the sentence, but shall not exceed five years unless as otherwise provided in this paragraph; or

(iii) A conviction that requires the defendant to register on the state sexual offender registry pursuant to Code Section 42-1-12, the period of active probation supervision shall remain in effect until the court orders unsupervised probation, or until termination of the sentence, whichever first occurs.

(B) Probation supervision shall not be required for defendants sentenced to probation while the defendant is in the legal custody of the Department of Corrections or the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

(3)(A) Any part of a sentence of probation revoked for a violation other than a subsequent commission of any felony, a violation of a special condition, or a misdemeanor offense involving physical violence resulting in bodily injury to an innocent victim which in the opinion of the trial court constitutes a danger to the community or a serious infraction occurring while the defendant is assigned to an alternative probation confinement facility shall be served in a probation detention center, probation boot camp, weekend lock up, or confinement in a local jail or detention facility, or other community correctional alternatives available to the court or provided by the Department of Corrections.

(B) A parolee or probationer charged with a misdemeanor involving physical injury or an attempt to commit physical injury or terroristic threats or with a new felony shall not be entitled to bond pending a hearing on the revocation of his or her parole or probation, except by order of a judge of the superior, state, or magistrate court wherein the alleged new offense occurred after a hearing and upon determination of the superior, state, or magistrate court that the parolee or probationer does not constitute a threat to the community; provided, however, that this subparagraph does not authorize state or magistrate court judges to grant bail for a person charged with any offense listed in subsection (a) of Code Section 17-6-1.

(4) In cases of imprisonment followed by probation, the sentence shall specifically provide that the period of probation shall not begin until the defendant has completed service of the confinement portion of the sentence. No revocation of any part of a probated sentence shall be effective while a defendant is in the legal custody of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

(5)(A) When a defendant has been sentenced to probation, the court shall retain jurisdiction throughout the period of the probated sentence as provided for in subsection (g) of Code Section 42-8-34. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the court may shorten the period of active probation supervision or unsupervised probation on motion of the defendant or on its own motion, or upon the request of a community supervision officer, if the court determines that probation is no longer necessary or appropriate for the ends of justice, the protection of society, and the rehabilitation of the defendant. Prior to entering any order for shortening a period of probation, the court shall afford notice to the victim or victims of all sex related offenses or violent offenses resulting in serious bodily injury or death and, upon request of the victim or victims so notified, shall afford notice and an opportunity for hearing to the defendant and the prosecuting attorney.

(B) The Department of Community Supervision shall establish a form document which shall include the elements set forth in this Code section concerning notification of victims and shall make copies of such form available to prosecuting attorneys in this state. When requested by the victim, the form document shall be provided to the victim by the prosecuting attorney. The form shall include the address of the community supervision office having jurisdiction over the case and contain a statement that the victim must maintain a copy of his or her address with the community supervision office and must notify the office of any change of address in order to maintain eligibility for notification by the Department of Community Supervision as required in this Code section.

(6)(A) Except as otherwise authorized by law, no court shall modify, suspend, probate, or alter a previously imposed sentence so as to reduce or eliminate a period of incarceration or probation and impose a financial payment which:

(i) Exceeds the statutorily specified maximum fine, plus all penalties, fees, surcharges, and restitution permitted or authorized by law; or

(ii) Is to be made to an entity which is not authorized by law to receive fines, penalties, fees, surcharges, or restitution.

(B) The prohibitions contained in this paragraph shall apply regardless of whether a defendant consents to the modification, suspension, probation, or alteration of such defendant's sentence and the imposition of such payment.

(C) Nothing in this paragraph shall prohibit or prevent a court from requiring, as a condition of suspension, modification, or probation of a sentence in a criminal case involving child abandonment, that the defendant pay all or a portion of child support which is owed to the custodial parent of a child which is the subject of such case.

(7) As used in this subsection, the term:

(A) "Active probation supervision" means the period of a probated sentence in which a probationer actively reports to his or her community supervision officer or is otherwise under the direct supervision of a community supervision officer.

(B) "Unsupervised probation" means the period of a probated sentence that follows active probation supervision in which:

(i) All of the conditions and limitations imposed by the court remain intact;

(ii) A probationer may have reduced reporting requirements; and

(iii) A community supervision officer shall not actively supervise such probationer.

(b) The judge, in fixing the sentence as prescribed in subsection (a) of this Code section, may make a determination as to whether the person being sentenced should be considered for parole prior to the completion of any requirement otherwise imposed by law relating to the completion of service of any specified time period before parole eligibility. In the event that the judge so determines, he or she may specify in the sentence that the person is sentenced under this subsection and may provide that the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, acting in its sole discretion, may consider and may parole any person so sentenced at any time prior to the completion of any minimum requirement otherwise imposed by law, rule, or regulation for the service of sentences or portions thereof. The determination allowed in this subsection shall be applicable to first offenders only.

(c) In any case in which a minor defendant who has not achieved a high school diploma or the equivalent is placed under a probated or suspended sentence, the court may require as a condition of probation or suspension of sentence that the defendant pursue a course of study designed to lead to achieving a high school diploma or the equivalent; and, in any case in which such a condition of probation may be imposed, the court shall give express consideration to whether such a condition should be imposed.

(d)(1) As used in this subsection, the term:

(A) "Developmental disability" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 37-1-1.

(B) "Indigent" means an individual who earns less than 100 percent of the federal poverty guidelines unless there is evidence that the individual has other resources that might reasonably be used without undue hardship for such individual or his or her dependents.

(C) "Significant financial hardship" means a reasonable probability that an individual will be unable to satisfy his or her financial obligations for two or more consecutive months.

(D) "Totally and permanently disabled" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 49-4-80.

(2) In determining the financial obligations, other than restitution, to impose on the defendant, the court shall consider:

(A) The defendant's financial resources and other assets, including whether any such assets are jointly controlled;

(B) The defendant's earnings and other income;

(C) The defendant's financial obligations, including obligations to dependents;

(D) The period of time during which the probation order will be in effect;

(E) The goal of the punishment being imposed; and

(F) Any other factor the court deems appropriate.

(3) In any case involving a violation of local ordinance, misdemeanor, or felony in which the defendant has been punished in whole or in part by a fine, the court shall be authorized to allow the defendant to satisfy such fine or any fee imposed in connection with probation supervision through community service as set forth in Article 3 of Chapter 3 of Title 42. One hour of community service shall equal the dollar amount of one hour of paid labor at the minimum wage under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, in effect on January 1, 2018, unless otherwise specified by the court. A defendant shall be required to serve the number of hours in community service which equals the number derived by dividing the amount owed by the defendant, including moneys assessed by a provider of probation services, by the federal minimum hourly wage or by the amount specified by the court. If the court orders educational advancement, the court shall determine the numbers of hours required to be completed. Prior to or subsequent to sentencing, a defendant, or subsequent to sentencing, a community supervision officer, may request that the court make all or any portion of the amount owed by the defendant be satisfied under this subsection.

(4) At the time of sentencing, the court may waive the imposition of a fine, exclusive of the payment of statutory surcharges, upon a determination that a defendant has a significant financial hardship or inability to pay or other extenuating factors exist that prohibit payment or collection of such fine. When determining significant financial hardship, the court may consider whether the defendant is indigent and whether the defendant or his or her dependents has a developmental disability or is totally and permanently disabled. If the court waives the imposition of a fine under this paragraph, it shall instead impose a theoretical fine and the defendant shall be required to pay the statutory surcharges associated therewith.

(e) In any case involving a felony in which the defendant previously appeared before a juvenile court, the records of the dispositions of the defendant as well as any evidence used in any juvenile court hearing shall be available to the district attorney, the defendant, and the superior court judge in determining sentencing as provided in Code Section 15-11-703.

(f) (For effective date, see note.) Within one year of the date upon which the sentence is imposed, or within 120 days after receipt by the sentencing court of the remittitur upon affirmance of the judgment after direct appeal, whichever is later, the court imposing the sentence has the jurisdiction, power, and authority to correct or reduce the sentence and to suspend or probate all or any part of the sentence imposed. The time periods prescribed in this subsection require the defendant to file a motion within such time periods; however, the court shall not be constrained to issue its order or hear the matter within such time periods. Prior to entering any order correcting, reducing, or modifying any sentence, the court shall afford notice and an opportunity for a hearing to the prosecuting attorney. Any order modifying a sentence which is entered without notice and an opportunity for a hearing as provided in this subsection shall be void. This subsection shall not limit any other jurisdiction granted to the court in this Code section or as provided for in subsection (g) of Code Section 42-8-34.

(g)(1)(A) In sentencing a defendant convicted of a felony to probated confinement, the sentencing judge may make the defendant's participation in a work release program operated by a county a condition of probation, provided that such program is available and the administrator of such program accepts the inmate.

(B) Any defendant accepted into a county work release program shall thereby be transferred into the legal custody of the administrator of said program; likewise, any defendant not accepted shall remain in the legal custody of the Department of Corrections.

(2) Work release status granted by the court may be revoked for cause by the sentencing court in its discretion or may be revoked by the state or local authority operating the work release program for any reason for which work release status would otherwise be revoked.

(3) The provisions of this subsection shall not limit the authority of the commissioner to authorize work release status pursuant to Code Section 42-5-59 or apply to or affect the authority to authorize work release of county prisoners, which shall be as provided for in Code Sections 42-1-4 and 42-1-9 or as otherwise provided by law.

(4) This subsection shall not apply with respect to any violent felony or any offense for which the work release status is specifically prohibited by law, including but not limited to serious violent felonies as specified in Code Section 17-10-6.1.

History. — Ga. L. 1919, p. 387, § 1; Code 1933, § 27-2502; Ga. L. 1950, p. 352, § 3; Ga. L. 1964, p. 483, §§ 2, 4; Ga. L. 1974, p. 352, §§ 3, 4; Ga. L. 1981, p. 1024, § 1; Ga. L. 1982, p. 3, § 17; Ga. L. 1984, p. 894, § 2; Ga. L. 1986, p. 842, § 1; Ga. L. 1988, p. 463, § 1; Ga. L. 1991, p. 310, § 1; Ga. L. 1992, p. 3221, § 1; Ga. L. 1993, p.

1654, § 1; Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 9; Ga. L. 1995, p. 1043, § 1; Ga. L. 1996, p. 1257, § 1; Ga. L. 1998, p. 842, § 6; Ga. L. 2000, p. 20, § 7; Ga. L. 2001, p. 94, § 5; Ga. L. 2001, p. 1030, § 1; Ga. L. 2004, p. 775, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 60, § 17/HB 95; Ga. L. 2006, p. 379, § 19/HB 1059; Ga. L. 2006, p. 710, § 7/SB 203; Ga. L. 2010, p. 230, § 10/HB 1015; Ga. L. 2012, p. 899, § 4-3/HB 1176; Ga. L. 2013, p. 141, § 17/HB 79; Ga. L. 2013, p. 222, § 7/HB 349; Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 4-17/HB 242; Ga. L. 2015, p. 5, § 17/HB 90; Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 5-30/HB 310; Ga. L. 2016, p. 443, § 13-4/SB 367; Ga. L. 2017, p. 585, § 2-1/SB 174; Ga. L. 2018, p. 550, § 2-6/SB 407; Ga. L. 2018, p. 1112, § 17/SB 365; Ga. L. 2020, p. 361, § 1/HB 984.

Delayed effective date. — Subsection (f), as set out above, becomes effective January 1, 2021. For version of subsection (f) as in effect until January 1, 2021, see the 2020 amendment note.

The 2018 amendments. — The first 2018 amendment, effective July 1, 2018, substituted "with no prior felony conviction is convicted of felony offenses or is charged with felony offenses and is sentenced pursuant to subsection (a) or (c) of Code Section 16-13-2 or Article 3 of Chapter 8 of Title 42, and the court imposes a sentence of probation or not more than 12 months of imprisonment followed by a term of probation," for "is convicted of felony offenses, has no prior felony conviction, and the court imposes a sentence of probation, not to include a split sentence," in the first sentence of subparagraph (a)(1)(B); substituted the present provisions of paragraph (a)(2) for the former provisions, which read: "Active probation supervision shall terminate in all cases no later than two years from the commencement of active probation supervision unless specially extended or reinstated by the sentencing court upon notice and hearing and for good cause shown; provided, however, that in those cases involving the collection of restitution, the period of active probation supervision shall remain in effect for so long as any such obligation is outstanding, or until termination of the sentence, whichever first occurs, and for those cases involving a conviction under Chapter 15 of Title 16, the 'Georgia Street Gang Terrorism and Prevention Act,' the period of active probation supervision shall remain in effect until the termination of the sentence, but shall not exceed five years unless as otherwise provided in this paragraph. Supervision shall not be required for defendants sentenced to probation while the defendant is in the legal custody of the Department of Corrections or the State Board of Pardons and Paroles."; and substituted the present provisions of subsection (d), for the former provisions, which read: "In any case involving a misdemeanor or a felony in which the defendant has been punished in whole or in part by a fine, the sentencing judge shall be authorized to allow the defendant to satisfy such fine through community service as defined in Code Section 42-3-50. One hour of community service shall equal the dollar amount of one hour of paid labor at the minimum wage under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, in effect on January 1, 2017, unless otherwise specified by the sentencing judge. A defendant shall be required to serve the number of hours in community service which equals the number derived by dividing the amount of the fine by the federal minimum hourly wage or by the amount specified by the sentencing judge. Prior to or subsequent to sentencing, a defendant, or subsequent to sentencing, a community supervision officer, may request that the court make all or any portion of a fine be satisfied under this subsection." The second 2018 amendment, effective May 8, 2018, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, inserted "or she" near the beginning of the second sentence of subsection (b).

The 2020 amendment, effective January 1, 2021, added the second sentence in subsection (f).

Cross references. — Diploma requirement as condition of probation in juvenile proceeding, § 15-11-601. Discretion of judge to allow conditional discharge for first offenders of laws relating to possession of controlled substances or dangerous drugs, § 16-13-2. Sentence to imprisonment for life without parole authorized, § 17-10-16. Notification required to be given to commissioner of offender rehabilitation following imposition of sentence, and as to assignment of convicted person to correctional institution, § 42-5-50. Alternative provisions for sentencing of offenders between ages 17 and 25, § 42-7-3 et seq. Procedure for hearing and determining question of probation generally, § 42-8-34. Probation of first offenders, § 42-8-60.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1991, p. 310, § 2, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the 1991 amendments to this Code section, effective July 1, 1991, are applicable to sentences of probation entered prior to, on, or after July 1, 1991.

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 7, not codified by the General Assembly, and effective May 1, 1993, provides: "Except as provided in this section, the provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed after the effective date of this Act. With express written consent of the state, a defendant whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached and the state has filed with the trial court notice of its intention to seek the death penalty or (2) the defendant has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking the death penalty after remand."

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 8, not codified by the General Assembly, and effective May 1, 1993, provides: "Except as provided in Section 6 of this Act [Code Section 17-10-32.1], the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act nor shall this Act be construed as repealing Code Sections 17-10-30, 17-10-31, or 17-10-32 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated."

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 9, not codified by the General Assembly, and effective May 1, 1993, provides: "No person shall be sentenced to life without parole unless such person could have received the death penalty under the laws of this state as such laws have been interpreted by the United States Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Georgia."

Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994.'"

Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 2, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly declares and finds:

"(1) That persons who are convicted of certain serious violent felonies shall serve minimum terms of imprisonment which shall not be suspended, probated, stayed, deferred, or otherwise withheld by the sentencing judge; and

"(2) That sentences ordered by courts in cases of certain serious violent felonies shall be served in their entirety and shall not be reduced by parole or by any earned time, early release, work release, or other such sentence-reducing measures administered by the Department of Corrections."

Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, § 16, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed on or after the effective date of this Act; provided, however, that any conviction occurring prior to, on, or after the effective date of this Act shall be deemed a 'conviction' for the purposes of this Act and shall be counted in determining the appropriate sentence to be imposed for any offense committed on or after the effective date of this Act." This Act became effective January 1, 1995.

Ga. L. 1998, p. 180, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly declares and finds: (1) That the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994,' approved April 20, 1994 (Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959), provided that persons convicted of one of seven serious violent felonies shall serve minimum mandatory terms of imprisonment which shall not otherwise be suspended, stayed, probated, deferred, or withheld by the sentencing court; (2) That in State v. Allmond, 225 Ga. App. 509 (1997), the Georgia Court of Appeals held, notwithstanding the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994,' that the provisions of the First Offender Act would still be available to the sentencing court, which would mean that a person who committed a serious violent felony could be sentenced to less than the minimum mandatory ten-year sentence; and (3) That, contrary to the decision in State v. Allmond, it is the expressed intent of the General Assembly that persons who commit a serious violent felony specified in the 'Sentence Reform Act of 1994' shall be sentenced to a mandatory term of imprisonment of not less than ten years and shall not be eligible for first offender treatment."

Ga. L. 2001, p. 94, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the '2001 Crime Prevention Act.'"

Ga. L. 2006, p. 379, § 1/HB 1059, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that recidivist sexual offenders, sexual offenders who use physical violence, and sexual offenders who prey on children are sexual predators who present an extreme threat to the public safety. Many sexual offenders are extremely likely to use physical violence and to repeat their offenses; and some sexual offenders commit many offenses, have many more victims than are ever reported, and are prosecuted for only a fraction of their crimes. The General Assembly finds that this makes the cost of sexual offender victimization to society at large, while incalculable, clearly exorbitant. The General Assembly further finds that the high level of threat that a sexual predator presents to the public safety, and the long-term effects suffered by victims of sex offenses, provide the state with sufficient justification to implement a strategy that includes:

"(1) Incarcerating sexual offenders and maintaining adequate facilities to ensure that decisions to release sexual predators into the community are not made on the basis of inadequate space;

"(2) Requiring the registration of sexual offenders, with a requirement that complete and accurate information be maintained and accessible for use by law enforcement authorities, communities, and the public;

"(3) Providing for community and public notification concerning the presence of sexual offenders;

"(4) Collecting data relative to sexual offenses and sexual offenders;

"(5) Requiring sexual predators who are released into the community to wear an electronic monitoring system for the rest of their natural life and to pay for such system; and

"(6) Prohibiting sexual predators from working with children, either for compensation or as a volunteer.

"The General Assembly further finds that the state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from sexual offenders and in protecting children from predatory sexual activity, and there is sufficient justification for requiring sexual offenders to register and for requiring community and public notification of the presence of sexual offenders. The General Assembly declares that in order to protect the public, it is necessary that the sexual offenders be registered and that members of the community and the public be notified of a sexual offender's presence. The designation of a person as a sexual offender is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from the conviction of certain crimes. Likewise, the designation of a person as a sexual predator is neither a sentence nor a punishment but simply a regulatory mechanism and status resulting from findings by the Sexual Offender Registration Review Board and a court if requested by a sexual offender."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 379, § 30(c)/HB 1059, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

Ga. L. 2012, p. 899, § 9-1(a)/HB 1176, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2012, and shall apply to offenses which occur on or after that date. Any offense occurring before July 1, 2012, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense and shall be considered a prior conviction for the purpose of imposing a sentence that provides for a different penalty for a subsequent conviction for the same type of offense, of whatever degree or level, pursuant to this Act."

Ga. L. 2013, p. 222, § 21/HB 349, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2013, and shall apply to offenses which occur on or after that date. Any offense occurring before July 1, 2013, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense."

Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 5-1/HB 242, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall become effective on January 1, 2014, and shall apply to all offenses which occur and juvenile proceedings commenced on and after such date. Any offense occurring before January 1, 2014, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense and shall be considered a prior adjudication for the purpose of imposing a disposition that provides for a different penalty for subsequent adjudications, of whatever class, pursuant to this Act. The enactment of this Act shall not affect any prosecutions for acts occurring before January 1, 2014, and shall not act as an abatement of any such prosecutions."

Ga. L. 2015, p. 5, § 54(e)/HB 90, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "In the event of a conflict between a provision in Sections 1 through 53 of this Act and a provision of another Act enacted at the 2015 regular session of the General Assembly, the provision of such other Act shall control over the conflicting provision in Sections 1 through 53 of this Act to the extent of the conflict." Accordingly, the amendment to subsection (d) of this Code section by Ga. L. 2015, p. 5, § 17/HB 90, was not given effect.

Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 6-1/HB 310, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that this Act shall apply to sentences entered on or after July 1, 2015.

Law reviews. — For article discussing the constitutionality of imposing harsher sentences upon defendants found guilty in new trial after appeal, see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 183 (1969). For annual survey of criminal law, see 58 Mercer L. Rev. 83 (2006). For article on 2006 amendment of this Code section, see 23 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 11, 61 (2006). For survey article on criminal law, see 59 Mercer L. Rev. 89 (2007). For article on the 2012 amendment of this Code section, see 29 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 290 (2012). For article, "Appeal and Error: Appeal or Certiorari by State in Criminal Cases," see 30 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 17 (2013). For article on the 2015 amendment of this Code section, see 32 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 231 (2015). For article on the 2016 amendment of this Code section, see 33 Georgia St. U.L. Rev. 139 (2016). For article on the 2017 amendment of this Code section, see 34 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 115 (2017). For article on the 2018 amendment of this Code section, see 35 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 45 (2018). For annual survey on criminal law, see 70 Mercer L. Rev. 63 (2018).

For note on 1993 amendment of this Code section, see 10 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 183 (1993). For note on the 2001 amendment of this Code section, see 18 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 47 (2001). For note, "'158-County Banishment' in Georgia: Constitutional Implications under the State Constitution and the Federal Right to Travel," see 36 Ga. L. Rev. 1083 (2002). For note, "Blakely v. Washington: Criminal Sentencing and the Sixth Amendment Limitation on Judicial Factfinding," see 56 Mercer L. Rev. 1079 (2005). For note, "Give It to Me, I'm Worth It: The Need to Amend Georgia's Record Restriction Statute to Provide Ex-Offenders with a Second Chance in the Employment Sector," see 52 Ga. L. Rev. 267 (2017).

For comment on State v. Borst, 278 Minn. 388, 154 N.W.2d 888 (1967), as to an indigent misdemeanant's right to counsel, see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 440 (1968).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Sentencing Prerogatives of Trial Court
Modification of Sentence
Revocation of Probation or Suspension

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — Many of the cases noted below were decided prior to the 1994 amendment of paragraph (a)(1).

Purpose of Sentence Reform Act of 1994. — From the caption of the Act and from the declarations and findings enunciated in Section 2 of the Sentence Reform Act of 1994, Ga. L. 1994, p. 1959, it is apparent that the primary purpose of the Act was to limit probation and parole for certain violent felonies and to provide for sentences of life without parole. Moore v. Ray, 269 Ga. 457, 499 S.E.2d 636 (1998).

Effect of 1992 amendment. — Following the 1992 amendment of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1, the trial court no longer has the power to revoke a probation sentence that has not yet begun. Lombardo v. State, 244 Ga. App. 885, 537 S.E.2d 143 (2000).

If the defendant's probation was revoked before the motion began, the defendant's probation was improperly revoked under former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1, which was the statute in effect at the time that the defendant committed the crimes that led to the revocation of probation; former § 17-10-1, which was subject to O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34(g), did not grant the authority to revoke probation before probation began. Jones v. State, 260 Ga. App. 401, 579 S.E.2d 827 (2003).

Privatization of probation services. — In a suit brought by misdemeanor defendants challenging the privatization of probation services under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-100(g)(1), the Georgia Supreme Court agreed with the trial court that § 42-8-100(g)(1) was not unconstitutional on the statute's face and did not offend due process or equal protection nor condone imprisonment for debt. Sentinel Offender Svcs., LLC v. Glover, 296 Ga. 315, 766 S.E.2d 456 (2014).

Applicability to drug trafficking. — By the statute's express terms, mandatory sentence provisions of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31 regarding trafficking in certain drugs are removed from the application of the probated and suspended sentence provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a). Moran v. State, 170 Ga. App. 837, 318 S.E.2d 716 (1984).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(g)(1), the trial court lacked the authority to probate or suspend sentences imposed against two defendants in unrelated criminal actions, and neither the 2004 nor the 2006 amendments to the general sentencing provisions under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1) were relevant; moreover, because O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-6.1 and 17-10-6.2 were statutes that defined certain categories of crimes and provided the sentencing guidelines for those categories, it did not appear that the list of these two exceptions normally would have included § 16-13-31 or any other specific criminal statute, and any omission would be significant only with regard to a statute that defined classes or categories of crimes. Gillen v. State, 286 Ga. App. 616, 649 S.E.2d 832 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1780, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 809 (Ga. 2007).

Application to felony public indecency conviction. — Because the defendant's sex offender registration as part of probation was limited to the maximum sentence allowed by law as punishment for that crime, the trial court did not improperly give the defendant an indeterminate sentence by requiring the defendant to register as a sexual offender following the defendant's conviction for felony public indecency. Loya v. State, 321 Ga. App. 430, 740 S.E.2d 382 (2013).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 does not apply to sentences for conviction of certain crimes in which the legislature has dictated that life imprisonment must be imposed. Mosley v. State, 203 Ga. App. 275, 416 S.E.2d 736, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 416 S.E.2d 736 (1992).

Even though O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 (prior to the 1993 amendment) and O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41 did not mandate a life sentence, a life sentence on an armed robbery conviction was proper under the specific provisions of § 16-8-41. Stovall v. State, 216 Ga. App. 138, 453 S.E.2d 110 (1995).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 does not apply when a life sentence or the death penalty are mandated for a conviction of kidnapping with bodily injury. Melton v. State, 216 Ga. App. 215, 454 S.E.2d 545 (1995).

Order included in a sentence for animal cruelty that seized animals would be retained did not violate O.C.G.A.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

§ 17-10-1(a)(6)(A) because that provision applies only to a trial court's modification, suspension, probation, or alteration of a previously imposed sentence. Sirmans v. State, 244 Ga. App. 252, 534 S.E.2d 862 (2000), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 831, 122 S. Ct. 76, 151 L. Ed. 2d 40 (2001).

Upon the conviction for the sale of cocaine, the trial court properly sentenced the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c) and not O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1), to the minimum sentence of ten years imprisonment under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), without the possibility of parole, as the defendant had three prior felony convictions. Fortson v. State, 283 Ga. App. 120, 640 S.E.2d 693 (2006).

Defendant's sentence of 30 years without parole for trafficking in cocaine was a sentence allowed under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), and hence, not illegal or void. Defendant could not have been sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a), or the defendant's sentence would have been 40 years. Because the sentence was not void, the sentence was not subject to modification under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f). State v. Blue, 304 Ga. App. 471, 696 S.E.2d 692 (2010).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 did not govern motion to withdraw guilty plea after sentence. — Trial court erred in dismissing the defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea, which was filed by letter before the term of court expired but not served on the state because the state had reasonable notice of the motion to withdraw 18 days before the motion was first set for a hearing, and over two years before the hearing was eventually held. The court looked to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-60 for guidance as to whether the state was required to be served with the motion prior to the expiration of the term of court, and concluded that it was not. McKiernan v. State, 286 Ga. 756, 692 S.E.2d 340 (2010).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 does not grant the trial court unlimited time in which to modify sentences. Latham v. State, 225 Ga. App. 147, 483 S.E.2d 322 (1997).

Ambiguity in sentencing resolved in favor of defendant. — Assuming the ambiguity of a sentence of the defendant convicted of child molestation and statutory rape to sentences of 20 years to serve and 20 years with ten years to serve and the balance on probation, and the defendant paying a $5,000 fine at the termination of the probation period, giving the benefit of the doubt to the defendant, the sentences for each count were construed to run concurrently rather than consecutively. Ogles v. State, 218 Ga. App. 92, 460 S.E.2d 866 (1995).

Construction with § 42-8-35.1 — Although O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 gives the trial court the authority to order confinement in a probation boot camp for a misdemeanor probationer whose sentence of probation is revoked, it does not confer authority under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35.1 to order that an original misdemeanor probation sentence be served in boot camp. Johnson v. State, 267 Ga. 77, 475 S.E.2d 595 (1996).

Construction with § 42-8-35.4. — Reading O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1(a)(3)(A) and 42-8-35.4 together, a court may confine a probation violator in a probation detention center, but not if probation is revoked for any of the reasons enumerated in § 17-10-1(a)(3)(A), and only if the defendant was put on probation previously for a forcible misdemeanor or a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature; a defendant who pled guilty to the misdemeanors of habitual violator, driving under the influence, possession of marijuana, and operating a vehicle without proof of insurance did not meet the criteria for confinement in a probation detention center upon revocation of probation under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35.4, and so confinement in such a facility was unauthorized. Wilson v. Windsor, 280 Ga. 576, 630 S.E.2d 367 (2006).

Construction with § 17-10-6.1. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(b) does not conflict with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1 and, thus, the trial court has no discretion to alter or to allow the parole board to alter the mandatory minimum sentence of ten years for any serious violent felony including armed robbery. Taylor v. State, 241 Ga. App. 439, 526 S.E.2d 910 (1999).

Construction with § 16-6-1(b). — O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1(b) was a specific sentencing statute for the offense of rape that prevailed over the general statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1. Burke v. State, 274 Ga. App. 402, 618 S.E.2d 36 (2005).

Since the defendant pled guilty to aggravated child molestation, the trial court did not err in ruling that the court lacked discretion to sentence the defendant under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(b). Rolader v. State, 249 Ga. App. 213, 547 S.E.2d 778 (2001).

Reporting probation period. — Condition of probation placing the defendant on reporting probation for a period exceeding two years did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1. Darby v. State, 230 Ga. App. 32, 495 S.E.2d 146 (1998).

Warrantless searches vs. warrantless arrests. — Trial court erred in denying a probationer's motion to suppress the evidence seized from the probationer's apartment as, even though the entry into the apartment for the purpose of effecting an arrest of the probationer was permissible, most of the evidence was seized without a warrant after the probationer was not found in the apartment and had to be excluded under the Fourth Amendment as the search conducted was only permissible insofar as the search involved the observation of items of obvious evidentiary value in plain view during the time and activities required to attempt the probationer's arrest. The probationer was never placed on notice that the probationer was going to be subjected to warrantless searches, and the state failed to demonstrate any exigent circumstances justifying the warrantless search. Jones v. State, 282 Ga. 784, 653 S.E.2d 456 (2007).

Motion to vacate sentence was untimely filed. — Denial of the defendant's motion to vacate sentence was affirmed since the motion was untimely filed four years after the trial court received the remittitur of an earlier affirmance of the defendant's conviction; moreover, the defendant's sentence resulted from the defendant's conviction and did not involve the defendant's status as a probationer in a different county. Esquivel v. State, 266 Ga. App. 715, 598 S.E.2d 24 (2004).

As the defendant filed a petition to correct void sentence more than two years after the remittitur of the defendant's direct appeal, defendant could only challenge the sentence if it was void, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f). McConnell v. State, 281 Ga. App. 303, 635 S.E.2d 882 (2006).

Appeal of a trial court's denial of a defendant's motion to correct sentence was dismissed because the motion was filed beyond the time specified in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f), the sentence was within the applicable penalty range, and the sentence was not void despite the defendant's claim that the prosecution introduced erroneous and inflammatory information at the sentencing hearing; further, the sentence was not "enhanced" beyond the maximum penalty and Apprendi did not apply. Burg v. State, 297 Ga. App. 118, 676 S.E.2d 465 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1217, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 419 (Ga. 2009).

Sentencing court lacked jurisdiction over the defendant's motion to vacate the defendant's sentence because the motion was filed three years after sentencing and the defendant did not assert a claim that the sentence was void, meaning that it was a sentence that the law did not allow. von Thomas v. State, 293 Ga. 569, 748 S.E.2d 446 (2013).

Motions to withdraw guilty plea. — Because the defendant was sentenced during the July 2002 term of court, but the defendant's motions to withdraw the guilty plea were not filed until May 2, 2003 and June 4, 2003, during the May 2003 term of court, at the time defendant filed the motion to withdraw the plea, the only means available to challenge defendant's plea was through a petition for writ of habeas corpus. Kuntz v. State, 276 Ga. App. 483, 623 S.E.2d 684 (2005).

If defendant pled guilty to charges of murder and armed robbery, but the record did not support a finding that the defendant was advised of all the defendant's constitutional rights by either the defendant's attorney or the sentencing court and that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent waiver of those rights, the habeas court erred by denying the defendant's petition for habeas corpus. Johnson v. Smith, 280 Ga. 235, 626 S.E.2d 470 (2006).

Ex post facto inquiry. — To determine if an ex post facto violation resulted from use of the applied law in a probation revocation matter, the law in effect at the time of the probation revocation must be measured against the law in effect at the time of the initial offense, not the law in effect at the time of the act that resulted in probation revocation. Walker v. Brown, 281 Ga. 468, 639 S.E.2d 470 (2007).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Cited in Brown v. Ricketts, 233 Ga. 809, 213 S.E.2d 672 (1975); Seagraves v. State, 135 Ga. App. 42, 217 S.E.2d 377 (1975); Sheffield v. State, 235 Ga. 507, 220 S.E.2d 265 (1975); Ingram v. State, 137 Ga. App. 412, 224 S.E.2d 527 (1976); Mauldin v. State, 139 Ga. App. 13, 227 S.E.2d 862 (1976); Robinson v. State, 139 Ga. App. 480, 228 S.E.2d 615 (1976); Hardin v. State, 141 Ga. App. 115, 232 S.E.2d 631 (1977); Collins v. State, 243 Ga. 291, 253 S.E.2d 729 (1979); Amerson v. Zant, 243 Ga. 509, 255 S.E.2d 34 (1979); Burns v. State, 153 Ga. App. 529, 265 S.E.2d 859 (1980); Cofer v. Hawthorne, 154 Ga. App. 875, 270 S.E.2d 84 (1980); Ward v. State, 248 Ga. 60, 281 S.E.2d 503 (1981); Howell v. State, 160 Ga. App. 562, 287 S.E.2d 573 (1981); Johns v. State, 160 Ga. App. 535, 287 S.E.2d 617 (1981); State v. Shuman, 161 Ga. App. 304, 287 S.E.2d 757 (1982); Strickland v. State, 165 Ga. App. 197, 300 S.E.2d 537 (1983); State v. Baldwin, 167 Ga. App. 737, 307 S.E.2d 679 (1983); Lowry v. State, 171 Ga. App. 118, 318 S.E.2d 744 (1984); Griffin v. State, 172 Ga. App. 184, 322 S.E.2d 295 (1984); Wallace v. State, 175 Ga. App. 685, 333 S.E.2d 874 (1985); Etchison v. State, 175 Ga. App. 723, 334 S.E.2d 324 (1985); Moreland v. State, 183 Ga. App. 113, 358 S.E.2d 276 (1987); Crumbley v. State, 261 Ga. 610, 409 S.E.2d 517 (1991); Browner v. State, 206 Ga. App. 676, 426 S.E.2d 673 (1992); Brady v. State, 212 Ga. App. 853, 443 S.E.2d 522 (1994); Tuttle v. State, 215 Ga. App. 396, 450 S.E.2d 863 (1994); Murray v. State, 216 Ga. App. 593, 455 S.E.2d 79 (1995); Stone v. State, 218 Ga. App. 350, 461 S.E.2d 548 (1995); Day v. State, 242 Ga. App. 899, 531 S.E.2d 781 (2000); United States v. Ayala-Gomez, 255 F.3d 1314 (11th Cir. 2001); State v. Huckeba, 258 Ga. App. 627, 574 S.E.2d 856 (2002); Manders v. Lee, 338 F.3d 1304 (11th Cir. 2003); Walker v. State, 289 Ga. App. 879, 658 S.E.2d 375 (2008); Allen v. State, 286 Ga. 392, 687 S.E.2d 799 (2010); Shelton v. State, 307 Ga. App. 599, 705 S.E.2d 699 (2011); Stephens v. State, 289 Ga. 758, 716 S.E.2d 154 (2011); McClendon v. State, 318 Ga. App. 676, 734 S.E.2d 505 (2012); Parham v. State, 320 Ga. App. 676, 739 S.E.2d 135 (2013); Myrick v. State, 325 Ga. App. 607, 754 S.E.2d 395 (2014); Munye v. State, 342 Ga. App. 680, 803 S.E.2d 775 (2017); State v. Hudson, 303 Ga. 348, 812 S.E.2d 270 (2018).

Sentencing Prerogatives of Trial Court

Powers of trial judge generally. — O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1 and 17-10-8, when read together, provide that the judge fixing sentence shall prescribe a determinate sentence for a specific number of years within the limits set by law, may probate a noncapital felony sentence upon such terms as the judge deems proper, and may impose a fine upon the convicted party not to exceed $10,000 (or the fine fixed by law, whichever is greater). State v. Shepherd Constr. Co., 248 Ga. 1, 281 S.E.2d 151, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1055, 102 S. Ct. 601, 70 L. Ed. 2d 591, appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 1074, 102 S. Ct. 626, 70 L. Ed. 2d 609 (1981).

There was no violation of the defendant's rights under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 since the sentence as finally entered did not vary from that which was orally announced by the trial court and there was no increase. Lester v. State, 190 Ga. App. 59, 378 S.E.2d 364 (1989).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 authorizes the trial court to sentence a defendant to any amount of time within the limits provided by law. Baldwin v. State, 217 Ga. App. 866, 460 S.E.2d 80 (1995).

If the sentences imposed are within the statutory limits, the sentences are not unconstitutional. Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. 126, 269 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

Trial court did not have the power to sentence the defendant who was convicted of armed robbery after the defendant was already convicted of committing other felonies to probation, or to suspend any part of the defendant's sentence, and because life in prison was the maximum penalty for armed robbery, the trial court properly sentenced the defendant to life in prison without parole. Thompson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 696, 595 S.E.2d 377 (2004).

Requiring wearing bracelet reading "D.U.I. CONVICT." — Court had authority to impose as a condition of probation the requirement that the defendant wear a fluorescent pink plastic bracelet imprinted with the words "D.U.I. CONVICT." Such requirement did not impose cruel and unusual punishment or deprive the defendant of equal protection and it was not an impermissibly indeterminate condition. Ballenger v. State, 210 Ga. App. 627, 436 S.E.2d 793 (1993).

Sentence of specific range of years satisfies requirement that sentence be determinate. — In a burglary prosecution, since the judge sentenced the defendant "during the full term of not less than one year and not more than two years," the verdict was in substantial compliance with this section, and the sentence based thereon was valid. Edwards v. State, 64 Ga. App. 266, 13 S.E.2d 39 (1941).

When the jury finds the defendant guilty of voluntary manslaughter and court then sentences defendant to serve not less than seven years, nor more than ten years in the penitentiary, the statutory requirement that the judge prescribe a determinate sentence for a specific number of years is satisfied. Randolph v. State, 75 Ga. App. 253, 43 S.E.2d 101 (1947).

Correction of written sentence to conform to oral pronouncement. — Trial court did not err by correcting the court's written sentence to conform with the court's oral pronouncement because the trial court was authorized to correct the clerical error appearing in the court's written sentence as compared to the court's original oral pronouncement; the trial court, after reviewing the original transcript, determined that the court's original pronouncement and intent was for the aggravated battery and burglary counts to be served consecutive to each other as well as to the other aggravated battery count. Griggs v. State, 314 Ga. App. 158, 723 S.E.2d 480 (2012).

Imposition of life sentence for armed robbery was within the range of punishment prescribed therefor and did not violate the mandate that sentences be for a determinate period. Williams v. State, 214 Ga. App. 421, 447 S.E.2d 714 (1994); Curry v. State, 217 Ga. App. 623, 458 S.E.2d 385 (1995); Echols v. Thomas, 265 Ga. 474, 458 S.E.2d 100 (1995).

Imposition of life sentence for aggravated assault and armed robbery was allowable and did not violate the requirement that the defendant be given a determinative sentence for a specific number of years. Curry v. State, 217 Ga. App. 623, 458 S.E.2d 385 (1995).

Under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 as the statute existed prior to the 1993 amendment, it was within the discretion of the trial court to impose concurrent life sentences for rape and aggravated sodomy convictions; a sentence for a specific number of years was not required. Cofield v. State, 216 Ga. App. 623, 455 S.E.2d 342 (1995), overruled by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006).

Under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 as the statute existed prior to the 1993 amendment, it was within the discretion of the trial court to impose a life sentence for armed robbery; a sentence for a specific number of years was not required. Null v. State, 216 Ga. App. 641, 455 S.E.2d 359 (1995).

Under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 as the statute existed prior to the 1993 amendment, it was within the discretion of the trial court to impose a life sentence for rape; a sentence for a specific number of years was not required. Parker v. State, 216 Ga. App. 649, 455 S.E.2d 360 (1995).

Trial court correctly sentenced a defendant to serve life without the possibility of parole because the defendant was a four-time recidivist and the maximum sentence for rape was life in prison. Further, the state provided the defendant with notice prior to trial that the state would seek to have the defendant sentenced as a recidivist, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Hall v. State, 292 Ga. App. 544, 664 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, No. S08C1841, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 926 (Ga. 2008).

Sentencing Prerogatives of Trial Court (Cont'd)

Imposition of consecutive life sentences on two rape convictions was void because the sentence deprived the defendant of the right to receive a determinate sentence since the trial judge was authorized to impose a sentence "within the minimum and maximum prescribed by law as the punishment for the crime." Day v. State, 216 Ga. App. 29, 453 S.E.2d 73 (1994).

Life sentence or determinate sentence. — O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(b) (punishment for armed robbery), read in conjunction with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1, authorizes the imposition of a life sentence or a determinate sentence at the discretion of the trial judge, whether or not the offender is a recidivist. Worley v. State, 265 Ga. 251, 454 S.E.2d 461 (1995).

Banishment valid if logically related to rehabilitation. — If there is no showing that the sentence of banishment from the county is unreasonable or otherwise fails to bear a logical relationship to the rehabilitative scheme of the sentence pronounced for the defendant's crime, there is no showing of an abuse of discretion, and the Court of Appeals may refuse to disturb the sentence of the trial court. Wilson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 501, 260 S.E.2d 527 (1979).

Guilty plea prevents discharge for null sentence, requires remand. — Plea of guilty by the defendant appearing in the record, the defendant cannot be discharged, although the sentence is a nullity. In such event, the case is remanded to the court below with direction that the applicant be taken before the proper court in order that a legal sentence may be imposed upon the applicant. Heard v. Gill, 204 Ga. 261, 49 S.E.2d 656 (1948).

Guilty plea is a consideration in sentencing; a consideration that is not present when one is found guilty by a jury. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

Guilty plea not a conviction. — Georgia Supreme Court has explained that a first offender's guilty plea does not constitute a conviction as that term is defined in the Criminal Code of Georgia. Mays v. State, 345 Ga. App. 562, 814 S.E.2d 418 (2018).

Guilty plea not conviction and does not qualify under statute. — Trial court did not err in failing to give the defendant a behavioral-incentive date as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1)(B) because although it was undisputed that the defendant had no prior felony convictions, and the trial court imposed only a sentence of probation, the plain language of § 17-10-1(a)(1)(B) provided that the statute only applied when a defendant was convicted of felony offenses and since the defendant was sentenced as a first offender, the defendant was not convicted of any felony offenses. Mays v. State, 345 Ga. App. 562, 814 S.E.2d 418 (2018).

Consideration of not guilty plea. — When considering the appropriate sentence, a trial judge may consider the entering of a "not guilty" plea by a defendant as evidence of that defendant's lack of remorse, but may not assess a harsher penalty merely because the state has exerted unnecessary energy in prosecuting that defendant. Sparks v. State, 176 Ga. App. 8, 335 S.E.2d 298 (1985).

Sentence received by one joint defendant is irrelevant in the trial of another. Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. 126, 269 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

Criminal statutes must be strictly construed against the state and liberally in favor of human liberty. If a statute increasing a penalty is capable of two constructions, the statute should be construed so as to operate in favor of life and liberty. Knight v. State, 243 Ga. 770, 257 S.E.2d 182 (1979).

Former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7) did not compel a maximum sentence in confinement for second offenders, but the trial judge had discretion to probate or suspend this maximum sentence pursuant to former Code 1933, § 27-2502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1). Knight v. State, 243 Ga. 770, 257 S.E.2d 182 (1979); Davis v. State, 154 Ga. App. 803, 269 S.E.2d 874 (1980).

Power to sentence corporation. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-2-22(a), a corporation can be prosecuted for violating the law, and a court may sentence a corporation to serve a term for years (even though such sentence be incapable of enforcement) and may suspend that sentence and impose a fine. State v. Shepherd Constr. Co., 248 Ga. 1, 281 S.E.2d 151, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1055, 102 S. Ct. 601, 70 L. Ed. 2d 591, appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 1074, 102 S. Ct. 626, 70 L. Ed. 2d 609 (1981).

Under this section, the judge, not the jury, passed sentence after determination of guilt. Huff v. State, 135 Ga. App. 134, 217 S.E.2d 187 (1975).

Judge decides if sentences concurrent or consecutive. — Discretion as to whether the sentences are to be served concurrently or consecutively resides entirely and solely with the trial judge, unaffected and uninfluenced by any recommendation of the jury in such respect, and it is error for the judge to be guided by a jury decision. Huff v. State, 135 Ga. App. 134, 217 S.E.2d 187 (1975).

Consecutive sentences affirmed. — Denial of the defendant's motion attacking the defendant's consecutive sentences for burglary as void was affirmed as under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10, sentences were to be served "concurrently unless otherwise expressly provided therein." Jones v. State, 271 Ga. App. 830, 610 S.E.2d 570 (2005).

Nothing in the record affirmatively indicated that a trial court erroneously believed that the court had no discretion under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1) to suspend or probate a defendant's mandatory consecutive five-year sentence on a conviction for possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony under O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b); thus, the sentence was properly imposed consecutively to the defendant's sentence for trafficking in cocaine under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(a)(1). Weems v. State, 295 Ga. App. 680, 673 S.E.2d 50 (2009).

It could not be assumed that the trial court relied on the defendant's prior convictions in sentencing the defendant because although the trial court imposed maximum and consecutive sentences for the defendant's convictions, the record did not indicate that the trial court relied on the prior convictions in any way, and the trial court had the authority to enter those sentences regardless of any prior convictions pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1(a)(1) and 17-10-10(a). Hampton v. State, 289 Ga. 621, 713 S.E.2d 851 (2011), overruled on other grounds, Nalls v. State, 815 S.E.2d 38, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 396 (Ga. 2018).

Trial court did not err by sentencing the defendant to three consecutive 12-month sentences on probation with the first 12 months to be served on house arrest following the defendant's guilty plea to the offenses of statutory rape, fornication, and battery because the sentence was within the statutory limits and whether to impose consecutive or concurrent sentences for multiple offenses was within the trial court's discretion. Osborne v. State, 318 Ga. App. 339, 734 S.E.2d 59 (2012).

Any amount of time within statutory limits. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 allows a trial court to sentence a defendant to any amount of time within the limits provided by the legislature. Pendleton v. State, 184 Ga. App. 358, 361 S.E.2d 663, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 910, 361 S.E.2d 663 (1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1064, 108 S. Ct. 1025, 98 L. Ed. 2d 989 (1988).

Because the defendant's sentence fell within the statutory range of punishment, the sentence imposed by the trial court was not void and was not subject to post-appeal modification beyond that provided in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f); moreover, the direct appeal authorized by Williams v. State was limited to that taken from a sentencing court's ruling on a pleading which asserted the sentence imposed a punishment which the law did not allow. Guice v. State, 282 Ga. App. 747, 639 S.E.2d 636 (2006).

Multiple maximums imposable. — Imposition of the maximum punishment of life imprisonment for 24 of the offenses of which the defendant was convicted was not error. Jefferson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 859, 434 S.E.2d 814 (1993).

No error in imposing maximum and consecutive sentences. — It could not be assumed that the trial court relied on the defendant's prior convictions in sentencing the defendant because although the trial court imposed maximum and consecutive sentences for the defendant's convictions, the record did not indicate that the trial court relied on the prior convictions in any way, and the trial court had the authority to enter those sentences regardless of any prior convictions pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1(a)(1) and 17-10-10(a). Hampton v. State, 289 Ga. 621, 713 S.E.2d 851 (2011), overruled on other grounds, Nalls v. State, 815 S.E.2d 38, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 396 (Ga. 2018).

Sentencing Prerogatives of Trial Court (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in imposing maximum and consecutive sentences on the second defendant for the burglary and theft by taking convictions as the second defendant's prior convictions for three or more felonies qualified the second defendant to be sentenced as a recidivist, requiring the second defendant to be sentenced to the maximum time allowed; the sentences were within the statutory ranges; and the trial court had the authority to require that the sentences run consecutively. Hamlett v. State, 350 Ga. App. 93, 828 S.E.2d 132 (2019), cert. denied, No. S19C1274, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 860 (Ga. 2019), cert. denied, No. A19C1275, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 890 (Ga. 2019).

Trial judge may properly impose greater sentence upon the defendant after hearing evidence at trial than the judge might have imposed in conjunction with a guilty plea. Arnold v. State, 163 Ga. App. 94, 292 S.E.2d 891 (1982).

Resentencing after term of court at which original sentence imposed. — Since the motion for new sentencing was filed and heard after the term of court at which the original sentence was imposed, the trial court had no jurisdiction to resentence the defendant and the new sentence imposed was void and unenforceable. State v. Hinson, 164 Ga. App. 66, 296 S.E.2d 386 (1982).

Judge may recall defendant for resentencing after error. — There is authority, when there is an error or irregularity in failing to inform the defendant of conditions which the defendant's sentence to confinement imposed, for correction by the court by recalling the defendant and sentencing the defendant as provided by law. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973).

Defendant's sentence void due to error in sentencing. — Since the defendant was convicted of prior felonies and the offense of rape was also a felony under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1(b), the trial court's imposition of a suspended sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 was void because the trial court was required to give the defendant a life sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a). State v. Scott, 265 Ga. App. 387, 593 S.E.2d 923 (2004).

Once a defendant begins to serve a sentence, the sentence may not be increased. Higdon v. Cooper, 247 Ga. 746, 279 S.E.2d 451 (1981).

Judge may not impose sentence consecutive to intervening sentence upon revoking probation. — Court revoking probation because of a subsequent conviction may not make the revoked sentence consecutive to an intervening sentence. England v. Newton, 238 Ga. 534, 233 S.E.2d 787 (1977).

Power to probate sentence generally. — Wording of this section was plain — a judge can probate a sentence in any case involving a felony except when the punishment is life imprisonment or death. Knight v. State, 243 Ga. 770, 257 S.E.2d 182 (1979).

Trial court is granted the power and authority under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 to probate a sentence under such rules and regulations as the court deems proper, and to revoke that probation during the term of court at which the sentence is imposed. Garland v. State, 160 Ga. App. 97, 286 S.E.2d 330 (1981).

Probation and suspended sentences traditional rehabilitative measures. — Probated and suspended sentences, upon reasonable conditions, have traditionally been used by trial judges in this state as effective tools of rehabilitation and serve a useful purpose in appropriate cases as an alternative to confinement. State v. Collett, 232 Ga. 668, 208 S.E.2d 472 (1974).

Trial court, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1), has authority to suspend or probate all or any part of the entire sentence. Kaylor v. State, 312 Ga. App. 633, 719 S.E.2d 530 (2011).

Provision for probation may not be added at subsequent term. — Language of former Code 1933, § 27-2702 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34) seemed to refer to probation as a part of the original sentence, and the provision for a hearing must, considering the language as a whole, refer to a hearing on the type of sentence to be imposed, and not authorize the court, at a subsequent term, to add to the sentence a provision for probation when the sentence made no provision relating thereto in the first instance. Phillips v. State, 95 Ga. App. 277, 97 S.E.2d 707 (1957).

Convict sentenced to indefinite prison confinement cannot apply for probation at next term. — Trial court has no power to amend and modify a sentence in a criminal case after the term during which the sentence was imposed. Accordingly, if the defendant has been sentenced to an indeterminate term in the penitentiary without any provision for probation, it is proper for the court to refuse to entertain a motion made at a subsequent term that the sentence be modified so as to allow the defendant to serve the sentence on probation. Phillips v. State, 95 Ga. App. 277, 97 S.E.2d 707 (1957).

Probated portion of sentence may be revoked or modified at any time during term of the probated sentence after hearing and finding of probation violation. Logan v. Lee, 247 Ga. 608, 278 S.E.2d 1 (1981).

Probating sentence at later term of court. — Trial court had authority to probate the defendant's sentence to confinement, even though more than four terms of court had passed since conviction and sentence, since the court did not intend the sentence to be the final sentence and probated the confinement after receiving a post-sentence investigator's report. State v. Johnson, 183 Ga. App. 236, 358 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 907, 358 S.E.2d 840 (1987).

Reasonable conditions for probation or suspension usually approved. — In the absence of express authority to the contrary, there is no logical reason why any reasonable condition imposed for probation or suspension of a sentence by a trial court should not be approved. State v. Collett, 232 Ga. 668, 208 S.E.2d 472 (1974).

Good cause shown for extended period of supervised probation. — Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to more than two years' supervised probation after a jury convicted the defendant of child molestation because the defendant's sentence to an extended period of supervised probation was pronounced after notice and hearing and for good cause shown as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(2); the "good cause shown" was to protect children. O'Neal v. State, 304 Ga. App. 548, 696 S.E.2d 490 (2010).

Banishment from parts of state as sentence suspension condition. — Banishment of a defendant from specified areas in Georgia, imposed as a condition for suspension of a sentence by a trial court, does not violate the public policy of the state. State v. Collett, 232 Ga. 668, 208 S.E.2d 472 (1974).

Condition that defendant have no contact with victim. — Because the defendant's sentence, including a condition that the defendant have no contact with the defendant's stepdaughter whom the defendant had molested and their son, born as a result of the molestation, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35, was not indeterminate and was not illegal, the defendant's motion to modify the sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 was barred by a waiver in the defendant's plea agreement. Jones v. State, 348 Ga. App. 653, 824 S.E.2d 575 (2019).

Court-ordered restitution may be imposed as a reasonable condition of probation. Morrison v. State, 181 Ga. App. 440, 352 S.E.2d 622 (1987).

Suspension of defendant's hunting and fishing privileges during the probation period imposed upon conviction of a violation of O.C.G.A. § 27-3-9, unlawful enticement of game, was not an abuse of discretion. Quintrell v. State, 231 Ga. App. 268, 499 S.E.2d 117 (1998).

Judge may suspend or probate sentence, but not both. Jones v. State, 154 Ga. App. 581, 269 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Since probation could defeat purpose of conditional suspension. — If a sentence could be simultaneously probated and suspended, an underlying purpose of the conditional suspension would be defeated. Jones v. State, 154 Ga. App. 581, 269 S.E.2d 77 (1980).

Condition for suspension that defendant obey all laws (state, federal, and municipal) is not so vague, indefinite, ambiguous, and uncertain as to be unenforceable. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-2502).

Sentencing Prerogatives of Trial Court (Cont'd)

Suspended sentence, once served, cannot exceed maximum which could have been imposed. — Once service of a suspended sentence begins, either by incarceration or probation, it cannot exceed the maximum sentence of confinement which could have been imposed. Turnipseed v. State, 147 Ga. App. 735, 250 S.E.2d 186 (1978).

First offender treatment. — Sentence of the defendant based on first offender treatment to five years' probation conditioned upon successive periods of confinement in a detention center, a diversion center, and in the defendant's house under intensive supervision was authorized and such does not constitute incarceration, which refers to continuous and uninterrupted custody in a jail or penitentiary. Penaherrera v. State, 211 Ga. App. 162, 438 S.E.2d 661 (1993).

Trial court did not err by sentencing the defendant to both confinement and probation in violation of the First Offender Act, under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60(a), as the statute did not mandate a sentence of either confinement or probation, and the defendant's probation was not conditioned upon the defendant spending some specified time incarcerated; O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1) granted to the sentencing judge the power and authority to suspend or probate all or any part of the entire sentence under such rules and regulations as the judge deems proper. Johanson v. State, 260 Ga. App. 181, 581 S.E.2d 564 (2003).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motions seeking to correct the defendant's sentence to consecutive 15-year terms for two convictions of armed robbery as: (1) the trial court's statement that "it would probably normally be my inclination to let you hold two life sentences" did not indicate that the trial court had adopted an inflexible and impermissible sentencing formula or that the trial court had a policy of refusing to consider first offender treatment for certain crimes; and (2) the defendant did not request that the trial court consider sentencing the defendant as a first offender. Green v. State, 265 Ga. App. 126, 592 S.E.2d 901 (2004).

After the defendant was found guilty of arson and sentenced, the sentence could not be modified pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) to grant the defendant first offender treatment because the plain language of the first offender statute, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq., specifically prohibited such a modification after sentencing. Burchette v. State, 274 Ga. App. 873, 619 S.E.2d 323 (2005).

Trial court may grant probation of sentence of second offender. — Although O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 mandates that a second offender must be sentenced to the maximum punishment for the offense of which convicted, there is no limitation on the trial court's authority under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 to grant probation of such a sentence. Jackson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 530, 281 S.E.2d 252 (1981); Brooks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 115, 299 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Fourth-offender recidivists. — There is no limitation on the trial court's authority under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 to grant probation of sentence to a fourth-offender recidivist who under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 is not eligible for parole until the maximum sentence has been served since probation is not parole. Brooks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 115, 299 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Remand to consider probating portion of mandatory sentence. — Since the trial court did not exercise the court's discretion to consider probating appellant's sentence for theft by taking, the sentence for that offense was reversed and remanded so the trial court could determine whether any portion of the appellant's mandatory sentence should be probated. Brooks v. State, 165 Ga. App. 115, 299 S.E.2d 167 (1983).

Consecutive sentences for multiple offenses authorized. — Consecutive sentences for defendant indicted and convicted of two counts of forgery in the first degree and one count of financial transaction card theft was not error. Harris v. State, 166 Ga. App. 202, 303 S.E.2d 534 (1983).

Sentence indeterminate when controlled by federal authorities. — Since the defendant's state prison sentence was concurrent with, and not to be longer than, a federal prison sentence, it was an indeterminate sentence in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1) as the sentence was variable based on factors entirely within the control of the federal authorities. State v. Hart, 263 Ga. App. 8, 587 S.E.2d 164 (2003).

Defendant may both appeal and make motion to modify conviction. — There is nothing to prevent a defendant from both appealing and making a motion to modify the conviction. Porterfield v. State, 139 Ga. App. 553, 228 S.E.2d 722 (1976).

Appellate court may not modify legal sentence. — Appellate court is not empowered to modify a sentence which is within the statutory limits and lawfully imposed. Thomas v. State, 139 Ga. App. 364, 228 S.E.2d 386 (1976).

If appellate court affirms, trial judge cannot alter sentence. — When the judgment of the trial court is appealed, and thereafter affirmed by an appellate court, the trial court is without authority at a subsequent term, upon making the judgment of the appellate court the judgment of the trial court, to modify and change the sentence formerly imposed. Smith v. State, 146 Ga. App. 727, 247 S.E.2d 503 (1978).

Stricter sentence after retrial constitutional. — It is not a denial of equal protection of law guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 14 to impose a harsher sentence upon a defendant following a successful appeal and award of a new trial. Salisbury v. Grimes, 223 Ga. 776, 158 S.E.2d 412 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 27-2502).

Sentence after new trial must not be vindictive. — Vindictiveness against a defendant for having successfully attacked the defendant's first conviction must play no part in the sentence the defendant receives after a new trial. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

Record must state reasons for harsher penalty upon resentencing. — Court must include in the record an affirmative statement of the reasons underlying the decision to increase punishment upon resentencing, and those reasons should in fact support the imposition of the harsher penalty. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474 (1980).

Appeal of lawful sentence should be addressed to sentence review panel. — If the sentence imposed upon the defendant was within the statutory limits prescribed by law, the defendant's complaint that the defendant's sentence was excessive should be addressed to the appropriate sentence review panel. Hammond v. State, 157 Ga. App. 647, 278 S.E.2d 188 (1981).

Motivation of judge and guilty plea. — Although the judge did not indicate the judge's reasoning for sentencing the defendant to the maximum penalty for the defendant's crime, there was no evidence that the judge was motivated to do so merely because the defendant refused to enter a guilty plea, and the sentence was within the minimum and maximum sentences prescribed by law. West v. State, 241 Ga. App. 877, 528 S.E.2d 287 (2000).

Court's authority to modify plea agreement. — When the defendant and the state agreed to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter and the state would recommend a 20-year sentence, the trial court did not have the authority, over the state's objection, to accept a guilty plea to voluntary manslaughter and sentence the defendant to a term of only ten years, with five to be served. State v. Kelley, 298 Ga. 527, 783 S.E.2d 124 (2016).

Modification of Sentence

When sentence may be amended. — Judgments of a court are within the court's breast until the end of the term, and the sentence may be amended at any time during the term and before execution has begun. Schamber v. State, 152 Ga. App. 196, 262 S.E.2d 533 (1979).

Defendant was sentenced to 27 months in prison to be served concurrently with a federal prison term, but the defendant was scheduled for early release from federal prison, and the transcript from the sentencing hearing indicated that the defendant was not to serve any time in state court in addition to that served in federal court, thus, the trial court did not err in modifying the sentence to conform to the court's original intent 22 months after the sentence was imposed; O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) did not abrogate a court's power to correct an erroneous recording of a sentence. State v. Hart, 263 Ga. App. 8, 587 S.E.2d 164 (2003).

Modification of Sentence (Cont'd)

Trial court has no jurisdiction to modify a sentence after the term of court ends or 60 days pass, but if a sentence is void, the trial court may resentence the defendant at any time; a sentence is void if the court imposes punishment that the law does not allow. Copeland v. State, 264 Ga. App. 905, 592 S.E.2d 540 (2003).

Trial court erred in holding that because the term of court in which a defendant's sentence was imposed had expired, the court lacked jurisdiction to modify the sentence. Under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f), the trial court had jurisdiction to rule upon the merits of the motion within the 120-day period following the court's receipt of a remittitur from a prior appeal. Davis v. State, 291 Ga. App. 252, 661 S.E.2d 872 (2008).

Trial court erred by denying the defendant's motion to vacate the defendant's amended sentence on drug-related charges as the trial court had no jurisdiction to amend the defendant's sentence since, at the time it was undertaken, over two years had passed since the sentence was originally pronounced; thus, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f), there was no jurisdiction to amend the sentence. Hall v. State, 291 Ga. App. 649, 662 S.E.2d 753 (2008).

Section restricts authority to modify sentence. — Former Code 1933, § 27-2702 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34), which provides that the court shall not lose jurisdiction over a defendant during the term of a probated sentence but shall have power to change or modify the sentence during the period of time originally described for the probated sentence to run, had been modified by former Code 1933, § 27-2502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1), which provided that after the term of court at which a sentence is imposed by a judge, the judge shall have no authority to suspend, probate, modify, or change the sentence of the prisoner, except as otherwise provided. Entrekin v. State, 147 Ga. App. 724, 250 S.E.2d 177 (1978).

Defendant's motion to modify sentence was properly denied wherein the defendant asserted that the defendant's convictions should have merged for sentencing purposes because O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) was not a proper procedural mechanism for asserting such a claim since the defendant pled guilty. Patterson v. State, 347 Ga. App. 105, 817 S.E.2d 557 (2018).

Motion to vacate, void, or correct illegal sentence denied. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to vacate, void, or correct an illegal sentence several years after the defendant's sentence was imposed because the alleged errors in the defendant's case clearly went to the validity of the judgment of conviction entered on the defendant's guilty plea, not the validity of the defendant's sentence; Georgia law authorized the concurrent sentences of 10 years in prison for false imprisonment, and 20 years, with 13 years to be served in prison and the remainder on probation, for trafficking of persons for sexual servitude. Jones v. State, 354 Ga. App. 29, 840 S.E.2d 117 (2020).

No error in modification of sentence. — Trial court did not err in modifying the appellant's sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) because the record showed that prior to entering the modified sentence, the trial court provided timely notice and an opportunity to the state for a hearing under § 17-10-1(f). Cade v. State, 351 Ga. App. 637, 832 S.E.2d 453 (2019).

Judge can modify sentence only during term. — Superior court judge cannot modify a sentence after the expiration of the term of court at which the sentence was imposed, unless the sentence imposed was a void sentence, in which case a new and valid sentence can be imposed by the trial judge at any time. Wade v. State, 231 Ga. 131, 200 S.E.2d 271 (1973).

Motion to reduce sentence filed by the defendant was untimely since the defendant filed the motion after expiration of the term of court in which the defendant's sentence was entered. Levell v. State, 247 Ga. App. 615, 544 S.E.2d 523 (2001).

Judge can modify if sentence void. — If it appears on the face of the record that a valid verdict has been returned, a sentence not in accord with the verdict, though a nullity, may be corrected to conform to the verdict. This may be done after the expiration of the term at which the sentence was imposed. Heard v. Gill, 204 Ga. 261, 49 S.E.2d 656 (1948).

Because the trial court was authorized to impose concurrent ten year sentences to serve after the defendant entered guilty pleas to child molestation and aggravated child molestation, the judgment was not void and the court properly denied the defendant's petition to correct the void judgment. Barber v. State, 240 Ga. App. 56, 522 S.E.2d 238 (1999).

Trial court erred in dismissing the defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea as the defendant retained a statutory right to withdrawal under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-93(b) because the sentence imposed as a result of the guilty plea was void and the defendant had a right to withdrawal until a legal sentence was imposed. Kaiser v. State, 285 Ga. App. 63, 646 S.E.2d 84 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1275, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 696 (Ga. 2007).

Because O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(f)(1) required a mandatory minimum sentence for trafficking in methamphetamine of ten years and a $200,000 fine, and the sentence imposed by the trial court failed to include the fine, the trial court's resentencing to add the fine after the defendant began serving the sentence was valid and did not violate the defendant's double jeopardy rights. The suspended sentence provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a) were inapplicable to the mandatory sentence provisions of § 16-13-31, and there was no indication that the trial court intended to suspend the fine portion. Strickland v. State, 301 Ga. App. 272, 687 S.E.2d 221 (2009).

It was not erroneous for the trial court to impose a sentence of 20 years for aggravated battery, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-24, because after the defendant's kidnapping conviction was voided, the trial court was authorized under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 to sentence the defendant to a term of years on the aggravated battery count, which could consist of up to 20 years. Griggs v. State, 314 Ga. App. 158, 723 S.E.2d 480 (2012).

Trial court's sua sponte order setting aside a modification of the defendant's sentence was proper because under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) the modification order itself was void because the trial court lacked jurisdiction to enter that order more than one year after the original sentencing. Gray v. State, 351 Ga. App. 703, 832 S.E.2d 857 (2019).

Failure to assert sentence was not allowed by law within required statutory time period. — Defendant's appeal was dismissed as the time period set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) had passed and the defendant did not assert that the sentence was not one that the law allowed, but only took issue with the procedure employed in imposing the sentence or questioned the fairness of the sentence; defendant did not challenge any rulings on whether the sentence was void and was not entitled to a direct appeal. Hughes v. State, 273 Ga. App. 705, 615 S.E.2d 819 (2005).

Defendant could not appeal the denial of a motion to correct a void sentence as the motion was filed in 2007, more than 12 years after the defendant's conviction for armed robbery was affirmed and outside the statutory period in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f), and the defendant's sentence of life imprisonment was not void as the sentence was within the range set out in former O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(b). Brown v. State, 295 Ga. App. 66, 670 S.E.2d 867 (2008).

Motion filed five years after sentence not timely. — Trial court did not err by denying the appellant's motion to modify the sentence for a robbery conviction because the motion was filed more than five years after the appellant filed the motion to withdraw the guilty plea; therefore, the appellant filed the motion to modify outside the statutory period set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f). Williams v.

Modification of Sentence (Cont'd)

State, 331 Ga. App. 46, 769 S.E.2d 760 (2015).

Motion filed 16 years after sentencing not timely. — To the extent the defendant's motion to modify sought resentencing based on the merger of certain counts in the indictment as well as a change from consecutive to concurrent sentences, the trial court was without jurisdiction to grant such relief and properly denied the motion because the defendant's motion to modify the sentence was filed over 16 years after the defendant's guilty plea and sentencing. Rooney v. State, 318 Ga. App. 385, 734 S.E.2d 104 (2012).

No authority to modify sentence if sentence not void. — Defendant's claim that the trial court misapprehended the applicable sentencing ranges before sentencing the defendant did not constitute a claim that the sentence was void and was not a means for a post-appeal, post-O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) sentence modification; thus, the trial court lacked jurisdiction to modify the defendant's sentence, the trial court's ruling on the pleading was not subject to direct appeal, and the appeal was dismissed. Reynolds v. State, 272 Ga. App. 91, 611 S.E.2d 750 (2005).

Appellant's motion for sentence modification, asserting that the sentences imposed for armed robbery and burglary were void because the sentences had been imposed without a presentence hearing having been held, was properly denied; rulings on pleadings asserting erroneous procedure or unfair treatment were not subject to direct appeal because those rulings were not rulings on whether the sentence was void, and inasmuch as the assertions contained in the appellant's post-appeal seeking sentence modification did not allege the sentences imposed were void (appellant acknowledged that the sentences were within the statutory range), appellant was not entitled to a direct appeal from the trial court's adverse ruling. Jones v. State, 278 Ga. 669, 604 S.E.2d 483 (2004).

Because O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(b) is not ambiguous in its provision for a maximum sentence of life imprisonment, and because the defendant's sentence of life imprisonment fell within the statutory range of punishment, the defendant's sentence was not void. Hudson v. State, 334 Ga. App. 166, 778 S.E.2d 406 (2015).

Inmate's claim that two prior convictions that caused the inmate to be considered a recidivist under former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 and were used to sentence the inmate to life in prison without parole should not have been so used because the inmate had been pardoned, resulting in a void sentence, was properly dismissed because the inmate failed to produce evidence of a pardon. Prince v. State, 299 Ga. 888, 793 S.E.2d 38 (2016).

No power to vacate conviction. — Trial court properly held that the court lacked jurisdiction to entertain a defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea because the term of court at which the guilty plea was entered had expired; moreover, authority to modify sentences under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) did not include power to vacate conviction on which the sentence was based. Ellison v. State, 283 Ga. 461, 660 S.E.2d 373 (2008).

Motion during term extends trial judge's power to modify. — While a trial judge loses the inherent right to modify a judgment after the term expires, a motion made during the term serves to extend the power to modify. Porterfield v. State, 139 Ga. App. 553, 228 S.E.2d 722 (1976); State v. Bradbury, 167 Ga. App. 390, 306 S.E.2d 346 (1983); Doby v. Evans, 258 Ga. 777, 373 S.E.2d 757 (1988).

Motion to set aside sentence not timely. — Regardless of whether O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) applied to the defendant's December 2003 motion to set aside the sentence, that motion, filed four-and-one-half years after the sentence was imposed, was far too late; the motion was not filed in the term in which the sentence was entered, within a year of the date upon which the sentence was imposed, nor within 120 days of the trial court's receipt of a direct appeal remittitur. Reynolds v. State, 272 Ga. App. 91, 611 S.E.2d 750 (2005).

Trial court had no authority to reduce defendant's life sentence to 20 years and the defendant had no cause for complaint that the trial court vacated the void sentence-reduction order, when the express consideration for the reduction in sentence was the waiver of the defendant's appeal, and since the defendant pursued and secured an appellate review on the merits, no reversible error occurred, and the defendant must serve the life sentence that is statutorily mandated for the defendant's crime. Chandler v. State, 204 Ga. App. 512, 419 S.E.2d 751 (1992).

Trial court cannot increase sentence originally passed. — While under former Code 1933, § 27-2702 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34) the trial court had jurisdiction to change or modify the terms of the original sentence, the court cannot, under Ga. L. 1966, p. 440 § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-8-38) and former Code 1933, 27-2502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1), increase the sentence originally passed. Turnipseed v. State, 147 Ga. App. 735, 250 S.E.2d 186 (1978).

Oral sentence may not be increased once commenced. — While it is true that an oral sentence is not a binding judgment of the court, the law is also clear that once a person has entered upon the execution of the person's sentence, the court is without power to change the sentence by increasing the punishment. This is considered a violation of the prohibition under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against double punishment or jeopardy. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973).

Failure of trial court to provide conditions of probation. — Since the imposition of the terms and conditions of probation is a matter for the trial judge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a), if no such conditions have been provided by the trial court, the case is not one in which the panel may appropriately reduce a prison sentence by partial conversion of the prison sentence to probation. Warren v. State, 204 Ga. App. 191, 418 S.E.2d 783 (1992).

Modification of conditions of probation. — Order modifying the trial court's prior banishment order imposed as a condition of the defendant's probation was upheld on appeal as was the denial of the defendant's motion to withdraw a negotiated plea because: (1) the defendant's sentence was independent and, thus, not part of the negotiated plea agreement; and (2) the trial court adequately considered that the defendant's crimes were likely motivated by the relationship the defendant had with the victim, the defendant's ex-spouse, where the ex-spouse resided and worked, as well as where the ex-spouse's immediate family lived, by determining that the banishment order was issued to protect those affected, but also served a rehabilitative purpose by removing a temptation by the defendant to re-offend. Hallford v. State, 289 Ga. App. 350, 657 S.E.2d 10 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to vacate the defendant's sentence because the probation modification did not constitute punishment since the trial court retained jurisdiction to modify or change the probated sentence and changing the no violent contact order to no contact was not punishment but, rather, was for the purpose of protecting the victim. Bell v. State, 323 Ga. App. 751, 748 S.E.2d 114 (2013).

Defendant's appeal was dismissed as defendant failed to raise valid allegation of void sentence. — Defendant's claim that multiple counts of the controlled substance and communications facility offenses were the same offense did not raise a valid allegation that the sentence was void and the trial court lacked jurisdiction to modify the sentence; therefore, the defendant's appeal was dismissed; the denial of the defendant's motion to vacate void counts of the conviction were not subject to direct appeal. Green v. State, 273 Ga. App. 654, 615 S.E.2d 818 (2005).

Because the defendant waived an error reciting the wrong date in the indictment on the record and failed to challenge the indictment by filing a timely written demurrer, a challenge to the indictment pursuant to a motion to vacate what the defendant termed a void and illegal conviction and sentence was rejected and an appeal from the denial of that motion was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Guice v. State, 282 Ga. App. 747, 639 S.E.2d 636 (2006).

Defendant's appeal of an order denying

Modification of Sentence (Cont'd)

a motion to correct a void sentence was dismissed because the motion was well outside the statutory time period during which a court could correct or reduce a sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f); because the assertions contained in the defendant's post-O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f) motion seeking sentence modification did not allege that the sentences imposed were void, the defendant was not entitled to a direct appeal from the trial court's adverse ruling, and the trial court sentenced the defendant according to the state's recommendation pursuant to the plea negotiations. Jones v. State, 303 Ga. App. 319, 693 S.E.2d 499 (2010).

Because there was no showing that sentence was void, denial of defendant's motion for modification was not subject to direct appeal. — Because the defendant failed to show that a sentence to two 20-year terms for child molestation was void as vindictive, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(f), the denial of the defendant's motion for modification was not subject to a direct appeal. Frazier v. State, 302 Ga. App. 346, 691 S.E.2d 247 (2010).

Resentencing on affirmed conviction if other reversed. — If a defendant was sentenced on two different charges, and one was affirmed on appeal while the other was reversed, the trial court had no authority to resentence the defendant on the conviction which had been affirmed. Dover v. State, 195 Ga. App. 507, 393 S.E.2d 760 (1990).

Defendant's agreement to change in negotiated plea. — Trial court's sua sponte declaration that a probation condition barring the defendant's practice of medicine was to persist forever was not a part of the negotiated plea and sentence, and the defendant did not agree to this modification of the sentence; the trial court's modification to the agreed upon sentence violated O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(1). Kaiser v. State, 275 Ga. App. 684, 621 S.E.2d 802 (2005).

Sentencing court could consider defendant's illegal alien status. — Trial court did not violate the defendant's constitutional rights by considering the defendant's illegal alien status a relevant factor in formulating an appropriate sentence within the statutory range for burglary under O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(a); the trial court properly considered that the court could not order the defendant to work as a condition of probation. Trujillo v. State, 304 Ga. App. 849, 698 S.E.2d 350 (2010).

Trial court not vindictive in imposing new sentence. — Because the defendant's final sentence of 60 years to serve was not longer than the original sentence of life followed by additional terms of years, the trial court was not vindictive in imposing the new sentence as the court did. Griggs v. State, 314 Ga. App. 158, 723 S.E.2d 480 (2012).

Revocation of Probation or Suspension

No retroactive application of statute. — Legislature did not dictate that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a) applies retroactively to limit probation sentences imposed before its effective date (May 8, 1992). Department of Cors. v. Hicks, 209 Ga. App. 165, 433 S.E.2d 64 (1993).

Effect of subsection (a) on probation revocation. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(3)(A) deals exclusively with the type of facility or program to which a court may order a defendant whose probation is revoked; the statute does not speak to the length of detention and did not authorize revocation of the balance of the defendant's probation for the commission of two new violent misdemeanors. Lawrence v. State, 228 Ga. App. 745, 492 S.E.2d 727 (1997).

Probation may be revoked for committing subsequent crime. Layson v. Montgomery, 251 Ga. 359, 306 S.E.2d 245 (1983).

Warden of a county Department of Corrections was entitled to qualified immunity on a former inmate's unlawful detention claims; the warden acted within the warden's discretionary authority when the warden revoked the inmate's work release for escape and transferred the inmate to full-time incarceration, and the inmate did not show a violation of clearly established law because the inmate made no showing that the inmate was clearly entitled to be released at the end of a probation revocation sentence. Coons v. Gwinnett Cnty., 657 Fed. Appx. 856 (11th Cir. 2016) (Unpublished).

Judge can revoke probated sentence that is to begin in the future. — By reading former Code 1933, §§ 27-2502 and 27-2702 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1 and 42-8-34), a trial judge can revoke a probated sentence that was to begin at a future date. Parrish v. Ault, 237 Ga. 401, 228 S.E.2d 808 (1976); Roberts v. State, 148 Ga. App. 708, 252 S.E.2d 209 (1979).

Court may revoke probation after minimum period served. — There is no merit in the contention that a court, or a judge thereof, loses jurisdiction of the defendant's case after the defendant has served a minimum sentence since a probated sentence is served under the supervision of the judge imposing the probation and the judge may after a hearing revoke the probation at any time during the maximum period covered thereby if the defendant violates any of the rules and regulations upon which the probation was granted. Balkom v. Johnson, 211 Ga. 314, 85 S.E.2d 762 (1955).

Habeas court violated separation of powers by revoking sentence while peititoner in custody of parole board. — Habeas court erred by revoking the petitioner's remaining portion of the original sentence while the petitioner was in the legal custody of the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles as such action was in violation of the separation of powers provision of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III. Hayward v. Danforth, 299 Ga. 261, 787 S.E.2d 709 (2016).

Revoke suspension and require rest of sentence in confinement. — Suspended sentence is perhaps undefinable, but the court may provide rules and regulations in connection therewith and may, on violation of such rules and after notice and opportunity to be heard, during the time such sentence runs in accordance with its own terms, revoke the suspension and require that the remainder be served within a penal institution. Cross v. State, 128 Ga. App. 744, 197 S.E.2d 853 (1973).

Judge may revoke suspension or probation only if rules or regulations violated. — Judge only has authority to revoke the suspension or probation when the defendant has violated any of the rules and regulations prescribed by the court. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973).

Revocation violates due process if no conditions imposed. — To deprive a defendant of liberty upon the theory that the defendant violated rules and regulations prescribed in the defendant's sentence, when no rules, regulations, conditions, limitations, or restrictions were imposed by such sentence, would deprive the defendant of "due process of law." Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973).

Defendant discharged if unaware of conditions set only in later order. — If a condition in the sentence for obedience of laws is reflected only in a later written order, knowledge of such condition not being imputable to the defendant, the effect of such a sentence is an unconditional discharge. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973).

Proof required to revoke suspension. — Evidence required to revoke a suspension is only some evidence that the defendant has violated the conditions of the probation which satisfies the trial court hearing the evidence in the exercise of a very wide discretion. It is not necessary to show that the defendant has been convicted of the act constituting the violation of the probation. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472 (1973).

Revocation of suspended sentence not criminal proceeding. — Petition by county officials to revoke a bankruptcy debtor's suspended sentence to coerce payment of child support was not criminal in character and, thus, was not excepted from automatic stay as a continuation of a criminal proceeding under the bankruptcy law. Rollins v. Campbell, 200 Bankr. 427 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1996).

Revocation of multiple probated sentences based on one probation violation valid. — If a probated future consecutive sentence is imposed by the same judge who imposed prior probated sentences, and the conditions of probation for all the sentences are essentially the same, the trial court, upon a violation thereof, is empowered to revoke the defendant's probation as to all sentences. Dasher v. State, 166 Ga. App. 237, 304 S.E.2d 87 (1983).

Revocation of Probation or Suspension (Cont'd)

Drug test evidence insufficient for revocation. — Revocation of probation based on the defendant's failure of a drug test was error because the test result lacked probative value since no expert testimony was offered by the state to prove the scientific reliability of the ontrack system as used for the purpose of drug detection. Bowen v. State, 242 Ga. App. 631, 531 S.E.2d 104 (2000).

Revocation did not cause ex post facto violation. — Use of the amended version of O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34.1 when an appellant's probation was revoked due, in part, to the appellant's failure to abide by a special condition of the probation, did not implicate ex post facto concerns inasmuch as the imposition of a probated sentence is within the discretion of the sentencing court and the appellant did not have a substantial right to receive probation, much less to receive probation that could not be revoked in its entirety upon violation of a special condition of probation. Walker v. Brown, 281 Ga. 468, 639 S.E.2d 470 (2007).

Revocation reversed based on ground different than alleged in petition. — Trial court erred in revoking defendant's probation on a basis that was not alleged in the state's revocation petition as the state's petition to revoke sought to do so on the ground that the defendant committed a new offense of misdemeanor stalking, but the trial court's order provided that it was revoking probation on the ground that the defendant committed a new felony offense, presumably the offense of aggravated stalking mentioned by the state during the revocation hearing. Ponder v. State, 341 Ga. App. 276, 800 S.E.2d 19 (2017).

Defendant's probation may not be revoked when there is no evidence that the defendant violated its terms in the manner charged in the notice, even though there was evidence at the hearing that the defendant violated the terms of probation in some other manner as to which there was no notice given; thus, if a judgment was based upon an offense not charged in the petition for revocation, it must be reversed. Ponder v. State, 341 Ga. App. 276, 800 S.E.2d 19 (2017).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Analysis

General Consideration
Correction of Sentencing Errors
Modification of Sentence

General Consideration

Probation supervision fee. — Trial courts are authorized under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a) to require, as a condition of probation, the payment of a monthly $10 probation supervision fee. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-4.

No probation unless explicitly provided for in court's order. — Unless the judge expressly states in the order that the judge is placing the defendant on probation, the defendant receives the sentence which is prescribed. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-398.

Custody of convicted felons. — All convicted felons sentenced to a term of incarceration serve the felons' sentences under the jurisdiction of the Georgia Department of Corrections. Judges of the superior courts lack the authority to sentence the inmate to the custody of any other person or entity. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-17.

Court not to specify place of confinement. — All felons and misdemeanants, other than those misdemeanants committed directly to a county public works camp (now county correctional institute), must be committed directly and exclusively to the State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation). Only the director of corrections (now commissioner of offender rehabilitation) is authorized to prescribe the place of confinement; so the portion of a sentence committing an inmate to a term of penal servitude in the state prison system which commits the inmate to an institution of the Department of Human Resources is surplusage and should not be relied upon by the officials of the hospital or the Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) as authority for the retention of custody of the inmate at the hospital. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-133.

Restitution required for unemployment fraud. — Employment Security Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-8-1 et seq., does not authorize the imposition of a criminal sentence for unemployment fraud that permits community service in lieu of restitution of overpaid benefits to the Department of Labor. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-15.

Agreement to pay restitution exceeding victim's damages. — Sentencing court may not require an offender to make restitution on those counts of a multi-count indictment which are dismissed pursuant to a negotiated plea agreement; however, if an offender voluntarily agrees to make restitution in a certain amount, even if such amount exceeds the victim's "damages," the sentencing court may incorporate that agreement into the court's restitution order. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-19.

Confinement of misdemeanants. — While misdemeanants may only be referred to probation centers upon initial sentencing pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35.4, misdemeanants may also be referred to such facilities pursuant to probation revocation proceedings under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34.1 and after a probation revocation proceeding pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a)(3)(A). 1999 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 99-14.

Correction of Sentencing Errors

Judge may correct void sentence or clerical errors. — Although a judge is prohibited from modifying a sentence, the court possesses the inherent power to change or correct a judgment or sentence handed down if there are clerical errors appearing on the face of the judgment or the original sentence was void. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-42.

Even after court term expires. — Court, after the term of court in which the judgment was rendered has expired, may change the judgment rendered if clerical errors appear in the sentence or the initial sentence was void. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-42.

Any modification of a sentence after a term of court in which the sentence was rendered is void with the exception of sentences for misdemeanors under former Code 1933, 27-2506 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(1)), or unless the court bases the court's modification of an existing sentence on the premise that a clerical error was made or that a motion to modify the sentence was made during the term of court in which the sentence was filed. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-43.

After defendant satisfies judgment. — After the term of court in which the judgment was rendered, a court may only change or modify the judgment imposed to the extent necessary to correct clerical errors appearing on the face of the judgment. Such modifications may be made even though the judgment imposed has already been satisfied by the defendant. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-42.

District attorney is proper party to question amended sentences. — District attorney represents the state in the prosecution of cases and is the most appropriate party, not the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, to question the validity of amended sentences. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-43.

Changes beneficial to defendant. — Whether the sentence has been served or the fine has been paid does not affect the ability of a court to modify or change a sentence of the court if such change is beneficial to the defendant. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-42.

Probationary sentence fines suspended during appeal. — Execution of a probated sentence, involving payment of fines and restitution as conditions of probation, is suspended during the pendency of an appeal. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-30.

Modification of Sentence

Judge may not reserve right to alter sentence after court term. — Court may not reserve the right to change or modify a sentence after the expiration of the term at which the sentence was rendered. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 112.

Judge may not change sentence to run concurrently during prisoner's incarceration. — Sentencing judge may not alter a person's sentence to run concurrently rather than consecutively after the person has served a number of years on that sentence. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 309.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 24 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, §§ 2183 et seq., 2282 et seq.

ALR. — Reduction by appellate court of punishment imposed by trial court, 29 A.L.R. 313; 89 A.L.R. 295.

Necessity and sufficiency of adjudication of guilt, or of recital of or reference to verdict in judgment pronouncing sentence in criminal case, 69 A.L.R. 792.

Sentence for new offense committed while accused was on parole or conditional release, as concurrent or consecutive, 116 A.L.R. 811.

What constitutes commencement of service of sentence, depriving court of power to change sentence, 159 A.L.R. 161.

Voluntary absence of accused when sentence is pronounced, 6 A.L.R.2d 997; 59 A.L.R.5th 135.

Validity, under indeterminate sentence law, of sentence fixing identical minimum and maximum terms of imprisonment, 29 A.L.R.2d 1344.

Court's right, in imposing sentence, to hear evidence of, or to consider, other offenses committed by defendant, 96 A.L.R.2d 768.

Necessity and sufficiency of question to defendant as to whether he has anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced against him, 96 A.L.R.2d 1292.

Propriety of increased punishment on new trial for same offense, 12 A.L.R.3d 978.

State court's power to place defendant on probation without imposition of sentence, 56 A.L.R.3d 932.

Court's presentence inquiry as to, or consideration of, accused's intention to appeal, as error, 64 A.L.R.3d 1226.

Inherent power of court to suspend for indefinite period execution of sentence in whole or in part, 73 A.L.R.3d 474.

Right to credit on state sentence for time served under sentence of court of separate jurisdiction where state court fails to specify in that regard, 90 A.L.R.3d 408.

Loss of jurisdiction by delay in imposing sentence, 98 A.L.R.3d 605.

Power of state court, during same term, to increase severity of lawful sentence — modern status, 26 A.L.R.4th 905.

Power of court to increase severity of unlawful sentence — modern status, 28 A.L.R.4th 147.

Propriety of sentencing judge's consideration of defendant's perjury or lying in pleas or testimony in present trial, 34 A.L.R.4th 888.

Admissibility of expert testimony as to appropriate punishment for convicted defendant, 47 A.L.R.4th 1069.

Appealability of order suspending imposition or execution of sentence, 51 A.L.R.4th 939.

When does delay in imposing sentence violate speedy trial provision, 86 A.L.R.4th 340.

Vulnerability of victim as aggravating factor under state sentencing guidelines, 73 A.L.R.5th 383.

Validity of requirement that, as condition of probation, defendant submit to warrantless searches, 99 A.L.R.5th 557.

Downward departure under state sentencing guidelines based on extraordinary family circumstances, 106 A.L.R.5th 377.

Downward departure under state sentencing guidelines permitting downward departure for defendants with significantly reduced mental capacity, including alcohol or drug dependency, 113 A.L.R.5th 597.

Validity of condition of probation, supervised release, or parole restricting computer use or internet access, 4 A.L.R.6th 1.

Validity, construction, and application of conditions of probation or supervised release prohibiting contact with minors or frequenting places where minors congregate — state cases, 4 A.L.R.7th 3.

Propriety, in criminal case, of Federal District Court order restricting defendant's right to re-enter or stay in United States, 94 A.L.R. Fed. 619.

Downward departure from United States Sentencing Guidelines (USSG § 1A1.1 et seq.) based on extraordinary family circumstances, 145 A.L.R. Fed. 559.

Downward departure from United States Sentencing Guidelines (USSG § 1A1.1 et seq.) based on vulnerability to abuse in prison, 155 A.L.R. Fed. 327.

Downward departure from United States Sentencing Guidelines (U.S.S.G. § 1A1.1 et seq.) based on aberrant behavior, 164 A.L.R. Fed. 61.

Construction and application of United States sentencing guideline § 2a2.1(b)(1), 18 U.S.C.A., providing enhancement for attempted murder or assault with intent to commit murder dependent upon nature or degree of injury, 30 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 385.

Construction and application of U.S.S.G. § 5g1.3(b), requiring federal sentence to run concurrently to undischarged state sentence when state sentence has been fully taken into account in determining offense level for federal offense — particular events preceding federal sentence and sentencing credit, 32 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 191.

Construction and application of "official victim" sentencing enhancement of U.S.S.G. § 3a1.2(c) concerning law enforcement officers and prison officials, 32 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 371.

Construction and application of U.S.S.G. § 3b1.1(s) providing sentencing enhancement for organizer or leader of criminal activity — fraud offenses, 32 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 445.

Downward adjustment for acceptance of responsibility under U.S.S.G. § 3e1.1, 18 USCS — fraud offenses, 33 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 477.

Construction and application of U.S.S.G. § 5h1.3, concerning mental and emotional conditions as ground for sentencing departure, 34 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 457.

Construction and application of U.S.S.G. § 3b1.1(b) providing sentencing enhancement for manager or supervisor of criminal activity — drug offenses — cocaine, 35 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 467.

Validity, construction, and application of U.S.S.G. § 5k2.8, providing for upward sentence departure for extreme conduct, 36 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 95.

Construction and application of U.S.S.G. § 2x1.1, providing sentencing guideline for conspiracy not covered by specific offense guideline, 37 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 449.

Construction and application of U.S.S.G., § 3b1.1(a), 18 USCS, providing sentencing enhancement for organizer or leader of criminal activity — drug offenses, 43 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 365.

Validity, construction, and application of conditions of probation or supervised release prohibiting contact with minors or frequenting places where minors congregate — federal cases, 83 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 51.

Am. Jur. Trials. — Representing Criminal Defendants at Sentencing Hearings, 44 Am. Jur. Trials 459.

17-10-1.1. Judicial consideration of victim impact statement; form document; manner of rebuttal; effect of noncompliance; no creation of cause of action or right of appeal.

(a) A prosecuting attorney bringing charges against a defendant shall notify, where practical, the alleged victim or, when the victim is no longer living, a member of the victim's family of his or her right to submit a victim impact form.

(b)(1) A victim impact form shall identify the victim of the offense and the perpetrator.

(2) A victim impact form may itemize any economic loss suffered by the victim as a result of the offense and may:

(A) Identify any physical injury suffered by the victim as a result of the offense along with its seriousness and permanence;

(B) Describe any change in the victim's personal welfare or familial relationships as a result of the offense; and

(C) Contain any other information related to the impact of the offense upon the victim or the victim's family that the victim wishes to include.

(c) The Prosecuting Attorneys' Council of Georgia shall establish forms which are designed to obtain the information specified by subsection (b) of this Code section. The Prosecuting Attorneys' Council of Georgia shall make copies of such form available to prosecuting attorneys in the state. It shall be the duty of the prosecuting attorney or his or her designee to make such forms available to crime victims.

(d) The victim may complete a victim impact form and submit such form to the appropriate prosecuting attorney charged with the prosecution of the case. If the victim is unable to do so because of such victim's mental, emotional, or physical incapacity, or because of such victim's age, the victim's attorney or a family member may complete the victim impact form on behalf of the victim.

(e)(1) If, prior to trial, the defendant engages in discussion with the prosecuting attorney for the purpose of reaching a plea agreement or other pretrial disposition of his or her case, the prosecuting attorney shall, upon the request of the defendant, provide the defendant with a copy of the victim impact form relating to the defendant's case within a reasonable time prior to such discussions.

(2) If the prosecuting attorney intends to present information from a victim impact form to the court at any hearing at which sentencing or a determination of restitution will be considered by the court, the prosecuting attorney shall furnish a copy of the victim impact form to the defendant not less than five days prior to any such hearing. The defendant shall have the right to rebut the information contained in the victim impact form.

(3) The court shall consider the victim impact form that is presented to the court prior to imposing a sentence or making a determination as to the amount of restitution.

(f) If for any reason a victim was not allowed an opportunity to make a written victim impact statement, the victim may submit a victim impact statement to the State Board of Pardons and Paroles in any case prior to consideration of parole.

(g) No sentence shall be invalidated because of failure to comply with the provisions of this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed to create any cause of action or any right of appeal on behalf of any person.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-1.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 739, § 1; Ga. L. 1992, p. 2419, § 2; Ga. L. 1993, p. 1660, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 3/HB 172.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 88, § 1/HB 172, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Crime Victims Restitution Act of 2005.'"

Law reviews. — For article, "The Defense Lawyer's Role in the Sentencing Process: You've Got to Accentuate the Positive and Eliminate the Negative," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 981 (1986).

For note on 1993 amendment of this Code section, see 10 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 113 (1993).

For case comment, "Booth v. Maryland: Admissibility of Victim Impact Statements During Sentencing Phase of Capital Murder Trials," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1191 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Resentencing not required for reference to bitterness. — Fact that the mother of the victim felt that she was not bitter but that the defendant should serve some time does not constitute an instance of witness' testimony or prosecutor's remarks "so infect[ing] the sentencing proceeding as to render it fundamentally unfair" as to require resentencing. Bell v. State, 203 Ga. App. 109, 416 S.E.2d 344, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 344 (1992).

Prosecutor failed to disclose statement. — Although the prosecutor failed to disclose the statement of the victim's mother to the defendant prior to the hearing, this will not invalidate the sentence. Bell v. State, 203 Ga. App. 109, 416 S.E.2d 344, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 344 (1992).

Harmless error to discuss medical care of victim's daughter. — Prosecutor's comments during closing argument regarding the victim's family and the fact that the victim's daughter no longer had a father to provide the daughter with medical care may have amounted to impermissible victim impact evidence, but the reviewing court found it highly improbable that the challenged argument contributed to the judgment; the reviewing court found that particularly true in view of the fact that evidence that the victim had moved to the U.S. to procure better medical treatment for the daughter who had flat feet was admitted without objection at trial. Anaya-Plasencia v. State, 283 Ga. App. 728, 642 S.E.2d 401 (2007).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Victim impact evidence in capital sentencing hearings — post-Payne v. Tennessee, 79 A.L.R.5th 33.

Admissibility of victim impact evidence in noncapital state proceedings, 8 A.L.R.7th 6.

17-10-1.2. Oral victim impact statement; presentation of evidence; cross-examination and rebuttal by defendant; effect of noncompliance; no creation of cause of action or right of appeal.

(a)(1) In all cases in which the death penalty may be imposed, subsequent to an adjudication of guilt and in conjunction with the procedures in Code Section 17-10-30, the court shall allow evidence from the family of the victim, or such other witness having personal knowledge of the victim's personal characteristics and the emotional impact of the crime on the victim, the victim's family, or the community. Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, such evidence shall be given in the presence of the defendant and of the jury and shall be subject to cross-examination.

(2) The admissibility of the evidence described in paragraph (1) of this subsection and the number of witnesses other than immediate family who may testify shall be in the sole discretion of the judge and in any event shall be permitted only in such a manner and to such a degree as not to inflame or unduly prejudice the jury. As used in this paragraph, the term "immediate family" means the victim's spouse, child, parent, stepparent, grandparent, grandchild, sibling, stepbrother, stepsister, mother-in-law, father-in-law, sister-in-law, or brother-in-law and the spouses of any such individuals.

(3) In all cases other than those in which the death penalty may be imposed, prior to fixing of the sentence as provided for in Code Section 17-10-1 or the imposing of life imprisonment as mandated by law, and before rendering the appropriate sentence, including any order of restitution, the court shall allow the victim, as such term is defined in Code Section 17-17-3, the family of the victim, or such other witness having personal knowledge of the crime to testify about the impact of the crime on the victim, the family of the victim, or the community. Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, such evidence shall be given in the presence of the defendant and shall be subject to cross-examination. The admissibility of the testimony and evidence in support of such testimony shall be in the sole discretion of the judge and in any event shall be permitted only in such a manner as to allow for cross-examination by the defendant and to such a degree as not to unduly prejudice the defendant. If the judge excludes the testimony or evidence in support of such testimony, the state shall be allowed to make a proffer of such testimony or evidence.

(4) Upon a finding by the court specific to the case and the witness that the witness would not be able to testify in person without showing undue emotion or that testifying in person will cause the witness severe physical or emotional distress or trauma, evidence presented pursuant to this subsection may be in the form of, but not limited to, a written statement or a prerecorded audio or video statement, provided that such witness is subject to cross-examination and the evidence itself will not be available to the jury during deliberations. Photographs of the victim may be included with any evidence presented pursuant to this subsection.

(5) If the accused has been convicted of a serious violent felony as defined in Code Section 17-10-6.1, attempted murder or attempted kidnapping, or any violation of Code Section 16-5-90, 16-5-91, 16-7-82, 16-7-84, or 16-7-86, and the victim or a representative of the victim is not present at the presentence hearing, it shall be the duty of the court to inquire of the prosecuting attorney whether or not the victim has been notified of the presentence hearing as provided in Code Section 17-17-5. If the court finds that the prosecuting attorney has not made a reasonable attempt to notify the victim, the presentence hearing shall be recessed in order to provide the victim the opportunity to attend prior to sentence being imposed; provided, however, that prior to recessing the presentence hearing, the court shall allow the state or the accused to call any witnesses who were subpoenaed and are present at such presentence hearing. Following any such testimony, the presentence hearing shall be recessed and the victim shall be notified of the date, time, and location when the presentence hearing shall resume.

(b) In presenting such evidence, the victim, the family of the victim, or such other witness having personal knowledge of the impact of the crime on the victim, the victim's family, or the community shall, if applicable:

(1) Describe the nature of the offense;

(2) Itemize any economic loss suffered by the victim or the family of the victim, if restitution is sought;

(3) Identify any physical injury suffered by the victim as a result of the offense along with its seriousness and permanence;

(4) Describe any change in the victim's personal welfare or familial relationships as a result of the offense;

(5) Identify any request for psychological services initiated by the victim or the victim's family as a result of the offense; and

(6) Include any other information related to the impact of the offense upon the victim, the victim's family, or the community that the court inquires of.

(c) The court shall allow the defendant the opportunity to cross-examine and rebut the evidence presented of the victim's personal characteristics and the emotional impact of the crime on the victim, the victim's family, or the community, and such cross-examination and rebuttal evidence shall be subject to the same discretion set forth in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section.

(d) No sentence shall be invalidated because of failure to comply with the provisions of this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed to create any cause of action or any right of appeal on behalf of the victim, the state, or the accused; provided, however, that if the court intentionally fails to comply with this Code section, the victim may file a complaint with the Judicial Qualifications Commission.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-1.2, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 739, § 1; Ga. L. 1993, p. 1660, § 2; Ga. L. 2009, p. 192, § 1/SB 151; Ga. L. 2010, p. 214, § 4/HB 567.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of death penalty decisions, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 139 (2005); 58 Mercer L. Rev. 111 (2006). For annual survey of law on evidence, see 62 Mercer L. Rev. 125 (2010). For article, "Criminal Procedure," see 27 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 29 (2011).

For note on 1993 amendment of this Code section, see 10 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 113 (1993).

For case comment, "Booth v. Maryland: Admissibility of Victim Impact Statements During Sentencing Phase of Capital Murder Trials," see 21 Ga. L. Rev. 1191 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 contains sufficient safeguards within the statute to ensure that victim impact evidence will not be admitted which reflects on factors which the court has found constitutionally irrelevant to death penalty sentencing and which could result in the arbitrary and unconstitutional imposition of the death penalty. Livingston v. State, 264 Ga. 402, 444 S.E.2d 748 (1994).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 is not an unconstitutional ex post facto law. Livingston v. State, 264 Ga. 402, 444 S.E.2d 748 (1994).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 is not unconstitutional and it is not an ex post facto law violation to apply the statute to a crime that was committed before the statute was enacted. Speed v. State, 270 Ga. 688, 512 S.E.2d 896 (1999).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 is not unconstitutional as written and the trial court properly reviewed the state's victim impact testimony prior to trial and did not admit unduly inflammatory or prejudicial evidence. Gissendaner v. State, 272 Ga. 704, 532 S.E.2d 677 (2000).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion to declare as unconstitutional the statute allowing victim impact evidence during sentencing as the Georgia Supreme Court found O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 to be constitutional. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Scope of victim impact testimony. — Evidence is limited to the impact of the specific crime on the community and does not extend to testimony concerning anger in the community about increasing lawlessness or crime in general. McClain v. State, 267 Ga. 378, 477 S.E.2d 814 (1996), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1106, 118 S. Ct. 2485, 138 L. Ed. 2d 993 (1997).

Victim impact statements were proper which focused on the witnesses' relationship with the victim and how the victim's death had affected the witness personally, and which did not focus on the victim's social status, nor provide a detailed narration of the emotional and economic suffering of the victim's family. Turner v. State, 268 Ga. 213, 486 S.E.2d 839 (1997).

Psychiatrist testimony on impact to child. — Victim impact testimony of a psychiatrist who had treated the victim's child both before and after the murder was not improper. Carruthers v. State, 272 Ga. 306, 528 S.E.2d 217, cert. denied, 531 U.S. 934, 121 S. Ct. 321, 148 L. Ed. 2d 258 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863 (2008).

Silent videotape depicting murder victim admissible. — Silent videotape depicting a murder victim that was killed during an armed robbery of an armored car that showed the victim alive in various settings and which was narrated by the victim's oldest daughter at trial was within the statutory description of admissible victim impact evidence permitted by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 and the trial court did not err by allowing the videotape to be played at the defendant's trial. Tollette v. State, 280 Ga. 100, 621 S.E.2d 742 (2005).

Testimony from non-family members. — Testimony about the emotional impact of the crime on the community may include testimony by witnesses who are not family members regarding the impact the crime had on witnesses personally. Walker v. State, 282 Ga. 774, 653 S.E.2d 439 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 481, 172 L.Ed.2d 344 (2008), overruled on other grounds, No. S10P1859, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 267 (Ga. 2011).

Opinions about defendant and murders inadmissible. — Trial court abused the discretion granted by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 in allowing murder victims' family members to testify by offering opinions about the defendant and the murders because such victim impact evidence unduly prejudiced the jury; the witnesses testified that the victims were "shot and left in a patch of kudzu as if they were a piece of trash on the side of the road," that the victims were "left under trash and branches, left to die," and that the crimes were "a senseless, selfish act of nothing but wickedness and evil." While some of the witnesses' characterizations may have been supported by the evidence presented at trial, the witnesses did not have personal knowledge of many of the facts to which the witnesses testified, and the statements, even if supported by the evidence, were particularly inflammatory and prejudicial coming from members of the victims' families; further, the witnesses were also improperly allowed to present the witnesses' own unduly prejudicial characterizations and opinions of the defendant. Bryant v. State, 288 Ga. 876, 708 S.E.2d 362 (2011).

Discretion of court. — Introduction of oral victim impact testimony is controlled by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2, and the introduction of such evidence is solely within the discretion of the trial court. Cronan v. State, 236 Ga. App. 374, 511 S.E.2d 899 (1999).

Failure to allow defendant to cross examine the victim pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 was not a basis for invalidating the sentence. Williams v. State, 226 Ga. App. 720, 487 S.E.2d 470 (1997).

No basis for invalidating sentence. — Failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 does not provide a basis for the invalidation of a sentence. Brantley v. State, 268 Ga. 151, 486 S.E.2d 169, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 985, 118 S. Ct. 449, 139 L. Ed. 2d 384 (1997).

Testimony of spouse of murder victim admissible. — Testimony of the spouse of a murder victim, who sobbed while testifying, was not improper because the questions asked had been approved by the trial court prior to trial and there was no indication that the spouse's testimony was prolonged or that the spouse's display of emotion disrupted the trial. Jones v. State, 267 Ga. 592, 481 S.E.2d 821, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 953, 118 S. Ct. 376, 139 L. Ed. 2d 293 (1997).

Religious references in victim impact statements were permissible since the references were an essential part of a glimpse into the victim's life and did not comprise an unduly large portion of the statements. Pickren v. State, 269 Ga. 453, 500 S.E.2d 566 (1998).

Permitting the sole surviving victim of the defendant's crimes to testify during the sentencing phase regarding the impact on the witness regarding the murder of the witness's child was not erroneous. Henry v. State, 278 Ga. 617, 604 S.E.2d 826 (2004).

Trial court did not err by allowing emotional victim impact evidence during sentencing as O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 allowed evidence of the impact of the crime upon the victim, and the victim gave a short and limited statement. Paige v. State, 277 Ga. App. 687, 627 S.E.2d 370 (2006).

Testimony from parents admissible without reading statements. — Victim impact evidence was properly admitted through the testimony of a child murder victim's father that, since the crimes, he had suffered depression, nightmares, had trouble sleeping, and had seen a psychiatrist, and the testimony of the child's mother that her sadness, crying, and being in a "dazed state" had spurred her to visit a psychologist for three months and a counselor for six months. It was not required that the victims read their statements. Foster v. State, 288 Ga. 98, 701 S.E.2d 189 (2010).

Counsel was not deficient in failing to object to the prosecutor's victim impact argument during opening statement because negative characterizations of the victim were proper since the characterizations were relevant to evidence later offered to explain the context in which the drug-related crimes occurred, and the prosecutor's allusion to the fact that the victim was no longer alive was relevant to the murder charge; a witness's testimony and photographs of the witness's injuries were directly relevant and admissible to prove the charge against the defendant of committing aggravated assault on the witness. Lacey v. State, 288 Ga. 341, 703 S.E.2d 617 (2010).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to object to impact statement from sibling. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the victim's sibling giving impact testimony during sentencing on the ground that the defense had no prior notice of the sibling's testimony because the defendant failed to explain how the sibling's testimony prejudiced the defendant, given that the trial court had already heard the victim's testimony that the victim had been hospitalized for over a month as a result of the knife attack, that the attack had paralyzed the victim, that the victim could not live with the victim's spouse because of the victim's disability, and the victim's only income was social security disability payments. Jackson v. State, 316 Ga. App. 588, 730 S.E.2d 69 (2012).

Testimony held not victim impact evidence. — Testimony that was given by the child of a person who was killed in a multi-car collision caused by a juvenile, which provided the child's personal observations of teen driving habits in the area where the collision occurred and was offered by the state to show that it was in the interests of the community for the juvenile to be treated as an adult, was not victim impact evidence, but the juvenile court did not err by admitting the testimony. In the Interest of W.N.J., 268 Ga. App. 637, 602 S.E.2d 173 (2004).

Leading questions authorized. — Trial court acted within the court's discretion in allowing the prosecutor to ask leading questions of the victim's spouse in order to ensure that the spouse's testimony remained within the parameters outlined in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2. Jones v. State, 267 Ga. 592, 481 S.E.2d 821, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 953, 118 S. Ct. 376, 139 L. Ed. 2d 293 (1997).

Procedural irregularity does not constitute reversible error absent a constitutional violation. McClain v. State, 267 Ga. 378, 477 S.E.2d 814 (1996), cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1106, 118 S. Ct. 2485, 138 L. Ed. 2d 993 (1997).

Although the trial court erred in overruling defendant's objections to victim impact references in the state's opening statement and in the testimony of two witnesses, the appellate court did not need to reverse the defendant's convictions and sentences because the error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt as the comments and testimony would have been admissible in the sentencing phase and as the defendant had confessed both to a friend, who testified at trial, and to law enforcement officers in a videotaped confession that was played for the jury. Lucas v. State, 274 Ga. 640, 555 S.E.2d 440 (2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 840, 123 S. Ct. 163, 154 L. Ed. 2d 62 (2002).

Proper procedures. — Procedure best comported with requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1.2 whereby witnesses prepared written statements, a pretrial hearing provided defendant the opportunity to challenge the content of the statements, and, at trial, the state asked the witnesses to read their statements and the witnesses were then available for cross-examination. Turner v. State, 268 Ga. 213, 486 S.E.2d 839 (1997).

Jury instructions. — When victim impact evidence is given in the sentencing phase of a death penalty or life without parole case, the trial court should instruct the jury regarding the purpose of the evidence. Turner v. State, 268 Ga. 213, 486 S.E.2d 839 (1997).

Harmless error. — Although some of the victim impact testimony admitted over the defendant's objection was improper, the testimony did not require reversal of the defendant's death sentence because the admission was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 522, 178 L. Ed. 2d 385 (2010).

Cited in Raulerson v. State, 268 Ga. 623, 491 S.E.2d 791 (1997); Taylor v. State, 264 Ga. App. 665, 592 S.E.2d 148 (2003).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Victim impact evidence in capital sentencing hearings — post-Payne v. Tennessee, 79 A.L.R.5th 33.

Admissibility of victim impact evidence in noncapital state proceedings, 8 A.L.R.7th 6.

17-10-1.3. Factoring into sentencing determinations citizenship status of convict.

(a) In determining whether to probate all or any part of any sentence of confinement in any felony, misdemeanor, or ordinance violation case, the sentencing court shall be authorized to make inquiry into whether the person to be sentenced is lawfully present in the United States under federal law.

(b) If the court determines that the person to be sentenced is not lawfully present in the United States, the court shall be authorized to make inquiry into whether the person to be sentenced would be legally subject to deportation from the United States while serving a probated sentence.

(c) If the court determines that the person to be sentenced would be legally subject to deportation from the United States while serving a probated sentence, the court may:

(1) Consider the interest of the state in securing certain and complete execution of its judicial sentences in criminal and quasi-criminal cases;

(2) Consider the likelihood that deportation may intervene to frustrate that state interest if probation is granted; and

(3) Where appropriate, decline to probate a sentence in furtherance of the state interest in certain and complete execution of sentences.

(d) This Code section shall apply with respect to a judicial determination as to whether to suspend all or any part of a sentence of confinement in the same manner as this Code section applies to determinations with respect to probation.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-1.3, enacted by Ga. L. 2007, p. 34, § 1/SB 23; Ga. L. 2008, p. 324, § 17/SB 455.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2007, p. 34, § 3/SB 23, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly finds that this Act states factors for consideration in discretionary decision-making processes within the criminal justice system. The General Assembly finds that such factors could have been considered prior to or without the enactment of this Act. Accordingly, it is the intention of the General Assembly that this Act may be applied with respect to offenses committed prior to its effective date as well as offenses committed on or after its effective date. However, if there should be a judicial determination that retrospective application is prohibited, it is the intention of the General Assembly that retrospective application should be severable." This Act became effective May 11, 2007.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 3C Am. Jur. 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §§ 2580, 2581.

C.J.S. — 3 C.J.S., Aliens, §§ 111 et seq., 146 et seq.

17-10-1.4. Split sentence.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "split sentence" means any felony sentence that includes a term of imprisonment followed by a term of probation.

(b) In any case where a judge on or after July 1, 2015, sentences a defendant to a split sentence, post-incarceration supervision of the defendant shall be conducted exclusively by the Department of Community Supervision and not by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, regardless of whether the defendant has served the full period of incarceration ordered in the sentence or has been released prior to the full period of incarceration by parole, conditional release, or other action of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-1.4, enacted by Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 5-31/HB 310.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 6-1/HB 310, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall become effective July 1, 2015, and shall apply to sentences entered on or after such date."

Law reviews. — For article on the 2015 enactment of this Code section, see 32 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 231 (2015).

17-10-2. Conduct of presentence hearings in felony cases; effect of reversal for error in presentence hearing.

(a)(1) Except in cases in which the death penalty may be imposed, upon the return of a verdict of "guilty" by the jury in any felony case, the judge shall dismiss the jury and shall conduct a presentence hearing at which the only issue shall be the determination of punishment to be imposed. In the hearing the judge shall hear additional evidence in extenuation, mitigation, and aggravation of punishment, including the record of any prior criminal convictions and pleas of guilty or nolo contendere of the accused, or the absence of any prior conviction and pleas.

(2) The judge shall also hear argument by the accused or the accused's counsel and the prosecuting attorney, as provided by law, regarding the punishment to be imposed. Except in cases where the death penalty may be imposed, the prosecuting attorney shall open and conclude the argument. In cases where the death penalty may be imposed, the prosecuting attorney shall open and the accused or the accused's counsel shall conclude the argument.

(3) Upon the conclusion of the evidence and arguments, the judge shall impose the sentence or shall recess the trial for the purpose of taking the sentence to be imposed under advisement. The judge shall fix a sentence within the limits prescribed by law.

(b) In cases in which the death penalty may be imposed, the judge, when sitting without a jury, in addition to the procedure set forth in subsection (a) of this Code section, shall follow the procedures provided for in Code Section 17-10-30.

(c) In all cases tried by a jury in which the death penalty may be imposed, upon a return of a verdict of "guilty" by the jury, the court shall resume the trial and conduct a presentence hearing before the jury. The hearing shall be conducted in the same manner as presentence hearings conducted before the judge as provided for in subsection (a) of this Code section. Upon the conclusion of the evidence and arguments, the judge shall give the jury appropriate instructions, and the jury shall retire to determine whether any mitigating or aggravating circumstances, as defined in Code Section 17-10-30, exist and whether to recommend mercy for the accused. Upon the findings of the jury, the judge shall fix a sentence within the limits prescribed by law.

(d) If the trial court is reversed on appeal because of error only in the presentence hearing, the new trial which may be ordered shall apply only to the issue of punishment.

History. — Code 1933, § 27-2503, enacted by Ga. L. 1974, p. 352, § 7; Ga. L. 1990, p. 8, § 17; Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 2; Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 11/HB 170; Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 2/SB 13.

Cross references. — General rules regarding order of argument after presentation of evidence, § 17-8-71.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 7, not codified by the General Assembly, and effective May 1, 1993, provides: "Except as provided in this section, the provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed after the effective date of this Act. With express written consent of the state, a defendant whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached and the state has filed with the trial court notice of its intention to seek the death penalty or (2) the defendant has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking the death penalty after remand."

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 8, not codified by the General Assembly, and effective May 1, 1993, provides: "Except as provided in Section 6 of this Act [Code Section 17-10-32.1], the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act nor shall this Act be construed as repealing Code Sections 17-10-30, 17-10-31, or 17-10-32 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated."

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1654, § 9, not codified by the General Assembly, and effective May

1, 1993, provides: "No person shall be sentenced to life without parole unless such person could have received the death penalty under the laws of this state as such laws have been interpreted by the United States Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Georgia."

Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 1/HB170, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Criminal Justice Act of 2005.'"

Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 17/HB170, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the 2005 amendment applies to all trials which commence on or after July 1, 2005.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 8/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Except as provided in this section, the provisions of this Act shall apply only to those offenses committed after the effective date of this Act. With express written consent of the state, an accused whose offense was committed prior to the effective date of this Act may elect in writing to be sentenced under the provisions of this Act, provided that: (1) jeopardy for the offense charged has not attached or (2) the accused has been sentenced to death but the conviction or sentence has been reversed on appeal and the state is not barred from seeking prosecution after the remand."

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 9/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Except as provided in Section 8 of this Act, the amendment or repeal of a Code section by this Act shall not affect any sentence imposed by any court of this state prior to the effective date of this Act."

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 10/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "A person may be sentenced to life without parole without the prosecutor seeking the death penalty under the laws of this state." Ga. L. 2011, p. 752, § 17(3) codified these provisions at Code Section 17-10-16.1.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 11(a)/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the law as set forth in this Code section as it existed prior to April 29, 2009, shall apply to all offenses committed on and before April 29, 2009, and the amendments by this Act shall apply to all crimes committed on and after April 29, 2009.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 223, § 11(b)/SB 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The provisions of this Act shall not affect or abate the status as a crime of any such act or omission which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act repealing, repealing and reenacting, or amending such law, nor shall the prosecution of such crime be abated as a result of such repeal, repeal and reenactment, or amendment."

Law reviews. — For article, "Toward a Perspective on the Death Penalty Cases," see 27 Emory L.J. 469 (1978). For article on recidivism and convictions based on nolo contendere pleas, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 723 (1979). For article surveying judicial developments in Georgia Criminal Law, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 59 (1979). For survey of 1986 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 1141 (1987).

For note on 1993 amendment of this Code section, see 10 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 183 (1993). For note and comment, "Hope for the Best and Prepare for the Worst: The Capital Defender's Guide to Reciprocal Discovery in the Sentencing Phase of Georgia Death Penalty Trials," see 23 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 995 (2007).

For comment on Todd v. State, 228 Ga. 746, 187 S.E.2d 831 (1972), see 24 Mercer L. Rev. 491 (1973).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Judicial Sentencing for Felonies
Jury Sentencing for Capital Cases
Appellate Review

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under Ga. L. 1971, p. 902, § 1, and Ga. L. 1973, p. 159, § 1 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Constitutionality of death penalty. — Claim that the death penalty statute in Georgia is unconstitutional as applied to the defendants who are black is without merit. Stephens v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 642 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 872, 109 S. Ct. 189, 102 L. Ed. 2d 158 (1988).

Language of former Code 1933, § 27-2503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2) was mandatory. DeLoach v. State, 142 Ga. App. 666, 236 S.E.2d 904 (1977).

Failure to follow the mandate of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 is neither harmless nor waived by failure to object to procedure. Jefferson v. State, 205 Ga. App. 687, 423 S.E.2d 425 (1992); Eason v. State, 215 Ga. App. 614, 451 S.E.2d 820 (1994), overruled on other grounds, Turner v. State, 259 Ga. App. 902 (2003), recons. denied; overruled on other grounds by State v. Burns, 829 S.E.2d 367, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 400 (Ga. 2019); Martin v. State, 228 Ga. App. 59, 491 S.E.2d 142 (1997).

Language of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 was directory. — Language instructing the court to dismiss the jury during a presentence hearing is directory and only for the purpose of the jury's convenience. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

Applicability of subsection (a). — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) is not applicable to sentences imposed pursuant to a hearing on a guilty plea. Burruss v. State, 242 Ga. App. 241, 529 S.E.2d 375 (2000).

Failure to hold hearing. — Question whether a trial court's failure to hold a presentence hearing can be waived or held harmless only becomes an issue if the failure to hold a presentence hearing renders the defendant's sentence void. Williams v. State, 271 Ga. 686, 523 S.E.2d 857 (1999).

Sentence imposed by a trial court in a non-death penalty case is not rendered void by the court's failure to conduct a presentence hearing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Williams v. State, 271 Ga. 686, 523 S.E.2d 857 (1999).

Failure to complete hearing not justified. — Defendant's profane tirade and physical agitation following return of the jury's verdict did not justify the failure to complete a presentence hearing. Hayes v. State, 211 Ga. App. 801, 440 S.E.2d 539 (1994).

Purpose of bifurcated trial. — Two-step felony procedure was devised and enacted for the express purpose of prohibiting disclosure of prior convictions to the jury during the first phase of the trial. The General Assembly intended that any prior convictions be disclosed to the jury only at the second or sentencing phase of the trial. Riggins v. Stynchcombe, 231 Ga. 589, 203 S.E.2d 208 (1974).

Bifurcated trial was created to withhold matters inadmissible on the issue of guilt or innocence from the jury until that issue had been determined. Eberheart v. State, 232 Ga. 247, 206 S.E.2d 12 (1974), vacated on other grounds, 433 U.S. 917, 97 S. Ct. 2994, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1104 (1977).

Purpose of notice requirement. — Intention of the General Assembly in requiring that the defendant be notified prior to the trial was to give the convicted defendant enough time to rebut or explain any conviction record. Queen v. State, 131 Ga. App. 370, 205 S.E.2d 921 (1974).

Notice of intent as to sentence not required. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 does not require that the state notify the defendant of the sentence the state intends to seek; rather, the statute simply requires that the state notify the defendant of the evidence the state intends to use in aggravation of sentencing. Hightower v. State, 210 Ga. App. 216, 436 S.E.2d 31 (1993).

If the state filed notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment approximately 80 minutes before the trial was scheduled to begin and the jury selected the previous day was to be sworn, timely notice was given to the defendant. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

Notice requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 would not apply to preclude a trial court from considering a defendant's violent conduct which occurred during the trial or after the trial and prior to sentencing. Demetrios v. State, 246 Ga. App. 506, 541 S.E.2d 83 (2000), overruled on other grounds, White v. State, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 66 (Ga. 2019).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Presentence hearing was not required if the court imposed the statutory minimum sentence for cocaine trafficking under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(a)(1)(C). Edwards v. State, 219 Ga. App. 239, 464 S.E.2d 851 (1995).

Defendant was convicted of kidnapping with bodily injury, which carries a minimum life sentence; thus, the trial court did not err when the court denied the defendant's oral request for a presentence investigation prior to sentencing. Bolick v. State, 244 Ga. App. 567, 536 S.E.2d 242 (2000).

Notice of prior offenses used for recidivist purposes. — Although it is not essential that the indictment set forth the prior offenses, if the indictment does not set forth prior offenses it is necessary that the record contain an "affirmative notice to defendant that his prior felony offenses would be used against him for recidivist purposes during sentencing." Ross v. State, 210 Ga. App. 455, 436 S.E.2d 496 (1993).

Even though the state failed to provide the defendant with the required notice, error in the imposition of a recidivist sentence was waived because at the presentence hearing the defendant's counsel did not object to the admission of the convictions and affirmatively stated that the defendant did not contest the convictions' admission. Hatcher v. State, 224 Ga. App. 747, 482 S.E.2d 443 (1997).

Defendant acknowledged in open court that the prosecution had disclosed the defendant's prior record and discussed with defense counsel "where defendant fell in the tier of a recidivist statute," thus, the defendant received adequate and clear notice as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Mullinax v. State, 242 Ga. App. 561, 530 S.E.2d 255 (2000).

Defendant received sufficient notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment when the defendant received notice of intent to introduce evidence of similar transactions, attached to which was a copy of the defendant's previous conviction for armed robbery. Herrington v. State, 243 Ga. App. 265, 533 S.E.2d 133 (2000), appeal dismissed, 265 Ga. App. 454, 594 S.E.2d 682 (2004).

Notice received prior to the swearing of the jury is sufficient to satisfy the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Davis v. State, 244 Ga. App. 715, 536 S.E.2d 603 (2000); Davis v. State, 246 Ga. App. 877, 542 S.E.2d 626 (2000).

Defendant received proper notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment because the disclosure certificate included defendant's GCIC criminal history, including convictions for armed robbery, and stated that all convictions would be used in aggravation of punishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Young v. State, 245 Ga. App. 684, 538 S.E.2d 760 (2000).

State indicated service of process to the defendant's attorney, by mail and by fax, of the state's intent to introduce evidence in aggravation of punishment and therefore notice was sufficient. Follow up letter outlining plea negotiations and citing recidivist statute provided clear notice of same intent. Cabell v. State, 250 Ga. App. 530, 551 S.E.2d 386 (2001).

Clear notice required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 was given when defense counsel stated at trial that counsel was aware of the state's intent to seek recidivism punishment and that notice of such intent had been received; further, no objection was made to the introduction of the defendant's felony convictions, and defense counsel stated that the documentation appeared to be proper certified copies of convictions of the client. Parnell v. State, 260 Ga. App. 213, 581 S.E.2d 263 (2003).

Although the state's original notice to defendant's counsel of the state's intention to admit prior felony convictions as aggravators for sentencing purposes was amended on the day of trial to include new convictions that were not previously listed, the court found that defendant's counsel was timely served with notice of the prior convictions pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2(a) and 17-10-7(b) because the defendant had time to review the convictions prior to the commencement of the trial; it was accordingly proper that the trial court considered the convictions in determining the appropriate sentence.

Howard v. State, 262 Ga. App. 198, 585 S.E.2d 164 (2003).

Prior convictions listed on an attached GCIC as aggravation evidence for a defendant's sentencing for theft by deception were sufficient notice that the state intended to seek sentencing as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2 and 17-10-7. Parks v. State, 294 Ga. App. 646, 669 S.E.2d 684 (2008).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for aggravated assault, false imprisonment, and other crimes, the trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist despite the state serving notice of the state's intent to seek recidivism treatment until the morning of trial as, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a), such notice was timely and sufficient. Daniels v. State, 296 Ga. App. 795, 676 S.E.2d 13 (2009).

Waiver of notice. — Defendant waived notice after defense counsel did not object to admission of the defendant's prior convictions and affirmatively stated that counsel did not contest admission of the convictions. Howard v. State, 233 Ga. App. 724, 505 S.E.2d 768 (1998), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669 (2003); Strange v. State, 244 Ga. App. 635, 535 S.E.2d 315 (2000).

Examination of the transcript of the sentencing hearing did not reveal whether the trial court considered the defendant's prior conviction in determining the sentence, although the court probated a portion of the sentence; however, the defendant waived any error by failing to object to the court's examination of the defendant's criminal history on the ground that the defendant received no notice. Adams v. State, 263 Ga. App. 694, 589 S.E.2d 269 (2003).

Defendant waived the defendant's objection to the use of evidence in aggravation of punishment under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 as the defendant failed to object at the presentencing hearing to the lack of notice. Ingram v. State, 262 Ga. App. 304, 585 S.E.2d 211 (2003).

Defendant waived any error in the state's notice of the state's intention to request that the defendant be sentenced as a recidivist under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) as the defendant failed to object to the introduction of the certificates of conviction at the presentencing hearing; defendant's pro se status did not relieve the defendant of the obligation to make timely objections and to comply with the procedural and substantive requirements of the law. Sims v. State, 265 Ga. App. 476, 594 S.E.2d 693 (2004).

Certified copies of prior convictions not required for notice. — Notice of state's intent to present evidence upon sentencing of the defendant's previous convictions was sufficient even though certified copies of prior convictions were not included. Wynn v. State, 228 Ga. App. 124, 491 S.E.2d 149 (1997).

Notice not required. — State was not required to notify a defendant who pled guilty of the state's intent to use in aggravation of punishment evidence that every other participant in the criminal enterprise who pled guilty had received jail time; the notice requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) had been deleted, and the statute did not apply to sentencing following guilty pleas. McIntosh v. State, 287 Ga. App. 293, 651 S.E.2d 207 (2007).

Prior convictions need not be in indictment. — Since 1974, when Georgia adopted judge sentencing, it is not required that the prior convictions be included in the indictment but only that the accused receive notice of the state's intention to seek recidivist punishment and of the identity of the prior convictions. Wainwright v. State, 208 Ga. App. 777, 432 S.E.2d 555 (1993).

When the prior convictions do no more than subject the defendant to a greater risk of the maximum sentence (O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(a)) or even to a certainty of the maximum sentence (O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)) for the crime as indicted, the prior convictions need not be alleged in the indictment; imposition of the maximum sentence has already been authorized by the grand jury's action, and adequate advance notice to defendant is assured by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a). Wainwright v. State, 208 Ga. App. 777, 432 S.E.2d 555 (1993).

Indictment not used in aggravation of punishment. — Mere rumors concerning the conduct of the defendant were not admissible, and although an indictment is more than mere rumor, an indictment is much less than a conclusive determination of guilt to permit the indictment's use in aggravation of punishment. Sinkfield v. State, 262 Ga. 239, 416 S.E.2d 288 (1992).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Evidence of events after trial. — Since the witnesses' evidence was relevant to the question of sentence, including the defendant's moral character and predisposition to commit other crimes, the fact that it occurred after trial did not make it any less relevant. Pearce v. State, 256 Ga. App. 889, 570 S.E.2d 74 (2002).

Evidence of unproven criminal charges. — Evidence of unproven criminal charges is admissible during the sentencing phase if the state timely notifies the defendant of the state's intention to introduce such evidence; however, the notice of unproven charges must be described with enough particularity to alert the defendant as to what the defendant must defend against. Thornton v. State, 264 Ga. 563, 449 S.E.2d 98 (1994).

Pending charges considered. — Trial court did not err in considering the pending charges as aggravating circumstances of the pre-sentence hearing when the state did not provide the requisite notice to the defendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 since it was the defendant personally who introduced the topic of these charges on direct, subject to the prosecution's permissible follow-up cross-examinations. Andrews v. State, 207 Ga. App. 352, 427 S.E.2d 841 (1993).

Similar transaction evidence insufficient. — Providing notice of intent to prevent similar transaction evidence does not vitiate the state's need to give notice that the state plans to use a prior conviction in aggravation of punishment. The purpose of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 is to give the defendant a chance to examine the defendant's record to determine if the convictions are in fact defendant's, if the defendant was represented by counsel, and any other defect which would render such documents inadmissible during the presentencing phase of the trial. This purpose is not served by the similar transaction notice. Armstrong v. State, 264 Ga. 237, 442 S.E.2d 759 (1994); Boyd v. State, 230 Ga. App. 314, 497 S.E.2d 3 (1998).

Notifying defendant of evidence to be presented. — State need not provide written notice, prior to trial, of which statutory aggravating circumstances the state intends to rely upon. Roberts v. State, 252 Ga. 227, 314 S.E.2d 83, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 873, 105 S. Ct. 228, 83 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1984).

Notification of admission of driving record. — Record revealed that the Department of Public Safety records of the defendant's driving record were properly authenticated and unaltered, and that the defendant was given notice a week prior to trial that the state intended to introduce evidence of several of defendant's prior convictions for the offense of driving while under the influence of alcohol, the trial court's admission into evidence of defendant's driving record was not error. Evans v. State, 190 Ga. App. 302, 378 S.E.2d 903 (1989).

Since the state told the defendant's attorney that the attorney's client had a criminal record and gave counsel the opportunity to review that record and at the sentencing hearing offered to continue the sentencing hearing so that the defendant's attorney could review the record, the defendant did receive clear notice of the convictions and the opportunity to examine the record. Bass v. State, 208 Ga. App. 859, 432 S.E.2d 602 (1993).

Service of notice of the state's intention to introduce evidence in aggravation of punishment was timely given that the defendant was served with a copy of the notice while the jury was being selected but before the jury were sworn. Payne v. State, 219 Ga. App. 318, 464 S.E.2d 884 (1995); Thomas v. State, 224 Ga. App. 816, 482 S.E.2d 472 (1997).

Court did not err in imposing a life sentence since it was shown that the state provided the defendant with pretrial notice that the state would use evidence of prior convictions in aggravation of the defendant's sentence, and the defendant was afforded the opportunity to investigate and rebut the validity of the convictions. Woods v. State, 224 Ga. App. 52, 479 S.E.2d 414 (1996).

Defendant's contention that the defendant did not receive timely notice of the state's intention to use prior convictions was without merit since the defendant conceded that the day before trial began the state gave the defendant copies of the prior convictions the state intended to use in aggravation. Anthony v. State, 236 Ga. App. 257, 511 S.E.2d 612 (1999).

One month before trial, the state filed a notice of the state's intent to present nonstatutory aggravating circumstances involving several incidents that occurred while the defendant was in jail awaiting trial; this notice and the supplement to the witness list were not untimely. Brannan v. State, 275 Ga. 70, 561 S.E.2d 414, cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1021, 123 S. Ct. 541, 154 L. Ed. 2d 429 (2002).

Since the state served the defendant's counsel with the state's notice of intent to use a previous conviction after the jury was selected but before the jury was impaneled, the state provided clear notice of the state's intent to use the defendant's prior conviction in aggravation of sentencing as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Smith v. State, 261 Ga. App. 781, 584 S.E.2d 29 (2003).

Defendant waived appellate review of the defendant's argument that the trial court erred in considering a prior sexual battery charge at the pre-sentencing hearing because at the pre-sentencing hearing, the defendant made no objection to the use of that evidence in aggravation of punishment under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2; even if the defendant had not waived the objection and did not receive proper notice of the state's intent to introduce the prior conviction at sentencing, the argument failed because in the court's order denying the motion for new trial, the trial court specifically stated that the court did not consider the prior conviction in sentencing the defendant. Andrews v. State, 307 Ga. App. 557, 705 S.E.2d 319 (2011).

Replay of testimony is not additional evidence as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Berryhill v. State, 249 Ga. 442, 291 S.E.2d 685, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 981, 103 S. Ct. 317, 74 L. Ed. 2d 293 (1982).

Written notice of prior convictions is not required. Fox v. State, 163 Ga. App. 601, 295 S.E.2d 563 (1982); Moss v. State, 206 Ga. App. 310, 425 S.E.2d 386 (1992).

Defense counsel's awareness of defendant's prior conviction. — Failure of defense counsel to object to the admission of a prior conviction offered in aggravation of sentence without notice to the defendant before trial is reversible error if defense counsel is aware of the conviction. West v. Waters, 272 Ga. 591, 533 S.E.2d 88 (2000), overruling McDuffie v. Jones, 248 Ga. 544, 283 S.E.2d 601 (1981) and Watkins v. State, 207 Ga. App. 766, 430 S.E.2d 105 (1993).

Prosecution's obligation under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) to give the defendant notice of the prosecution's intention to introduce the defendant's criminal history at sentencing to seek aggravation of the sentence was fulfilled when the defendant's criminal history was discussed with counsel during plea negotiations. Ogle v. State, 256 Ga. App. 26, 567 S.E.2d 700 (2002).

Although the state introduced evidence of the defendant's prior conviction as an aggravation in considering the appropriate sentence to impose on the defendant, who was convicted of various drug charges and bribery, the defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the introduction of such prior conviction because the state provided the requisite prior notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) and the defendant chose not to mention to the defendant's counsel that the history was somewhat inaccurate; because the notice was sufficient, defendant's counsel was not ineffective. Hester v. State, 261 Ga. App. 614, 583 S.E.2d 274 (2003).

Statutory notice to defense attorney held sufficient. — Trial court did not err in imposing a life sentence against the defendant as: (1) the state satisfied the notice requirement under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) by providing notice to the defendant's attorney; (2) the appeals court presumed that such information was communicated to the defendant; and (3) the defendant failed to contend otherwise. Blevins v. State, 283 Ga. App. 694, 642 S.E.2d 373 (2007).

Defendant had notice thus no ineffective assistance. — Counsel's alleged failure to show the defendant a copy of the prior conviction the state used to enhance the conviction or in not asking the defendant to verify the conviction was not ineffective assistance as the record showed that the defendant was aware the state planned to use the prior conviction and that the defendant was given the relevant information about the conviction. Mayo v. State, 277 Ga. App. 282, 626 S.E.2d 245 (2006).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Counsel's failure to object to use of prior conviction to fix length of sentence. — When the trial court used the defendant's prior conviction to fix the length of the defendant's sentence for a violation of the Georgia Controlled Substances Act (Act), O.C.G.A. § 16-13-20 et seq., the defendant's failure to object to such evidence waived the trial court's error; however, as the defendant's attorney failed to object to the trial court's use of the defendant's prior conviction, the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel and was entitled to a new trial. Turner v. State, 259 Ga. App. 902, 578 S.E.2d 570 (2003).

Intent to use defendant's prior conviction at sentencing. — Because the trial court excluded defendant's prior conviction based upon a belief that the court had no discretion based on the state's failure to give notice of the state's intent to use the prior conviction as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(5), the trial court could consider the court's options under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-6 before re-sentencing. Kiser v. State, 327 Ga. App. 17, 755 S.E.2d 505 (2014).

Since defendant's counsel spoke for defendant at the sentencing hearing, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 was satisfied, and a trial court's admonition of the defendant was not a denial of the defendant's right of allocution. Blue v. State, 275 Ga. App. 671, 621 S.E.2d 616 (2005).

Trial court did not commit reversible error by failing to inform the defendant of the defendant's right to sentence review, although, this is the better procedure. Moreover, the defendant was not denied the defendant's right to speak on the defendant's own behalf during sentencing since the record showed that while the defendant's counsel spoke on the defendant's behalf during sentencing, neither the defendant nor defense counsel requested that the defendant be allowed to speak personally prior to sentencing, and after the sentence was imposed, the defendant spoke freely with the court regarding obtaining court-appointed appellate counsel. Fraser v. State, 283 Ga. App. 477, 642 S.E.2d 129 (2007), overruled in part by State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808 (2020).

Trial court did not violate the defendant's right of allocution when the trial court instructed the defendant not to interrupt its pronouncement of sentence; the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 were met when the defendant's counsel spoke on the defendant's behalf at the sentencing hearing. Habersham v. State, 289 Ga. App. 718, 658 S.E.2d 253 (2008).

Provision as to prior notice of prior convictions not applicable to misdemeanor conviction. — As O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 relates to the conduct of the presentence hearing in felony cases, if appellants were convicted of a misdemeanor, the assertion that the state's presenting of certified copies of appellant's prior convictions without prior notice to the appellant is without merit. Whisenhunt v. State, 172 Ga. App. 742, 324 S.E.2d 570 (1984).

Questioning character witnesses about offenses of which notice not given. — If the defendant objects to the district attorney's questions to the defendant's character witnesses about offenses of which the state has not given notice, the district attorney is required to demonstrate that the attorney's questions were asked in good faith, and based on reliable information that can be supported by admissible evidence. Christenson v. State, 261 Ga. 80, 402 S.E.2d 41, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 855, 112 S. Ct. 166, 116 L. Ed. 2d 130 (1991); Wellons v. State, 266 Ga. 77, 463 S.E.2d 868 (1995), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 830, 117 S. Ct. 97, 136 L. Ed. 2d 52 (1996).

Questions asked of a character witness about prior convictions were based on National Crime Information Center reports so the state was able to demonstrate that the questions were asked in good faith and were based upon reliable information. Walker v. State, 214 Ga. App. 777, 449 S.E.2d 322 (1994).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 is not applicable to juvenile disposition hearings. C.P. v. State, 167 Ga. App. 374, 306 S.E.2d 688 (1983); Moody v. State, 206 Ga. App. 387, 425 S.E.2d 397 (1992).

Misdemeanor cases. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 applies only to felony cases, not misdemeanor cases. Wyatt v. State, 179 Ga. App. 327, 346 S.E.2d 387 (1986).

State was not required to give the defendant pretrial notice of evidence in aggravation of punishment in a misdemeanor prosecution for driving under the influence. Trotter v. State, 179 Ga. App. 314, 346 S.E.2d 390 (1986).

Whether a jury is hopelessly deadlocked is an evaluation committed to the sound discretion of the trial court, subject to appellate review for an abuse of discretion. Romine v. State, 256 Ga. 521, 350 S.E.2d 446 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Court can require that defendant be sworn. — When the defendant, during a presentence hearing, offers oneself as a witness, the trial court can properly require that the defendant be sworn. Banks v. State, 131 Ga. App. 215, 205 S.E.2d 520 (1974).

Right of allocution. — Defendant was not denied the right of allocution because counsel spoke on the defendant's behalf regarding mitigation and punishment, and neither the defendant nor counsel requested that the defendant personally speak. Nash v. State, 225 Ga. App. 10, 482 S.E.2d 520 (1997).

Even assuming that the defendant had a constitutional right of allocution, the defendant was not denied such right if the defendant was afforded an opportunity to argue to the sentencing court. Murray v. State, 269 Ga. 871, 505 S.E.2d 746 (1998).

Trial court did not violate the defendant's right of allocution when the trial court instructed the defendant not to interrupt its pronouncement of sentence; the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 were met when the defendant's counsel spoke on the defendant's behalf at the sentencing hearing. Habersham v. State, 289 Ga. App. 718, 658 S.E.2d 253 (2008).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to the denial of the right to allocution as the defendant's right was not denied because, during sentencing, defense counsel made a brief statement on the defendant's behalf, describing the defendant's difficult life and upbringing, before the defendant directly addressed the trial court by informing the court of the time the defendant had already served with regard to the charges; and the trial court did not err in prohibiting the defendant from interrupting the court when the trial court was prepared to announce the court's sentence. Pepe-Frazier v. State, 331 Ga. App. 263, 770 S.E.2d 654 (2015), cert. denied, No. S15C1105, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 412 (Ga. 2015).

In a non-negotiated guilty plea to aggravated assault, aggravated battery, and reckless driving, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to withdraw the defendant's guilty plea because the trial court complied with the statutory right to allocution when the court gave counsel the opportunity to speak on behalf of the defendant; and the supreme court had rejected the argument that the right to allocution was personal and could not be satisfied by counsel's speaking on the defendant's behalf. Seagraves v. State, 339 Ga. App. 258, 793 S.E.2d 164 (2016).

Victim impact consequences. — State is not precluded from introducing evidence that is admissible for purposes other than demonstrating victim impact if that evidence also incidentally conveys that the defendant's crime had victim impact consequences. Sermons v. State, 262 Ga. 286, 417 S.E.2d 144 (1992).

Oral victim impact testimony is not controlled by the notice provision of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) and is not the type of evidence "in aggravation of sentence" contemplated by that statute. Cronan v. State, 236 Ga. App. 374, 511 S.E.2d 899 (1999).

Section does not authorize sentence greater than prescribed by law. — Even under the two-step felony procedure set forth in this section, an accused cannot receive a sentence greater than that prescribed by law for the crime for which the accused was indicted and convicted. Riggins v. Stynchcombe, 231 Ga. 589, 203 S.E.2d 208 (1974).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Maximum punishment may not be increased at election of prosecuting officers. — One cannot be indicted by a grand jury for only one offense carrying a maximum punishment, and then have that maximum punishment increased at the election of the state's prosecuting officers. Riggins v. Stynchcombe, 231 Ga. 589, 203 S.E.2d 208 (1974).

Trial under this section for crime committed before effective date. — Trial of the defendant in accordance with the provisions of this section, although the date the alleged crime was committed was prior to the effective date of that section, is not a proper ground to set aside a conviction upon a petition for writ of habeas corpus. Coleman v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 656, 193 S.E.2d 846 (1972).

Failure to conduct presentence investigation excused. — Court did not fail to conduct a presentence investigation pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a), since the record revealed that the court did inquire of the defendant and defense counsel, after the jury had been excused, whether they were ready to proceed with sentencing, counsel responded in the affirmative and the court gave every available opportunity to introduce evidence. Willey v. State, 209 Ga. App. 398, 433 S.E.2d 674 (1993).

Trial court did not err in failing to conduct a presentence investigation since the defendant was given the opportunity for an investigation and such opportunity was declined. Davis v. State, 214 Ga. App. 360, 448 S.E.2d 26 (1994); Evans v. State, 240 Ga. App. 297, 523 S.E.2d 103 (1999).

Defendant not provided a presentence report. — Failure to provide the defense with a presentence report showing the defendant's criminal record did not violate O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 since there was no evidence that the trial court relied on the report to determine the length of the sentence. Denny v. State, 226 Ga. App. 432, 486 S.E.2d 417 (1997).

Providing only summary of presentence report. — Since O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 gave the trial court discretion whether to reveal the content of the presentence report to defense counsel and the state, the trial court did not err by making available to the defendant only a summary of the defendant's prior convictions, which appeared to be the basis for the sentence, rather than the whole presentence report. Williams v. State, 254 Ga. App. 836, 563 S.E.2d 914 (2002).

Consideration of foreign pleas. — Trial court's consideration of guilty pleas and probated sentence entered into in another state jurisdiction was proper. Potts v. State, 207 Ga. App. 863, 429 S.E.2d 526 (1993).

Nolo contendere plea. — Previous plea of nolo contendere was not improperly considered in sentencing a defendant; such a plea could be considered in aggravation of punishment, and even if the plea had been improperly introduced into evidence, there was no indication that the trial court was influenced by the plea. McIntosh v. State, 287 Ga. App. 293, 651 S.E.2d 207 (2007).

Defective notice does not void sentence. — When the defendant, whose conviction had been affirmed on direct appeal, later filed a motion to correct sentence on the ground that the defendant had not received notice under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 of the state's intent to use prior convictions to seek recidivist punishment, the court lacked jurisdiction over the appeal from the denial of the motion. Defective notice did not void the sentence; rather, it was a procedural defect. Ward v. State, 299 Ga. App. 63, 682 S.E.2d 128 (2009).

Waiver of notice required for life term. — Error by the trial court in imposing a life sentence when the defendant was not given formal notice prior to trial of the state's intent to demand recidivist punishment was waived by the defendant's failure to object at the time the state introduced the defendant's prior drug conviction into evidence during the presentencing phase of the trial. Tillman v. State, 217 Ga. App. 269, 457 S.E.2d 228 (1995).

Notice requirement in seeking life sentence. — Written notice that the state intends to present evidence of prior convictions, coupled with oral notice that the state intends to seek a life sentence, satisfies the notice requirement. Washington

v. State, 238 Ga. App. 561, 519 S.E.2d 234 (1999).

Admission of any lawful evidence in penalty phase. — During the penalty phase, any lawful evidence which tends to show the motive of the defendant, the defendant's lack of remorse, the defendant's general moral character, and the defendant's predisposition to commit other crimes is admissible in aggravation, subject to the notice provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Sears v. State, 270 Ga. 834, 514 S.E.2d 426 (1999).

For purposes of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, the defendant did not show the defendant was harmed by the failure of defense counsel to request a formal presentence investigation when, at sentencing, counsel informed the court as to the defendant's lack of a prior criminal record and the defendant's exemplary behavior since the offenses. Jones v. State, 226 Ga. App. 619, 487 S.E.2d 371 (1997).

In order to prevail on a claim that the defendant's attorney rendered ineffective assistance by failing to object to the introduction of evidence in aggravation of sentencing, the defendant was required to show prejudice; because the trial court did not rely upon such evidence, the defendant was unable to establish prejudice, and the defendant's claim of error presented no basis for reversal. Autry v. State, 250 Ga. App. 107, 549 S.E.2d 769 (2001).

Mitigation evidence sufficient. — Counsel's argument that the injuries suffered by the defendant were far worse than those suffered by the victim was a sufficient argument concerning mitigation. Cross v. State, 285 Ga. App. 518, 646 S.E.2d 723 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1479, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 680 (Ga. 2007).

Bench conference on sentencing in presence of jury. — There was no error in the trial court's failure to dismiss the jury during a bench conference on sentencing since the order of argument outlined in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 was followed. Jenkins v. State, 235 Ga. App. 547, 510 S.E.2d 87 (1998).

No error on part of trial court in prohibiting defendant's remarks at inappropriate time. — With regard to a defendant's convictions on three counts of aggravated assault with intent to rob, the trial court did not err by refusing to allow the defendant to speak and to offer evidence in mitigation of the punishment at sentencing as, to the contrary, the record revealed that the trial court heard evidence in mitigation from two of the defendant's relatives, heard the arguments of defense counsel, and when the trial court asked the defendant directly if the defendant had anything to say, the defendant responded in the negative. After the trial court began to pronounce sentence, the defendant interrupted, indicating a desire to make a statement, and there was no error on the part of the trial court finding that it was too late; further, the trial court did not violate the defendant's right of allocution when the court instructed the defendant not to interrupt the court's pronouncement of sentence. Pilkington v. State, 298 Ga. App. 317, 680 S.E.2d 164 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1717, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 54 (Ga. 2010).

Cited in Ballard v. State, 131 Ga. App. 847, 207 S.E.2d 246 (1974); Moore v. State, 233 Ga. 861, 213 S.E.2d 829 (1975); Shepherd v. State, 234 Ga. 75, 214 S.E.2d 535 (1975); Adkins v. State, 134 Ga. App. 507, 215 S.E.2d 270 (1975); Arnold v. State, 134 Ga. App. 853, 216 S.E.2d 373 (1975); Ingram v. State, 134 Ga. App. 935, 216 S.E.2d 608 (1975); Heard v. State, 135 Ga. App. 685, 218 S.E.2d 866 (1975); Bradley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 865, 219 S.E.2d 451 (1975); Smokes v. State, 136 Ga. App. 8, 220 S.E.2d 39 (1975); Moss v. State, 136 Ga. App. 241, 220 S.E.2d 761 (1975); Cloud v. State, 136 Ga. App. 244, 220 S.E.2d 763 (1975); Stanley v. State, 136 Ga. App. 385, 221 S.E.2d 242 (1975); Davis v. State, 136 Ga. App. 749, 222 S.E.2d 188 (1975); Pounds v. State, 136 Ga. App. 852, 222 S.E.2d 629 (1975); Glisson v. State, 136 Ga. App. 864, 222 S.E.2d 680 (1975); McNeese v. State, 236 Ga. 26, 222 S.E.2d 318 (1976); Hudson v. State, 137 Ga. App. 439, 224 S.E.2d 48 (1976); David v. State, 137 Ga. App. 425, 224 S.E.2d 83 (1976); Heyward v. State, 236 Ga. 526, 224 S.E.2d 383 (1976); Carter v. State, 137 Ga. App. 824, 225 S.E.2d 73 (1976); Herrin v. State, 138 Ga. App. 729, 227 S.E.2d 498 (1976); Hamby v.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

State, 237 Ga. 373, 228 S.E.2d 787 (1976); Hewell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 622, 229 S.E.2d 92 (1976); Fair v. State, 140 Ga. App. 281, 231 S.E.2d 1 (1976); Byrd v. Hopper, 537 F.2d 1303 (5th Cir. 1976); Chaplin v. State, 141 Ga. App. 788, 234 S.E.2d 330 (1977); Gill v. State, 141 Ga. App. 823, 234 S.E.2d 665 (1977); Blake v. State, 239 Ga. 292, 236 S.E.2d 637 (1977); Stewart v. State, 239 Ga. 588, 238 S.E.2d 540 (1977); Lewis v. State, 239 Ga. 732, 238 S.E.2d 892 (1977); Boyer v. State, 240 Ga. 170, 240 S.E.2d 68 (1977); Richardson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 416, 240 S.E.2d 917 (1977); Brown v. State, 144 Ga. App. 509, 241 S.E.2d 621 (1978); Moore v. State, 240 Ga. 807, 243 S.E.2d 1 (1978); Spraggins v. State, 240 Ga. 759, 243 S.E.2d 20 (1978); Thomas v. State, 145 Ga. App. 69, 243 S.E.2d 250 (1978); Bradshaw v. State, 145 Ga. App. 664, 244 S.E.2d 600 (1978); Favors v. State, 145 Ga. App. 864, 244 S.E.2d 902 (1978); Ramsey v. State, 241 Ga. 426, 246 S.E.2d 190 (1978); Thomas v. State, 146 Ga. App. 501, 246 S.E.2d 498 (1978); Key v. State, 147 Ga. App. 800, 250 S.E.2d 527 (1978); Sprouse v. State, 242 Ga. 831, 252 S.E.2d 173 (1979); Fleming v. State, 243 Ga. 120, 252 S.E.2d 609 (1979); Collins v. State, 243 Ga. 291, 253 S.E.2d 729 (1979); Melton v. State, 149 Ga. App. 506, 254 S.E.2d 732 (1979); Amerson v. Zant, 243 Ga. 509, 255 S.E.2d 34 (1979); Legare v. State, 243 Ga. 744, 257 S.E.2d 247 (1979); Corn v. Hopper, 244 Ga. 28, 257 S.E.2d 533 (1979); Bowden v. Zant, 244 Ga. 260, 260 S.E.2d 465 (1979); Turner v. State, 151 Ga. App. 631, 260 S.E.2d 756 (1979); Almon v. State, 151 Ga. App. 863, 261 S.E.2d 772 (1979); Newton v. State, 154 Ga. App. 98, 267 S.E.2d 641 (1980); Moret v. State, 246 Ga. 5, 268 S.E.2d 635 (1980); Morrison v. State, 155 Ga. App. 234, 270 S.E.2d 397 (1980); Brown v. State, 246 Ga. 251, 271 S.E.2d 163 (1980); Goodrum v. State, 158 Ga. App. 602, 281 S.E.2d 254 (1981); Jackson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 702, 282 S.E.2d 181 (1981); Peavy v. State, 159 Ga. App. 280, 283 S.E.2d 346 (1981); Varnes v. State, 159 Ga. App. 452, 283 S.E.2d 673 (1981); Fowler v. State, 159 Ga. App. 496, 283 S.E.2d 710 (1981); Godfrey v. State, 248 Ga. 616, 284 S.E.2d 422 (1981); Garland v. State, 160 Ga. App. 97, 286 S.E.2d 330 (1981); Hall v. State, 160 Ga. App. 508, 287 S.E.2d 223 (1981); Richards v. State, 160 Ga. App. 489, 287 S.E.2d 394 (1981); Wooten v. State, 160 Ga. App. 747, 288 S.E.2d 94 (1981); Smith v. Balkcom, 660 F.2d 573 (5th Cir. 1981); McCorquodale v. Balkcom, 525 F. Supp. 408 (N.D. Ga. 1981); Howard v. State, 161 Ga. App. 743, 289 S.E.2d 815 (1982); Williams v. State, 162 Ga. App. 120, 290 S.E.2d 341 (1982); Arnold v. State, 163 Ga. App. 94, 292 S.E.2d 891 (1982); Buttrum v. State, 249 Ga. 652, 293 S.E.2d 334 (1982); Arnold v. State, 163 Ga. App. 10, 293 S.E.2d 501 (1982); Monroe v. State, 249 Ga. 832, 295 S.E.2d 512 (1982); Zant v. Stephens, 250 Ga. 97, 297 S.E.2d 1 (1982); Lewis v. State, 164 Ga. App. 339, 297 S.E.2d 303 (1982); Young v. Zant, 677 F.2d 792 (11th Cir. 1982); Goodwin v. Balkcom, 684 F.2d 794 (11th Cir. 1982); Mitchell v. Hopper, 538 F. Supp. 77 (S.D. Ga. 1982); Mincey v. State, 251 Ga. 255, 304 S.E.2d 882 (1983); Raymond v. State, 168 Ga. App. 487, 309 S.E.2d 669 (1983); Moore v. Zant, 722 F.2d 640 (11th Cir. 1983); Mitchell v. Hopper, 564 F. Supp. 780 (S.D. Ga. 1983); Parker v. State, 170 Ga. App. 295, 316 S.E.2d 855 (1984); Saine v. State, 170 Ga. App. 610, 317 S.E.2d 650 (1984); Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984); Johnson v. Kemp, 585 F. Supp. 1496 (S.D. Ga. 1984); Devier v. State, 253 Ga. 604, 323 S.E.2d 150 (1984); Ross v. State, 254 Ga. 22, 326 S.E.2d 194 (1985); Walker v. State, 254 Ga. 149, 327 S.E.2d 475 (1985); Wright v. State, 255 Ga. 109, 335 S.E.2d 857 (1985); Mitchell v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 886 (11th Cir. 1985); Brooks v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 1383 (11th Cir. 1985); Drake v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 1449 (11th Cir. 1985); Rielli v. State, 174 Ga. App. 220, 330 S.E.2d 104 (1985); Etchison v. State, 175 Ga. App. 723, 334 S.E.2d 324 (1985); Beck v. State, 255 Ga. 483, 340 S.E.2d 9 (1986); Cook v. State, 255 Ga. 565, 340 S.E.2d 843 (1986); Davis v. State, 255 Ga. 598, 340 S.E.2d 869 (1986); Green v. State, 178 Ga. App. 203, 342 S.E.2d 386 (1986); Black v. State, 179 Ga. App. 170, 345 S.E.2d 678 (1986); McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262 (1987); Quick v. State, 256 Ga. 780, 353 S.E.2d 497 (1987);

Darty v. State, 188 Ga. App. 447, 373 S.E.2d 389 (1988); Nobles v. State, 191 Ga. App. 594, 382 S.E.2d 637 (1989); Hunter v. State, 192 Ga. App. 675, 385 S.E.2d 764 (1989); Giles v. State, 193 Ga. App. 93, 387 S.E.2d 5 (1989); Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268 (N.D. Ga. 1989); Spencer v. State, 260 Ga. 640, 398 S.E.2d 179 (1990); Anderson v. State, 199 Ga. App. 559, 405 S.E.2d 558 (1991); Mattarochia v. State, 200 Ga. App. 681, 409 S.E.2d 546 (1991); Franklin v. State, 201 Ga. App. 147, 410 S.E.2d 451 (1991); Mays v. State, 262 Ga. 90, 414 S.E.2d 481 (1992); Hill v. State, 263 Ga. 37, 427 S.E.2d 770 (1993).

Judicial Sentencing for Felonies

Purpose. — Purpose of subsection (a) of this section is to allow a defendant to examine the defendant's record to determine if the convictions are in fact defendant's, if the defendant was represented by counsel, and any other defect which would render such documents inadmissible during the presentencing phase of the trial. Adams v. State, 142 Ga. App. 252, 235 S.E.2d 667 (1977); Herring v. State, 238 Ga. 288, 232 S.E.2d 826 (1977); Black v. State, 146 Ga. App. 226, 246 S.E.2d 133 (1978); Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666 (1980); Williams v. State, 162 Ga. App. 680, 292 S.E.2d 560 (1982); Johnson v. State, 171 Ga. App. 851, 321 S.E.2d 402 (1984); Wyatt v. State, 179 Ga. App. 327, 346 S.E.2d 387 (1986); Bacon v. State, 188 Ga. App. 782, 374 S.E.2d 351 (1988).

Recidivism evidence used to enhance sentence. — Trial court may impose a higher degree of punishment for an offense due to evidence in aggravation of the punishment and not have sentenced the defendant under a recidivist statute when the defendant was never indicted under a recidivist statute. Williams v. State, 208 Ga. App. 716, 431 S.E.2d 469 (1993).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to an eight-year sentence on a burglary offense because the defendant was incorrect that the maximum permissible sentence for that offense was five years as certified copies of prior burglary convictions were presented and the trial court properly sentenced the defendant as a recidivist. Martin v. State, 349 Ga. App. 656, 825 S.E.2d 227 (2019).

"Jury verdict" includes verdict returned by any trier of fact. — Reference to a "jury verdict" in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) includes a verdict returned by any trier of fact. Thus, in a bench trial, the court has the authority to consider the defendant's prior conviction in aggravation when the state has given the defendant notice before trial of the state's intent to use the conviction in aggravation. Edwards v. State, 260 Ga. 121, 390 S.E.2d 580 (1990).

Use of plea bargain. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) did not operate to bar the trial court from relying on one of the cocaine charges to which the defendant pled guilty in a guilty plea hearing in order to impose an enhanced mandatory life sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d) for the second sale of cocaine charge to which the defendant pled guilty at the same hearing. Plea bargain negotiations can serve the same purpose as the giving of notice under subsection (a) of that section and when plea bargain negotiations are conducted, the defendant can be given "clear notice" of what the state intends to rely upon in aggravation of sentencing at the guilty plea hearing. Martin v. State, 207 Ga. App. 861, 429 S.E.2d 332 (1993).

Defendant's claim that the trial court erred in sentencing the defendant after accepting a negotiated plea in the absence of the presentence hearing required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 lacked merit because the section does not reach sentencing following guilty pleas; the terms of that section apply only in those cases in which sentence is imposed after a jury trial, a bench trial, or probation revocation proceedings for a first offender. Gilbert v. State, 245 Ga. App. 544, 538 S.E.2d 104 (2000).

Discovery in presentence hearings in both capital and noncapital cases is governed by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. The Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., does not apply. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Presentence hearing discovery misconduct. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant's trial counsel failing to object to the state failing to provide notice of the state's intent to use a prior conviction in aggravation of sentencing because the defendant could not show that the outcome of sentencing would have been different. Soler v. State, 354 Ga. App. 93, 840 S.E.2d 169 (2020).

Judicial Sentencing for Felonies (Cont'd)

No right to jury at presentence hearing. — There was no reason to retain the jury for a presentence hearing since there was no discretion in determining the length of the defendant's sentence, the possibility of parole, or the possibility of probation. Howard v. State, 233 Ga. App. 724, 505 S.E.2d 768 (1998), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669 (2003).

Trial court did not err in dismissing the jury over the defendant's objection during the sentencing phase of trial because the state presented evidence of the defendant's prior conviction on two counts of armed robbery. Thus, the sentence in the case was mandatory, although the trial judge was given discretion to probate or suspend the sentence, and the trial judge could determine the sentence without a jury. Shields v. State, 264 Ga. App. 232, 590 S.E.2d 217 (2003).

Before this section was enacted, defendants were not absolutely entitled to a sentence imposed by jury. Zarick v. State, 134 Ga. App. 548, 215 S.E.2d 311 (1975).

No right to jury-imposed sentence even if the law at time of offense. — There does not accrue to a defendant a substantial right to have the defendant's sentence imposed by a jury because such was the law at the time of the offense. Jones v. State, 233 Ga. 662, 212 S.E.2d 832 (1975).

Fact that the offenses occurred before July 1, 1974, the date this section became effective, does not entitle the defendant to a jury sentence when the trial was conducted after that date. DeLoach v. State, 142 Ga. App. 666, 236 S.E.2d 904 (1977).

There is no error in trial court, rather than jury, sentencing defendant. Daniel v. State, 248 Ga. 271, 282 S.E.2d 314 (1981).

Judge, not jury, determines sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 and failure to give a charge with regard to sentencing matters is not error. Lewis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 575, 281 S.E.2d 318 (1981).

This section made judicial sentencing in noncapital felony cases mandatory. Bailey v. State, 138 Ga. App. 807, 227 S.E.2d 516 (1976).

Section allows judge to fix sentence in noncapital cases. — This section allowed the trial judge to fix the sentence in a case in which the death penalty cannot be given. Fleming v. State, 236 Ga. 434, 224 S.E.2d 15 (1976).

Since trial court was required to fix and impose a sentence on the defendant because the defendant was not being sentenced to death or life imprisonment without parole, the trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant on the defendant's convictions for robbery and aggravated assault; accordingly, the defendant's sentence was not void. Daniel v. State, 262 Ga. App. 474, 585 S.E.2d 752 (2003).

Section repeals provision for recommendation by sentencing jury of misdemeanor punishment. — Enactment of this section, which provided for imposition of punishment by the judge in all cases except those in which the death penalty might be imposed, had been construed to repeal by implication the provisions of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1249, dealing with recommendation of punishment as for misdemeanor by the jury that determines sentence. Tucker v. State, 136 Ga. App. 456, 221 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

No case in which jury imposed sentence in noncapital case. — No cases have been found wherein the jury had been authorized to impose the sentence in a noncapital felony case under this section. Dent v. State, 136 Ga. App. 366, 221 S.E.2d 228 (1975).

In noncapital cases, jury cannot even recommend sentence. — Judge has the sole power to determine the punishment and there is no provision except in capital cases for a jury that determines the sentence to make any recommendations as to sentence. Winslow v. State, 135 Ga. App. 776, 219 S.E.2d 21 (1975).

Failure to charge jury that jury might recommend punishment not error. — Under this section, it was not error to fail to charge that the jury might recommend that the defendant could be punished as for a misdemeanor. Henderson v. State, 141 Ga. App. 430, 233 S.E.2d 505 (1977).

It is error to instruct jury as to possible sentence in felony case before the jury has determined the question of guilt or innocence. Lewis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 575, 281 S.E.2d 318 (1981).

Recidivism not jury issue. — Since recidivism is an issue only in the sentencing phase of a trial, it follows that the defendant has no right to a jury determination of this issue. LaPalme v. State, 169 Ga. App. 540, 313 S.E.2d 729 (1984); Gary v. State, 186 Ga. App. 231, 366 S.E.2d 833 (1988).

Trial court erred in charging the jury relative to recidivism; the issue of recidivism is considered only in the sentencing phase of a trial. Hanson v. State, 196 Ga. App. 589, 396 S.E.2d 510 (1990).

Prior convictions admissible in sentencing phase. — Trial court did not err when the court allowed the state to introduce evidence of the defendant's prior record of convictions during the sentencing phase of the trial. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 865, 104 S. Ct. 199, 78 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1983).

Defendant was not improperly sentenced under the general recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), as the defendant was served with notice that certified copies of the defendant's three prior felony convictions would be used against the defendant in sentencing as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a); once the convictions were offered, the trial court was authorized to sentence the defendant under § 17-10-7. Walker v. State, 268 Ga. App. 669, 602 S.E.2d 351 (2004).

Since the defendant failed to object to the introduction of the defendant's prior convictions at the presentence hearing, the defendant waived any arguments the defendant may have had as to that evidence on appeal; additionally, while two of the defendant's prior convictions were entered from guilty pleas made on the same day, the convictions arose from distinct offenses charged in two different indictments and, thus, the trial court properly considered the convictions for sentencing purposes. Milton v. State, 272 Ga. App. 908, 614 S.E.2d 140 (2005).

Because defense counsel received oral notice under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 months before trial that the state would seek recidivist punishment and counsel reviewed the defendant's prior convictions, the defendant was properly sentenced. Maddox v. State, 278 Ga. App. 191, 628 S.E.2d 625 (2006).

In an action in which the defendant was convicted of shoplifting as a felon in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C), there was no requirement that the prior convictions upon which the conviction and sentence were based be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, as there was an exception under Apprendi for such prior convictions based upon the general principle that prior convictions were generally already proved beyond a reasonable doubt; further, there was no due process violation under U.S. Const., amend. 14 because the defendant received notice of the state's intent to use the prior convictions for sentencing and the defendant had an opportunity to challenge the convictions pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a). Redd v. State, 281 Ga. App. 272, 635 S.E.2d 870 (2006).

Admission of the defendant's prior convictions during the sentencing phase was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt because the victim of the prior crimes supported the defense's arguments that the defendant had always been quick to admit the defendant's violent acts and that those acts were the result of the defendant's alcoholism, and it undermined the state's attempt to show that the defendant had exhibited a pattern of committing domestic abuse and of financial dependence on women; there was overwhelming evidence of the statutory aggravating circumstances supporting the death penalty in the case, and the jury was authorized to consider the similar transaction evidence at the sentencing phase. Arrington v. State, 286 Ga. 335, 687 S.E.2d 438 (2009), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 112, 178 L. Ed. 2d 69 (U.S. 2010).

Judicial Sentencing for Felonies (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant as a recidivist because the defendant failed to rebut the presumption of regularity and failed to object to the form of the evidence of the prior convictions at the pre-sentence hearing and, thus, failed to preserve the issue for review on appeal; the state served the defendant with a list of evidence in aggravation of sentencing and specifically invoked the statutory recidivist sentencing provisions, and at the pre-sentence hearing, the trial court had copies of the prior convictions, but defense counsel never objected to the consideration of any of the listed offenses or argued that the state was required to introduce the prior convictions into evidence. Wells v. State, 313 Ga. App. 528, 722 S.E.2d 133 (2012).

Prior convictions inadmissible. — In sentencing the defendant for child molestation, the trial court erred in considering the defendant's prior misdemeanor convictions for solicitation of sodomy and obscene language. Sanders v. State, 230 Ga. App. 176, 495 S.E.2d 653 (1998).

Dismissal of jury not mandatory and failure to dismiss not error. — Language that the trial judge "shall dismiss the jury" is directory only and is for the sole purpose of permitting the jury to disburse and not require the jury to remain in a jury box during the progress of the presentence hearing. Any failure on the part of the trial judge to dismiss the jury at this stage of the proceeding, if an error, does not in any way affect the indictment, trial, and conviction of the defendant, and if an error, is one of which the defendant has no right to complain. Whitley v. State, 137 Ga. App. 245, 223 S.E.2d 279 (1976); Ellis v. State, 137 Ga. App. 834, 224 S.E.2d 799 (1976).

Error not harmless when sentence review precluded by fact that jury imposed sentence. — When the sentence was for more than five years, it cannot be held harmless error for the defendant to have been denied the right to sentencing by the judge, rather than a jury, in view of the provisions of former Code 1933, § 27-2511.1 (former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6) for review of the sentence by a three-judge panel. Such review would be denied the appellant unless the appellant is sentenced by the judge in accordance with former Code 1933, § 27-2503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2). Wheeless v. State, 135 Ga. App. 406, 218 S.E.2d 88 (1975).

Notice of intent to present evidence must be given before trial. — If notice of intent to present evidence was not given until before opening statements to the jury, notice was not given as O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 requires, before trial, since that section requires that notice be given before trial and jeopardy attaches when the jury is sworn. Sinkfield v. State, 262 Ga. 239, 416 S.E.2d 288 (1992).

Notice of prior felony convictions required. — Notice of prior felony convictions for discretionary sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 is required before the convictions can be admitted in evidence in aggravation of punishment. Armstrong v. State, 209 Ga. App. 796, 434 S.E.2d 560 (1993).

Imposition of life sentence based on prior conviction inappropriate. — In a prosecution for selling a controlled substance, imposition of a life sentence was improper since the state notified the defendant of the state's intent to use previous drug convictions as similar transactions evidence but did not inform the defendant of the state's intent to use the prior convictions in seeking the mandatory life sentence. Miller v. State, 219 Ga. App. 284, 464 S.E.2d 860 (1995).

Disclosure statements contained in the state's notice of the state's intent to seek recidivist punishment in combination with the Georgia Crime Information Center report constituted proper notice of the defendant's prior convictions to be used in aggravation of punishment; thus, the notice at issue was not defective. Defendant's conviction on count one of the indictment was the second conviction for violating O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(b), selling a controlled substance; therefore, the trial court was not prohibited from sentencing the defendant under both O.C.G.A. §§ 16-13-30(d) and 17-10-7(c). Johnson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 452, 576 S.E.2d 911 (2003).

If evidence not introduced, counsel not ineffective for not objecting. — In a prosecution for selling marijuana and possessing marijuana with the intent to distribute, given that the state conceded that the state failed to file notice regarding the state's intent to introduce a prior conviction and such evidence was not introduced, defense counsel could not be found ineffective for failing to object to the introduction of the prior conviction. Allen v. State, 280 Ga. App. 663, 634 S.E.2d 831 (2006).

Notice of intent to consider aggravating circumstances ruled inadmissible in determining guilt. — When the trial court intends to consider matters in aggravation that were ruled inadmissible during the guilt-innocence phase of the trial, the court must inform defense counsel and the prosecution of the plans in this regard before the presentence hearing. Absent such notice from the trial court judge, the defense and the prosecution cannot adequately prepare their cases or summon their witnesses for the presentence hearing. Dorsey v. Willis, 242 Ga. 316, 249 S.E.2d 28 (1978).

Commitment to reconsider sentence not equivalent to promise to reduce. — Trial court's commitment to reconsider the defendant's sentence upon consideration of further information was no promise that the defendant's sentence would be reduced, or if the sentence were not, that the plea could be withdrawn. Brooks v. State, 177 Ga. App. 12, 338 S.E.2d 437 (1985).

Presentence probation reports may not be considered in fixing length of sentence. — This section did not permit presentence probation reports to be considered by the trial judge in fixing the length of the sentence. Benefield v. State, 140 Ga. App. 727, 232 S.E.2d 89 (1976); Mills v. State, 244 Ga. 186, 259 S.E.2d 445 (1979).

Presentencing report cannot be used in aggravation in determining sentence; when it is clear from the statements of the trial court that the presentencing report was used to aggravate the sentence, the sentence must be reversed and the case returned for resentencing. Rampley v. State, 166 Ga. App. 521, 304 S.E.2d 574 (1983).

Presentence probation reports are not evidence at presentence hearing. — Information in presentence probation reports cannot be regarded as evidence either in aggravation or in mitigation as such reports are not a part of the evidence introduced at the presentence hearing. Benefield v. State, 140 Ga. App. 727, 232 S.E.2d 89 (1976).

Presentence probation reports may be considered in deciding whether to suspend or probate sentence. Mills v. State, 244 Ga. 186, 259 S.E.2d 445 (1979).

Disclosure of contents of presentence probation report is in court's discretion. — It is in the sound discretion of the trial judge whether to reveal the content of the probation officer's report to counsel for the accused and for the state. Munsford v. State, 235 Ga. 38, 218 S.E.2d 792 (1975).

Since this section did not require the content of a presentence probation report to be shared with counsel, it is in the sound discretion of the trial judge whether to reveal the content of the report to counsel for the accused and for the state. Benefield v. State, 140 Ga. App. 727, 232 S.E.2d 89 (1976).

While nothing in the Code requires the contents of presentence investigative reports to be made known to counsel, the trial court nonetheless should exercise sound discretion as to whether to reveal the contents of such reports to counsel for the defendant and for the state. Dorsey v. Willis, 242 Ga. 316, 249 S.E.2d 28 (1978).

Notice to defense counsel of matters in probation report adverse to defendant. — If a presentence probation officer's report contains any matter adverse to the defendant and likely to influence the decision to suspend or probate the sentence, that information should be revealed to defense counsel by the trial judge in advance of the presentence hearing to give the accused an opportunity for explanation or rebuttal. Munsford v. State, 235 Ga. 38, 218 S.E.2d 792 (1975); Benefield v. State, 140 Ga. App. 727, 232

Judicial Sentencing for Felonies (Cont'd)

S.E.2d 89 (1976); Dorsey v. Willis, 242 Ga. 316, 249 S.E.2d 28 (1978).

Whether or not to order a probation report is a matter within the discretion of the trial court. Galloway v. State, 165 Ga. App. 536, 301 S.E.2d 894 (1983).

Evidence brought out without objection. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 does not apply if evidence contained in presentence reports has been brought out without objection during trial, and the appellate court cannot review the procedure used in a presentence hearing if the defendant did not object. Moss v. State, 159 Ga. App. 317, 283 S.E.2d 275 (1981).

Requirement of pretrial notice of evidence inapplicable. — Requirement for pretrial notice of evidence in aggravation did not apply to a sentence of life imprisonment imposed pursuant to a plea agreement. Powell v. State, 229 Ga. App. 52, 494 S.E.2d 200 (1997).

Plea waived pretrial notice of evidence requirement. — Requirement for pretrial notice of evidence in aggravation for purposes of sentencing was waived by the defendant's decision to enter a plea and accept a negotiated sentence. Powell v. State, 229 Ga. App. 52, 494 S.E.2d 200 (1997).

Rescheduling of hearing not required. — Trial judge was not required to reschedule a pre-sentence hearing to allow the defendant an opportunity to possibly present witnesses. Scott v. State, 213 Ga. App. 84, 444 S.E.2d 96 (1994).

Defendant's request for presentence investigation properly denied. — Since the trial court denied the defendant's request for a presentence investigation on the basis that the court had heard character witnesses and testimony as to family conditions and the defendant's work record and, therefore, the court believed that any additional information would be of little help, there was no abuse of discretion in denying the request. Galloway v. State, 165 Ga. App. 536, 301 S.E.2d 894 (1983).

Denial of request for presentence report when mitigating evidence not presented. — If a criminal defendant was present during the sentencing phase of the defendant's trial and was afforded every opportunity to present evidence in extenuation or mitigation of punishment, but did not do so, and the trial judge denied the defendant's request for a presentence investigation there was no abuse of discretion in so doing. Thompson v. State, 195 Ga. App. 18, 392 S.E.2d 732 (1990).

Probation report not admissible to determine length of sentence. — Trial court is authorized under O.C.G.A. §§ 42-8-29 and 42-8-34 to consider investigative reports prepared by probation officers for the purpose of deciding whether to suspend or probate all or part of the defendant's sentence, but the court cannot use the reports to determine the length of the sentence. Williams v. State, 165 Ga. App. 553, 301 S.E.2d 908 (1983).

Use of presentence report to increase sentence not shown. — If the transcript of the trial does not affirmatively show that the trial court used the presentence reports for the unlawful purpose of increasing the sentence, rather than for the lawful purpose of determining whether to grant probation, no cause for reversal is shown. Jones v. State, 165 Ga. App. 180, 300 S.E.2d 534 (1983); White v. State, 179 Ga. App. 526, 347 S.E.2d 6 (1986).

While the trial judge is authorized to consider presentence investigative reports for the limited purpose of determining whether to probate all or part of a defendant's sentence, the judge is not authorized to consider such reports in aggravation of punishment. Jones v. State, 165 Ga. App. 180, 300 S.E.2d 534 (1983).

Comparison of reports under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 with reports made for probation purposes. — Reports under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34 are more diverse in the type of information the reports may contain since the reports are used only in determining the question of suspension or probation of sentence and need not be shown to counsel, but reports under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 are more restrictive and must be shown to counsel before trial. Moss v. State, 159 Ga. App. 317, 283 S.E.2d 275 (1981).

Second conviction for sale of cocaine results in sentence of imprisonment for life, even if the prior offense is not set out in the indictment, if the state complies with the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a), which provides that only such evidence in aggravation as the state has made known to the defendant prior to the defendant's trial shall be admissible. State v. Hendrixson, 251 Ga. 853, 310 S.E.2d 526 (1984).

The notice requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) applies to mandating life sentences imposed under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d). Moss v. State, 206 Ga. App. 310, 425 S.E.2d 386 (1992).

Crimes part of res gestae may be considered. — Defendant urged that crimes for which the defendant had not been convicted were improperly considered by the trial court in imposing the sentences, but the "other crimes" considered by the trial court were a part of the res gestae of the very crimes for which the defendant was to be sentenced; therefore, there was no error. White v. State, 179 Ga. App. 526, 347 S.E.2d 6 (1986).

Sentencing for noncapital offense prior to trial for capital offense. — Trial court did not err by refusing to sentence the defendant for the noncapital felony offenses of which the defendant was convicted before the commencement of the sentencing phase of the defendant's trial for murder. Holiday v. State, 258 Ga. 393, 369 S.E.2d 241, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 934, 109 S. Ct. 329, 102 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1988).

Date of prior offense not controlling. — Fact that the defendant's prior conviction was for the commission of a crime more than ten years previously did not render the conviction inadmissible in the sentencing hearing since the date that the prior offenses were committed does not control. Day v. State, 188 Ga. App. 648, 374 S.E.2d 87 (1988), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Certified copy of prior conviction. — Although a certified copy of the defendant's prior conviction may not have been attached to the pretrial notice, this would not serve to render inadmissible the certified copy that was subsequently tendered at the sentencing hearing. Day v. State, 188 Ga. App. 648, 374 S.E.2d 87 (1988), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018).

Timely notice. — Receipt by defendant's counsel, prior to jury selection, of notice of the state's intent to use a prior conviction in aggravation of any sentences imposed in the case was timely notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Day v. State, 188 Ga. App. 648, 374 S.E.2d 87 (1988), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018); Godfrey v. State, 227 Ga. App. 576, 489 S.E.2d 364 (1997).

Continuance. — Failure to move for a continuance precluded the defendant from asserting that defense counsel was not afforded ample opportunity to investigate the admissibility of the prior conviction as evidence in aggravation of the sentences imposed. Day v. State, 188 Ga. App. 648, 374 S.E.2d 87 (1988), overruled on other grounds by Willis v. State, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640 (2018); Godfrey v. State, 227 Ga. App. 576, 489 S.E.2d 364 (1997).

Multiple life sentences run concurrently if jury does not otherwise specify. — When the jury does not specify that two life sentences are to be served consecutively, the trial court can only provide for the sentences to run concurrently. Anglin v. State, 244 Ga. 1, 257 S.E.2d 513 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573 (1985).

Court may not make sentence run consecutively with other sentence absent jury authorization. — Trial court is not empowered to impose the jury's sentence to run consecutively to any other sentence that the defendant may be serving, absent express authorization to this effect by the jury. McHugh v. State, 134 Ga. App. 758, 216 S.E.2d 351 (1975).

Consecutive sentencing. — Trial judge errs in imposing the jury's sentence to be computed after the expiration of a preexisting sentence in another county since the jury did not provide that such sentences were to run consecutively. McHugh v. State, 134 Ga. App. 758, 216 S.E.2d 351 (1975).

Judicial Sentencing for Felonies (Cont'd)

If the indictment charges murder, but a manslaughter verdict is returned, the court errs if the court leaves the sentence-making feature of the case to a jury. Lindsey v. State, 135 Ga. App. 122, 218 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

New trial as to sentence if sentence reversed on appeal. — New trial on the sentence can be held before a new jury if the jury that convicted the accused also sentenced the accused to death, and the sentence was reversed on appeal because of some error that infected the sentence. In such a situation, there can be a remand for a new trial as to the sentence only. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 557, 229 S.E.2d 376 (1976).

Evidence relating to guilt or innocence is relevant to sentence. Romine v. State, 256 Ga. 521, 350 S.E.2d 446 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Court may consider evidence from guilt-innocence phase at presentence hearing. — Although this section required the trial court to conduct a presentence hearing, during which the court was required to hear additional evidence in extenuation, mitigation, and aggravation of punishment, this did not mean that the court must exclude from the court's consideration the facts and circumstances of the crime as revealed to the court by evidence properly admitted during the guilt-innocence phase of the trial. Dorsey v. Willis, 242 Ga. 316, 249 S.E.2d 28 (1978).

Defendant must object when not notified of evidence in aggravation. — Mandatory provision of this section that in presentence hearings only such evidence in aggravation as the state has made known to the defendant prior to the defendant's trial shall be admissible does not apply since the evidence had been brought out without objection during the trial. Mitchell v. State, 136 Ga. App. 390, 221 S.E.2d 465 (1975).

Date of prior conviction, not offense, determines whether judge may consider it. — Date that prior offenses are committed does not control whether the offenses may be considered under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a). The controlling date is the date of entry of the judgment of conviction and sentence, or date of entry of the plea of guilty, or of nolo contendere. Clark v. State, 146 Ga. App. 799, 247 S.E.2d 489 (1978).

Judicial notice of prior conviction in own court. — Trial judge may not judicially note a prior conviction in the judge's own court without compliance with this section. Paschal v. State, 139 Ga. App. 842, 229 S.E.2d 795 (1976); Chandler v. State, 143 Ga. App. 608, 239 S.E.2d 158 (1977); Canady v. State, 147 Ga. App. 640, 249 S.E.2d 690 (1978).

Sufficiency of notice that previous convictions will be introduced. — Clear notice that previous convictions will be introduced at the trial of an accused is required. A notice given prior to a former trial would not be clear notice that the sentences would be introduced at a subsequent de novo trial. Hewell v. State, 238 Ga. 578, 234 S.E.2d 497 (1977); Collins v. State, 145 Ga. App. 341, 243 S.E.2d 716 (1978); Cline v. State, 178 Ga. App. 470, 343 S.E.2d 506 (1986); Beecher v. State, 240 Ga. App. 457, 523 S.E.2d 54 (1999).

Sentence voided by use of prior convictions absent proof of assistance of counsel or waiver. — Presuming counsel or waiver of counsel from a silent record is impermissible; evidence of prior convictions which fails to disclose assistance of counsel or an intelligent and understanding waiver thereof is illegal, and the admission in evidence at the presentence hearing of such illegal evidence voids the sentence, even in the absence of objection. Harrison v. State, 136 Ga. App. 71, 220 S.E.2d 77 (1975).

Error to consider prior convictions not made known to defendant and obtained without counsel. — It was error for the trial judge to consider prior convictions in aggravation of punishment when the prior convictions were not made known to the defendant prior to trial and when there was no showing that the defendant had the benefit of counsel or had waived the right to counsel. Van Voltenburg v. State, 138 Ga. App. 628, 227 S.E.2d 451 (1976).

Judge may consider crimes committed after arrest and before trial. — Under this section, the trial judge in noncapital cases conducts the presentence hearing and may hear evidence including the record of any prior criminal convictions. Considering that a jury is not involved, this language is broad enough to include the conviction and sentence for a crime committed after the crime for which the defendant is on trial, but prior to the trial in which the sentencing hearing is being conducted. Wallace v. State, 134 Ga. App. 708, 215 S.E.2d 703 (1975).

Court may not consider mere rumors as to defendant's conduct. — Trial court is not authorized by the presentence hearing statute to consider in aggravation mere rumors concerning the conduct of the defendant. Dorsey v. Willis, 242 Ga. 316, 249 S.E.2d 28 (1978).

Trial court may properly consider a defendant's conduct during trial in considering whether to suspend or probate all of the sentence, and such a consideration does not come within the restrictions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Williams v. State, 165 Ga. App. 553, 301 S.E.2d 908 (1983).

Denial of defendant's right to notice of introduction of aggravating evidence cognizable in habeas corpus proceeding. — Denial of the defendant's right under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 to be informed prior to trial that aggravating evidence would be introduced at the sentencing phase of the trial is a denial of the defendant's rights under the laws of this state, albeit not a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights, and is therefore cognizable in a habeas corpus proceeding according to the habeas corpus statute. McDuffie v. Jones, 248 Ga. 544, 283 S.E.2d 601 (1981), overruled on other grounds, West v. Waters, 272 Ga. 591, 533 S.E.2d 88 (2000).

Use of inadmissible report during sentencing. — When the defendant complained that the state's cross-examination of the defendant's mother at the sentencing phase of the trial incorporated a report from the Department of Family and Children Services that was inadmissible as a consequence of the state's noncompliance with the notice provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2, it was held that even if the cross-examination was based in part on the report (and not just the defendant's prior terroristic threat conviction), and even if there was not sufficient compliance with that Code section respecting this report to allow the state to use the report in the state's case-in-chief, the state's use of this report to rebut the mother's direct testimony was not barred by that Code section. Wade v. State, 258 Ga. 324, 368 S.E.2d 482 (1988), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 112 S. Ct. 941, 117 L. Ed. 2d 111 (1992).

No notice requirement as to evidence introduced by defendant. — Only such evidence in aggravation that the state has made known to the defendant prior to the defendant's trial is admissible. No such limitation is placed on the evidence that the defendant may introduce. Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 644, 220 S.E.2d 922 (1975).

All aspects of defendant's crime, character, and attitude are admissible, subject to the applicable rules of evidence regarding reliability, to guide the fact-finder in determining an appropriate sentence. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Evidence of prior record or other criminal acts. — Under this section, the record of any prior criminal convictions of a defendant, if made known to the defendant prior to the trial, was admissible. Stephens v. Hopper, 241 Ga. 596, 247 S.E.2d 92, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 667 (1978).

During the presentence hearing, the state, subject to notice limitations, is allowed to place the defendant's character in issue through the defendant's prior record or other criminal acts. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

In accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2, the trial court is authorized during the pre-sentence hearing to consider evidence in aggravation of punishment, including the record of any prior criminal convictions provided such evidence has been made known to the defendant prior to the defendant's trial; it was not error to admit the defendant's prior conviction since the state provided notice to defense counsel prior to trial of the state's intent to introduce the prior convictions, and the trial court did not consider the prior convictions in imposing the sentence. Rubi v. State, 258 Ga. App. 815, 575 S.E.2d 719 (2002).

Judicial Sentencing for Felonies (Cont'd)

Jury may consider record regardless of dates of prior convictions. — Jury was entitled to consider the appellant's record as of the time of sentencing, regardless of when the prior convictions were committed. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Evidence of sentences for prior convictions. — Sentences imposed for prior convictions were admissible into evidence as part of the "convictions" within the meaning of this section. Davis v. State, 241 Ga. 376, 247 S.E.2d 45, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 947, 99 S. Ct. 341, 58 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1978).

Notice must give defendant opportunity to examine prior convictions to be used against defendant. — All this section required was "clear notice" to an accused of all previous convictions that the state intended to introduce at trial so as to allow a defendant to examine the defendant's record to determine if the convictions are in fact the defendant's, if the defendant was represented by counsel, and any other defect which would render such documents inadmissible during the presentencing phase of the trial. Potts v. State, 241 Ga. 67, 243 S.E.2d 510 (1978), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 214, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1989).

One day's notice sufficient. — Service of the notice of aggravating circumstances upon the appellant on the day prior to trial, and prior to arraignment and jury selection, was timely under the provision of this section. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Prior convictions are sufficiently proved by certified copies of the convictions. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Although indictments are sometimes relevant, indictments are not a prerequisite to admissibility of prior convictions. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Transcript of prior testimony of state's witnesses, plus cross-examination of witnesses, satisfies section. — In a presentencing hearing in a capital case, the state is not required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 to supply in advance a full prospectus of the expected testimony of every witness to the circumstances of the offense; the requirement of that section is satisfied when the defendant receives not only the names of the witnesses but a transcript of their testimony at the guilt/innocence phase of the proceedings, and when the trial court rules that any testimony as to matters not contained in testimony given at the guilt/innocence phase is admissible but is subject to cross-examination by the defendant. Alderman v. State, 254 Ga. 206, 327 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 911, 106 S. Ct. 282, 88 L. Ed. 2d 245 (1985).

Evidence as to guilt or innocence may be considered at hearing. — Trial court erred in sustaining an objection to the defendant's attempt to testify as to matters occurring at the crime scene since the defendant had not testified at the guilt-innocence phase, but error was harmless as defense made no offer of proof as to what the defendant's testimony would have been and as the trial court gave the defense an opportunity, before the defense rested, to offer any matter that might mitigate the sentence. Blanks v. State, 254 Ga. 420, 330 S.E.2d 575 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1090, 106 S. Ct. 1479, 89 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1986).

Testimony of a state psychiatrist who examined the defendant is not irrelevant to the statutory aggravating circumstance of murder committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of another capital felony since the psychiatrist testifies in rebuttal to a defense witness who has previously testified as to the defendant's mental condition. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S.

945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475 (1984), cert. dismissed, 487 U.S. 1264, 109 S. Ct. 27, 101 L. Ed. 2d 977 (1988).

Presentence hearing may include evidence regarding guilt. — Presentence hearing is for additional evidence and in no way excludes from consideration during sentence the matters heard on the issue of guilt or innocence. Eberheart v. State, 232 Ga. 247, 206 S.E.2d 12 (1974), vacated on other grounds, 433 U.S. 917, 97 S. Ct. 2994, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1104 (1977).

Requirements as to evidence in aggravation. — Essentially this section required that evidence in aggravation cannot be used by the state unless the evidence is made known to the defendant prior to trial, and that such evidence is subject to the laws of evidence. Vandable v. State, 127 Ga. App. 306, 193 S.E.2d 197 (1972).

Evidence of recidivism may be introduced only at sentencing phase. — Under the two-step procedure, one must be indicted as a recidivist in order to impose recidivist punishment, but the recidivism of the accused must not be disclosed during the first phase of the trial and may only be disclosed after conviction at the second phase of the trial. Riggins v. Stynchcombe, 231 Ga. 589, 203 S.E.2d 208 (1974).

Recidivist sentence proper. — Since the state provided the requisite clear notice to the defendant of all previous convictions that the state sought to introduce at trial, the trial court did not err in imposing a recidivist sentence on the defendant. Richardson v. State, 256 Ga. App. 30, 567 S.E.2d 693 (2002).

Disclosure at first phase is reversible error. — Disclosure of prior convictions to the jury during the first phase of trial, absent waiver, is reversible error. Riggins v. Stynchcombe, 231 Ga. 589, 203 S.E.2d 208 (1974).

Clear notice should be given of each specific conviction to be introduced. — This section meant that notice of each specific conviction to be introduced in evidence by the state at the sentencing phase of the trial should be given to the party on trial or the party's attorney. Additionally, the fact that such notice was given should be clear and not cloudy. Gates v. State, 229 Ga. 796, 194 S.E.2d 412 (1972).

Prosecution's notice to defendant of prior convictions the prosecution intended to introduce at sentencing in aggravation of the defendant's punishment by attaching a copy of the defendant's criminal history to a notice was adequate to satisfy the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a). Greeson v. State, 253 Ga. App. 161, 558 S.E.2d 749 (2002).

Giving of notice of evidence of a conviction record on the day trial commences was not sufficient for the purpose of this section and did not meet the requirement of fair play and sound justice. Queen v. State, 131 Ga. App. 370, 205 S.E.2d 921 (1974).

Offenses in violation of municipal ordinances are admissible in evidence in the sentence hearing. Locklear v. State, 131 Ga. App. 536, 206 S.E.2d 527 (1974).

Record of prior conviction from another state. — To be admissible in evidence, a record of a prior criminal conviction from another state must be authenticated in accordance with former Code 1933, § 38-627 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-922). Strong v. State, 232 Ga. 294, 206 S.E.2d 461 (1974).

If illegal evidence of prior convictions is admitted at presentence trial, sentence is void. Hopper v. Thompson, 232 Ga. 417, 207 S.E.2d 57 (1974).

Improper to show offenses for which defendant charged but not convicted. — It is improper in a presentence hearing to show that the defendant has been charged with an offense for which the defendant has not been convicted. Banks v. State, 131 Ga. App. 215, 205 S.E.2d 520 (1974).

Evidence of general bad character. — Nature of the presentence hearing involves the general character of the defendant, and if the state has notified the defendant that such evidence will be admitted, evidence of general bad character may be admitted. Cochran v. State, 144 Ga. App. 820, 242 S.E.2d 735 (1978).

Illegal sentence cannot be rendered valid through waiver. — Defendant agreed to a sentence that included convictions that should have been merged, and therefore the sentence was void. Defendant improperly gave up the right to a sentencing presentation and argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 and therefore the case was remanded for sentencing. Wells v. State, 294 Ga. App. 277, 668 S.E.2d 881 (2008).

Judicial Sentencing for Felonies (Cont'd)

Jury Sentencing for Capital Cases

Intent. — General Assembly in this section meant to empower jurors to consider anything as mitigating that the jurors find to be mitigating, without limitation or definition. Spivey v. State, 241 Ga. 477, 246 S.E.2d 288, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1039, 99 S. Ct. 642, 58 L. Ed. 2d 699 (1978); Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Mitigating circumstances were referred to in former Code 1933, §§ 27-2503 and 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2 and 17-10-30), but these sections were wholly silent on what those circumstances shall be. The conclusion was thus inescapable that the General Assembly meant to empower the jury to consider as mitigating anything the jury found to be mitigating, without limitation or definition. This was a constitutionally valid procedure. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Although a habeas corpus petitioner contended that the prosecution misled the jury into believing that the jury's role with regard to the death penalty was merely advisory, no due process violation was shown. The prosecution accurately characterized the jury's death penalty finding as a recommendation in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(c), and the jury was properly advised that the recommendation was binding on the sentencing court in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 17-10-31. Carr v. Schofield, 364 F.3d 1246 (11th Cir. 2004).

Purpose of presentence trial. — This section provided a scheme for presenting defendant's history to the sentencing authority so that the sentencing authority may make the proper decision as to punishment, considering the status of the defendant at the time of sentencing, not the defendant's status at the moment the defendant committed the crimes for which the defendant was tried. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979).

Purpose of a presentence trial is to introduce different evidence from that at trial to determine guilt or innocence. In a presentence trial, the trier of fact must make a determination as to the sentence to be imposed, taking into consideration all aspects of the crime, the past criminal record or lack thereof, and the defendant's general moral character. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Consideration of mitigating factors constitutionally required. — United States Const., amends. 8 and 14 require that the sentencing judge or jury must be allowed to consider, as a mitigating factor, any aspect of a defendant's character or record and any of the circumstances of the offense that the defendant proffers as a basis for a sentence less than death. Chenault v. Stynchcombe, 581 F.2d 444 (5th Cir. 1978).

Mitigating factors considered in all but rarest capital cases. — United States Const., amends. 8 and 14 require that the sentencer, in all but the rarest kind of capital case, not be precluded from considering as a mitigating factor, any aspect of a defendant's character or record and any of the circumstances of the offense that the defendant proffers as a basis for a sentence less than death. Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 3029, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Both former Code 1933, §§ 26-3102 and 27-2503 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2(b) and 17-10-31) applied only to sentencing phase of capital case. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 557, 229 S.E.2d 376 (1976).

No presumption of innocence at presentence hearing. — Defendant stands before the trial court or jury in a presentence trial a convicted felon with no presumption of innocence. Fair v. State, 245 Ga. 868, 268 S.E.2d 316, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 407, 66 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1980).

Preservation of right to speak at the presentence hearing. — Requiring that a defendant, in order to tell the defendant's story in mitigation of punishment, must forfeit the defendant's right to remain silent during the guilt or innocence phase of the defendant's trial would violate Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV). Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 644, 220 S.E.2d 922 (1975).

Consideration by jury of mitigating and aggravating circumstances. — This section did not impose the additional requirement for sentencing that the jury be instructed that mitigating circumstances were to be weighed against aggravating circumstances, but instead allowed the jury to consider both. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979).

Mitigating evidence deals with particular defendant. — Evidence of extenuating or mitigating circumstances allowed by former Code 1933, §§ 27-2503 and 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-2 and 17-10-30) relates to evidence about the particular defendant and does not include evidence involving the death penalty in general. Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 3029, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124 (1980).

Constitutionality of excluding exculpatory hearsay whether death penalty may be imposed. — During the second trial of a convicted defendant to determine whether the death penalty should be imposed, refusal on hearsay grounds to admit testimony to the effect that the accused did not commit the crime may constitute a violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Green v. Georgia, 442 U.S. 95, 99 S. Ct. 2150, 60 L. Ed. 2d 738 (1979), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 936, 101 S. Ct. 1403, 67 L. Ed. 2d 372 (1981).

Judge must clearly instruct jury about mitigating circumstances and the option to recommend against death. Chenault v. Stynchcombe, 581 F.2d 444 (5th Cir. 1978).

Trial court's charge to the jury, which stressed that the jury should consider any mitigating evidence and that the jury could impose a sentence less than death for any or no reason, was an appropriate instruction that sufficiently informed the jury of the jury's relevant duties in deciding the defendant's sentence. King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 957, 122 S. Ct. 2659, 153 L. Ed. 2d 834 (2002).

Specific mitigating circumstances. — It is not required that specific mitigating circumstances be singled out by the court in giving the court's instructions to the jury. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979).

This section concerned notice of evidence of aggravating circumstances first admitted at a presentence hearing, and had absolutely nothing to do with giving notice of an attempt to prove aggravating circumstances during the guilt phase of trial. Bowden v. Zant, 244 Ga. 260, 260 S.E.2d 465 (1979).

Evidence as to aggravating circumstances introduced during the guilt or innocence phase need not be reintroduced in order to authorize the jury to find that one of the statutory aggravating circumstances set forth in former Code 1933, § 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30) existed. Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 644, 220 S.E.2d 922 (1975).

Life sentence even if aggravating circumstances present. — This section allowed the jury to impose a life sentence even if there are aggravating circumstances. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979).

Statutes on which convictions based presumed in effect at time of conviction. — It is presumed, absent a contrary showing by the defendant, that statutes on which convictions were based were in effect at the time of convictions. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Procedure if state waives death penalty. — In cases in which the state has waived imposition of the death penalty, the appropriate procedure is for the trial judge to dismiss the jury and conduct a presentence hearing under subsection (a) of this section. Birks v. State, 237 Ga. 861, 230 S.E.2d 294 (1976).

Procedure if death penalty and life sentence both waived. — If the state clearly waives the death penalty as well as the life imprisonment of the defendant, the trial judge can properly dismiss the jury and fix sentence upon completion of the presentence hearing. Jessen v. State, 234 Ga. 791, 218 S.E.2d 52 (1975).

Jury Sentencing for Capital Cases (Cont'd)

Presentence hearing not required if death penalty not sought in murder prosecution. — Since upon conviction for murder if the death penalty is not sought, the only punishment to be lawfully imposed is that of life imprisonment; thus, there is no necessity to conduct a presentence hearing on the issue of punishment as the trial court possesses no discretion in such an instance. Brown v. State, 246 Ga. 251, 271 S.E.2d 163 (1980).

Charge that jury may recommend mercy when death penalty waived. — If the state waives the death penalty, a charge that the jury could recommend mercy and thus require a life sentence is incorrect, but not necessarily prejudicial. Birks v. State, 237 Ga. 861, 230 S.E.2d 294 (1976).

Charge to continue proper. — Trial court properly instructed the jury in the sentencing phase that the jury's "verdict as to penalty (had to) be unanimous," and subsequently directed the jury to continue the jury's deliberations after the jury informed the trial court that the jury could not reach a unanimous verdict; the jury was expected to consider the evidence and to attempt to reach unanimity "'one way or the other'" on the issue of a sentence and, if possible, to unanimously recommend a sentence. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Jury must decide guilt before judge instructs on sentence. — It is error to instruct the jury as to a possible sentence in a felony case before the jury has determined the question of guilt or innocence. Mayo v. State, 139 Ga. App. 520, 229 S.E.2d 16 (1976); Evans v. State, 146 Ga. App. 480, 246 S.E.2d 482 (1978).

Defendant may conclude argument when death penalty considered. — After the evidence is closed on both sides in a presentence hearing in which the death penalty is being considered, the defendant may conclude the argument to the jury, even if the defendant presents evidence during the hearing. Beck v. State, 254 Ga. 51, 326 S.E.2d 465, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 872, 106 S. Ct. 195, 88 L. Ed. 2d 164 (1985).

Jury that convicted must also impose sentence. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 557, 229 S.E.2d 376 (1976).

Test of adequacy of jury charge. — In considering the adequacy of a jury charge on the sentencing phase of the trial, the ultimate test is whether a reasonable juror, considering the charge as a whole, would know that the juror should consider all the facts and circumstances of the case as presented during both phases of the trial, which necessarily include any mitigating and aggravating facts, and then, even though the juror might find one or more of the statutory aggravating circumstances to exist, would know that the juror might recommend life imprisonment. Spivey v. State, 241 Ga. 477, 246 S.E.2d 288, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1039, 99 S. Ct. 642, 58 L. Ed. 2d 699 (1978).

If the court does not fail to make clear to the jury that the jury could recommend a life sentence even if the jury found the existence of a statutory aggravating circumstance, the ultimate test is whether a reasonable juror, considering the charge as a whole, would know that the juror should consider all of the facts and circumstances of the case as presented during both phases of the trial which necessarily includes any mitigating and aggravating facts, and then, even though the juror might find one or more of the statutory aggravating circumstances to exist, would know that the juror might recommend life imprisonment. Young v. Ricketts, 242 Ga. 559, 250 S.E.2d 404 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

What constitutes adequate instruction. — If the trial court instructs the jury to consider the facts and circumstances in mitigation and aggravation, explaining to the jury that mitigating circumstances are those which do not excuse the offense, but which in fairness and mercy may reduce the degree of moral culpability or blame, and further instructs the jury that the jurors are free to recommend mercy even if the jurors find aggravating circumstances, these instructions allow the jury to examine the defendant's individual characteristics in deciding the defendant's fate and the jury is properly instructed as to what the jury is to consider in determining the sentence. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979).

Instructions on mercy and mitigating circumstances adequate. — By instructing jurors that the jurors could consider mitigating evidence and circumstances, that the jurors could return a life sentence for any reason or for no reason, and that the jurors could consider feelings of sympathy or mercy that flow from the evidence, the trial court adequately instructed the jury on mercy and the concept of mitigating circumstances generally. Jenkins v. State, 269 Ga. 282, 498 S.E.2d 502, cert. denied, 525 U.S. 968, 119 S. Ct. 416, 142 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1998).

Suggesting to jury that Georgia Supreme Court would approve death sentence. — Practice of influencing a jury to impose the death penalty by implying that justices of the Georgia Supreme Court would approve such a sentence is error, though sometimes harmless, under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Zant v. Campbell, 245 Ga. 368, 265 S.E.2d 22, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 891, 101 S. Ct. 252, 66 L. Ed. 2d 118 (1980).

Instruction for deadlocked jury to continue not suggestion to return death sentence. — Because a verdict for either death or mercy must be unanimous, and because the jury is not informed of the consequences of the jury's inability to reach a verdict as to sentence, instructions to deliberate further simply do not have the effect of suggesting to a Georgia jury that the jury should return a death sentence. Romine v. State, 256 Ga. 521, 350 S.E.2d 446 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1024, 107 S. Ct. 1912, 95 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1987).

Instruction as to invalid aggravating circumstance. — Death sentence was not impaired because the judge instructed the jury with regard to an invalid statutory aggravating circumstance, a "substantial history of serious assaultive criminal convictions," for the underlying evidence was nevertheless fully admissible at the sentencing phase under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a), the instructions did not place particular emphasis on the role of statutory aggravating circumstances in the jury's ultimate decision, and any possible impact could not fairly be regarded as a constitutional defect in the sentencing process, as nothing in the United States Constitution prohibits a trial judge from instructing a jury that it would be appropriate to take account of a defendant's prior criminal record in making the jury's sentencing determination, even though the defendant's prior history of noncapital convictions could not by itself provide sufficient justification for imposing the death sentence. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1983).

Imposition of sentence by judge, when jury unable to agree. — In a murder case, after conviction, because only two sentences can be imposed, life imprisonment or death, if the convicting jury is unable to agree on which of those two sentences to impose, the trial judge must impose the lesser, life imprisonment. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 557, 229 S.E.2d 376 (1976).

Prior convictions based on pleas may be properly considered in imposing a death sentence. Mathis v. Zant, 744 F. Supp. 272 (N.D. Ga. 1990), vacated in part on other grounds, 975 F.2d 1493 (11th Cir. 1992).

Sentencing authority must have information as to character and circumstances of defendant. — In capital cases, it is constitutionally required that the sentencing authority have information sufficient to enable it to consider the character and individual circumstances of a defendant prior to imposition of a death sentence. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Since information is necessary to reasoned sentencing decision. — Accurate sentencing information is an indispensable prerequisite to a reasoned determination of whether a defendant shall live or die by a jury of people who may never before have made a sentencing decision. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct.

Jury Sentencing for Capital Cases (Cont'd)

2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976).

Consideration of extraneous matters. — Trial judge did not err by permitting the state to introduce court records of prior convictions for burglary and assault since the jury based the jury's death sentence on other proper, specified statutory aggravating circumstances. Green v. Zant, 738 F.2d 1529 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1098, 105 S. Ct. 607, 83 L. Ed. 2d 716 (1984).

Putting character at issue. — Conducting a trial on a possession of a firearm charge prior to the sentencing phase and before the same jury that imposed a death sentence on a defendant did not unnecessarily prejudice the jury by impermissibly placing the defendant's character in issue in the sentencing phase since the state could have introduced evidence of the defendant's prior convictions during the sentencing phase. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Appellate Review

Lawful sentence not modifiable on appeal. — Appellate court is not empowered to modify a sentence which is within the statutory limits and lawfully imposed. Thomas v. State, 139 Ga. App. 364, 228 S.E.2d 386 (1976).

No review if no objection to notice at presentence hearing. — If no objection to notice is made at the presentence hearing, a subsequent review of that phase is eliminated. Adams v. State, 142 Ga. App. 252, 235 S.E.2d 667 (1977); Wilcox v. State, 153 Ga. App. 719, 266 S.E.2d 356 (1980).

If no objection is made at the presentence hearing, subsequent review of that phase is eliminated. Chapman v. State, 154 Ga. App. 532, 268 S.E.2d 797 (1980).

If no objections were raised at the presentence hearing, the Court of Appeals is precluded from reviewing the proceedings. Williams v. State, 165 Ga. App. 553, 301 S.E.2d 908 (1983); Evans v. State, 177 Ga. App. 572, 340 S.E.2d 620 (1986).

Any lawful evidence which tends to show the motive of the defendant, defendant's lack of remorse, defendant's general moral character, and defendant's predisposition to commit other crimes is admissible in aggravation, subject to the notice provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. The defendant's failure to object to any lack of notice waives the defendant's right to raise such objections. Fields v. State, 167 Ga. App. 816, 307 S.E.2d 712 (1983).

Pro se defendant's claim that the defendant was not served with a notice of aggravation as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a) and that the trial court improperly took notice of the defendant's criminal history was waived as the defendant never objected during pre-sentencing on the ground that the defendant had received no notice. Swain v. State, 268 Ga. App. 135, 601 S.E.2d 491 (2004).

Waiver can result from the failure to object to the consideration of convictions not shown to have been attended by counsel. Golden v. State, 177 Ga. App. 747, 341 S.E.2d 480 (1986).

Because the defendant failed to raise at the sentencing hearing the argument that the trial court erred by sentencing the defendant as a recidivist, appellate review was precluded. Wells v. State, 313 Ga. App. 528, 722 S.E.2d 133 (2012).

Defendant was not denied presentence hearing. — There is no need for remand because the defendant was not denied a presentence hearing since the court inquired if the defendant or defense counsel knew of any reason why the court should not pass sentence and counsel responded that there was no legal reason sentence should not be imposed and no request was made at that time for a continuance to produce witnesses. McLelland v. State, 203 Ga. App. 93, 416 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 416 S.E.2d 340 (1992).

Evidence in aggravation without prior notice is grounds for reversal, unless court assures evidence was not used. — Evidence in aggravation, tendered by the state, which is not disclosed to the defendant prior to trial and which is later admitted as evidence at a presentencing hearing will not be grounds for reversal as to the sentence only if the appellate court is assured that the trial judge did not use such evidence to increase the length of the sentence. Moss v. State, 144 Ga. App. 226, 240 S.E.2d 773 (1977).

If the record shows that prior convictions obtained without benefit of counsel were considered in a presentence hearing, a new trial on the issue of punishment will have to be granted. Knight v. State, 133 Ga. App. 808, 212 S.E.2d 464 (1975).

Presumption as to trial court's sentencing. — There is a presumption that the trial court did not consider improper matters in fixing the sentence, although the presumption can be weakened by the trial court's failure to disavow any reliance thereon. Watkins v. State, 191 Ga. App. 87, 381 S.E.2d 45 (1989).

Sentence is presumed to be correctly imposed, and defendant has the burden of showing error. Jones v. State, 233 Ga. 662, 212 S.E.2d 832 (1975).

Burden of proof that judge's knowledge of prior convictions in judge's court affected sentence. — Burden was upon a defendant asserting error under this section to establish affirmatively by the record that the trial judge's knowledge of the defendant's prior convictions in the judge's own court resulted in an increased sentence. Canady v. State, 147 Ga. App. 640, 249 S.E.2d 690 (1978).

Judge sitting without jury presumed to separate legal from illegal evidence. — If the record has shown that illegal evidence has been considered in the presentence hearing, the appellate courts have generally granted a new trial on the issue of punishment. Nevertheless, there is a presumption, in the absence of a strong showing to the contrary, that the trial judge, when sitting without a jury, separates the legal evidence from facts not properly in evidence in reaching the judge's decision. Workman v. State, 137 Ga. App. 746, 224 S.E.2d 757 (1976).

Although prejudicial and illegal evidence is injected in a defendant's sentence hearing and the sentence defendant receives is harsher than that of a codefendant, if the trial judge sustains objections to such evidence whenever such objections are made, the presumption is that the trial court considered only legal evidence. Welborn v. State, 166 Ga. App. 214, 303 S.E.2d 755 (1983).

Although defendant has served term prior to appeal, if results of conviction may persist and subsequent convictions may carry severe penalties and civil rights may be affected, the Court of Appeals will no longer dismiss but will consider such appeals on their merits. Peach v. State, 168 Ga. App. 55, 308 S.E.2d 60 (1983).

No ineffective assistance of counsel. — Defendant's attorney did not render ineffective assistance because defense counsel failed to insist that the defendant be afforded an opportunity to address the trial court personally on the subject of sentencing because defense counsel spoke at the sentencing hearing on the defendant's behalf regarding mitigation and punishment. Guyton v. State, 281 Ga. 789, 642 S.E.2d 67 (2007).

Because the defendant failed to show that defense counsel was ineffective in failing to inquire further into the defendant's confusion regarding the state's intent to seek a recidivist sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), and the defendant was repeatedly advised of the maximum punishment allowed by law upon conviction of the crimes alleged, the trial court properly denied the defendant a new trial. Smith v. State, 289 Ga. App. 742, 658 S.E.2d 156 (2008).

If the trial court fails to conduct a presentence hearing, the judgment of sentence will be reversed, and the case remanded to the trial court for resentencing. King v. State, 168 Ga. App. 291, 308 S.E.2d 612 (1983); Brinson v. State, 201 Ga. App. 80, 410 S.E.2d 50 (1991); Williams v. State, 225 Ga. App. 319, 483 S.E.2d 874 (1997).

Defendant had a right to file a direct appeal from the denial of a petition contending that the defendant's sentence was void because the trial court failed to hold the presentence hearing required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2. Williams v. State, 271 Ga. 686, 523 S.E.2d 857 (1999).

Notice of aggravating circumstances. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for continuance when a month before defendant's capital murder trial in the shooting of a deputy sheriff, the state gave notice of aggravating circumstances. Brannan v. State, 275 Ga. 70, 561 S.E.2d 414, cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1021, 123 S. Ct. 541, 154 L. Ed. 2d 429 (2002).

Appellate Review (Cont'd)

No review of sentence within guidelines. — Appellate court declined to review the defendant's 30-year sentence because the sentence was within the statutory guidelines; the defendant was found guilty of possessing cocaine with the intent to distribute, the state introduced three prior felony convictions in aggravation of sentencing pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a), and given the defendant's prior drug convictions and the mandate of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), the defendant faced a maximum punishment of life in prison under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d). Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 619, 644 S.E.2d 491 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1169, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 521 (Ga. 2007).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 706 et seq., 718 et seq. 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 822 et seq.

C.J.S. — 24 C.J.S., Criminal Procedure and Rights of the Accused, §§ 2282 et seq., 2383 et seq.

ALR. — Right of court to hear evidence for purpose of determining sentence to be imposed, 77 A.L.R. 1211.

Rule of reasonable doubt as applicable to proof of previous conviction for purpose of enhancing punishment, 79 A.L.R. 1337.

Court's right, in imposing sentence, to hear evidence of, or to consider, other offenses committed by defendant, 96 A.L.R.2d 768.

Necessity and sufficiency of question to defendant as to whether he has anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced against him, 96 A.L.R.2d 1292.

Defendant's right to disclosure of presentence report, 40 A.L.R.3d 681.

Court's presentence inquiry as to, or consideration of, accused's intention to appeal, as error, 64 A.L.R.3d 1226.

Defendant's appeal from plea conviction as affected by prosecutor's failure or refusal to dismiss other pending charges, pursuant to plea agreement, until expiration of time for appeal, 86 A.L.R.3d 1262.

Loss of jurisdiction by delay in imposing sentence, 98 A.L.R.3d 605.

Propriety of sentencing justice's consideration of defendant's failure or refusal to accept plea bargain, 100 A.L.R.3d 834.

Right of convicted defendant or prosecution to receive updated presentence report at sentencing proceedings, 22 A.L.R.5th 660.

Admissibility of victim impact evidence in noncapital state proceedings, 8 A.L.R.7th 6.

Admissibility of testimony at sentencing, within meaning of U.S.S.G. § 6a1.3, which requires such information be relevant and have "sufficient indicia of reliability to support its probable accuracy", 45 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 457.

Admissibility of evidence, other than testimony given at sentencing, within meaning of U.S.S.G. § 6a1.3, which requires such information be relevant and have "sufficient indicia of reliability to support its probable accuracy" — concerning sworn information, 46 A.L.R. Fed. 2d 151.

17-10-3. Punishment for misdemeanors generally.

(a) Except as otherwise provided by law, every crime declared to be a misdemeanor shall be punished as follows:

(1) By a fine not to exceed $1,000.00 or by confinement in the county or other jail, county correctional institution, or such other places as counties may provide for maintenance of county inmates, for a total term not to exceed 12 months, or both;

(2) By confinement under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections in a state probation detention center pursuant to Code Section 42-8-35.4 for a determinate term of months which shall not exceed a total term of 12 months; or

(3) If the crime was committed by an inmate within the confines of a state correctional institution, by confinement under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections in a state correctional institution or such other institution as the Department of Corrections may direct for a term which shall not exceed 12 months.

(b) Either the punishment provided in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section, but not both, may be imposed in the discretion of the sentencing judge. Misdemeanor punishment imposed under either paragraph may be subject to suspension or probation. The sentencing courts shall retain jurisdiction to amend, modify, alter, suspend, or probate sentences under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section at any time, but in no instance shall any sentence under the paragraph be modified in a manner to place a county inmate under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections, except as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section.

(c) In all misdemeanor cases in which, upon conviction, a six-month sentence or less is imposed, it is within the authority and discretion of the sentencing judge to allow the sentence to be served on weekends by weekend confinement or during the nonworking hours of the defendant. A weekend shall commence and shall end in the discretion of the sentencing judge, and the nonworking hours of the defendant shall be determined in the discretion of the sentencing judge; provided, however, that the judge shall retain plenary control of the defendant at all times during the sentence period. A weekend term shall be counted as serving two days of the full sentence. Confinement during the nonworking hours of a defendant during any day may be counted as serving a full day of the sentence.

(d) In addition to or instead of any other penalty provided for the punishment of a misdemeanor involving a traffic offense, or punishment of a municipal ordinance involving a traffic offense, with the exception of habitual offenders sentenced under Code Section 17-10-7, a judge may impose any one or more of the following sentences:

(1) Reexamination by the Department of Driver Services when the judge has good cause to believe that the convicted licensed driver is incompetent or otherwise not qualified to be licensed;

(2) Satisfactory completion of a defensive driving course or defensive driving program approved by the Department of Driver Services;

(3) Within the limits of the authority of the charter powers of a municipality or the punishment prescribed by law in other courts, imprisonment at times specified by the court or release from imprisonment upon such conditions and at such times as may be specified; or

(4) Probation or suspension of all or any part of a penalty upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the judge. The conditions may include driving with no further motor vehicle violations during a specified time unless the driving privileges have been or will be otherwise suspended or revoked by law; reporting periodically to the court or a specified agency; and performing, or refraining from performing, such acts as may be ordered by the judge.

(e) Any sentence imposed under subsection (d) of this Code section shall be reported to the Department of Driver Services as prescribed by law.

(f) The Department of Community Supervision shall lack jurisdiction to supervise misdemeanor offenders, except when the sentence is made concurrent to a probated felony sentence or as provided in Code Section 42-8-109.5. Except as provided in this subsection, the Department of Corrections shall lack jurisdiction to confine misdemeanor offenders.

(g) This Code section will have no effect upon any offender convicted of a misdemeanor offense prior January 1, 2001, and sentenced to confinement under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections or to the supervision of the Department of Corrections.

History. — Orig. Code 1863, § 4209; Ga. L. 1865-66, p. 233, § 2; Code 1868, §§ 4245, 4608; Code 1873, §§ 4310, 4705; Ga. L. 1878-79, p. 54, § 1; Code 1882, §§ 4310, 4705; Ga. L. 1895, p. 63, § 2; Penal Code 1895, § 1039; Ga. L. 1908, p. 1119, § 1; Penal Code 1910, § 1065; Code 1933, § 27-2506; Ga. L. 1956, p. 161, § 4; Ga. L. 1957, p. 477, § 5; Ga. L. 1964, p. 485, § 1; Ga. L. 1970, p. 236, § 10; Ga. L. 1972, p. 600, § 1; Ga. L. 1974, p. 361, § 1; Ga. L. 1974, p. 631, § 1; Ga. L. 1976, p. 210, § 1; Ga. L. 1985, p. 283, § 1; Ga. L. 1992, p. 3221, § 2; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1526, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1643, § 1; Ga. L. 2001, p. 1030, § 2; Ga. L. 2002, p. 415, § 17; Ga. L. 2005, p. 334, § 7-4/HB 501; Ga. L. 2014, p. 710, § 1-3/SB 298; Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 5-32/HB 310; Ga. L. 2016, p. 443, § 13-5/SB 367.

Cross references. — Time limitation on prosecutions for misdemeanors, § 17-3-1. Additional penalties for violations of municipal ordinances, § 36-30-8. Sentences for misdemeanor traffic offenses, § 40-13-26. Jurisdiction of Department of Offender Rehabilitation over misdemeanor offenders generally, § 42-5-51. Alternative provisions for sentencing of offenders between ages 17 and 25, § 42-7-3 et seq. Probation of first offenders, § 42-8-60 et seq.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2013, "or when the sentence is accepted pursuant to Code Section 42-9-71" was deleted following "felony sentence" at the end of the first sentence of subsection (f).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 6-1/HB 310, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that this Act shall apply to sentences entered on or after July 1, 2015.

Administrative rules and regulations. — Offender administration, Official Compilation of the Rules and Regulations of the State of Georgia, Board of Corrections, Departmental Operations, Chapter 125-2-4.

Law reviews. — For article discussing the constitutionality of imposing harsher sentences upon defendants found guilty in new trial after appeal, see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 183 (1969). For article surveying judicial developments in Georgia Criminal Law, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 59 (1979). For annual survey of criminal law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 129 (1986). For article, "Misdemeanor Sentencing in Georgia," see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 8 (2001). For article on the 2015 amendment of this Code section, see 32 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 231 (2015). For article on the 2016 amendment of this Code section, see 33 Georgia St. U.L. Rev. 139 (2016).

For note, "Safe Haven No Longer: The Role of Georgia Courts and Private Probation Companies in Sustaining a De Facto Debtors' Prison System," see 48 Ga. L. Rev. 227 (2013).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Analysis

General Consideration
Multiple Offenses
Probation
Sentence Improper
Sentence Proper
Review

General Consideration

Effect of this section was not merely confined to the misdemeanors enumerated in the Code, but had a prospective force. Anderson v. State, 2 Ga. App. 1, 58 S.E. 401 (1907).

What law controls punishment for acts made criminal by statute. — If a statute makes penal certain acts which do not otherwise constitute a crime and prescribes the manner of punishment for such acts, the special statute and not the general law is controlling as to the limits of such punishment. Curtis v. State, 102 Ga. App. 790, 118 S.E.2d 264 (1960).

Uniform rules of the road violations. — Punishment schemes contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 40-6-1 are: (1) punishment for violations of sections that have not "otherwise declared" their own penalties will be as provided for in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3; and (2) punishment for violations of sections that have criminalized certain acts and prescribed particular punishments will be controlled by the specific penalties imposed by such sections. Chastain v. State, 231 Ga. App. 225, 498 S.E.2d 792 (1998).

Court may impose less than maximum sentence. — Court, having the power to both pass upon a defendant a sentence of 12 months and to impose a fine of not exceeding $1,000.00, can do less than both, and can do so without giving a defendant any election as to paying or refusing to pay the fine. Dickson v. Officers of Court, 36 Ga. App. 341, 136 S.E. 537, cert. denied, 36 Ga. App. 825, (1927).

Sentence should express full punishment without contingent punishment based on future acts. — Sentence imposed upon a prisoner convicted of a misdemeanor should express the full punishment which the trial judge may, in a wise exercise of the discretion vested in the judge by this section, deem merited by the prisoner because of the offense committed by the prisoner, without regard to what the prisoner's future conduct may be and independently of any contingency which may arise after sentence has been pronounced and the court has lost the power to impose punishment on the prisoner. A penalty to be inflicted upon the prisoner in the event the prisoner shall subsequently apply for relief from sentence to jail imprisonment cannot legally be imposed; nor, if the prisoner be sentenced to a term in jail, can the court legally impose as an additional alternative punishment, in the event the prisoner fails to pay a fine, another definite term of imprisonment in jail. Wallace v. State, 126 Ga. 749, 55 S.E. 1042 (1906).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Dividing of total sentence into periods. — Under the terms of this section, the court had authority to impose a sentence confining the defendant in the chain gang for a period of 12 months. The fact that the court divided the sentence into two periods of six months each did not make the total sentence to the chain gang exceed the period fixed by the statute. Scott v. McClelland, 162 Ga. 443, 133 S.E. 923 (1926); Henry v. State, 77 Ga. App. 735, 49 S.E.2d 681 (1948).

Validity of otherwise valid portions of sentence despite invalid contingency terms. — See Roper v. Mallard, 193 Ga. 684, 19 S.E.2d 525 (1942).

Failure to impose sentence. — If the defendant was adjudicated guilty on all counts, the trial court retained authority to correct the court's oversight in failing to impose sentence on one count in the court's initial sentencing order by imposing that sentence after denial of a motion for new trial. Hirjee v. State, 226 Ga. App. 573, 487 S.E.2d 40 (1997).

Once defendant serves defendant's sentence, jurisdiction over the defendant ceases. State v. Mohamed, 203 Ga. App. 21, 416 S.E.2d 358 (1992).

Loss of jurisdiction by sentencing court when defendant placed in state institution. — Under the express terms of this section, the sentencing court's continuing jurisdiction does not apply when a defendant has been sentenced to serve a misdemeanor sentence in a place under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation). Mauldin v. State, 139 Ga. App. 13, 227 S.E.2d 862 (1976).

Limits on modification of sentence. — Trial court's power to rescind, modify, or change a sentence "at any time" is limited by its terms to the sentence itself or its conditions and the court may not go behind the sentence to readdress the merits of a plea which was ruled on in a preceding term. State v. James, 211 Ga. App. 149, 438 S.E.2d 399 (1993).

Time for modification of sentence. — Trial court retained the discretionary authority to grant the defendant's motion to modify any misdemeanor sentences imposed under the statute even after expiration of the term in which the sentences were imposed. Patel v. State, 247 Ga. App. 815, 545 S.E.2d 383 (2001).

Modification of proper sentence of city court. — City Court of Savannah, having jurisdiction to try certain misdemeanors, and upon conviction of the accused to impose any one or all of the penalties specified in this section, within the discretion of the trial judge, the superior court has no power, under the writ of certiorari, to modify a sentence which imposes a punishment not exceeding the maximum punishment prescribed by that law. Brown v. State, 149 Ga. 816, 102 S.E. 449 (1920).

Transfer of custody of one held by private person under illegal contract. — If habeas corpus is brought, the respondent being a person who holds the applicant in custody under an illegal contract with the sheriff of the county, there is no error in ordering that the applicant be remanded to the custody of the jailer of the county in which the conviction took place, there to be held until discharged by law. Russell v. Tatum, 104 Ga. 332, 30 S.E. 812 (1898).

Hiring of misdemeanor convicts to private persons under guard. — It is absurd to hold that the mere appointment by the county of guards, without more, is such an assertion of control, management, and authority by the county as to save the hiring of the county's misdemeanor convicts to private persons. Daniel v. State, 114 Ga. 533, 40 S.E. 805 (1902).

Corporation may be fined but not imprisoned. Southern Ry. v. State, 125 Ga. 287, 54 S.E. 160, 114 Am. St. R. 203, 5 Ann. Cas. 411 (1906).

If court charges as to recommendation of misdemeanor punishment for felony, section need not be charged. — Trial court, having instructed the jury that if the jury find the defendant guilty of the felony charged the jury has the right to recommend misdemeanor punishment, and that thereupon the trial court in the court's discretion might punish the defendant as for a misdemeanor, was not required to charge the provisions of this section. Allison v. State, 110 Ga. App. 266, 138 S.E.2d 335 (1964).

Equal treatment of offenders. — Georgia law does not require courts to treat both drivers cited for an accident equally. McLeod v. State, 251 Ga. App. 371, 554 S.E.2d 507 (2001).

Cited in McDonald v. State, 6 Ga. App. 339, 64 S.E. 1108 (1909); Harris v. State, 18 Ga. App. 502, 89 S.E. 589 (1916); King v. State, 37 Ga. App. 140, 140 S.E. 513 (1927); Swanson v. State, 38 Ga. App. 386, 144 S.E. 49 (1928); Davis v. State, 53 Ga. App. 325, 185 S.E. 400 (1936); Williams v. City of Atlanta, 61 Ga. App. 606, 7 S.E.2d 82 (1940); Taylor v. Georgia, 315 U.S. 25, 62 S. Ct. 415, 86 L. Ed. 615 (1942); Martin v. State, 75 Ga. App. 807, 44 S.E.2d 562 (1947); Alred v. Celanese Corp. of Am., 205 Ga. 371, 54 S.E.2d 240 (1949); Pedigo v. Celanese Corp. of Am., 205 Ga. 392, 54 S.E.2d 252 (1949); Lancaster v. State, 83 Ga. App. 746, 64 S.E.2d 902 (1951); Jenkins v. Jones, 209 Ga. 758, 75 S.E.2d 815 (1953); Bennett v. State, 101 Ga. App. 99, 112 S.E.2d 796 (1960); Sawyer v. State, 112 Ga. App. 885, 147 S.E.2d 60 (1966); Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Morris v. State, 119 Ga. App. 157, 166 S.E.2d 382 (1969); Parks v. State, 230 Ga. 157, 195 S.E.2d 911 (1973); Tischmak v. State, 133 Ga. App. 534, 211 S.E.2d 587 (1974); King v. State, 134 Ga. App. 636, 215 S.E.2d 532 (1975); Heard v. State, 135 Ga. App. 685, 218 S.E.2d 866 (1975); Fountain v. York, 237 Ga. 784, 229 S.E.2d 629 (1976); Ballew v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 223, 98 S. Ct. 1029, 55 L. Ed. 2d 234 (1978); Dorsey v. State, 145 Ga. App. 750, 245 S.E.2d 31 (1978); Taylor v. State, 149 Ga. App. 362, 254 S.E.2d 432 (1979); Sutton v. Garmon, 245 Ga. 685, 266 S.E.2d 497 (1980); Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118 (1981); State v. Shepherd Constr. Co., 248 Ga. 1, 281 S.E.2d 151 (1981); Collins v. State, 160 Ga. App. 680, 288 S.E.2d 43 (1981); Tillman v. State, 249 Ga. 792, 294 S.E.2d 516 (1982); Monroe v. State, 250 Ga. 30, 295 S.E.2d 512 (1982); Littlejohn v. State, 165 Ga. App. 562, 301 S.E.2d 917 (1983); Bowles v. State, 168 Ga. App. 763, 310 S.E.2d 250 (1983); Smith v. State, 174 Ga. App. 238, 329 S.E.2d 507 (1985); Billingslea v. State, 177 Ga. App. 775, 341 S.E.2d 305 (1986); Williams v. State, 178 Ga. App. 216, 342 S.E.2d 703 (1986); Branch v. State, 182 Ga. App. 818, 357 S.E.2d 136 (1987); Dover v. State, 195 Ga. App. 507, 393 S.E.2d 760 (1990); Wilburn v. State, 223 Ga. App. 476, 477 S.E.2d 909 (1996); Brison v. State, 248 Ga. App. 168, 545 S.E.2d 345 (2001); Manders v. Lee, 338 F.3d 1304 (11th Cir. 2003); Hirjee v. State, 263 Ga. App. 185, 587 S.E.2d 144 (2003); Cole v. State, 262 Ga. App. 856, 586 S.E.2d 745 (2003); Smith v. State, 270 Ga. App. 759, 608 S.E.2d 35 (2004); Putman v. State, 270 Ga. App. 45, 606 S.E.2d 50 (2004); English v. State, 282 Ga. App. 552, 639 S.E.2d 551 (2006); State v. Ogilvie, 292 Ga. 6, 734 S.E.2d 50 (2012); Anderson v. Sentinel Offender Servs., LLC, 298 Ga. 854, 784 S.E.2d 791 (2016).

Multiple Offenses

Separate penalties for separate occurrences of same crime. — Same crime which occurred at different times but on the same day constitute separate crimes authorizing a separate penalty as to each. As long as the respective sentences are not greater than the maximum sentence provided by law, the sentences are not excessive. Rucker v. State, 133 Ga. App. 180, 210 S.E.2d 365 (1974).

There may be a cumulative sentence for different misdemeanors charged in one indictment. Bishop v. State, 21 Ga. App. 236, 94 S.E. 49 (1917); Davis v. State, 213 Ga. App. 212, 444 S.E.2d 142 (1994).

Sentence on verdict of guilty rendered on a number of counts. — If a verdict of guilty is rendered on a number of counts, a sentence which does not exceed that which may legally be imposed on any one count is supported by the indictment, if any count is good. Brannon v. State, 21 Ga. App. 328, 94 S.E. 259 (1917).

Probation

Court cannot reserve right to revoke probation without notice or hearing. — If a probation sentence is given, the trial judge is without authority to reserve therein the right to revoke the probation sentence without notice or hearing. Balkcom v. Gunn, 206 Ga. 167, 56 S.E.2d 482 (1949).

Probation (Cont'd)

Credit for time served if probation is revoked. — One serving a sentence on probation is fulfilling that person's sentence as effectually as if confined in jail or on the chain gang and, accordingly, if after a hearing the order granting such probation is revoked, the time served by the defendant before the revocation must be counted in the defendant's favor and deducted from the period of service imposed. Roper v. Mallard, 193 Ga. 684, 19 S.E.2d 525 (1942).

Suspension of defendant's driver's license after conviction of a traffic-related offense was a reasonable condition of probation. Brock v. State, 165 Ga. App. 150, 299 S.E.2d 71 (1983).

Suspension of defendant's hunting and fishing privileges during the probation period imposed upon conviction of a violation of O.C.G.A. § 27-3-9, unlawful enticement of game, was not an abuse of discretion. Quintrell v. State, 231 Ga. App. 268, 499 S.E.2d 117 (1998).

Error in setting length of probated confinement. — When a repeat offender was convicted on two counts of misdemeanor theft and the trial court imposed probated confinement for a period of five years when the maximum period of confinement which could be imposed was for a term of one year, this error was not harmless as both sentences ran consecutively and one of the conditions of the probation was, that in the event probation was revoked, the trial court could order the execution of the sentence originally imposed. Tenney v. State, 194 Ga. App. 820, 392 S.E.2d 294 (1990).

Availability of probated confinement. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3 does not extend the option of state probation detention center sentencing to all misdemeanors; a defendant must fit into one of the narrow categories set forth in O.C.G.A. §§ 42-8-35.4 and 42-8-35.5 in order to be eligible to be sentenced in that manner. Anderson v. State, 261 Ga. App. 716, 583 S.E.2d 549 (2003).

Sentence Improper

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(1) and (a)(2) are alternative; therefore, the defendant could not lawfully be sentenced to pay a fine and to confinement under the state's jurisdiction. Williams v. State, 221 Ga. App. 291, 470 S.E.2d 922 (1996).

Sentence to probation detention center not authorized. — Trial court lacked authority to order that the defendant, who was given a 12-month misdemeanor sentence for reckless conduct, serve the term of imprisonment in a probation detention center. Brady v. State, 246 Ga. App. 412, 541 S.E.2d 396 (2000).

Hard labor not proper sentence for misdemeanor. — Sentence in a misdemeanor case which provided that the person convicted shall be confined at hard labor for the space of one year at the state farm is not in conformity with this section. Screen v. State, 107 Ga. 715, 33 S.E. 393 (1899); Potter v. State, 35 Ga. App. 248, 132 S.E. 783 (1926).

Sentence of a defendant to hard labor on the chain gang was irregular since the defendant was convicted of a misdemeanor only. Under this section, punishment at hard labor is not provided for such an offense. Kent v. State, 18 Ga. App. 30, 88 S.E. 913 (1916).

Confinement in probation detention center improper. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(2) does not give Georgia courts authority to confine a misdemeanant in a probation detention center and reading O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1(a)(3)(A) and 42-8-35.4 together, a court may confine a probation violator in a probation detention center, but not if probation is revoked for any of the reasons enumerated in § 17-10-1(a)(3)(A), and only if the defendant was put on probation previously for a forcible misdemeanor or a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature; a defendant who pled guilty to the misdemeanors of habitual violator, driving under the influence, possession of marijuana, and operating a vehicle without proof of insurance did not meet the criteria for confinement in a probation detention center upon revocation of probation under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35.4, and so confinement in such a facility was unauthorized. Wilson v. Windsor, 280 Ga. 576, 630 S.E.2d 367 (2006).

Maximum misdemeanor punishment inappropriate. — Imposition of the maximum misdemeanor punishment upon conviction for criminal trespass exceeded constitutional bounds against cruel and unusual punishment since the trespass involved the defendant's trimming of a neighbor's hedge. Haygood v. State, 225 Ga. App. 81, 483 S.E.2d 302 (1997).

Even when conditioned on nonpayment of fine and costs. — Sentence in a misdemeanor case which requires that the person convicted shall, upon failure to pay a given fine and costs, "be imprisoned in the common jail [of a named county] for the space of 12 months, and that during said imprisonment [he] be put to work at hard labor on the chain gang of said county," was not in conformity with this section. If it was intended by this sentence to impose a penalty of imprisonment, the term of imprisonment specified exceeds the limit fixed by law. The law does not authorize in such cases a sentence to hard labor. Screen v. State, 107 Ga. 715, 33 S.E. 393 (1899).

Punishment for failure to carry driver's license. — Legislative intent in reducing the punishment for failure of a licensee to have a driver's license in the licensee's possession when operating a vehicle to a fine of ten dollars precluded imposition of a sentence to a consecutive 12 months' probation. Crain v. State, 197 Ga. App. 729, 399 S.E.2d 289 (1990).

Sentence Proper

Imprisonment of female misdemeanant in state farm. — If a female, under indictment for a misdemeanor, pleads guilty, the judge may in the judge's discretion sentence her to labor and confinement in the woman's prison on the state farm. Conley v. Pope, 161 Ga. 462, 131 S.E. 168 (1925).

Sentence upheld. — Sentence of six months in jail, six months on probation, and a fine of $1,000 for permitting an unlicensed person to drive a car did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Means v. State, 255 Ga. 537, 340 S.E.2d 612 (1986).

Sentence imposed was authorized by statute; thus, any remarks made by the court, claimed to be improper, were of no consequence and there was nothing in the record to support the contention that the judge made improper remarks. Addo v. State, 212 Ga. App. 163, 441 S.E.2d 486 (1994).

Defendant's sentence to three consecutive twelve month terms for three simple battery convictions, with eight months to serve in confinement and the rest on probation, did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Dudley v. State, 242 Ga. App. 53, 527 S.E.2d 912 (2000).

In light of the defendant's failure to demonstrate an increase in punishment or alteration of the defendant's situation to the defendant's disadvantage when the defendant was sentenced to confinement in a probation detention center for misdemeanor offenses, the defendant's sentence was not improper and did not violate the ex post facto clauses of the Georgia or United States Constitutions. Yates v. State, 263 Ga. App. 29, 587 S.E.2d 180 (2003).

Defendant's sentence to ten years for false imprisonment, 12 months for sexual battery, and 12 months for simple battery, to run concurrently, provided that upon service of four years in custody, the defendant could serve the remaining six years on probation, was not void as the sentence fell within the allowable sentencing ranges of no less than one nor more than ten years for false imprisonment, and up to 12 months each for sexual battery and simple battery. Rehberger v. State, 267 Ga. App. 778, 600 S.E.2d 635 (2004).

It was not an abuse of discretion to deny the defendant's motion for a new trial, requested to facilitate the defendant's efforts to become a naturalized citizen, because the trial court considered that the defendant's sentence for giving a false name to an officer had long since been served, that six years had passed since sentencing, and that the sentence was within the statutory guidelines for misdemeanors; claims that the defendant's guilty plea was not voluntary were of no avail as the defendant failed to move to withdraw the plea or to appeal, and the times for doing so had expired. Elias v. State, 272 Ga. App. 506, 613 S.E.2d 157 (2005).

When the defendant was convicted of speeding and failure to maintain lane, defendant was properly sentenced to a fine of $650 plus court costs, 12 months of probation, 40 hours of community service, and the completion of a defensive driver course, despite the prosecutor's recommendation of fewer community service hours, because the sentence was authorized by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(1), (d)(2), and (d)(4) as well as O.C.G.A. § 42-8-72(a)(1). Harris v. State, 272 Ga. App. 650, 613 S.E.2d 170 (2005).

Sentence Proper (Cont'd)

As the defendant's sentence of 365 days, one day to serve and 364 on probation, did not exceed 12 months, it was a valid misdemeanor sentence. Stripling v. State, 279 Ga. App. 856, 632 S.E.2d 747 (2006).

Defendant's sentence was not excessive because the trial court orally sentenced the defendant to a combination of 100 days of confinement, 60 days of house arrest, and 12 months of probation for misdemeanor driving under the influence; an oral declaration of a sentence was not the sentence of the court and the sentence signed by the trial court properly sentenced the defendant to confinement for 12 months (to serve 100 days) and the remainder probated (60 days thereof in house arrest). Kimbrell v. State, 280 Ga. App. 867, 635 S.E.2d 237 (2006).

While a defendant provided no statutory or legal authority for a claim that the sentence for the defendant's conviction for harassing phone calls under O.C.G.A. § 16-11-39.1(a) was excessive and thus abandoned the claim under Ga. Ct. App. R. 25(c)(2), the defendant's sentence of 12 months probated, 240 hours of community service, completion of an anger management counseling program, no contact with the victim, and a $500 fine was within the range provided in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(1). Williams v. State, 296 Ga. App. 707, 675 S.E.2d 596 (2009).

Defendant's sentence to serve 12 months for speeding in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-181(b)(2) was within authorized limits; O.C.G.A. § 40-6-1(b) simply sets limits on fines that can be imposed as punishment for a first offense of speeding and the statute does not restrict the available punishment for speeding to a fine. Jones v. State, 308 Ga. App. 99, 706 S.E.2d 593 (2011).

Defendant's sentence for violating O.C.G.A. § 40-6-271 would not be set aside on the ground that the sentence was excessive and the punishment cruel and unusual because the sentence was within the limits of the law, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(1) and (b). Sevostiyanova v. State, 313 Ga. App. 729, 722 S.E.2d 333, cert. denied, No. S12C0968, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 612 (Ga. 2012).

Defendant's challenge to the sentence imposed failed as the sentence was within the appropriate range of punishment for the misdemeanor at issue and the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in imposing general conditions of probation, such as that the defendant violate no criminal laws, report to the defendant's probation officer, and not leave the state without permission. Oduok v. State, 347 Ga. App. 178, 817 S.E.2d 145 (2018), cert. dismissed, No. S19C0145, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 360 (Ga. 2019).

Twelve months' confinement for fornication is not cruel and unusual. — Sentence, upon conviction of fornication, of the defendant to 12 months' confinement in a work camp of the state, without the privilege of paying a fine, is not excessive, cruel, and unjust punishment. Bowman v. State, 91 Ga. App. 52, 85 S.E.2d 66 (1954).

Additional fines. — State and county statutorily mandated assessments calculated based on the amount of the fine may be added to the maximum allowable fine under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3 and no offer of proof is necessary. Williams v. State, 221 Ga. App. 291, 470 S.E.2d 922 (1996).

Review

Hearing of further evidence after verdict for punishment purposes. — Action of a trial judge in a criminal case, after a verdict of guilty is returned, in hearing further evidence in order to determine the character of punishment to be imposed can never be made the subject matter of review in the Court of Appeals. Gaskins v. State, 12 Ga. App. 97, 76 S.E. 777 (1912); Cason v. State, 16 Ga. App. 820, 86 S.E. 644 (1914); Elzie v. State, 21 Ga. App. 501, 94 S.E. 627 (1917).

If sentence erroneous, remedy is resentence, not retrial. — Judgment of conviction will not be reversed and a new trial granted because of an error or irregularity in the manner of sentencing under former Code 1933, § 27-2506 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3). The remedy was for the court to recall the defendant and sentence the defendant as provided by law. Sherman v. State, 142 Ga. App. 691, 237 S.E.2d 5 (1977).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Purpose. — One of the evils sought to be remedied by this section was the placing of individuals in prisons who are not of the same caliber as felons or misdemeanants who warrant maximum periods of confinement. A second and equally important purpose of that section was to prevent our prison system from being crowded by minor offenders, thereby prohibiting effective rehabilitative treatment for either the misdemeanants or the felons. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 512.

Sentence must be satisfied by actual confinement, not probation. — Misdemeanant must be sentenced to a term of seven months (now twelve months) in actual imprisonment before a sentence could be construed as placing such individual under state jurisdiction. This would preclude state jurisdiction when a misdemeanant is given a sentence of 12 months, to serve one month, with the balance probated. However, a sentence of 12 months, seven months to be served, with the balance probated, would be a state sentence as it fulfills the minimum requirement of seven months in confinement. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 512.

Conviction controls basis on which punishment computed. — Conviction controls the question of whether the specific punishment is to be computed on the basis of its being a felony or a misdemeanor sentence. A prisoner is either a misdemeanant or a felon, depending on the crime for which the prisoner was convicted. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-49.

Sentence cannot shift between misdemeanor and felony. — Sentence does not have a shifting quality, allowing the sentence to vacillate between misdemeanor and felony status at different times or for different purposes. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-49.

When the sentence itself contains a reduction of an offense from a felony to a misdemeanor, the sentence should be computed as a misdemeanor because those authorized to fix the sentence have elected to so treat it. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-49.

Alternative sentences permissible. — It was evident from this section that sentence alternatives within bounds are permissible. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 81.

Alteration from county sentence to state sentence. — Court may alter a misdemeanor sentence after the passage of approximately two months so as to change the sentence from a county sentence to a state sentence to be served under the jurisdiction of the Board of Offender Rehabilitation. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-53.

Any modification of a sentence after term of court in which sentence was rendered is void with the exception of sentences for misdemeanors under paragraph (a)(1) of this section or unless the court bases the court's modification of an existing sentence on the premise that a clerical error was made or that a motion to modify the sentence was made during the term of court in which the sentence was filed. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-43.

Sentence may not be altered after term to provide for fine. — Original sentence imposed pursuant to this section, regardless of whether the sentence contained a probation provision, may not be altered after the term at which the sentence was imposed so as to include the payment of a fine. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-185.

Sentence provided by General Assembly. — Trial court has no authority to alter a sentence at a term of court other than the term in which the sentence was imposed, except in those instances in which the General Assembly has expressly provided for such modification. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-185.

Trial court cannot correct an erroneous sentence. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-185.

Court may impose a sentence of a certain number of days or a term of months plus an odd number of days under this section. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 512.

Misdemeanor prisoners confined in county installations are under the jurisdiction of the county and not the State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation). 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-134.

When misdemeanant may be placed under Board of Offender Rehabilitation. — This section can be fairly interpreted to mean that for each misdemeanor of which a person is convicted, if the misdemeanor's sentence is greater than six months and no more than 12 months, then the misdemeanor's can be placed under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation). 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-95.

All sentences which include fines must be served under county jurisdiction. — If a fine is made part of a misdemeanor sentence, regardless of the length of incarceration prescribed by the sentence, the prisoner must serve under county jurisdiction. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-66.

If general sentence ordered for multiple counts, defendant may not be placed under board's jurisdiction. — If a general sentence is ordered for two or more misdemeanor counts, then the Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) has no way of knowing how many months of the general sentence are attributable to any specific misdemeanor. Any action the board would take under such a circumstance would be but speculation. Since any ambiguity in a sentence has to be interpreted in favor of the prisoner, the prisoner could not be placed under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) on the basis of speculation as to the composition of the prisoner's general sentence. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-95.

Exceptions to reception and assignment by Board of Offender Rehabilitation of misdemeanants and felons. — As a general rule, the General Assembly has designated the Board of Offender Rehabilitation as the sole agency for the reception and assignment of all convicted misdemeanants and felons. Notable exceptions to this general provision concern individuals convicted of misdemeanors who, under certain conditions, must be placed in a county institution and, under other conditions, may be placed in such facilities in the discretion of the trial court. The final notable exception provides that the Division for Children and Youth (now Department of Offender Rehabilitation) is designated the exclusive state agency for the acceptance and incarceration of all misdemeanants and felons under the age of 17 years; provided, however, those felons convicted of a capital felony shall only be sentenced into the custody of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-3.

Language of sentence which commits defendant to Central State Hospital is surplusage. — All felons and misdemeanants, other than those misdemeanants committed directly to a county correctional institution, must be committed directly and exclusively to the State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation). Only the commissioner of offender rehabilitation is authorized to prescribe the place of confinement. So much of the language of a sentence committing an inmate to a term of penal servitude in the state prison system as purports to commit the inmate to Central State Hospital is surplusage and should not be relied upon by the officials of the hospital or the Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) as authority for the retention of custody of the inmate at the hospital. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-133.

Punishment illegal to the extent punishment is excessive. — One convicted of a misdemeanor may be sentenced to any authorized punishments, but any one punishment which exceeds the amount or time authorized is illegal with respect to such excess. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 81.

Consideration of parole for misdemeanants sentenced to county institution. — State Board of Pardons and Paroles is not obligated to consider parole for those misdemeanor inmates sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(1) to serve their confinement as county inmates, although the board may have an obligation to articulate some reason for refusing consideration of these individuals. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-25.

Confinement of persons aged 18, 19, or 20. — Those individuals who are 18, 19, or 20 years of age may be confined in a county facility under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3(a)(1) and (e)(3) even after their first adjudication of guilt. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-11.

Confinement of persons aged 16 or 17. — Those individuals who have been adjudicated guilty of a traffic misdemeanor for the first time, and who were 16 or 17 years old at the time the offense was committed, if sentenced to a term of confinement, must be confined under the jurisdiction of the Board of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections), but if the individuals are sentenced to serve time upon a second or any succeeding adjudication of guilt, there is no requirement that confinement be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections), and in that instance, the sentence could be served in the county correctional institution, the county jail, or such other place as may be provided for the confinement of county inmates. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-11.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 706 et seq., 729 et seq. 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 843 et seq., 851 et seq.

ALR. — Habeas corpus in case of sentence which is excessive because of imposing both fine and imprisonment, 49 A.L.R. 494.

Power of court to impose sentence providing for intermittent incarceration, 39 A.L.R.2d 985.

Loss of jurisdiction by delay in imposing sentence, 98 A.L.R.3d 605.

Sentencing: permissibility of sentence to a fine only, under statutory provision for imprisonment or imprisonment and fine, 35 A.L.R.4th 192.

17-10-3.1. Punishment for violations of Code Section 40-6-391.

(a) In any case where a person is sentenced to a period of imprisonment under Code Section 40-6-391 upon conviction for violating subsection (k) of said Code section, it is within the authority and discretion of the sentencing judge in cases involving the first such violation to allow the sentence to be served on weekends by weekend confinement or during the nonworking hours of the defendant. A weekend shall commence and shall end in the discretion of the sentencing judge, and the nonworking hours of the defendant shall be determined in the discretion of the sentencing judge; provided, however, that the judge shall retain plenary control of the defendant at all times during the sentence period. Confinement during the nonworking hours of a defendant during any day may be counted as serving a full day of the sentence.

(b) Any confinement of a person pursuant to a sentence to a period of imprisonment under Code Section 40-6-391 upon conviction for violating subsection (k) of said Code section shall be served in a county jail, provided that for the first such violation such person shall be kept segregated from all offenders other than those confined for violating subsection (k) of Code Section 40-6-391.

History. — Code 1981, § 17-10-3.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1997, p. 760, § 2; Ga. L. 1999, p. 391, § 4.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1997, p. 760, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall be known and may be cited as the 'Teenage and Adult Driver Responsibility Act.'"

Ga. L. 1997, p. 760, § 27, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that this Code section applies to all offenses committed on or after July 1, 1997.

Ga. L. 1999, p. 391, §§ 1 and 2, not codified by the General Assembly, provides in part that the memory of all victims of drunken driving and Heidi Marie Flye, Cathryn Nicole Flye, and Audrey Marie Flye should be honored and that this Act shall be known and may be cited as "Heidi's Law".

Law reviews. — For article commenting on the 1997 enactment of this Code section, see 14 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 203 (1997).

For note on 1999 amendment to this Code section, see 16 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 200 (1999).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Driving under the influence sentence improper. — Sentence of ten days in jail followed by 12 months probation for conviction of driving under the influence was improper. Kovacs v. State, 227 Ga. App. 870, 490 S.E.2d 539 (1997).

Driving under the influence sentence not excessive. — Sentence of 30 days in custody, 11 months probation, 40 hours of community service, and fines totaling $2,000 on conviction of driving under the influence of alcohol, driving with an unlawful alcohol concentration, and failure to maintain lane was not excessive. Gidey v. State, 228 Ga. App. 250, 491 S.E.2d 406 (1997).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Probation and suspension of sentences under § 40-6-391, relating to driving under the influence. — Although not authorized under former Code 1933, § 68A-902 (see O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391) or former Code 1933, § 27-2506 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3) to suspend or cancel licenses of those convicted of driving under the influence of drugs or intoxicants, a judge may sentence a defendant to either, but not both, a suspended or probated sentence which may be properly conditioned upon payment of a fine. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-78.

That portion of former Code 1933, § 68A-902 (see O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391), which uses the word "shall" authorizing the imposition of a 90-day penalty is mandatory and cannot be construed to mean that the court is vested with discretion in imposing the minimum 90-day sentence. However, former Code 1933, § 68A-902 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-3), relating to punishment of misdemeanors, permits a judge to impose in addition to or instead of any other penalty provided for the punishment of a misdemeanor involving a traffic offense, probation or suspension of all or any part of a penalty upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the judge. Therefore, a judge imposing sentence pursuant to former Code 1933, § 68A-902 (see O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391) may probate either the fine or the sentence as well as both the fine and the sentence. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-102.

17-10-4. Punishment for misdemeanors of a high and aggravated nature.

(a) A person who is convicted of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $5,000.00 or by confinement in the county or other jail, county correctional institution, or such other places as counties may provide for maintenance of county inmates, for a term not to exceed 12 months, or both; provided, however, that a person convicted of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature which was committed by an inmate within the confines of a state correctional institution and sentenced to confinement as a result of such offense shall be sentenced to confinement under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections in a state correctional institution or such other institution as the Department of Corrections may direct for a term which shall not exceed 12 months. In all cases of a conviction of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature, the sentencing court shall retain jurisdiction to amend, modify, alter, suspend, or probate sentences imposed under this Code section at any time; but in no instance shall a sentence imposed under this Code section be modified in such a manner as to increase the amount of fine or the term of confinement.

(b) Notwithstanding any laws to the contrary, a person sentenced for a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature may earn no more than four days per month earned time allowance.

History. — Code 1933, § 27-2506.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1970, p. 236, § 11; Ga. L. 1985, p. 283, § 1; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1526, § 2; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1111, § 1.

Administrative rules and regulations. — Offender administration, Official Compilation of the Rules and Regulations of the State of Georgia, Board of Corrections, Departmental Operations, Chapter 125-2-4.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of criminal law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 129 (1986). For article, "Misdemeanor Sentencing in Georgia," see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 8 (2001).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Section not repealed. — Ga. L. 1978, p. 985 did not repeal this section by implication. Sutton v. Garmon, 245 Ga. 685, 266 S.E.2d 497 (1980).

Section deals with imposition, not effect, of suspended sentence. — Ga. L. 1965, p. 413, § 4 dealt with the effect of suspended sentences while former Code 1933, §§ 27-2502 and 27-2506.1 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-1 and 17-10-4) dealt with the authority to impose sentences. Cross v. State, 128 Ga. App. 774, 197 S.E.2d 853 (1973).

Earned time allowance not a denial of equal protection. — Party is not denied equal protection of the law because the party is limited to four days earned time each month while certain other prisoners may earn 15 days each month. Sutton v. Garmon, 245 Ga. 685, 266 S.E.2d 497 (1980).

Rules and regulations for suspended sentence and revocation upon their violation. — Exactly what is a suspended sentence is perhaps indefinite, but the court may provide rules and regulations in connection therewith and may, on violation of such rules and after notice and opportunity to be heard, during the time such sentence runs in accordance with the sentence's own terms, revoke the suspension and require that the remainder be served within a penal institution. Cross v. State, 128 Ga. App. 744, 197 S.E.2d 853 (1973).

